to Ms. McIlroy the participants at the officers' meeting were taken aback at the cost to the company of making it expensive for the competition. They agreed to "spend what it took" with the proviso that the expenditures would be selective and the officers would be kept current on what was transpiring, even as frequently as on a weekly basis. The fact that Ms. McIlroy convinced her fellow officers to adopt a policy of making competition expensive even when doing so would be detrimental to current profits provides some indication that Tele-Direct was trying to influence its competitors' future conduct to some extent.

There is as well another consideration. The documents relating to Tele-Direct's responses in Sault Ste. Marie and Niagara were not provided during documentary discovery within the time frame ordered. They did not make their appearance until after Tele-Direct apparently learned that the Director had contacted Ms. McIlroy and that she would appear as a witness in these proceedings for the Director. Counsel for Tele-Direct attempted to blame the delay in the production of these documents on inadvertence. He said that the relevant box of documents got lost but that no one seemed to know where or why. If the documents were lost, a detailed explanation is in order especially given the controversial issue to which they pertain and that the content of some of the documents is clearly adverse to Tele-Direct's position. A vague explanation carries little weight. The belated production and inadequate explanation cause the Tribunal to make an adverse inference with respect to Tele-Direct's intentions on this issue. Tele-Direct apparently considered that it might have "gone too far" in its responses in those markets. This, along with the statements of corporate policy, provides support for the view that Tele-

Direct intended, in a subjective sense, to convey a warning about future entry as well as protecting its position in the individual markets subject to entry.

Nonetheless, the critical question is whether there is a reasonable likelihood that future entry will be discouraged by Tele-Direct's actions. If so, is that possible negative effect more compelling than the proven benefits in the individual markets from Tele-Direct's improving its product, freezing prices and increasing advertising expenditures, all of which contributed in some measure to increasing usage of telephone directories, which is generally seen as pro-competitive. A reasonable likelihood of significant long-run detriment must exist if these tactics are to be discouraged.

The Director relies to some extent on the evidence given by White and DSP, which will be canvassed below, regarding their intentions about future expansion, which he says shows that future entry and expansion have been deterred by Tele-Direct's behaviour. That evidence is, however, a small portion of the evidence put forward by the Director in support of his case. In effect, the Director asks us to infer from the "overwhelming intensity" of Tele-Direct's response in the markets where it faced entry that potential entry into other markets will be deterred.

Before we proceed to consider the more detailed arguments, we should indicate at the outset that we have serious reservations with respect to the overwhelming intensity approach adopted by the Director. The Director has not advanced any "objective" criteria by which the Tribunal is to assess whether Tele-Direct's responses in the competitive markets have the overall anti-competitive character or "purpose" required for section 79.

Although the Director is not arguing that Tele-Direct's conduct was predatory, predation is certainly the closest analogy to what is put forward here. The essence of an allegation of predatory pricing is that the firm foregoes short-run revenues by cutting prices, driving out rivals and thus providing itself with the opportunity to recoup more than its short-term losses through higher profits earned in the longer term in the absence of competition. A predatory pricing allegation is difficult because, at least in the short-run, consumers apparently benefit from lower prices. In addition, predation can only succeed if the predator has greater staying power than its rivals and a reasonable prospect of recouping its losses. In order to distinguish competitive pricing action from predation, therefore, the "Areeda-Turner test" for predatory pricing[240] was developed and has been adopted by the courts.

Our difficulty here is that, unlike the predatory pricing case, no "test" or criteria of any kind were even proposed by the Director or his experts. Indeed, we acknowledge that the likelihood of being able to establish objective criteria to distinguish between harmful and beneficial conduct of the type in issue is remote. In effect, because of the absence of any criteria, the Tribunal is being asked by the Director to place itself in the shoes of a potential entrant with a view to assessing the credibility of the alleged "threat" being issued by Tele-Direct by its responses to entry. The Tribunal must determine whether the response in the initial markets in which entry occurred was so "overwhelmingly intense" that an entrant would be intimidated and future entry or expansion deterred.[241] What may seem to be a response of "overwhelming intensity" to one person may not to another. It is inevitably a highly subjective exercise. Decisions by the Tribunal restricting competitive action on the grounds that the action is of overwhelming intensity would send a chilling message about competition that is, in our view, not consistent with the purpose of the Act, as set forth in section 1.1. We are concerned that, in the absence of some objective test, firms can have no idea what constitutes a "competitive" versus an "anti-competitive" response when responses like those used by Tele-Direct in this case are involved (e.g., price freezing or cutting, incentives, product improvements, increased advertising).

[240] In brief, the essence of the test is that a price below reasonably anticipated short-run marginal costs is predatory while a price above short-run marginal costs is not. Because marginal cost data are often unavailable, average variable cost is generally used as a proxy. For a summary of the conclusions of Areeda and Turner on this topic, see Antitrust Law, vol. 3 (Toronto: Little, Brown, 1978) at para. 711d.

While Tele-Direct certainly made very strong responses to entry in Niagara and Sault Ste. Marie, there is no certain way for the Tribunal to judge what magnitude of response Tele-Direct would have employed had it not been concerned, among other things, with discouraging further entry. To say that the response was greater than it otherwise would have been assumes that we can judge how much Tele-Direct would have done had it been acting competitively and that, therefore, we can determine, with reasonable assurance, to what degree the observed responses went beyond that and became anti-competitive. In trying to make this comparison urged upon us by the Director, it must be recognized that Tele-Direct was facing pretty stiff competition from [241] There would evidently be little point in the incumbent pursuing an aggressive course of responses in every market subject to entry solely to make an impression or deliver a threat since that strategy would have already been defeated. If there was widespread response by the incumbent in all markets in which entry occurred or was threatened, consumers would benefit in the short-term with no discernible long-term negative effects.

the new entrants. The entrants' publications were initially superior with respect to features and they were priced up to 40 percent below Tele-Direct. While Tele-Direct's expenditures on advertising and promotion constituted a sea change from its previous expenditures, DSP spent more over the three years from 1992 to 1994 than Tele-Direct did, including large amounts in the local Southam newspaper.

The Director makes two broad arguments in support of the position that Tele-Direct's actions went beyond "normal" competition and, taken together, constitute anti-competitive acts. The first is that Tele-Direct's "bottom line" results in Sault Ste. Marie in 1993 reveal that Tele-Direct barely broke even in that market when the cost of introducing the improvements to the directory and the advertising and promotional expenditures are taken into account. This conclusion was not disputed by Mr. Beauséjour who agreed that the results shown were "very close to breakeven".

The analysis presented to the witness, however, included the payment to Bell Canada (CCS) as an "expense" deducted from revenue. When Bell and Tele-Direct are treated on an integrated basis, as we earlier found in the tying context to be appropriate when considering Tele-Direct's profitability study, it would be inaccurate to refer to Tele-Direct's results in Sault Ste. Marie as a "marginal profit" or "loss" situation. The pro-rated share of the payment to Bell would have to be added back to the Tele-Direct's results in Sault Ste. Marie. Given that the Bell payment is mostly contribution to profit and it is a substantial amount, this would move the Sault Ste. Marie results well above the breakeven point, even with the extra expenditures on enhancements and advertising. Indeed, it would appear that the payment to Bell constitutes the largest portion of the "profit" that attracts independent publishers to attempt to enter Tele-Direct's markets and which allows them to contemplate profitably pricing 30 or 40 percent below Tele-Direct. In the Niagara region, Tele-Direct earned a profit in 1993 even when the payment to Bell is treated as an expense.

The Director's second argument is that experience in the industry also demonstrates that Tele-Direct went beyond "normal" competitive responses. This includes the evidence regarding expectations of White and DSP versus their experience and their future intentions as well as evidence about how American telco publishers have responded to entry in their markets.

With respect to the experience of an American telco publisher responding to entry, Mr. Anderson, who was with NYNEX, testified in chief that when NYNEX perceived independent directory publishers as significant competition, it would make its sales force aware of their presence, possibly do more advertising, and consider the scoping of its directories and their features. He also pointed out that it had not been his experience that features would be introduced only in a competitive market. After a trial run, if the feature proved successful, it would be implemented "across the product line." In cross-examination, he admitted that NYNEX had never, at least to his knowledge, offered an incentive program similar to that used by Tele-Direct in its competitive markets in response to entry of a competing publisher. He gave the same response when asked about a specific market where, in response to entry, NYNEX might have frozen prices in specific markets in response to entry for two years, without rescoping. With respect to the remaining possibilities put to him by counsel for the Director, Mr. Anderson either had no knowledge (e.g., advertising as a separate budget item) or commented on the lack of applicability in the American context (e.g., telco publishers cannot offer audiotext, no trade-mark to protect through legal action). Without any knowledge about the marketplace in which NYNEX operates, we are unable to draw any conclusions about this evidence.

With respect to White, Mr. Lewis stated that his experience in entering markets in the United States had led him to believe that White would have larger sales in Niagara than turned out to be the case. In its first revenue year, White expected to capture between 30 and 40 percent of Tele-Direct's revenue.[242] In fact, White's revenue for its second directory (the first revenue-generating directory), published in 1994, was 17 percent of Tele-Direct's revenue. Revenue for the third directory (the 1995 directory) represented a nine percent increase from the previous year for a total of about 19 percent of Tele-Direct's revenue.

Mr. Lewis stated that his initial plans for expansion beyond the Niagara region in Canada had been put on hold indefinitely due to Tele-Direct's conduct and the inability to obtain complete subscriber listing information. At the time of the hearing, this matter of subscriber listings was on appeal to the federal Cabinet. Mr. Lewis also said that upon a favourable Cabinet decision on the privacy issue, he would anticipate starting a number of additional directories in the Toronto and Niagara region. Any conclusion that White was deterred from future expansion [242] Anticipated sales are expressed as a percentage of estimated revenue of the existing directory. This does not mean that all sales are drawn from the incumbent as the demand for directory advertising is expected to increase when a second publication is introduced.

by Tele-Direct's conduct and that, therefore, that conduct passes an anti-competitive threshold would be difficult in light of this evidence and the subsequent Cabinet decision overruling the CRTC decision that was to the effect that consumers should be able to opt out of having their listing information released to independent publishers.[243]

In formulating its entry strategy, DSP factored into its business plan both the risk of legal action by Tele-Direct and the possibility of a Tele-Direct competitive reaction. DSP, erroneously as it turns out, anticipated little response from Tele-Direct based on that company virtually ignoring the entry of the Locator directories in a large number of communities. As we have discussed, the Locator directories are simply not close substitutes for Tele-Direct's directories. DSP's expectation for its first revenue-generating directory was to capture about 50 percent of Tele-Direct's revenue. In developing this estimate, DSP reviewed the American experience and consulted extensively with its joint venture partner, Noverr. Instead, the directory generated about half of the expected revenue in dollar terms. The revenues for the second revenue-generating directory, published in 1994, were once again considerably lower than expected. It was, however, anticipated that the revenues for the 1995 directory would be higher and marginally profitable.

DSP has also decided not to expand in Ontario even though that was the original plan. While Tele-Direct's conduct was said to have been the reason for that decision, the evidence suggests that there were other reasons as well. In particular, it would appear that DSP's expectations were quite aggressive for a new business and, to some extent (in relying on the Locator experience), in error. The Director says that the Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan part of the DSP joint directory, which did not experience a response like Tele-Direct's, had been far more successful than its Ontario counterpart. However, that side of the publication also fell well short of what had been anticipated as a "normal" first year revenue, further suggesting that the DSP's expectations may not have been realistic.

[243] For further explanation of this matter, see chapter "VII. Control: Market Power" under "A. Indirect Approach: Market Structure", "(2) Barriers to Entry", "(c) (i) Subscriber Listing Information", supra.

We do not have enough evidence to arrive at any conclusion about the effect of Tele-Direct's actions on deterring entry or expansion in the Newfoundland and Joliette situations.

The remedy suggested by the Director changed from the application to final argument. In our view, the remedy, as currently formulated, illustrates the difficulty of dealing with "targeting" as an anti-competitive act. The notice of application, at paragraph 1(b)(xiii), requested that:

> the Respondents be prohibited from targeting price reductions and other discounts for advertising space to those markets in which entry by competing publishers has occurred or is occurring.

In oral argument, counsel for the Director explained that the remedy ultimately being requested by the Director would read as follows:

> that the respondents be prohibited for a period of five years from: (i) targeting a price, a price reduction, or other discount including any advertiser incentive program offering free colour, free size up, or a first time placement discount where there is no annual increase in advertiser spending; and (ii) targeting any > directory enhancement, including audio-text service; and (iii) targeting any advertising campaign; to a market where entry by a competing directory publisher has occurred, is occurring, or is reasonably anticipated to occur unless such listed item is offered or applied uniformly and simultaneously by the respondents in the majority of their directory markets.

The "and" between the listed items is critical. The Director proposes that Tele-Direct be permitted to do any one or two of the three enumerated actions in any market where entry has occurred. However, if all three should be undertaken then they would have to be followed in a majority of Tele-Direct's local markets.

We recognize that the Director is likely attempting, by this compromise remedy, to recognize that Tele-Direct's responses are of benefit to consumers in the market in which they occur. This effectively highlights the difficulty of the "targeting" allegation. First, the number of competitive responses (one or two) that Tele-Direct is allowed is completely arbitrary. The Director has not provided the Tribunal with any rationale as to why one or two (but not three) responses would not be anti-competitive. Further, there is no suggestion that the Tribunal should limit the extent to which Tele-Direct could invoke the competitive responses to which it would be entitled. Yet, the Director alleges that Tele-Direct's responses in the competitive markets were anti-competitive in part because of their intensity and ferocity.

Considering the difficulty in circumscribing "targeting" so that it does not result in discouraging desirable competitive activity, we do not find that Tele-Direct's conduct with regard to pricing, promotion and changes to its directories in the competitive markets, in particular in the Sault Ste. Marie and Niagara areas, is anti-competitive.

Litigation or Threatened Litigation

Finally, we turn to the Director's argument that litigation or threatened litigation by Tele-Direct, when taken together with the other actions of Tele-Direct, contribute to targeting/raising rivals' costs.

The Director argues that Tele-Direct's use of litigation or threatened litigation "goes into the mix" to show intent and the excessive degree of the overall response to entry in the competitive markets. The Director does not rely on the nature of the litigation on its own. The Director does not argue, for instance, that the litigation was a "sham". "Sham" litigation, or litigation which the plaintiff knows is without foundation but uses to stifle or impair competition, can be a technique of predation.[244] In the words of Robert Bork: "As a technique for predation, sham litigation is theoretically one of the most promising."[245]

Since no argument is being made that the litigation started by Tele-Direct against DSP was "without foundation",[246] we need some other means to determine whether the litigation in question crossed the line to anti-competitive conduct. We do not consider that it is sufficient to look at the litigation only in combination with the other responses. There must be some evidence [244] Sham litigation could include a claim with no reasonable cause of action which might be struck out at an early stage of proceedings or a claim based on facts that were untrue or otherwise not supportive of the claim, in which case, the litigation could be extensive.

---

[245] R.H. Bork, The Antitrust Paradox (New York: Basic Books, 1978) at 347.

[246] Some mention was made that the copyright claim might be a "broad" interpretation of the existing American law but that is hardly definitive.

specific to the bringing or the conduct of the litigation itself that would lead us to conclude that the purpose was to contribute to the impairment of competition over the protection of property rights.

The Director points out that while Mr. Crawford, Tele-Direct's Corporate Secretary and legal counsel, originally testified that Tele-Direct defended any unauthorized use of its trade-marks and copyrights, it became apparent on cross-examination that this was not true. Tele-Direct overlooked unauthorized use on a number of occasions. Perhaps the difficulty with this witness's credibility on this issue and the fact that litigation seems only to be taken against specific competitors do lead to the view that Tele-Direct focused on those competitors. However, that alone is not enough if the litigation is not a sham.

On the facts of this case, we cannot conclude that Tele-Direct brought, conducted or gave warnings regarding otherwise apparently valid litigation in such a manner that its purpose was clearly to contribute to the impairment of competition in those markets where entry occurred rather than the protection of its intellectual property rights. There is no evidence, for instance, of undue delay. As of the date of the hearing, DSP had not yet been discovered but a major factor in this delay was the illness of Mr. McCarthy, the intended representative for DSP. Discovery of DSP was, however, scheduled for November 1995 with Mr. Campbell for DSP. Discoveries of Tele-Direct had been completed by the date of the hearing. There is no evidence that the litigation is following any other than the "normal" course. Unlike the Laidlaw case, there is no evidence of responding to an apparently minor matter in a "wildly overly aggressive manner" with multiple claims or of pointed threats to put a competitor "out of business" using, in part, the pursuit of legal action for which, as the Laidlaw representative informed the competitor, a large sum of money had been reserved.[247] While Tele-Direct did not proceed against White after its warning regarding possible litigation, it is certainly plausible that it did not do so because of the similarity of the issues to the DSP case. That litigation would seem likely to settle at least the copyright question once and for all, by establishing a precedent for Tele-Direct's dealings with other publishers.

The Tribunal, therefore, cannot accept the Director's submission that litigation or threatened litigation in this case can contribute to a finding of anti-competitive acts by Tele-Direct.

Audiotext in Sault Ste. Marie

The Director alleges that Tele-Direct used its power as a major buyer to influence the supplier of audiotext information in Sault Ste. Marie, Perception, resulting in a degradation of the feed to DSP. The respondents acknowledge in their written argument that the allegation could be an anti-competitive act, if proven, but dispute that it is supported by the evidence. The critical questions are whether Tele-Direct was merely asserting its contractual rights and what responsibility, if any, can be assigned to Tele-Direct for the quality of service delivered by Perception to DSP.

[247] Laidlaw, supra note 33 at 298.

Did Tele-Direct have a contractual right to exclusivity?

The respondents state in their written argument, at paragraph 930, that "Perception recognized that Tele-Direct was entitled to the exclusive right to its only feed . . . ." This statement is not supported by the evidence. Up until January 1994, the only contract between Tele-Direct and Perception was for the Toronto area and it provided Tele-Direct with exclusive access to Perception's feed in the Toronto local calling area only. Perception had in fact refused to grant Tele-Direct exclusivity for other areas because of the limitation on its ability to market its service.

In the fall of 1992, when Tele-Direct became aware of the proposed entry into Sault Ste. Marie by DSP, including offering audiotext, Tele-Direct entered into negotiations with Perception to supply its TYP in that market. One of Tele-Direct's concerns was that the feed in Sault Ste. Marie be exclusive to it, that DSP not have access to the same feed. The evidence reveals that the parties did not, in fact, come to an agreement on exclusivity until much later. While exclusivity is mentioned in a letter in March 1993,[248] the draft contract sent by Perception to Tele-Direct in May 1993 is instructive. The letter enclosing the contract states that with "all the excitement of getting `the Soo' up and talking" Perception had neglected to send Tele-Direct the contract for Sault Ste. Marie. The contract clearly states that it is a "non-exclusive" licence to receive and store information.[249]

---

[248] Confidential exhibit CJ-86 (black vol. 13), tab 96 at 134118.

[249] Draft contract and covering letter: confidential exhibit CJ-87 (black vol. 14), tab 114 at 134825-27.

The contract was never signed by Tele-Direct but nonetheless provides proof that Perception, at least, did not consider at that time that Tele-Direct had exclusive rights to its feed. They were certainly not ad idem in that respect. The final contract covering Sault Ste. Marie, which does provide for exclusivity, was not signed until January 1994.[250] A letter in September 1993 provides that upon acceptance of a new agreement by Tele-Direct, the "BDR Audio Network will be made available to only directory publishers in Canada and exclusively to Tele-Direct within Ontario and Quebec."[251] Peter Dolan, Director of Sales at Tele-Direct (Services) Inc., admitted, however, that Tele-Direct had to go "back and forth" with Perception a couple of times in order to get the wording regarding exclusivity re-inserted into the final contract. Tele-Direct does not appear to have had, until November 1993 at the earliest, a right to exclusivity with Perception and, therefore, had no right to insist or attempt to insist on exclusive service from Perception prior to that date.

Did Tele-Direct influence the delivery of service by Perception to DSP?

Upon becoming aware in late 1992 that Perception was supplying an information feed to DSP and that it had the same content as Tele-Direct's feed, Tele-Direct, through Mr. Dolan, expressed its displeasure to Perception. Perception agreed to remedy the situation prior to publication of the DSP directory. Mr. Dolan said that he thought Perception would acquire an alternate feed for DSP as a remedy. At the same time, Tele-Direct was pushing for exclusivity with Perception.

---

[250] Confidential exhibit CJ-31 (black vol. 10), tab 68 at 131548-54.

[251] Ibid. at 131555.

Tele-Direct's TYP were launched in mid-February 1993. Tele-Direct was not satisfied with Perception's response to its complaint regarding the feed to DSP, including an effort in early February whereby Perception started sending slightly re-arranged or reworded content to DSP. In cross-examination, Mr. Dolan indicated that Tele-Direct wanted a "superior feed" to that provided to DSP.[252]

A meeting was scheduled for February 23, 1993 with Perception. The agenda, which was provided to Perception, states that what Perception was doing with respect to the DSP feed was "not satisfactory" to Tele-Direct. Mr. Dolan explained that Perception was simply re-voicing the network and again stated that Tele-Direct was not satisfied because it wanted a "superior" feed. This concern was communicated to Perception at the meeting.

In re-examination, taking Mr. Dolan to clause 8 of the January 1994 contract with Perception which uses the word "superior", counsel for the respondents elicited a response that "superior" meant "of high quality" and that was the way in which Mr. Dolan had used the word in his cross-examination. Clause 8 of the contract reads:

[252] Transcript at 42:8856 (20 November 1995).

> . . . Brite does commit that the BDR Audio Network will continue to be of the same exceptional quality as the affiliate has enjoyed. BDR will continue to be of superior quality and utilize its own personnel for the creation and dissemination of information.[253]

Clause 11.6, which was later brought to the witness's attention, is instructive:

> . . . Brite will continue to supply the superior level of programming that the Affiliate has come to expect. Other audio networks offered by Brite Voice Systems or any Brite subsidiary or related company, will not exceed the BDR Audio Network in measurable deliverables including, but not limited to, frequency of reports, quantity of content, program choice and diversity as well as voice quality. Brite will make every effort to avoid American colloquialism. . . .[254]

Even in the contract, therefore, it is apparent that the word "superior" is used in a comparative, rather than an absolute, sense.[255] When questioned by the panel about clause 11.6 of the contract, Mr. Dolan agreed that what the clause was meant to ensure was that nobody had anything better than Tele-Direct. We conclude, therefore, that, despite the later attempt at qualification, Mr. Dolan was using the word "superior" in its comparative sense throughout his testimony. Tele-Direct was pressing Perception for a better feed than Perception was giving DSP.

Of most significance, on January 25, 1993, Tele-Direct held out what can only be regarded as a major "carrot" to Perception. Mr. Dolan, on behalf of Tele-Direct, wrote asking Perception for its "advice and recommendations" on the most efficient way to provide a TYP

---

[253] Confidential exhibit CJ-31 (black vol. 10), tab 68 at 131550.

[254] Ibid. at 131551.

[255] The September 1993 letter also uses the word "superior" and essentially the same language about "measurable deliverables" (confidential exhibit CJ-31 (black vol. 10), tab 68 at 131555) as later appeared in the January 1994 contract.

service throughout Tele-Direct's territory.[256] There is evidence that by March of 1993, consequent upon a February 25, 1993 officers' meeting, these plans were scaled down dramatically. TYP installation was to begin only in markets currently or potentially threatened by a competitor, some ten markets. TYP were treated as a strategic tool against competition rather than a widespread innovation. In fact, after Sault Ste. Marie TYP were introduced only in Niagara Falls, in response to White, and in Windsor, where Tele-Direct was concerned both about potential entry by White and the fact that the Windsor Star is owned by Southam. It is difficult to escape the conclusion that Tele-Direct was using the promise of the roll-out of TYP service throughout its territory in order to gain the cooperation of Perception when it introduced its TYP service in Sault Ste. Marie in February 1993.

That the promised roll-out of the TYP service was a factor in the relationship between Tele-Direct and Perception is clear from the letter Perception wrote Tele-Direct on March 1, 1993, following the February meeting. In it Perception informed Tele-Direct that an "alternative audio source" for DSP would be provided by March 29, 1993. The letter concludes ". . . you are a very important client to us and we want to work with you as you roll out audiotex (sic) throughout your territory."[257]

The deterioration to DSP feed was coincident with its first revenue canvass in the spring and summer of 1993. (Its first revenue directory was published in November 1993.) Because of the poor quality of the feed, the audiotext lines were not used to nearly the same extent as in the first two months of operation. Because of the reduced volume, DSP could not use the record of the number of calls to its audiotext service as evidence of widespread use of its directory by consumers. As a result, the audiotext service was not as positive a factor as it might have been in selling its directory to advertisers.

---

[256] Confidential exhibit CJ-86 (black vol. 13), tab 95 at 134080.

[257] Ibid. at 134107.

Mr. Campbell said that it would have been virtually impossible for DSP to change its information supplier when it experienced problems. Despite what Mr. Dolan said, there was little reason for Tele-Direct to think that Perception was able, even if willing, to produce an alternative high quality feed for DSP. As matters turned out, the feed to DSP only became acceptable again once the merger of Perception and Brite resulted in another source of feed becoming available in about November 1993.

We are of the view that Tele-Direct used its bargaining power, stemming from its dominant position in the market for the supply of telephone directory advertising, to pressure Perception to, in effect, withhold supply from DSP for the purpose of frustrating or, at least, negatively impacting, the DSP attempt at entry in Sault Ste. Marie.[258] Unlike the other responses used by Tele-Direct in the competitive markets, the only perceptible effect on consumers and advertisers was a negative one. It would appear to us that the kind of conduct engaged in by [258] Entry meaning the attempt by DSP to establish itself in the Sault Ste Marie market on an economic basis with a revenue directory; that is, not the publication of a prototype directory alone.

Tele-Direct regarding audiotext in Sault Ste. Marie unequivocally falls within the class of anti-competitive acts against which sections 79 is meant to guard.

Did Tele-Direct engage in a practice of anti-competitive acts in relation to audiotext in Sault Ste. Marie? Based on the standard set out in Nutrasweet,[259] an "isolated act" does not constitute a practice. In the instant case the deterioration in the audiotext feed to DSP resulted from intensive and repeated efforts on the part of Tele-Direct that hardly qualify as an "isolated act". Nor do we find that the reasonably anticipated duration and seriousness of the consequences of the efforts by Tele-Direct suggest that they should be treated as "isolated" and thus outside the reach of section 79. We therefore consider that Tele-Direct's actions regarding the DSP feed for its audiotext service in Sault Ste. Marie constitute a practice of anti-competitive acts.

Further, we find no difficulty in concluding that the effects of the deterioration in the quality of the audiotext feed resulted in a substantial lessening of competition in the Sault Ste Marie market. In conducting its first revenue canvass, DSP was denied the anticipated marketing advantage of using its audiotext call volumes to prove usage of its directory to potential advertisers because the feed deteriorated just as the canvass started. Achieving credibility with advertisers is one of the biggest hurdles that an entrant publisher must overcome.[260] The audiotext problem was a serious setback for DSP in its initial effort to attract paid advertising. However, as the Director has not requested a remedy specific to the audiotext problem or, more generally, governing Tele-Direct's relationship with the suppliers, no remedy follows from this finding.

---

[259] Supra note 4 at 34-35.

[260] See further discussion, supra at 123.

D. MARKET FOR ADVERTISING SERVICES

1) Class or Species of Business in Canada (Relevant Market): Agents

The Director alleges a number of anti-competitive acts which form a practice resulting in a substantial prevention or lessening of competition in the market for the supply of advertising services. These alleged anti-competitive acts affect agents and consultants or, in some cases, one or the other. The Director takes the position that when determining whether there is a substantial prevention or lessening of competition the effects of all of the listed acts found to be anti-competitive should be combined because they all affect the advertising services market. Further, one of the alleged anti-competitive acts is the tying of the provision of advertising services to advertising space, the same allegation we have already dealt with in the tying portion of this decision. Another alleged anti-competitive act which bears a striking resemblance to an allegation of tying is also included under the heading "Squeezing", namely, "further restricting the availability of commission [to other service providers] over time".

The respondents submit that, to the extent a separate "services" market exists, consultants and agents are in different services markets and acts affecting more than one market cannot be combined to form a practice and, thus, to determine whether there has been a substantial prevention or lessening of competition. A prevention or lessening of competition must take place in a market in the words of section 79. They also argue that Tele-Direct does not have market power in either services market.

As we have found that there is an anti-competitive tie covering only part of the alleged advertising services market, we cannot agree with the Director that there is one advertising services market in which both agents and consultants operate that encompasses all of Tele-Direct's customers. Customers meeting the 1993 commissionability rule are evidently included in the services market. The customer segment that we have determined is anti-competitively tied under section 77 -- namely regional customers -- is also included. (We will return below to the question of whether the tying practice should also form part of the section 79 case.) Agents are operating in this services market. And, Tele-Direct competes with the agents in providing services to those customers. Consultants do not.

It is difficult to see how acts taking place in different markets could be logically combined to determine if competition is substantially lessened or prevented in a particular market. Thus, only the acts affecting agents can be combined for the purpose of determining whether there has been a substantial lessening of competition in the services market.

Correspondingly, only acts affecting consultants can be combined to determine whether there has been a substantial lessening of competition in the relevant market in which they operate. It is a separate section 79 case. The details of the allegations against consultants will be dealt with below under the heading "Consultants".

Further, not all the alleged practices of anti-competitive acts respecting agents are of a sufficiently similar character so that they can be combined when assessing whether there has been a substantial prevention or lessening of competition in the services market. In particular, tying (and its restatement "restricting commission over time") differs significantly from the other alleged anti-competitive acts. The Director has brought the allegation of tying under both sections 77 and 79. The analysis and result are the same under both sections. Having found that tying results in a substantial lessening of competition by impeding entry of or expansion of agents into or excluding them from the part of the demand spectrum between six and eight markets, should this substantial lessening of competition be combined with the effects resulting from any other practice of anti-competitive acts that the Director succeeds in proving? If so, all anti-competitive acts so found would automatically lead to a finding of substantial prevention or lessening of competition by reason of our finding respecting tying.

In our view, it is not appropriate to combine the effects of tying with the effects of the practice of other anti-competitive acts. The other alleged anti-competitive acts (save for group advertising) relate to a specific historical market, the commissionable market including the eight-market grandfathered accounts. It is possible to evaluate the effects of the alleged anti-competitive acts in this well-defined context. The issue is whether there has been a substantial lessening of competition where agents have historically been competing. In the case of tying, the allegation is that the extent of the market itself has been limited.

In this case, there is a distinct difference between the nature and effect of tying and the other alleged anti-competitive acts, save for group advertising which we return to below. We note that this might not be true in other cases where there might be some interaction or a less distinct dividing line between the section 77 and section 79 claims. A finding that the respondents have engaged in tying does not act as a spring-board for a finding of substantial lessening in the market segment where the agents have been competing. Prohibiting tying should permit the agents to compete in the enlarged market as they have in the historically commissionable market. A finding of substantial lessening of competition in the historically commissionable market should therefore be based on a practice of acts with respect to that market.

Therefore, we need not deal with tying further under section 79. We will now turn to the allegations relating to the commissionable market and then the allegation regarding the prohibition on group advertising which is distinct.

(2) Control of the Existing Commissionable Market

It is evident that, despite the Director's submission to this effect, Tele-Direct does not have direct control or market power in the currently commissionable advertising services market.

It has a modest market share of approximately 25 percent in that market.[261] The Director also advances an alternative position that is not based on direct control by Tele-Direct but rather on the hypothesis that it is leveraging its control in the publishing market into the services market. We have found that Tele-Direct has control in the telephone directory advertising market which gives it market power in the publishing of advertising space. The Director argues that Tele-Direct is using this market power as a lever to obtain market power in advertising services through its alleged anti-competitive acts. We agree that this is an arguable theory that could, if proven, fall within the parameters of section 79. Whether Tele-Direct has, in fact, leveraged its existing market power must now be determined.

(3) Analysis Respecting the Existing Commissionable Market

The alleged anti-competitive acts are set out in full at paragraph 65 of the application. We paraphrase them here (not necessarily in the order set out in paragraph 65) as they relate to agents and alleged abuse of dominance only:

(1) "squeezing" the return available to agents by transferring functions to, withholding services from and making terms of supply to agents more onerous;

(2) discriminating against agents by providing space to them on less favourable terms than available to Tele-Direct's internal sales force, including:

[261] See further discussion of market share below under "Analysis Respecting the Existing Commissionable Market".

- group advertising - prohibiting advertisements containing the name of more than one local advertiser, e.g., franchisees;

- issue billing - requiring agents to pay for advertising on behalf of their clients at the time of issue as opposed to payment on a monthly basis which is the payment method employed when sales of advertising are made through Tele-Direct's own sales personnel;

- closing dates - requiring that agents submit advertising for publication earlier than the date applicable to Tele-Direct's sales personnel;

- tear sheets, etc. - refusing or delaying to provide tear sheets and other information and material to agents; and

- promotional programs - delaying to inform agents of or refusing to make certain promotional programs available to agents' clients, including:

    - a program whereby an advertiser using Tele-Direct's sales personnel could obtain a subsidy towards the cost of Yellow Pages advertising if Yellow Pages are mentioned in advertising in other media;

    - cooperative advertising programmes whereby a supplier contributes to the cost of advertising of its customer or distributor;

    - keyed advertising in which a new advertisement with a new telephone number is placed in the Yellow Pages and the calls to that number are monitored to assess the effectiveness of the advertisement; and

    - other trial and test programs.

The Director submits that these acts have had adverse effects on agents and that there is no business justification that would exempt the acts from being found to be anti-competitive. The Tribunal would observe that some of these acts appear to have created some difficulty for agents and, in some cases, there does not seem to be an acceptable business justification. However, it is not necessary to embark upon a detailed act-by-act analysis to weigh their effects on agents against their business justification because of our conclusion that the Director has not demonstrated that the acts have or are likely to prevent or lessen competition substantially in the relevant advertising services market.

Both parties referred us to the statement set out in the Tribunal's decision in NutraSweet that:

> [i]n essence, the question to be decided is whether the anti-competitive acts engaged in ... preserve or add to ... market power.[262]

The Director's operative theory is that Tele-Direct is extending its market power from the space market to the services market through the alleged practice of anti-competitive acts. This means that the Director must demonstrate that Tele-Direct has or is establishing, or is likely to achieve, market power in the services market.

In order to assess whether Tele-Direct now controls the services market, we first look to market shares in the currently commissionable market. There is disagreement between the Director and Tele-Direct on the respective market shares of Tele-Direct and the agents. The parties rely on a variety of data that most supports their positions. Market share estimates range from 65 to 87 percent for agents and from 13 to 35 percent for Tele-Direct. We reject the extreme numbers put forward by the Director and Tele-Direct as not supportable on the evidence and, indeed, they were not seriously advanced by either side. While there are weaknesses in the data, we are satisfied that a market share of about 75 percent for agents and 25 percent for Tele-Direct is reasonably accurate.[263]

---

[262] Supra note 4 at 47.

A high market share for agents and a correspondingly low market share for Tele-Direct would suggest that, even if Tele-Direct has engaged in anti-competitive acts, it has not been successful in obtaining market power in the advertising services market. Indeed, the fact that Tele-Direct's market share is as high as it is may well be attributable to factors unique to Tele-Direct but which are not anti-competitive, such as the desire of some advertisers to deal directly with the publisher. From the available data, it is apparent that, even on an individual basis, Tele-Direct does not have as high a market share as DAC/NDAP, which has about a 40 percent share. Based on all these considerations, we are satisfied that Tele-Direct's 25 percent share falls well short of a level that might be considered to indicate market power.

We must also consider whether there is any evidence of a trend towards a material increase in Tele-Direct's market share, which might indicate that it is in the process or is likely in the future to acquire market power as a result of the acts which the Director alleges to be anti-competitive. Certainly, there is anecdotal evidence of individual advertisers switching from an agent to Tele-Direct for some of the reasons which constitute acts which the Director submits are anti-competitive, for example, issue billing. We have no evidence, however, of any declining trend in market share for agents or increasing trend in market share for Tele-Direct over any period of time. Further, it would not seem that the agency business is unattractive or that agents are in any way systematically going out of business. On the contrary, we have had evidence of additional agents being accredited in recent years and others who are still seeking accreditation.

[263] Both sides agreed that the agents' market share in 1993 was about 80 percent: confidential exhibit CJ-31 (black vol. 10), tab 69 at 131680. Adjusting to exclude sales into Tele-Direct's directories by agents based outside of Tele-Direct's territory, we arrive at approximately 75 percent for agents and 25 percent for Tele-Direct.

Is there any reason to believe that in the future the alleged anti-competitive acts will have any greater deleterious effect on the agents than they may have had in the past? We recognize that a new element has been added to the interactions in the marketplace by the relatively recent creation of Tele-Direct's CMR. Could it be that, in combination with Tele-Direct (Media) Inc. which provides an additional vehicle for Tele-Direct to use practices like the alleged anti-competitive acts, the alleged anti-competitive acts will likely cause competition to be prevented or lessened substantially in the future?

We are unable to arrive at such a conclusion. We have no evidence of the competitive impact of the advent of Tele-Direct's CMR into the market. It has been competing since 1994 but we were provided with no evidence whatsoever from which to infer that the combination of its presence and Tele-Direct's alleged anti-competitive acts have resulted or will result in a materially lower market share to agents and a correspondingly higher share for Tele-Direct. One would have expected that if this was an important factor, we would have seen some significant movement of accounts from the independent agents to Tele-Direct's CMR. There was no such evidence. It is true that Tele-Direct's CMR is in its early years and it may not be as effective now as it will be later. To be valid, however, inferences about the future must be based on evidence.

Given the record before us, any conclusion about the future effect of Tele-Direct's CMR in combination with the alleged anti-competitive acts would be speculative.

The Director has the burden of proving a substantial lessening of competition. We conclude that while some of the disadvantages which form part of the Director's abuse of dominance case and were imposed on agents by Tele-Direct may have had some adverse effect on them, that effect could not have been and is not likely to be substantial or the agents would not hold 75 percent of the market or there would be evidence of a decline over time in the share held by agents.

(4) Group Advertising

Group advertising is display advertising consisting of the individual business names of a number of franchisees or distributors under a common logo or trade-mark.[264] This type of advertisement is now prohibited by Tele-Direct and to all intents and purposes is not sold by agents or Tele-Direct.[265] The revenues that might potentially be converted into group advertising are currently non-commissionable and are serviced by the internal sales force as local or individual business accounts.

---

[264] The difficulty here is that some franchisees or licensees carry on a number of businesses besides the licensed or franchised one and they do not operate their business under a "corporate" name. They wish to be listed in the advertisement under their own name, which often has high recognition value in their community, while still participating in the group advertising to promote the licence or franchise. An example is the Autopro dealers: the licensed Autopro garages or service stations do not carry the "Autopro" name. Tele-Direct does not permit them to be listed under their individual names.

[265] There was evidence of an occasional advertisement that appears to be a group advertisement or something resembling a group advertisement but we are satisfied that it is Tele-Direct's policy not to permit group advertising.

The effect of the alleged practice of anti-competitive acts regarding group advertising is to prevent competition by limiting the size of the commissionable market available to agents, rather than limiting their ability to compete for existing commissionable accounts. Because of the difference in the nature of the allegations, whether there is a likely substantial prevention of competition as a result of Tele-Direct's practice regarding group advertising must be evaluated separately from the alleged practices of anti-competitive acts respecting the existing commissionable market.

We believe that Tele-Direct's policy on group advertising is dictated by its concern with a net revenue loss should advertisers abandon or reduce individual advertising in favour of group advertising. The incidental effect is to deny a type of advertising that would primarily be of interest to larger advertisers, for example, franchisers, some of whose accounts are likely targets for agencies. Although we heard anecdotal evidence of how certain advertisers would prefer to participate in group advertising, we were not presented with evidence as to the magnitude of the effect of this restriction. In the circumstances relating to agents we are of the opinion that such information should have been provided. Without such evidence, we cannot conclude that the prohibition against group advertising constitutes a substantial prevention of competition.

(5) Conclusion

We are unable to conclude that the evidence demonstrates that the acts alleged to be anti-competitive in the existing commissionable market and in respect of group advertising have had,

are having or are likely to have the effect of preventing or lessening competition substantially. As a result, the Tribunal is without jurisdiction to grant a remedy under section 79 of the Act. It is, therefore, not necessary to consider in detail whether the individual acts complained of are anti-competitive and whether separately or in combination they amount to a practice.

We are not unmindful that some of Tele-Direct's actions in respect of agents seemed wilful and senseless. However, the Competition Tribunal does not exist to regulate industry practices generally. Rather, it has jurisdiction only to remedy the substantial prevention or lessening of competition and where this has not been proved, no remedy can be ordered.

E. CONSULTANTS

(1) Introduction

At paragraph 65(b) of the application, the Director alleges that Tele-Direct engaged in anti-competitive acts by refusing to deal directly with consultants as agents for advertisers purchasing space from Tele-Direct. The paragraph continues:

> The Respondents have issued guidelines to their advertising space sales staff which provide that the customer must deal with the Respondent's salespersons and no consultant can deal with the salespersons as a customer's agent.

The following, more specific, aspects of refusing to deal directly with consultants were provided in the written argument at paragraph 297:

[I.]
(a) written instructions: refusal to act upon written instructions received from consultants on behalf of advertisers;

(b) oral instructions: refusal to act upon oral instructions received from consultants on behalf of advertisers or meet consultants or the advertiser in the presence of consultants to receive same;

(c) follow-up: refusal to deal with consultants on subsequent errors or problems.

In paragraph 65(c)(v) of the application, the Director alleges that Tele-Direct also engaged in anti-competitive acts by providing advertising space to consultants on less favourable terms than to its own sales staff, including rejecting or delaying orders based on alleged errors or other problems which would not result in delay or rejection of orders from Tele-Direct's own sales representatives. As set out in paragraph 296 of the written argument, the specific aspects of these acts are:

[II.]
(a) delivery and processing problems: refusal to acknowledge or accept delivery of orders involving consultants or denial of delivery resulting in the delay or rejection of same, refusal to process such orders or the return of such orders to the advertiser or consultant;

(b) alleged errors: the identification of errors or problems in such orders which would not result in the delay or rejection of orders handled by the Respondents' own sales staff;

(c) oral instructions: refusal to meet with the advertiser to take instructions originating in advice from consultants;

(d) consequential acts: rejecting or delaying the processing of consultant orders, permitting or facilitating the following consequential actions:

(i) informing advertisers that their orders may or may not be processed if prepared by consultants or that consultants are "scam artists", have committed errors or similar threats or derogatory comments;

(ii) inducing breach of the contract between advertisers and consultants.

The final alleged anti-competitive acts of relevance to consultants are found at paragraph 65(e) of the application. The Director maintains that Tele-Direct is engaging in anti-competitive acts by refusing to supply specifications to consultants for the placing of advertisements in its directories.

We will deal with the alleged anti-competitive acts under the headings (a) refusal to deal directly with consultants, (b) discriminatory acts and (c) specifications, starting in "(5) Anti-competitive Acts", below.

(2) Allegations - Pleadings

The respondents argue that the "consequential acts" listed under II. (d) above do not fall within paragraph 65(c)(v) of the application and should not, therefore, be considered by the Tribunal. They also submit that one of the remedies requested by the Director, pertaining to copyright in advertisements, was not pleaded. The Director conceded that the case for including the remedy is not strong and we will not deal with it further.

On the question of the construction of the pleadings and what may be considered as fairly within them, once we have reached the stage of final argument we have indicated that what is determinative is what the parties considered to be in issue, looking at the proceeding as a whole. We will use the same general approach to the arguments here.

Counsel for the respondents admitted that aspects II.(a) and II.(b) were clearly in the application and II.(c) might be reasonably inferred from the application but II.(d) was outside the pleadings. The elements of (d) which were emphasized in oral argument by the respondents regarding their objection related to the question of inducing breach of contract and what was termed the "bad mouthing" claim or the making of disparaging remarks about consultants. In reply, counsel for the Director stated that the Director was not seeking a remedy with respect to the consequential acts and that there was little point in addressing whether they were part of the case. We have some difficulty with this position. The Director is clearly seeking a remedy for the alleged anti-competitive acts of providing advertising space to consultants on less favourable terms than to its own sales staff, including rejecting or delaying orders based on alleged errors or other problems, of which II.(d)(i), at least, is a subset. The Director also accepted, however, and we agree that any issue of counselling breach of contract is a matter for the civil courts so we will not deal with it further. The remaining acts listed in II.(d) were addressed by both parties through evidence and argument. Based on their conduct of the proceedings, the respondents were aware that these acts were in issue and there is, therefore, no prejudice to them by the Tribunal dealing with them on the merits.

(3) Competition Between Consultants and Tele-Direct

For the Director to succeed in any of the allegations, it must first be shown that Tele-Direct and the consultants are competitors. The respondents submit that consultants do not "sell" anything; they merely "unsell". They describe consultants as being in the business of providing independent (or non-partisan) advice to disgruntled, local Yellow Pages advertisers. They say that Tele-Direct does not operate in this market since advertisers recognize that Tele-Direct's advice is partisan and not independent.

The Tribunal accepts that while the relationship between Tele-Direct and the consultants is not that seen in the more usual competitive context, they are nonetheless competitors. It is true that consultants exist by downselling, while it is highly unlikely that Tele-Direct representatives would offer the same type of advice. It is also true that consultants' advice is independent while Tele-Direct representatives are, by definition, partisan. Further, consultants normally do not have an ongoing relationship with an advertiser and their remuneration arrangement takes a different form than that for Tele-Direct. There may be other differences of detail.

At bottom, however, both consultants and Tele-Direct representatives provide services which a customer can use to achieve the final result of an advertisement in the Yellow Pages. As we have seen from the evidence put forward in this case, a customer may choose to use either a consultant or the Tele-Direct representative to obtain these services. In this sense, they are substitutes for one another and compete to serve the advertising customers. There was substantial evidence put before us that Tele-Direct, in fact, views consultants as significant competitors, monitors their progress and takes action to attempt to limit their inroads on its revenues.

This is not to say that consultants (and Tele-Direct) operate in the "separate" services market, an argument which we have already rejected. Both consultants and Tele-Direct are participants in the broad telephone directory advertising market. Tele-Direct controls that market, as set out in the chapter entitled "VII. Control: Market Power", above.

(4) Facts

(a) Consultants and their Method of Operation

Three directory advertising consultants testified before the Tribunal. Jim Harrison of Tel-Ad Advisors Ltd. ("Tel-Ad") has serviced the Ontario market from an office in the Toronto area since June 1984. Prior to that time, Mr. Harrison was an employee of Dominion Directory. Serge Brouillet, previously in sales and also training and promotion with Tele-Direct, started Ad-Vice Communications ("Ad-Vice") in mid-1989 in Sudbury to service northern Ontario. In the fall of 1990, he sold the northern Ontario operation to Charles Blais to be run as Ad-Vice North and moved into the Toronto market. Mr. Blais also appeared as a witness. Mr. Blais operated the Ad-Vice franchise in Sudbury from November 1990 to December 1992 when he sold it back to Mr. Brouillet who ran it in 1993.

A summary of the modus operandi of consultants in general will provide context for the relations between consultants and Tele-Direct and for the Director's allegations. Consultants operate on the basis that many Yellow Pages advertisers can reduce their Yellow Pages spending without reducing the effectiveness of the advertising. In other words, they target customers who are dissatisfied with the amount that they are spending with Tele-Direct and are willing to pay a fee to lower it. Consultants recruit customers by going through the Yellow Pages and identifying likely candidates for their services, those for whom they can save money. Two of the major factors are the size of the advertisement and the use of colour; number of headings and number of directories are also reviewed.

After contacting the client by telephone to determine interest, the consultant or an employee of the consultant meets with the client and makes a presentation showing the client various options for changing the advertising. The potential for conflict with Tele-Direct and its commissioned sales representatives is obvious from the outset. The consultants' income depends on reducing customers' expenditures on Yellow Pages. Thus, they attempt to convince the customer that the extra amount spent for options like larger size and colour is not worth paying. To do this, they might bring to the attention of the customer how much more those options cost and question their effectiveness for the customer. Tele-Direct's representatives, of course, emphasize the value and effectiveness of colour, size and the like by drawing on arguments and evidence put together by Tele-Direct to show that they are worth the cost.

With respect to submitting customers' orders to Tele-Direct for processing, when it first commenced operations Tel-Ad sent orders to Tele-Direct on behalf of customers. These were rejected by Tele-Direct. Then Tel-Ad sent in the orders on a generic order form with no identifiers; these were also rejected and returned either to Tel-Ad or the customer. Attempts to submit orders with a letter of power of attorney from the customer also failed. Eventually, Tel-Ad simply left the orders with the customers to be submitted to Tele-Direct. In July 1984, Tel-Ad started legal action against Tele-Direct for refusing to accept advertising orders directly from Tel-Ad. Tel-Ad also sought an interlocutory injunction requiring Tele-Direct to accept orders submitted by Tel-Ad on behalf of advertisers. The injunction application was denied on the basis of no irreparable harm and the action was later abandoned. Tel-Ad's activities led to the first version of Tele-Direct's guidelines for dealing with consultants, drafted in 1986. Tele-Direct's guidelines are reviewed in some detail below.

(b) Tele-Direct Reaction - General

The existence and activity of consultants strike at the trustworthiness of advice provided by Tele-Direct's sales representatives and place highly profitable revenues in jeopardy. Tele-Direct does all within its power to eliminate any possibility of consultants gaining the ear of its customers. It has taken out advertisements warning customers to beware of consultants. The same message is conveyed by the representatives and by letters to customers telling them to call Tele-Direct if contacted by consultants.

According to the 1986 Tele-Direct guidelines for dealing with consultants, the "official" line on consultants to be conveyed by representatives is that their objective is to reduce Yellow Pages advertising which will reduce the effectiveness of the advertising and likely adversely affect the customer's business, based on studies conducted by Tele-Direct. Emphasis is placed on the fact that consultants are only paid if the customer reduces Yellow Pages spending, implying that consultants are likely to give biased advice, and that Tele-Direct will perform the "same" service as the consultant (advice and artwork) and "not charge a fee".[266] Tele-Direct also encouraged its representatives to point out to the customer that while Tele-Direct was concerned with the long-term, consultants do not have a continuing relationship with the customer and therefore have no incentive to take into account the possible negative repercussions on the customer's business if their advice is followed.

There is evidence that at least some sales representatives went considerably further in their efforts to discredit consultants, calling them "scam" artists and other epithets, saying they were unfamiliar with Tele-Direct's specifications and showing poor photocopies of artwork done by consultants to customers in an attempt to cast doubt on the ethics and professionalism of the consultants.

Tele-Direct has also taken other, positive steps to combat consultants by improving elements of its service to its customers. For example, Tele-Direct has attempted to create a better working relationship with customers through "consultative" selling and by assigning representatives to customers for up to three years rather than changing each year. While the changes made by Tele-Direct were not in response to consultants alone, they were rooted in customer dissatisfaction with Tele-Direct's service.

[266] These assertions ignore the fact that Tele-Direct representatives would rarely, if ever, give advice on how to reduce spending.

(c) Tele-Direct's Consultant Guidelines

The guidelines set out Tele-Direct's procedures and directives to its sales force for dealing with orders for advertising originating with consultants and for handling customer contact once involvement of a consultant has been detected or suspected. This stage of the relationship between consultants, customers and Tele-Direct forms the focus of the Director's allegations of anti-competitive conduct. While the application of the various guidelines has been somewhat erratic and interpretation of their terms varied, it is clear that Tele-Direct has at no time dealt directly with a consultant acting on behalf of or in a representative capacity for an advertiser. Tele-Direct has always insisted on visiting a customer suspected of using a consultant even after an order was received from the customer and obtaining the customer's signature on its own documents. The package provided by Mr. Brouillet of Ad-Vice to his clients, following futile attempts on his part to avert the visit of the Tele-Direct representative by providing Tele-Direct's contract or a similar document to his clients himself,[267] advises the client that the Tele-Direct representative will be in contact to transfer the advertising program onto the Tele-Direct forms.

(i) 1986 Guidelines and Their Application

As general rules, the 1986 guidelines provided that:

[267] Tele-Direct threatened him with legal action, apparently for breach of copyright in its contractual terms and conditions.

> (c) Tele-Direct will not accept insertion orders directly from directory consultants who have not been granted accredited agency status by Tele-Direct.
>
> (d) Tele-Direct sales representatives should continue to contact their customers directly and request that the customers actually sign the Tele-Direct contracts and layout sheets so as to ensure the accuracy of the Yellow Pages advertising proposal prepared by a directory consultant.[268]

While the Tele-Direct policy of refusing to accept orders directly from consultants may have been followed in Tele-Direct's western region, it was not followed in the eastern region, in particular in Montreal, Sudbury and Ottawa. Letters sent in 1989 by Tele-Direct to Consultant en publicité annuaire et communication (CEPAC 2000) Inc. (" CEPAC 2000 ") in Montreal and Ad-Vice in Sudbury and in 1990 to Steven White of Tel-Ad in Ottawa[269] outlined for the consultants in question the procedure to follow in submitting orders to Tele-Direct.[270] The orders had to be delivered to named Tele-Direct managers in the relevant offices, accompanied by proper authorization by the advertiser on the advertiser's company letterhead.

Paul de Sève, Tele-Direct's Vice-president of Sales for the eastern region, confirmed that, although Tele-Direct's policy was not to deal directly with the consultant on the advertiser's behalf, in the eastern region at least, it was accepting orders from consultants. Orders were not automatically rejected and returned to the consultant even though Tele-Direct was aware of consultant involvement. The orders were taken as an indication that the customer wanted to [268] Confidential exhibit CJ-10 (blue vol. 1), tab 5 (public).

---

[269] Not affiliated with Mr. Harrison.

[270] Initially, Tele-Direct refused to accept orders from Mr. Brouillet, until he obtained a copy of the letter sent to CEPAC 2000.

change its advertising and a Tele-Direct representative would visit the advertiser and deal with him or her directly. In Tele-Direct's own words,

> . . . Regardless of whether the "cut agent" or the customer was directing insertion/change/cancellation of Yellow Pages advertising through letter or order form, we would accept this information as notification that the customer wished to renegotiate his Yellow Pages advertising. The Tele-Direct representative would deal directly with our customer, using our forms and contracts in the setting up of Yellow Pages advertising.[271]

(ii) 1990 Policy and Application

Tele-Direct implemented new consultant guidelines in December 1990. The opening words of the revised guidelines state that:

> We changed our operating procedures on dealing with "cut agents" effective December, 1990, to further strengthen and reinforce our direct servicing philosophy with our customers.
>
> These changes were made to ensure that we did not act on "cut agent" instructions, for the insertion/change/cancellation of our customers' Yellow Pages advertising. Furthermore, these changes were intended to leave no doubt in the minds of our customers that we do not do business with "cut agents".[272]

The "general procedures" established by these guidelines were as follows:

> • we will always accept letters/packages sent or given to us by customers and act in accordance with their wishes.

---

[271] Operating procedures prior to December 1990: confidential exhibit CJ-11 (blue vol. 2), tab 58 at 107788 (public).

[272] Operating procedures, December 1990: ibid. at 107792 (public).

> • to the best of our knowledge, we will not accept, nor act upon, information sent or given to us by "cut agents" on behalf of our customers, nor accept or act upon information sent or given to us by customers containing directives from "cut agents."
>
> Instead, our procedure will be to not accept packages from "cut agents" or from customers for "cut agents" and in the event that a package is accepted in error, its contents will be returned to the "cut agent" with a covering letter designed for this purpose.[273]

The guidelines then provide more detail on the procedure to be followed in particular situations. The gist is that if, upon external examination of a letter or package, it became apparent that it was from a consultant or from a customer working with a consultant, the letter or package would be returned to the consultant. If the letter or package was apparently from a customer, with no external indication of consultant involvement, the letter or package would be opened but if further examination of the contents revealed the involvement of or a directive from a consultant, the letter or package would be returned to the consultant. Even when the letter or package appeared to come from or was, in fact, dropped off by the customer, if it was rejected because of consultant involvement, the customer would not be informed that the order had been returned to the consultant.

Mr. de Sève admitted that the procedures set out above represented a dramatic change from the 1986 guidelines, at least with respect to how the Montreal, Sudbury and Ottawa offices had been operating.[274] It is also clear from his testimony that the principal reason for the change was that Tele-Direct was having second thoughts about having "legitimized" the consultants to [274] There is some question as to whether the consultants affected were notified specifically of the change in policy or of the exact terms of the new policy. Messrs. Brouillet and Blais said that they were not.

---

[273] Ibid.

the extent they had by writing the letters referred to above in 1989 and 1990. The 1990 strike by Tele-Direct's sales representatives meant that the consultants were particularly active in the fall of that year.

The 1990 guidelines were adhered to strictly in one respect. At no time did Tele-Direct accept orders that were not submitted on the customer's letterhead. Other aspects of the guidelines appear to have been unevenly applied. Despite the statement that Tele-Direct would always accept orders from its customers and "act in accordance with their wishes", there was evidently considerable uncertainty within Tele-Direct as to how the guidelines were to be applied with respect to rejecting customers' orders for consultant involvement. Some orders containing indications of consultant involvement or where a consultant was known to be involved were accepted without incident or accepted after an initial rejection. Yet, Mr. de Sève's evidence, which as Vice-president of Sales for the eastern region we take to be an "official" application of the guidelines, was that where there was doubt, it was assumed that the documents came from a consultant and they were returned to the consultant without advising the customer.

This is what happened in the summer of 1991 in the case of a package containing 23 orders under customers' signatures which were, in fact, prepared by Ad-Vice North (Mr. Blais). An internal Tele-Direct document dealing with how it should respond to a complaint by Mr. Blais about this incident indicates that packages were being returned to Ad-Vice North by the Sudbury office even though Ad-Vice North was not mentioned in any of the correspondence and regardless of the fact that the letter of direction was from the customer because the employees recognized the Ad-Vice "format". Mr. de Sève stated that consultant involvement was probably assumed because of the number of orders in one envelope.

Mr. de Sève also confirmed that in 1991 Tele-Direct adopted a further policy of not processing orders received at the closing date according to the customer's instructions if they originated with a consultant even though it would do so for orders coming from its own sales force. Tele-Direct would instead rely on its last year's contract with the customer or the latest contract signed by the customer.

(iii) 1992 Policy and Application

The difficulties with and the inconsistency in application of the 1990 guidelines led to the most recent Tele-Direct guidelines for dealing with consultants, dated February 1992. These guidelines are currently in force. The operating procedures in those guidelines state that they are designed to "formalize our existing policy of dealing directly with customers." Two important aspects of that policy are:

> . . . Tele-Direct will not accept a customer's appointment of a consultant to act on his/her behalf in dealings with Tele-Direct; and, Tele-Direct will not knowingly take instructions from a consultant acting on behalf of a customer.[275]

The detailed procedures provide that when correspondence is received from a consultant, whether by mail, courier, delivery, etc., it is opened and the contents examined to determine what action (from a list of A to D) should be taken. According to the procedures, any correspondence from a customer appointing a consultant to act on his/her behalf is to be returned to the customer with a form letter indicating that Tele-Direct will only deal with its customers directly (B). Any "directive" from a consultant is to be returned to the consultant with a form letter which simply states that the material was received "in error" (C). A second form letter is to be sent to the customer explaining that the material has been returned to the consultant without being processed and stating Tele-Direct's policy of only dealing with the customer directly. The guidelines also state that any correspondence from a consultant regarding problems with or errors in published advertising are to be ignored altogether and the matter resolved directly with the customer (D).

[275] Confidential exhibit CJ-12 (blue vol. 3), tab 105 at 109796 (public).

Most importantly, if the correspondence contains instructions from a customer regarding his/her advertising, the procedures provide that the instructions should be accepted and handled "in the normal fashion, i.e., deal directly with the customer" (A). The evidence of Messrs. Renwicke and de Sève regarding when correspondence will be considered by Tele-Direct to contain instructions "from a customer" and will be accepted and handled in the "normal fashion" reveals that the guidelines are still open to interpretation. Mr. de Sève testified that even if the instructions are from the customer, on the customer's letterhead, if they include any reference to consultant involvement, the order will not be accepted. He was of the view that such a case fell within B or C set out above. Mr. Renwicke, on the other hand, first stated that such an order would be accepted. He then qualified this by saying that it depended on the "tonal quality" of the letter and of any references to a consultant. According to him, the defining criteria is whether it was perceived that the consultant "is going to be seen to or is actually playing a leadership role for that account".[276]

Assuming that the order is accepted, the guidelines also set out a "protocol" for customer contact by sales representatives when dealing "directly" with customers which reveals that little weight is given to the order already received from the customer. The representatives are to conduct themselves throughout in a "business-like and professional manner" but are expected to "only provide Yellow Pages selling services directly to a customer." While Tele-Direct's representatives are permitted (but not required) to meet with a customer when a consultant is present, they must decline to take any instructions from a consultant even if the customer insists. The protocol provides that all instructions must come directly from the customer. If the customer refuses to deal with the Tele-Direct representative directly, the representative is to review with the customer the customer's legal obligations under the existing Tele-Direct contract, i.e., that the previous year's advertising will simply be renewed. If this approach fails, the sales representatives are advised to try again later to re-convene the meeting but if the customer still refuses to deal directly, then advise the customer that the contract will remain in force in accordance with its terms.

Mr. de Sève admitted that under this protocol, where a customer handed the Tele-Direct representative a package containing instructions prepared by a consultant and asked the representative to follow them, that would lead to a termination of the interview and the instructions would not be followed. He also admitted that, in fact, Tele-Direct representatives would refuse to meet with the customer in the presence of the consultant because they would not be able to discuss with the client "one-on-one" the merits of the change in the advertising program.

[276] Testimony of P. de Sève: transcript at 44:9123-27 (22 November 1995); testimony of D. Renwicke: transcript at 46:9630-34 (27 November 1995).

(d) Specific Incidents

The Director relies on numerous specific incidents involving consultants and their customers as evidence in support of his allegations. The respondents dispute that some of those occurrences took place or if they took place, took place as related by the Director's witnesses.

We accept that there were times when Tele-Direct went beyond simply rejecting or returning orders from customers where consultant involvement was suspected and treated these in an extremely cavalier fashion. On one occasion in 1989, a package of customer orders prepared by Mr. Brouillet, including one from Ad-Vice's law firm, was left with a secretary who threw it out of the Tele-Direct office and into the hallway. The lawyer was able to confirm after a number of phone calls that his order had been retrieved and was processed. He inquired about the remaining orders but Tele-Direct refused to inform him of the fate of the other orders in the package.

On another occasion in 1990, when the manager designated to receive orders from Ad-Vice in Sudbury was not in the office, the process server left the package on the counter and the receptionist threw it in the garbage. Apparently the order was not processed in accordance with those instructions, according to the respondents, because the advice was delivered late. The only evidence brought to our attention on this point was a recently written note by the Tele-Direct representative that stated "delivered past deadline - did not use their material".[277] The affidavit of service sworn contemporaneously, however, indicates that the package was delivered on August 16, 1990. Mr. de Sève's evidence was that the closing date for Sudbury was in November. We therefore do not accept that the package was delivered late.

We accept the evidence of incidents in which orders from customers who had used a consultant were subject to "errors" in processing by Tele-Direct. In three cases Tele-Direct acknowledged to the customers that errors had been made and provided a credit. These included Todd Optical Ltd. (mistake in telephone number and location), Adler Moving Systems (advertisement in the Elliot Lake directory omitted), Forest Products and Builders (advertisement did not appear), all customers of Mr. Brouillet. The owner of Todd Optical Ltd. had written a letter of support for Ad-Vice. We note that these errors all had potentially serious adverse consequences for the businesses involved.

Another customer of Ad-Vice, Lockerby Taxi Inc., whose owner appeared as a witness, experienced an odd error when an unpaid "filler" advertisement was published featuring

[277] Confidential exhibit CJ-27 (black vol. 6), tab 33 at 128522.

Lockerby's name with the query "Sales Down?" in the background. Mr. Flinn was never provided an explanation or apology for the error. His attempt to obtain compensation was denied by Tele-Direct because he could not prove damage to his business.

The Director also called evidence that Tele-Direct informed customers that advertising prepared by a consultant did not comply with its specifications on the slimmest of pretexts.[278] Several of the examples related to clients of Mr. Brouillet, who testified that to his knowledge the advertisements were in accordance with existing specifications. The respondents called no evidence that the advertising did not meet specifications. In one case, the respondents admitted that the advertisement prepared by CEPAC 2000 did, in fact, comply with specifications.[279] We conclude that Tele-Direct would not have objected to these advertisements had it not been for the involvement of a consultant in each case.

As noted above, Tele-Direct's admitted practice is not to act on a customer's order, where a consultant is believed to be involved, until the customer has been visited by a Tele-Direct representative. Instead, Tele-Direct treats the order from the customer merely as an "indication" that the customer wants to change his or her advertising. Thus, in every case of suspected consultant involvement, the customer will be visited by a Tele-Direct representative. At the point of a meeting between the Tele-Direct representative and the customer, usually the customer would have already signed a contract with the consultant approving the changes recommended by the consultant and agreeing to pay the consultant's fee. The respondents deny that there was any tendency within Tele-Direct to delay visiting a customer who was known or suspected to have used a consultant until the last minute and to use the visit as the occasion to make disparaging remarks implying that the customer had been "taken advantage of" by the consultant or to use other tactics to pressure the customer into changing his or her mind about the program recommended by the consultant.

[278] E.g., Postime Distributors (wrong paper, wrong size), Paul's Quality Woodcraft (non-compliance with specifications in general), M & L Service (wrong paper) and Canac-Marquis Grenier (borderless advertisement not allowed).

[279] The advertisement was for Canac-Marquis Grenier.

We accept that these types of tactics were fairly widely used by Tele-Direct's representatives. Last minute contact resulting in pressure on the customer and some confusion as to what the customer had to do to ensure the advertising would run as originally ordered occurred in several examples put before us. Mr. Harrison recounted the example of Mr. Kantor of Tiremag Corp. Mr. Kantor's order was delivered by registered mail to Tele-Direct in April 1993. Mr. Kantor was contacted by the Tele-Direct representative six months later, close to the closing date for the Brampton directory, and informed that no order for that directory had been received and that unless something was done, his advertising for the previous year would have to be used. Mr. Kantor insisted that he had already given them his instructions but Tele-Direct never located the package. The previous year's advertisement was run, then Tele-Direct located the package and admitted it had made a mistake. Similar problems occurred for Pat's Party Rentals, a client of

Mr. Brouillet.[280] Other examples are the Britannia Restaurant & Banquet Hall, again a client of Mr. Brouillet, and the Muskoka Riverside Inn, a client of Mr. Blais.[281]

Eric Beesley of Georgetown Quik-Lube Ltd., who appeared in person, testified that, having submitted his order much earlier, he was contacted by the Tele-Direct representative the day before the closing date to attempt to persuade him to stay with his existing program. Then on the final day, he was called again and advised that he had to attend at the Tele-Direct office in person to make the changes. Mr. Beesley, however, was aware of the contractual clause allowing him to make changes in writing by a certain date, pointed out that he had complied with it and the advertising was processed as he had ordered.

There is only one documented case in the evidence in which a Tele-Direct representative counselled a customer outright not to honour a contract with a consultant.[282] Tele-Direct's guidelines explicitly warn Tele-Direct representatives not to provide advice with respect to customers' legal obligations. There is, however, abundant evidence of instances where customers [280] The order was sent in under her signature on July 15, 1991. On September 30, 1991, the client received a form letter from Tele-Direct stating that the material had been returned to the consultant without processing. (As of that date, Ad-Vice had not received anything back.) The customer panicked, thinking her advertising would not appear. Mr. Brouillet was unable to obtain confirmation that the advertising would appear as ordered. The client ended up dealing directly with Tele-Direct and Mr. Brouillet had to sue to recover his fee.

[281] The Britannia Restaurant & Banquet Hall order was sent in on August 2, 1991. On September 25, 1991, shortly before the closing date, Tele-Direct faxed the client its contract documents, which described the previous year's program. The client simply signed the documents, thinking they represented the new order. The old program appeared, the client protested, Tele-Direct insisted on full payment, the client refused to pay and was eventually barred from placing further advertising in Tele-Direct's directories. A Tele-Direct notation on a document relating to this customer indicates some concern even on its part about what transpired. The Muskoka Riverside Inn submitted its order prior to the deadline for making changes. The order was returned to the consultant and the client notified he had to send the order himself. The client missed the deadline for changing artwork and Tele-Direct ran the old advertising.

[282] L.J. Sunshine Hardwood Flooring. Ad-Vice has sued the customer for breach of contract. In his defence, the customer claims that the Tele-Direct representative advised him that he had been "misrepresented" and should stop payment on his cheque.

refused to pay consultants following a meeting with the Tele-Direct representative. If the customer refuses to pay, the consultant is obliged to take legal action to recover the fees owed.[283] In general, where the consultants have gone to court, they have been successful in having the contract honoured. While it might be argued that the persistent refusals to pay by customers indicates dissatisfaction with the consultants' services rather than reflecting any tactics employed by Tele-Direct's representatives, on the evidence we accept that there is a link between the visit by the representative and the instances of refusal to pay the consultants' fees.

The issue in many of these incidents is whether Tele-Direct made innocent errors, or whether the climate in Tele-Direct towards consultants resulted in what was, in effect, sabotage of the consultants and their customers. An important reason for concluding that there was more than innocent errors at work is the evidence that Tele-Direct was willing to sacrifice the interests of customers by putting them in the middle of Tele-Direct's struggle against consultants. There is more than a hint of malevolence in the formal and explicit decision in the 1990 guidelines not to inform customers when orders submitted on their behalf were being refused (although this was changed in the 1992 guidelines).

(5) Anti-competitive Acts

The Director alleges a number of anti-competitive acts by Tele-Direct involving consultants relating to Tele-Direct's refusal to deal directly with consultants on behalf of advertisers, its discriminatory treatment of customers and customers' orders originating with consultants and its refusal to supply specifications to consultants. None are specifically listed in section 78 of the Act. As the list is not exhaustive, there is no reason not to assess the actions characterized by the Director as anti-competitive acts by Tele-Direct to see if they have the requisite exclusionary, predatory or disciplinary purpose.

[283] Or, evidently, write off the account or accept a reduced fee in settlement, as Mr. Blais did on one occasion.

The respondents argue that the challenged conduct cannot be anti-competitive because it was generally in accordance with the Tele-Direct guidelines for dealing with consultants, which they say were not intended to and do not prevent the consultants from doing business but rather render Tele-Direct's dealings with consultants "fair and consistent". They further submit that they have valid business reasons for their policy. These "business justifications" will be dealt with in detail for each alleged anti-competitive act.

In a related argument, the respondents submit that, to the extent that the Director is able to prove that Tele-Direct engaged in any of the alleged acts, those acts ceased in 1992 with the implementation of the most recent guidelines for dealing with consultants which have been consistently applied, unlike prior versions. They submit that any practice cannot be caught by section 79 as more than three years have elapsed since it ceased. We do not see validity in the argument. The 1992 guidelines are obviously still in force. The Director has not alleged that it is only the failure to follow the guidelines that is anti-competitive but that certain actions of Tele-Direct, which may not be contrary to the guidelines (refusal to deal directly with consultants on behalf of advertisers) or are simply not dealt with in the guidelines (some discriminatory acts, refusal to supply specifications), are anti-competitive. To the extent that the guidelines sanction conduct that the Director is alleging is anti-competitive, then the Director is, in effect, challenging the guidelines and their application also. The guidelines certainly do not prohibit (and may actually encourage) the particular conduct by Tele-Direct that is the subject of the allegations.

(a) Refusal to Deal Directly with Consultants

The respondents here repeat the argument that we dealt with earlier under the section concerning the abuse of dominant position with respect to publishers and the 20-directory requirement. They argue that a refusal cannot be an anti-competitive act and that they are not required to assist their "detractors" by dealing with consultants as that would be akin to placing a positive duty to act on the respondents. As we stated in that section, semantic arguments about whether the act in question is active or passive do little to advance the real issues in dispute. We will therefore proceed to analyze the more substantive arguments without further comment.

The evidence is clear that Tele-Direct has engaged, since the advent of Mr. Harrison and Tel-Ad in 1984, in the specific aspects of refusing to deal directly with consultants on behalf of customers set out under I. in the introduction above. Tele-Direct has refused to act on written instructions received from consultants on behalf of advertisers; refused to act upon oral instructions received from consultants on behalf of advertisers or meet consultants or the advertiser in the presence of consultants to receive same; and refused to deal with consultants on subsequent errors or problems.

In the eastern region between 1986 and 1990, Tele-Direct acted in contravention of its own 1986 guidelines by accepting orders from, at least, CEPAC 2000, Ad-Vice and Tel-Ad, as evidenced by the letters. Even those letters, however, make it clear that the order must be accompanied by a letter from the customer on the customer's letterhead.

There is also evidence that Tele-Direct refuses to accept oral instructions from consultants. The 1992 guidelines are clear that the Tele-Direct representative must not accept instructions, even indirectly, from anyone other than the customer. While the current guidelines allow the representative to meet with the customer with the consultant present, the representative is not required to do so. The evidence was that most of the time the representative refuses to meet with the customer with the consultant present. Likewise, Tele-Direct would not deal with consultants on follow-up matters on behalf of customers.

We must weigh the anti-competitive effects of the acts against the business justifications put forward by the respondents. There is no doubt that Tele-Direct was trying to make life difficult for the consultants by refusing to deal with them directly on behalf of advertisers. Tele-Direct did not want the consultants to have any legitimacy in their dealings with its customers. The 1990 guidelines were brought in to eliminate the slight leniency that had developed under the 1986 guidelines, which had placed letters from Tele-Direct in the hands of various eastern region consultants confirming that orders coming from them would be accepted and processed by Tele-Direct.

There are two possible types of adverse effects that might arise from Tele-Direct's refusal to deal with consultants acting on behalf of customers. The first is the possible increase in costs to the consultants that would result from having to do business in a somewhat roundabout way, rather than submitting orders directly. The second, and more important, effect is the effect on the consultants' credibility with customers when they have to explain to customers that they are not permitted by Tele-Direct to submit orders directly on their behalf but must use an indirect procedure. This might put the consultants in a negative light in the eyes of the customer, particularly if the customer is already generally aware of the background of acrimonious relations between Tele-Direct and consultants. Against that backdrop, the indirect procedure that the consultants must use for submitting orders to Tele-Direct might appear as a form of subterfuge.

The evidence does not indicate that cost increases to consultants from Tele-Direct's refusal have been a real issue. The consultants' businesses have experienced ups and downs. While Mr. Harrison was unable to grow his business between 1986 and 1992, servicing an average of 60 new accounts a year, in the last few years he has expanded and is now handling 200 to 250 new accounts a year. Mr. Brouillet testified that Ad-Vice revenues from Yellow Pages consulting were at a high between 1992 and 1994 but dropped roughly to 50 percent of that amount in the last two years. He has also diversified into other businesses in recent years. Mr. Blais eventually gave up and left the business.

Although all three of the mentioned consultants testified at the hearing, none of them expressly linked whatever difficulties that they might have experienced to an increase in costs.

Even Mr. Blais did not do so. Undoubtedly, the consultants would like to have the advantage of being able to deal directly with Tele-Direct on behalf of advertisers. We find it instructive that Mr. Harrison has been operating since the mid-1980's, and still operates, in spite of Tele-Direct's refusal to deal directly with him in a representative capacity. Evidently, he, and other consultants no doubt, have managed to find an alternative to direct submission of orders that does not impose significant increased costs, or any increased costs at all, on their businesses. We cannot, therefore, identify any adverse cost effects on consultants resulting from Tele-Direct's refusal to deal with them acting on behalf of advertisers.

The question of possible negative reputational effects or damage to consultants' credibility arising from Tele-Direct's refusal to deal with them acting for customers is complex. To the extent that consultants lose reputation or credibility, customers will be less likely to demand their services. We do have evidence from the consultants that they have suffered negative reputational effects. For example, Mr. Brouillet testified that he could not keep sales help because of the negative environment; sales personnel felt they were regarded by advertisers as not legitimate, as "scam" or "con" artists.

Unfortunately, it is difficult to determine whether these effects result from the refusal by Tele-Direct to deal directly or from other actions of Tele-Direct that are not alleged to be anti-competitive. The Director has not challenged as anti-competitive Tele-Direct's general hostility towards consultants, as manifested by the placing of advertising warning customers about consultants, writing letters to customers and sending out its representatives to their premises with messages to the same effect. In our view, the negative reputational effects on consultants are due largely to the general environment created by Tele-Direct rather than the specific refusal to deal directly with consultants acting for advertisers. Any connection between the negative reputational effect or loss of credibility on the part of consultants and the refusal to deal directly is very weak.

We turn to Tele-Direct's business justifications for its consultant guidelines and, thus, for its refusal to accept written or oral instructions from consultants or deal with them on follow-up matters. The respondents' general position is that their refusal to deal with consultants "is clearly an efficient response to the damaging effect of the consultants on their business". They point out that the objective of the consultants is to decrease directory advertising which is exactly the opposite of the respondents' objective, which is, in their words, to sell directory advertising "in order to increase the usage of their directories and produce a more complete directory." Because the consultants generally serve customers on a one-time basis, the respondents take the position that consultants have a "perverse" incentive to "undersell", which detracts from the completeness of the directories.

We have already dealt with the "completeness" argument as part of the analysis of tied selling. As we concluded there, it is far from clear that all increases in advertising (especially size and colour which are targeted by consultants for reduction) contribute to completeness. Therefore, the "upselling" of size and colour by Tele-Direct representatives cannot be assumed to be socially beneficial, nor can the "downselling" of those attributes by consultants be assumed to be socially detrimental. The optimal situation is one in which both points of view are freely available to advertisers so that the advertisers themselves can make the choice.

At paragraph 840 of their written argument, the respondents have also provided the following more detailed justifications for issuing and following their consultant guidelines:

> (i) the consultants do not accept responsibility for payment for the advertising;
>
> (ii) to ensure that the customer is fully informed with respect to the advertising they are purchasing and their available options;
>
> (iii) to ensure customers understand with whom they are dealing;
>
> (iv) to prevent the conflicts that may occur if the Respondents' sales representatives were to take instructions directly from the consultants;
>
> (v) to ensure that advertisers are aware of new programs and initiatives.

We need only deal with the first point. The Director has in effect admitted the validity of the respondents' first business justification, that consultants do not accept financial responsibility for the advertising, by the remedies he seeks. At paragraph 69(b)(iii) of the application, the proposed remedy was:

> . . . that the Respondents accept orders for advertising space on behalf of any party that can satisfy the Respondents' reasonable requirements of evidence of authority to act on behalf of an advertiser and capacity to pay for the space requested. (emphasis added)

At paragraph 391 of the written argument, the following further remedy was added:

> . . . that the Respondents be prohibited from requiring that customers who choose to utilize the services of a third party to place advertising be required to enter into a contract directly with the Respondents where the third party who has satisfied the Respondents' reasonable requirements of evidence of authority to > act on behalf of the advertiser and where the third party has guaranteed payment on behalf of the principal. (emphasis added)

These proposed remedies imply that in the Director's view it is reasonable for Tele-Direct to insist on financial guarantees if Tele-Direct is to deal with consultants as representatives of the customer. The consultants do not currently accept any financial responsibility. What the Director has done is to suggest an alternative method of operations for Tele-Direct in its dealings with consultants. He is proposing, in effect, that Tele-Direct begin to deal directly with consultants acting for advertisers by creating a new third sales channel (in addition to the internal sales force and agents).

There is evidence that dealing directly with the consultants would require Tele-Direct to set up an additional interface to deal with them. As described by Mr. Logan of the YPPA, this was the experience of US West, which set up a group of specially trained employees to deal with consultants to avoid problems with its sales force when it dealt directly with consultants. Such direct dealing, therefore, would obviously entail an additional cost to Tele-Direct. Further, Tele-Direct does not currently deal with guarantees in the sense proposed by the Director. Agents, of course, simply pay up front. A system would have to be set up to accommodate this new procedure.

In the circumstances, we think that the additional costs that Tele-Direct would incur if it were forced to deal with consultants directly on behalf of advertisers is a valid justification for not doing so, given that no adverse cost effects on agents were proven and that any negative reputational effects that are attributable to the refusal to deal directly are, at best, weak. We conclude, therefore, that, overall, Tele-Direct is not engaging in anti-competitive acts by refusing to deal directly with consultants on behalf of advertisers and, in particular, by refusing to accept written or oral instructions from, or engage in follow-up communication with consultants acting on behalf of advertisers.

(b) Discriminatory Acts

The discriminatory acts involve Tele-Direct's actions after the customer has submitted an order based on a consultant's advice and the effects that flow therefrom. Notwithstanding Tele-Direct's stated policy, orders submitted by a customer are sometimes returned because Tele-Direct believes a consultant was involved in the preparation of the order. There is no justification for Tele-Direct precluding an advertiser from seeking the advice of a consultant if the advertiser so chooses. Indeed, that is what one part of Tele-Direct's written guidelines states. Yet, the guidelines, even the 1992 guidelines, also mandate the return of certain customer orders. The fact that Mr. De Sève, a senior executive of Tele-Direct, is aware, and apparently condones, the return of customer orders for suspicion of consultant involvement proves that these were not merely isolated instances or errors.

Further, the history of the 1990 guidelines underlines the fact that Tele-Direct was fully aware of and, in fact, sanctioned the foreseen negative consequences of those guidelines for its advertisers. The advertisers' interests were sacrificed in order to hamper the consultants. The effect of the 1990 guidelines, as Tele-Direct itself recognized when they were first drafted, was to place the advertiser in the middle of the battle between Tele-Direct and the consultants, to the detriment of the advertiser.

A document attached to the guidelines identifies "perceived weaknesses" in the guidelines which were to be reviewed with the legal advisors. The first related to the fact that Tele-Direct would be rejecting any package delivered by a consultant or bearing any external indication of consultant involvement even if delivered by the customer or also bearing customer information on its face. Packages would therefore be rejected even though they might contain instructions from the customer on the customer's letterhead. A second concern was whether it was a reasonable business approach not to notify customers that the letter/package delivered to Tele-Direct had been rejected and returned to the consultant. In spite of these misgivings, the new policy was put in place.

The internal document dealing with the incident where 23 orders prepared by Mr. Blais were rejected even though they were under customers' signatures states that legal counsel, in fact, recommended against the procedure in the guidelines which permitted this type of rejection. Counsel, as reported in the letter, was of the view that the customers had the right to deal with whomever they wished in designing their advertising and further had the right to send Tele-Direct their instructions on their letterhead and expect that they would be acted on as coming from them, provided that Tele-Direct was not required to deal directly with the consultant and the correspondence did not carry any consultant identification.

The respondents did not attempt to provide a business justification for rejecting or returning customer orders where there was no evidence of non-compliance with specifications or of late delivery. In the circumstances, we find that the rejection, return, denial of receipt or refusal to process customer orders involving consultants constitute anti-competitive acts.

As noted earlier, the Director is not of the view that Tele-Direct's insistence on visiting a customer after the customer has signed a contract with a consultant and submitted an order to Tele-Direct is by itself an anti-competitive act. He says that the issue relates to what the representative tells the customer and how the order received from the customer is treated. We agree that this is the crux of the difficulty. The anti-competitive acts are those that lead the customers to believe that they will be disadvantaged or that actually harm them because they have used a consultant. These include suspicious errors, last minute contact resulting in confusion for the advertiser about what must be done to have the new advertising run or resulting in missed deadlines, identifying errors or problems in the advertising that would not otherwise be a problem and informing customers that their orders might not be processed. We accept that such incidents occurred and that there is no assurance that they will not be repeated whenever consultants are seen as a threat.

The respondents argue that they were trying in all cases to ensure that their business operated efficiently by requiring consultants to meet deadlines and specifications. We have found that non-compliance with specifications and deadlines were largely pretexts for an attempt to pressure customers into changing their minds about a consultant's recommendations. Most of the incidents in evidence are more accurately characterized as highly disruptive because of the negative impact on customers rather than ensuring the smooth operation of Tele-Direct's business as argued. We have no hesitation in finding that statements or actions by Tele-Direct to discourage advertisers from dealing with consultants by expressly or implicitly indicating that advertisers will thereby be disadvantaged by Tele-Direct constitute anti-competitive acts.

The Director alleges that the respondents discriminate against consultants by refusing to meet with customers to take instructions originating in advice from consultants. On its face this looks very much like the allegation listed in I.(b) and forming part of the refusal by Tele-Direct to deal directly with consultants on behalf of advertisers. Presumably, the discriminatory act being alleged here is a refusal to accept oral instructions from customers using consultants while oral orders from customers not using consultants are accepted and acted on. As has already been noted, Tele-Direct requires that customers using consultants sign Tele-Direct's documents. In and of itself, this is not an anti-competitive act. It might, however, be a discriminatory act if customers not using consultants are not required to sign a contract in like circumstances.

However, the evidence of Mr. Giddings is that, by and large, all of Tele-Direct's customers sign its documents. In fact, Mr. Giddings testified that the only contracts which do not require signing are those contracts renewing advertising worth less than $100. Further, Mr. Giddings indicated that for those contracts which are not signed, if there is a conflict between the customer and the representative as to what advertising was actually ordered, which results in a "write-off", the representative is financially responsible for the write-off. This policy does not seem unreasonable on an operational basis. With respect to orders which Tele-Direct will accept orally from customers dealing with its representatives (that is, those under $100), there is no evidence that consultants deal with or are interested in obtaining clients whose orders are so small. We do not find this allegation to constitute an anti-competitive act.

There is no doubt that those discriminatory acts of Tele-Direct which we have found to be anti-competitive constitute a practice. They are not "isolated acts".

(c) Specifications

The Director submits that Tele-Direct's refusal to supply specifications to consultants is an anti-competitive act. He argues that consultants cannot adequately advise the customers who choose to use their services without up-to-date access to basic technical information. The Director points to evidence of Tele-Direct using alleged non-compliance with specifications to delay orders or discredit consultants in customers' eyes.

(i) Majority View (Rothstein J. and C. Lloyd)

The majority of the Tribunal are unable to agree with the Director for the following reasons. We see the refusal by Tele-Direct to provide specifications to consultants as another manifestation of Tele-Direct's general aversion to having any relationship with consultants. Looking at the experience of consultants and Tele-Direct's refusal to supply specifications to them, the evidence is that this has not adversely affected their ability to compete. Consultants have been in business since 1984 and we have heard of no difficulty experienced by them because Tele-Direct refused to provide them with specifications.[284] In one way or another, they were aware of what Tele-Direct's specifications required.

As to whether Tele-Direct not providing specifications to consultants would cause a problem in the future, Mr. Brouillet stated:

> . . . If there were changes in their specifications and we were not informed about it, then obviously, there would be a problem. If there was really a problem, the client only had to call us within 24 hours, we could fix what was wrong and forward that to Tele-Direct.[285]

There is no evidence before us that suggests that Tele-Direct's specifications change frequently. If anything we are left with the contrary impression from the absence of evidence from consultants that frequent changes were a problem. Mr. Brouillet stated that once a problem is pointed out it can be quickly fixed. On the basis of this evidence, we are satisfied that any

---

[284] This is not to say that Tele-Direct did not reject some orders based on non-compliance with specifications. This may have been the fault of the consultant not to conform to the specifications of which he was aware or because Tele-Direct, without justification, wished to create difficulty for a consultant. But Tele-Direct's rejection of orders was not attributable to consultants not being aware of what Tele-Direct's specifications required.

[285] Transcript at 15:2762 (6 October 1995).

changes to specifications will become known by consultants quickly. We, therefore, have no basis upon which to infer that refusal to provide specifications to consultants will, in any material way, adversely affect their ability to compete in the future.

The respondents did not argue the business justification "that customers understand with whom they are dealing" to justify the refusal to supply specifications to consultants, although this was raised as a justification for other acts. However, we are of the view, based on the evidence, that this business justification is applicable here. There is evidence before us of a number of instances in which there was confusion on the part of advertisers as to the exact relationship of a consultant with Tele-Direct.[286]

We infer from the way in which some consultants operate that this confusion could be exacerbated if a consultant, on visiting a proposed customer, is armed with up-to-date specifications obtained from Tele-Direct. There are indications in the evidence that in their initial contact with advertisers, consultants do not go out of their way to distinguish themselves from Tele-Direct. In some cases, the evidence is that the customer remains confused as to the exact relationship between the consultant and Tele-Direct.[287] In other cases, it is apparent that while an advertiser may initially be confused, the fact that the consultant does not represent Tele-Direct [286] Evidence of Mr. Lee of M & L Service, Mr. and Mrs. Jovandin of L.J. Sunshine Hardwood Flooring, Mr. Fox of Fox & Partners Limited, Mr. Harmic of Dominion Springs Corporation, Mr. McMaster of H.R. Home Renovations. Of course, the consultants blamed Tele-Direct for the confusion and Tele-Direct blamed the consultants. We cannot say for certain how the confusion about the relationship between Tele-Direct and consultants arose in each case but it does appear there was confusion in the minds of some customers.

[287] E.g., Mr. Lee of M & L Service.

eventually becomes apparent. It may become apparent in conversation between the advertiser and consultant or when the advertiser is requested to pay the consultant separate from Tele-Direct. In the case of Ad-Vice, a follow-up letter makes this clear.[288]

However, in our view, it is the initial confusion that creates the difficulty. We do not think consultants should be "getting their foot in the door" of advertisers because of such initial confusion. Being provided with specifications by Tele-Direct could be used by them as a form of "calling card" signifying a relationship with Tele-Direct that does not really exist. Notwithstanding that in many cases the confusion is eventually cleared up, we do think customers are best served when they know from the outset precisely with whom they are dealing and in this case, the relationship or lack of relationship between Tele-Direct and a consultant. We therefore think that Tele-Direct is justified in refusing to provide specifications to consultants and conclude that such refusal is not an anti-competitive act.

While we are not satisfied that the Director has made a case that the refusal to provide specifications to consultants is an anti-competitive act, we are not unmindful that ultimately it is the advertisers that might encounter difficulty if they retain the services of consultants who use incorrect specifications. It is for this reason that we have, in providing for a remedy for discriminatory acts against advertisers, required Tele-Direct, at its option, to take positive steps to revise a customer's order that is not submitted in compliance with its specifications so that the order complies or advise the customer what is wrong and how the customer may revise the order in accordance with its specifications.

[288] The package provided by Mr. Brouillet to his clients advises the client that the Tele-Direct representative will be in contact to transfer the advertising program to the Tele-Direct forms.

(ii) Minority View (F. Roseman)

In my view, the refusal to supply specifications is an anti-competitive act. While differing from the majority in their conclusion, I accept that there is little evidence of past harm to consultants from the refusal. Nevertheless, consultants may suffer adverse effects in the future should Tele-Direct change its specifications. The consultants will eventually learn of the changes through trial and error but this leaves a considerable degree of uncertainty during an indeterminate transitional period. Therefore, there is the likelihood that the consultants will be significantly hampered so that the refusal to supply specifications should be considered an anti-competitive act given the complete absence of any sound business justification for the refusal.

The respondents have not advanced any valid business justification. They argue that the refusal is justified by the uniqueness and complexity of Tele-Direct's business and its desire to maintain the value and quality of its product. It is difficult to see how avoidable errors in orders prepared by consultants (and submitted by customers) contribute to quality.

I do not accept the majority's view that the evidence supports the conclusion that the availability of specifications to consultants would result in increased confusion on the part of customers as to the consultants' identity and purpose. I agree with the majority that it is impossible to identify the source of the confusion that apparently arose for some customers.[289] However, it is noteworthy that none of the incidents of confusion referred to by the majority was linked to Mr. Harrison[290] but only to Mr. Brouillet. Yet, it is Mr. Harrison who has been able to obtain ongoing access to Tele-Direct's specifications from YPPA through an affiliate in the United States. Because I am of the view that refusal to supply specifications will likely significantly hamper the consultants' ability to compete and that there is no valid business justification for the refusal, I conclude that the refusal constitutes an anti-competitive act.

(6) Substantial Lessening of Competition

The competitive effectiveness of consultants has been reduced as a result of Tele-Direct's practice of discriminatory acts. Consultants incur higher costs as a result of being forced to defend themselves before customers and by having to seek the aid of the courts in enforcing their contracts. These activities require time and expense that could otherwise be spent in attracting and serving customers.

In addition, the consultants' ability to attract new business is negatively affected when their customers are inconvenienced or harmed by Tele-Direct's discriminatory acts. Customers so affected are unlikely to be repeat customers or to recommend the services of consultants to other Yellow Pages advertisers.

---

[289] Supra note 287.

[290] Ibid. All of the incidents cited related to clients of Ad-Vice except for Mr. Fox of Fox & Partners Limited, who was not linked to a specific consultant.

Although consultants currently service a small portion of the total telephone directory advertising revenue, they are competitively significant. Tele-Direct was forced to respond positively to the presence of consultants by improving its servicing of its customers. Thus, consultants have had and can continue to have a significant positive influence on Tele-Direct's level of service to its customers as Tele-Direct legitimately strives to offset the inroads that consultants make into its sale of Yellow Pages advertising.

It is difficult to arrive at a numerical determination of the effect on consultants of the practice of discriminatory acts we have found to be anti-competitive because the acts are intermingled with other forces that hamper consultants. What we know, however, is that the consultants' ability to compete is limited and fragile as compared to Tele-Direct's virtual monopoly through its control of publishing. Consultants, by the nature of their services, have little ongoing business and must convince advertisers to pay for their services when these advertisers could place advertising in directories without incurring such expense, i.e., the market for their services is necessarily a "thin" one.

Where a firm with a high degree of market power is found to have engaged in anti-competitive conduct, smaller impacts on competition resulting from that conduct will meet the test of being "substantial" than where the market situation was less uncompetitive to begin with.[291] In these circumstances, particularly Tele-Direct's overwhelming market power, even a small impact on the volume of consultants' business, of which there is some evidence, by the anti-competitive acts must be considered substantial. Of course, in the future, in the absence of any order by the Tribunal, there would be no constraint on Tele-Direct intensifying discriminatory acts against consultants and exacerbating an already substantial effect on them. We have no difficulty concluding that Tele-Direct's proven practice of anti-competitive acts has had, is having or is likely to have the effect of lessening competition substantially in the market.

(7) Remedies

The Tribunal recognizes that consultants' interests are antithetical to Tele-Direct's and that Tele-Direct should not be forced to assist consultants. However, consultants must be able to compete with Tele-Direct to provide services to advertisers. Tele-Direct cannot use its market power to impede consultants' activities and to disadvantage customers who wish to retain the services of consultants. On the other hand, Tele-Direct must not be restrained from competing fairly with consultants.

---

[291] The approach we adopt is implicit in Director of Investigation and Research v. Imperial Oil Ltd. (26 January 1990), CT8903/390, Reasons and Decision at 16, [1990] C.C.T.D. No. 1 (QL) (Comp. Trib.) and in U.S. Dept. of Justice/Federal Trade Comm'n, Horizontal Merger Guidelines, (2 April 1992) at 1.51. Although dealing with a consent order, Imperial in effect addresses the issue of what constitutes a substantial lessening of competition when there are varying initial degrees of market power by evaluating what is required to cure the alleged substantial lessening of competition. Similarly, the Guidelines view any numerical increase in concentration more severely the higher the initial market share of the acquiring firm.

We have concluded that Tele-Direct's refusal to deal with the consultants directly on behalf of advertisers is not an anti-competitive act. No remedy is provided in this respect. Nor is any remedy provided for Tele-Direct's refusal to provide specifications to consultants.

We have found that Tele-Direct engaged in a practice of discriminatory acts against consultants and customers who use consultants resulting in a substantial lessening of competition. While many of the acts in evidence occurred more than three years before the filing of the Director's application, the practice continues. The practice of these acts is prohibited. Customers using consultants must be treated by Tele-Direct no differently than customers who do not use consultants.

For greater certainty, we elaborate on this remedy. Where a customer uses a consultant and the customer submits an order for advertising in the Yellow Pages, Tele-Direct is prohibited from rejecting the order. Tele-Direct may accept the customer's order without revisiting or contacting the customer to attempt to change the customer's mind. It will be open to Tele-Direct to act on the documents submitted by the customer or, if it considers it necessary, require the customer to sign a Tele-Direct document. If Tele-Direct decides to accept the order as it is, Tele-Direct is prohibited from not processing it or unduly delaying its processing and from refusing to confirm to the customer that the order will be processed as submitted. If the order is accepted and it turns out there is non-compliance with Tele-Direct's specifications, then the order must be processed in accordance with a revision made by Tele-Direct that complies with the specifications or the customer must be advised promptly that the order does not comply with specifications and informed of the exact problem and how to rectify it.

Alternatively, Tele-Direct has the option of providing further advice to the customer to try to convince the customer to change the order submitted. It may do so, including visiting the customer, but it is prohibited from employing the techniques that we have condemned as anti-competitive when doing so. For example, Tele-Direct may not delay until close to the closing date for submitting orders for a directory to contact the customer about alleged problems in the order. Tele-Direct may not advise the customer who used a consultant that the order does not conform to Tele-Direct's specifications or is otherwise unacceptable unless there is a material problem, in which case, Tele-Direct must provide the necessary information so the customer can cure the problem. Tele-Direct cannot use problems with the order in such a way as to leave the customer only with the option of reverting to the prior year's advertisement or having no advertisement appear. Nor may Tele-Direct delay until close to the closing date so that if the Tele-Direct's representative is able to convince the customer to change the order from that recommended by the consultant, that the customer does not have the opportunity of contacting the consultant if the customer wishes further advice from that source.

Subsequent efforts by Tele-Direct to resell the advertisers should be restricted to the merits of the advertising recommended by the consultant. Tele-Direct is prohibited from having its representatives discuss the role of or advisability of using a consultant at this time. We recognize that it may be difficult to distinguish between legitimate "puffing" of Tele-Direct's service and disparaging comments or inferences about the consultant's service. In view of the instances of disparaging comments by Tele-Direct that have occurred, we caution Tele-Direct to ensure that its instructions to its representatives are clear that in their follow-up meetings they are not to disparage consultants. What would be of concern would be evidence of systematic continuous representations that are untrue or that disparage consultants in these follow-up meetings.

For example, it is simply untrue that customers would receive the same advice from Tele-Direct for no cost as from a consultant who charges a fee because Tele-Direct representatives will rarely if ever recommend a reduction in advertising, which is the essence of the consultants' advice. The fact that consultants have a short-term relationship with a customer may be true but comments to this effect are disparaging if made with a view to causing a customer to lose confidence in a consultant's advice, not based on the merits of that advice. Tele-Direct should ensure that in these meetings its representatives restrict their selling effort to the merits of the advertising.

Observation by C. Lloyd and F. Roseman

We would have preferred to see a prohibition on attempted reselling by Tele-Direct's representative after an order was received from a customer. In our view, Tele-Direct has ample opportunity to establish a situation of trust and confidence between its customers and its representatives. If it fails to use its opportunities and customers choose to take the advice of a consultant because they perceive that they have not received quality service from Tele-Direct, then, ideally, that would be the end of the matter for that directory year. We have chosen, however, not to dispute the Director's concession that Tele-Direct should not be precluded from visiting advertisers after they have submitted an order.

X. ORDER

FOR THESE REASONS, THE TRIBUNAL ORDERS THAT:

Definitions

1. In this order,

(a) "market" shall mean a market as defined by Tele-Direct for purposes of its commissionability rules prior to the filing of the application in this matter, and, for greater certainty, there shall in future be no fewer than six markets in Quebec and seven markets in Ontario;

(b) "consultants" shall mean firms which advise telephone directory advertisers on how to increase the effectiveness of and reduce expenditures on telephone directory advertising, primarily in the Yellow Pages, and which assist advertisers in the placement of orders for telephone directory advertising, but does not include firms which are accredited advertising agencies.

Tied Selling

2. The respondents are prohibited from continuing to engage in tied selling, namely tying the supply of advertising space by them to the acquisition of advertising services from them, for customers advertising in six, seven and eight markets.

Abuse of Dominant Position

3. The respondents are prohibited from engaging in the practice of discriminatory acts relating to consultants and customers of consultants.

Remaining Allegations

4. The remainder of the application of the Director is dismissed.

Interpretation

5. The Director or the respondents may apply to the Tribunal for directions or an order interpreting any of the provisions of this order.

Confidentiality

6. As required by paragraph 11(1) of the Confidentiality (Protective) Order issued by the Tribunal on March 30, 1995, the panel determines that a "reasonable period" for the retention, in a secure and organized manner, by the respondents of those protected documents returned to them by the Director upon completion or final disposition of this proceeding and any appeals relating thereto, shall be five years.

DATED at Ottawa, this 26th day of February, 1997.

SIGNED on behalf of the Tribunal by the presiding judicial member.

(s) Marshall Rothstein
Marshall Rothstein

14

Competition Tribunal Tribunal de la Concurrence

CT-1989-002 – Doc # 176a

IN THE MATIER OF an application by the Director of Investigation and Research under sections 79 and 77 of the Competition Act, R.S.C., 1985, c. C-34, as amended;

AND IN THE MATIER OF The NutraSweet Company

BETWEEN:

The Director of Investigation and Research
Applicant

and

The NutraSweet Company
Respondent

and Tosoh Canada Ltd.

Intervenor

REASONS AND ORDER

Dates of Hearing:

January 9-11, January 22-26, January 30-February 16, February 20, 21, and 23, April 26, and July 10, 1990

Presiding Member:

The Honourable Mr. Justice Barry L. Strayer

Judicial Member:

The Honourable Mr. Justice Max M. Teitelbaum

Lay Member:

Dr. Frank Roseman

Counsel for the Applicant:

Director of Investigation and Research

Warren Grover, Q.C.
John J. Quinn
Mark Katz
Winston Fogarty
Graham Garton, Q.C.
Rory R. Edge

Counsel for the Respondent:

The NutraSweet Company

Bruce C. McDonald
James B. Musgrove
H. Scott Fairley

Counsel for the Intervenor:

Tosoh Canada Ltd.

R. Roy McMurtry, Q.C.
Alan Pratt

INDEX

COMPETITION TRIBUNAL

REASONS AND ORDER

The Director of Investigation and Research

v.

The NutraSweet Company

I. INTRODUCTION

On June 1, 1989 the Director of Investigation and Research ("Director") filed a notice of application under sections 79 (abuse of dominant position) and 77 (exclusive dealing and tied selling) of the Competition Act.[1] The Director asks the Tribunal to prohibit certain business practices of The NutraSweet Company ("NSC"), the respondent, which are alleged to be contrary to those sections, as well as to make such orders as may be necessary to overcome any adverse effects of those practices in the market.

NSC is a major producer of the sweetener aspartame which it markets under the brand name NutraSweet. Aspartame is primarily used in diet soft drinks, chewing gum, low calorie formulations of various foods (e.g. yogurt), and as a table-top sweetener.

---

[1] R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, as amended.

One intervenor, Tosoh Canada Ltd. ("Tosoh"), a rival producer of aspartame, applied for and was granted leave to intervene in these proceedings. The two major buyers of aspartame in Canada, Coca-Cola Ltd. ("Coke") and Pepsi-Cola Canada Ltd. ("Pepsi") also applied for leave to intervene but later withdrew their applications, agreeing instead to an arrangement whereby their respective witnesses would have counsel present to safeguard company interests during any examination.

NSC Canada is a branch of NSC, a United States corporation that is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Monsanto Co., another U.S. corporation. NSC had earlier been a division of G.D. Searle & Co. ("Searle") which was acquired in 1985 by Monsanto Co.

Aspartame is a high-intensity sweetener that was discovered in 1966 by Searle researchers. Searle obtained use patents (now exploited by NSC) on the product in a large number of countries, but due to delays in obtaining approvals for its use from regulatory health authorities aspartame did not come on the market until late in the lives of these patents. Approval for use in Canada was first granted in 1981 and the Canadian use patent expired in July 1987. In the United States health approval was effectively also first obtained in 1981, but this was for very limited use and aspartame was only permitted in soft drinks (by far aspartame's largest source of sales) in 1983. The life of the use patent was extended in a number of countries: from 1983 to 1987 in the United Kingdom, and until December 1992 in the United States and Australia.

Worldwide sales of aspartame in 1989 were approximately 7500 metric tonnes, consisting of somewhat over 75 percent sold in the United States, 5 percent in Canada, and 15 percent in Europe. Of the remaining roughly 5 percent, an appreciable percentage was sold in Australia. Canada and Europe are the principal regions where a use patent does not apply. Sales in Europe have grown rapidly, first surpassing those in Canada in 1987 and attaining a level of growth such that the increase in sales between 1988 and 1989 exceeded the total of Canadian sales in 1989.

NSC of course accounts for all sales in the United States and Australia (where the use patents are still in effect) and over 95 percent and 80 percent, respectively, of Canadian and European sales.[2] The Canadian (and worldwide) customers of NSC are primarily food and beverage manufacturers who use aspartame as a sweetening ingredient in their "sugar- free" or "diet" products. In 1989, NSC sold aspartame for use in Canada to about 65 customers for a total volume of 359 tonnes. Five soft drink franchisers figured among the top eight Canadian purchasers of aspartame (by volume and excluding Searle, the parent company) and accounted for over 300 tonnes. Those five were A & W, Cadbury Schweppes, Crush, Coke and Pepsi. The other three major Canadian buyers were Kraft General Foods, Wrigley and Adams Brands (the last two are chewing gum manufacturers). Coke and Pepsi are obviously by far the largest individual purchasers in this group.

[2] Exhibits R-19, D-38 and X-16 (confidential).

NSC operates two plants in the United States with a combined capacity of 5400 tonnes per annum and it obtains supplies from Ajinomoto, a Japanese company with a high degree of expertise in the manufacture of aspartame. Until the mid-1980s, NSC also obtained supplies from other manufacturers before its own facilities could provide sufficient output. It has recently entered into similar arrangements with two manufacturers for supplies to bridge the period until planned expanded plant capacity is on stream in 1992. (Sales in a given year may exceed plant capacity due to the drawdown of inventories).

The relationship with Ajinomoto dates back to at least the early 1970s. NSC first obtained approval for the sale of aspartame from the United States Food and Drug Administration ("FDA") in 1974. For reasons that are not germane to the present proceedings, this approval was not implemented. An arrangement for supplies had been entered into with Ajinomoto in anticipation of FDA approval. Ajinomoto holds a large patent portfolio relating to the production of aspartame. It licenses both patents and know-how to NSC in some areas of manufacturing. Ajinomoto and NSC are joint owners in NutraSweet AG which markets aspartame under the NutraSweet trademark in Europe. The product for NutraSweet AG sales is supplied by Ajinomoto. It uses the great majority of its remaining output to supply NSC under long-term contract and a large percentage of Canadian supplies is derived from this source. According to the available evidence the terms of the contract with Ajinomoto restrict it from marketing directly in North America until 1996. Ajinomoto's manufacturing capacity is approximately 1500 tonnes per annum. Less than ten percent of this capacity is used to satisfy demand in Japan where per capita sales of aspartame are very low. Ajinomoto, like NSC, is proceeding with plant expansion.

There is only one producer of aspartame who is currently selling m competition with NSC in Europe and Canada. Holland Sweetener Company ("HSC") is a joint venture between Naamloze Vennootschap DSM and Tosoh Corporation of Japan. It operates a 500-tonnes per annum plant in Holland. Marketing in Europe is conducted by HSC and in Canada by Tosoh, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Tosoh Corporation. Tosoh started marketing efforts in Canada as soon as the Canadian use patent expired in the summer of 1987. HSC started production in mid-1988, several months behind schedule, and it has only recently been able to approach full capacity output. Sales have, to date, lagged behind output.

Several other firms have produced aspartame from time to time m small pilot plants or in general purpose fine chemical facilities. According to the available evidence none are currently producing. There is evidence, however, that at least some of them were left with inventories after they stopped producing. For example, Pierrel, a firm that had supplied NSC for a time and stopped producing in the mid-1980s, was left with inventory that a distributor was trying to sell in Canada in 1987 and 1988. While customers are not receptive to buying from a supply source that they cannot rely on, there is a strong incentive for firms holding inventories to dispose of them and it is likely that they are being sold and form part of worldwide supplies.

The Director's investigation was initiated by a complaint made by Tosoh.

In our view, the Director's principal allegations fall under two broad heads. Under the first head are contract terms that, it is alleged, create an exclusive supply relationship between NSC and its customers and thus restrict the entry or expansion of would-be or existing competitors. This type of allegation is advanced by the Director under two sections: under section 77, which specifically addresses exclusive dealing and tied selling; and under section 79, which addresses "anti-competitive acts". The Director contends that these exclusive supply devices fall within the general criteria for anti-competitive acts in section 78, even though not specifically mentioned in the non-exhaustive list of such acts in that section. Under the second broad head is the allegation that NSC has been selling below its "acquisition cost", one of the anti-competitive acts specifically set out in section 78. This virtually constitutes a separate case with regard to the elements that must be satisfied.

Before addressing the specific allegations certain background Issues are discussed below under the headings of "Product Market", "Geographic Market" and "Aspartame Production: Potential Entrants and Entry Conditions into Manufacturing". This background is required not only for an understanding of market context, but also in directly addressing a number of elements in sections 77 and 79.

II. THE PRODUCT MARKET

The need to identify a relevant product arises in both subsection 77(1) and paragraph 79(1)(a), which refer, respectively, to a supplier of a

"product" and substantial or complete control of "a class or species of business". Paragraph 79(1)(c), which refers to substantial lessening of competition in a "market", also requires identification of a relevant product. It is not useful at this time to address the submissions regarding specific interpretations. Whichever interpretation is adopted for specific paragraphs, both sides accept that, at one point or another, it is necessary to consider the degree to which aspartame is sufficiently distinct from other sweeteners in order to decide whether it should be treated as a separate product or as part of a broader class of sweeteners.

The question is whether, and in what ways, other sweeteners are good substitutes for aspartame. In any given competition law case, a wide range of factors may be relevant in considering product substitutability. Factors which have proved pertinent in the instant case include taste, caloric content, other physical characteristics, safety concerns, price differences, and users' responses to price changes.

The respondent has submitted that it may not always be useful to define the product market exactly, that decisions can more reasonably be arrived at without taking this step since the factors to be considered in defining the market may be ones that are required in considering other critical questions such as market power. As the Tribunal understands the respondent’s submission, it is that a narrow definition of the product market could lead to the conclusion that NSC has market power, whereas this conclusion might not follow if all competitive pressures (including those arising from sweeteners considered not to be sufficiently close substitutes to be included in the delineated product market) are taken into account when considering the market power question. It is the Tribunal's view that it is necessary that the overall purpose of a section be kept in mind when dealing with the elements which the legislative scheme requires to be specifically addressed. In approaching the discussion of product market, the Tribunal has kept in mind the implications that its conclusions would have for its consideration of market power.

1. Sweeteners

Caloric sweeteners and high-intensity sweeteners form two broad classes. Sugar and high-fructose corn syrup are the two most important caloric sweeteners.

High-intensity sweeteners have a perceived sweetness that is, by weight, many times that of sugar. On a rough average (since there is some variation by use), aspartame, cyclamates and saccharin are 180, 30 and 300 times sweeter than sugar, respectively.

There are, however, dimensions (or characteristics) other than sweetness that determine the demand for the various sweeteners. An obvious difference between high-intensity and caloric sweeteners is that the former have comparatively very little bulk. Thus, in uses where sugar provides an important part of the bulk, such as in chocolate bars, bulking agents must be added to the product if a high-intensity sweetener is to be used. The price comparisons among sweeteners contained in the evidence during the proceedings did not include the cost of bulking agents. Comparison between sweetener prices is usually done on a sweetness equivalency basis. The only product in which there is widespread use of high-intensity sweeteners and bulking agents is chewing gum. The bulking agents used in chewing gum provide roughly the same calories as sugar; however, neither the bulking agents nor the high-intensity sweeteners contribute to cavities.

2. Categories of Demand for Sweeteners

Sweetener consumption is conveniently divided in the first instance between table-top and industrial use. Table-top use refers to purchases of sweeteners by households and restaurants for direct consumption by individuals. Industrial demand derives from the inclusion of sweeteners as an ingredient in the entire gamut of food and beverages sold to households and institutions. In the table below covering Canada, the United States and the European Economic Community ("EEC"), table-top sales are seen to be only three or four percent of total sales in Canada and the United States. Industrial sales of aspartame are overwhelmingly driven by demand from the soft drink industry in each of the three geographic areas. Approximately 85 percent of industrial sales are made to this one industry. Coke and Pepsi have a similar order of importance to the soft drink industry as that industry has relative to the overall industrial demand for aspartame.

Aspartame's large percentage of sales to the soft drink industry contrasts with limited sales for other large scale industrial sweetener uses. There are technical problems in using aspartame in baked goods, and confectionery generally consists in large part by volume of sugar so that the use of a high-intensity sweetener (without a bulking agent) would cause much of the product to disappear. There are outstanding petitions to health authorities in Canada and in the United States for approval of the use of aspartame in encapsulated form in baked products. The Canadian petition was filed in September 1988. In spite of this petition and one filed in May of the same year, requesting approval of aspartame for use in such products as fruit spreads and salad dressings, there is nothing in the past history of the demand for aspartame or in the demand projections of NSC that suggest that the pivotal role played by the soft drink industry is likely to change in the foreseeable future.

| | Table-Top Use as a Percentage of Total Sales in 1988 | Carbonated Soft Drinks as a Percentage of Industrial Use in 1988 |
|---|---|---|
| | All Sweeteners | |
| Canada | 29 | 35 |
| United States | 21 | 40 |
| European Economic Community | 36 | 30 |
| | Aspartame | |
| Canada | 3 | 85 |
| United States | 4 | 84 |
| European Economic Community | 27 | 87 |

Source: Confidential schedules to the expert affidavit of J. Fry for NSC, Schedule 6 (Exhibit R-13-C).

3. High-Intensity Sweeteners

High-intensity sweeteners are subjected to a lengthy, rigorous approval process in developed countries. The concerns that arose over the safety of cyclamates and saccharin were apparently responsible for what was described by Mr. Smith of the Health Protection Branch ("HPB") of the Government of Canada as a "new era in the kinds of testing" required by governments for approval of new artificial sweeteners.[3] It required five years from the date of the petition for approval to be granted to the last high-intensity sweetener admitted in the United States. Petitions to HPB are not made public so it is not officially known if, or when, a petition for this same product, acesulfame-k, was filed in Canada. According to Ms. Mathews, formerly Manager of Regulatory Affairs with NSC, the manufacturer of acesulfame-k has publicly stated that a Canadian petition was filed. In any event, acesulfame-k has not been approved for use in Canada, two years after it was granted the approvals sought in the United States.

[3] Transcript at 198 (10 January 1990).

All the studies designed to show that a new food additive is safe, in the quantities that it would be consumed in the uses requested in a petition, must be completed prior to the filing of a formal petition. Thus most of the effort, and a good part of the time, required to obtain approval for a new product has already been invested by the time a formal petition is filed. There are two new sweeteners, alitame and sucralose, for which petitions were filed in the United States in 1987 and, as might be expected, were likely filed at approximately the same time in Canada. Any other new high-intensity sweeteners on which work is being done are, based on the absence of evidence of imminent filings, so far from being marketed that they can safely be ignored.

There are currently four high-intensity sweeteners that have approval in either Canada, the United States or the EEC. These are aspartame, acesulfame-k, cyclamates and saccharin. In Canada and the United States, only aspartame is approved for a variety of "wet" and "dry" uses; that is, both in applications that do and do not require the high-intensity sweetener to be dissolved when it reaches the consumer. Cyclamates are approved for table-top use in Canada but are banned in the United States. Saccharin can be sold for table-top use in Canada solely in drug stores. In the United States, it is formally banned by the FDA but it has received a number of important congressional exemptions, including most importantly for use in carbonated soft drinks. In the United States the use of acesulfame-k in a number of dry uses was permitted in 1988.

Aspartame is considered to be closest to sugar from a taste point of view. However, it suffers from a number of technical deficiencies that tend to limit its use or make it vulnerable to competition from other sweeteners. Aspartame is not heat stable (i.e. it loses its sweetness when heated) and this has prevented its use as a sweetener in baked foods. This deficiency has been remedied technically by encapsulating the aspartame and petitions for use of this product in baking are pending in Canada and in the United States. Aspartame's less-than-perfect stability also manifests itself when it is used as a sweetener in carbonated soft drinks.It loses its sweetness if the product is stored for lengthy periods. As a result, diet fountain drinks in the United States tend to contain a blend of aspartame and saccharin, since saccharin is much more stable. Aspartame is exclusively used by Coke and Pepsi (and possibly by all brands) in their diet packaged products in Canada and the United States.

Saccharin is very inexpensive on a sweetness equivalency basis, the least expensive sweetener by far. It suffers, however, from an unpleasant (bitter) aftertaste and is considered to pose some potential health risks. The problem with saccharin's aftertaste can be resolved by blending saccharin with sweeteners such as aspartame or cyclamates.

Acesulfame-k is described as similar to saccharin. It is however, much more expensive. Its primary advantage over saccharin is that it apparently does not raise health concerns. Only limited capacity to produce acesulfame-k is in place, approximately 100 metric tonnes which is less than two percent of the capacity dedicated to the production of aspartame. Acesulfame-k is being marketed in the United States primarily as a table-top sweetener and approval for wet use has not been sought. Although there is no evidence of the wholesale prices of finished products, or of the ingredient cost of acesulfame-k, there is evidence of a pronounced increase in NSC's expenditures on promotion in response to the introduction of acesulfame-k in table-top use in the United States. Based on this evidence, it is reasonable to conclude that acesulfame-k is an important substitute product in table-top use in the United States and elsewhere where it has approval.

Acesulfame-k is used in a blend in Diet Coke in France, but there is no evidence that it has been adopted in diet formulations in other countries. Unfortunately the evidence does not allow a conclusion on whether this limited penetration of acesulfame-k in diet soft drinks is of broader competitive significance or whether it reflects a peculiarity of the French market or regulatory regime. Based on the considerable delay in obtaining regulatory approvals, acesulfame-k is unlikely to be a factor in the United States or Canadian soft drink industry for some time.

According to several witnesses, there is speculation that the United States' ban on cyclamates will shortly be lifted. As noted earlier, cyclamates application in Canada is limited to table-top use. In the EEC cyclamates are approved for soft drinks use only in West Germany. Clearly, little or no weight can be given to the potential competition from cyclamates in major uses in Canada or in the United States. Apart from the unknowns regarding regulatory approvals (if, when and for what applications), it is highly doubtful that industrial users would move quickly to incorporate an ingredient about which there has been recent health concerns.

Two new high-intensity sweeteners could affect the competitive position of aspartame. The most serious competitive threat appears to be sucralose which, like aspartame, is considered to be similar to sugar in taste but is more stable than aspartame. A number of wet and dry applications are being sought for this product in petitions filed in mid-1987 with the FDA in the United States. The second product, alitame, appears to be considered less of a potential competitive threat. Petitions for various wet and dry applications were filed with the FDA in early 1987. To date, no country has granted approval to either ingredient for any application.

Blending of more than one high-intensity sweetener provides users with the opportunity to reduce their costs by adjusting the mix of sweeteners according to the prices and characteristics of the sweeteners. Blending also provides a synergistic increase in perceived sweetness beyond the level that would be anticipated from the perceived sweetness of each of the sweeteners if separately used. This means that although none of the presently approved high-intensity sweeteners is considered by itself to be an acceptable substitute for aspartame, such sweeteners, if blended, could provide price competition by affecting the proportion of aspartame used in the blends. Whether sweeteners are used individually or in blends, the evidence shows that taste is a major concern of most industrial users of sweeteners. Possible blends offering an acceptable taste profile in soft drinks, mentioned in evidence, are aspartame with saccharin (or acesulfame-k) and aspartame with cyclamates and saccharin. Professor Wilson, who appeared on behalf of the Director, is of the opinion that because of the possibility of blending, the relevant "product" is intense sweeteners.

4. Price Competition Between Sweeteners

Competition between sweeteners can be direct, in the sense that one sweetener is selected over another for a particular use, or the competition can be indirect in that there is competition among the products containing the sweeteners.

It is noteworthy that although aspartame prices fell below EEC sugar prices in 1986 and stood at 42 percent of sugar prices by 1989, aspartame has not been introduced into non-diet soft drinks as a sweetener in the EEC. An hypothesis held out by Dr. Fry, an expert witness for the respondent, is that at prices where aspartame is cheaper than caloric sweeteners it will replace them, with the result that the demand for aspartame becomes very sensitive to price changes. An implication of this result would be that producers of aspartame would be very reluctant to raise prices because to do so would entail a large loss in sales. There is no evidence of direct competition between aspartame and caloric sweeteners, although there is evidence that saccharin (or possibly acesulfame-k) is used in non-diet or regular carbonated soft drinks in the United Kingdom. There is clearly a cost incentive to use saccharin instead of other sweeteners, including sugar. Yet since 1982, when the use of saccharin peaked, the amount of saccharin (or acesulfame-k) used in regular carbonated soft drinks has steadily fallen; by 1989 it was down by 43 percent from its 1982 peak. There is no cost justification for this change since saccharin prices were 3.9 percent of sugar prices in the EEC on a sweetness equivalent basis in 1982 and 3.8 percent in 1989.[4]

Dr. Fry drew on the growing market share of diet soft drinks as evidence of indirect competition between aspartame and caloric sweeteners. Using the change in the ratio of aspartame to sugar price between 1984 and 1988 in Canada and the change in the percentage share which diet drink sales form of total carbonated soft drink sales, he measured the average "cross-elasticity" between sugar and aspartame to be equal to .14. That is, he concluded that a one percent decline in the price of aspartame, keeping the price of sugar constant, resulted in a .14 percent increase in the diet drinks' share.[5] The prices of diet and regular soft drinks have been kept equal by producers. Therefore, the mechanism by which the increase in market share is claimed to have been achieved is via increased advertising or other marketing effort in respect of diet soft drinks by the suppliers as the profit margin on the diet drinks became more favorable with declining aspartame prices. There is no evidence whatever that this hypothesized increase in marketing expenditures actually occurred. The only available evidence on advertising is for the United States. There the opposite occurred: less money both absolutely and relative to regular soft drinks was spent on diet drinks as the price of aspartame fell.[6] Furthermore, the logic of Dr. Fry's hypothesis is not clear since throughout the period in question in his study the ingredient price of aspartame was above that of sugar. Thus, even though the price of aspartame was falling and its cost disadvantage was decreasing, it is difficult to see why soft drink suppliers would find it in their interest to increase promotion of a lower profit product. Even on the basis of Dr. Fry's hypothesis it is unclear what the measured "cross-elasticity" represents since the claimed effect of the price change is so indirect.

---

[4] Confidential schedules to the expert affidavit of J. Fry, Schedules 14 and 11 (Exhibit R-13-C). There is wide geographical variation in sugar prices because of the varying extent to which countries or trade groupings like the EEC protect their sugar producers. Although prices of aspartame in Canada and the EEC have been fairly close, the Canadian price did not fall below the landed price of sugar until 1989.

[5] Expert affidavit of J. Fry at B-34 to B-37 (Exhibit R-13-E); Schedules to the expert affidavit of J. Fry, Schedule 12 (Exhibit R-13-F)

---

[6] Supplementary expert affidavit of J. Fry, Schedule 23, Table 1 (Exhibit R-13-G).

Measuring cross-elasticity is a difficult thing to do because of the problems of isolating the effect of price changes from other factors affecting sale. It is perfectly clear that the demand for diet products is greatly affected by life-style. No attempt was made to allow for this factor, nor could it have been, given the limited number of available observations. The growth in sales of diet drinks has been much faster than that for regular drinks over a long period predating the introduction of aspartame (as shown by the data filed for the United States between 1972 and 1988):[7] the growth rate in the diet segment was well over two and one-half times that for regular drinks between 1972 and 1982, before aspartame was a factor, and in spite of perceived health problems with the ingredient then used in diet drinks. The fact that there was continued growth after aspartame was introduced and its price was falling does not in any way support a finding that the growth in the diet segment can be attributed to the fall in the price of aspartame. While it is possible that aspartame could indirectly compete with caloric sweeteners in Canada and the EEC now that aspartame's price is lower on a sweetness equivalency basis, the evidence regarding this possibility and how it might affect the pricing of aspartame can only unfold in the future.

The question of indirect competition between aspartame and caloric sweeteners was also addressed through evidence on "cannibalization", which in the present context refers to sales of low-caloric or diet formulations of a product at the expense of the regular or full-caloric formulations. The import of this evidence on whether the price of aspartame is constrained by prices of caloric sweeteners is unclear. As stated by Professor Wilson, the fact that some consumers always or occasionally prefer a low-caloric formulation tells us absolutely nothing about the indirect price competition between aspartame and caloric sweeteners.[8] Dr. Fry gave evidence regarding cannibalization of regular soft drinks by diet versions in the United States. This evidence is in the form of a regression equation in which the consumption of soft drinks (diet, or diet plus regular) is "explained" by gross national product.[9] Apart from whether this evidence is relevant to the issue of substitutability, the Tribunal finds it unconvincing on its own terms given the failure of Dr. Fry to take into account the false statistical signals and misleading impressions of causality created by underlying trends in the economy that are common in this type of analysis.

---

[7] Ibid.

Examples of advertising by associations of sugar producers in Australia and other countries, highlighting the "naturalness" of sugar compared to aspartame, were introduced by the respondent as further evidence of competition between sugar and aspartame. While these advertisements indicate that the sugar associations believe that they can affect the demand for sugar (and aspartame) by discrediting the origin of aspartame, they do not affect the conclusion that substitution between diet and regular products is primarily life-style rather than price related.

---

[8] Transcript at 1161-62 (8 February 1990).

[9] Supplementary expert affidavit of J. Fry at 2-3 and Schedule 23, Tables 2, 3 (Exhibit R-13-G).

Dr. Fry also submitted measures of the "cross-elasticity" between aspartame and cyclamates using the sales of table-top brands containing cyclamates and aspartame.[10] The figure obtained is approximately .35 which indicates a greater degree of indirect price competition than in the case of aspartame and caloric sweeteners used in soft drinks. There is no more reason to believe that the figures used by Dr. Fry measure the "cross- elasticity" between aspartame and cyclamates in table-top use than that similar figures measured the degree of indirect competition between aspartame and caloric sweeteners in soft drinks. The pattern captured by the numbers is a steady decline in the price of aspartame relative to that of cyclamates at the same time that sales of table-top sweeteners containing aspartame rose while those containing cyclamates were falling. It is noteworthy, however, that although the price of aspartame fell, it was at all times much more expensive than cyclamates -- approximately nine times in 1984 and slightly less than four times in 1988.[11] While the ingredient cost of aspartame and cyclamates are in evidence, the prices charged for these table- top sweeteners are not. Figures in evidence on advertising expenditures of the principal table-top brand containing aspartame do not provide any coherent pattern.[12] The evidence does not support a conclusion that the changes in the relative shares of brands containing aspartame and cyclamates were due solely or primarily to what was happening to the prices of those ingredients. For example, consumers' perceptions of the safety of the two ingredients will obviously influence their relative sales.

---

[10] Schedules to the expert affidavit of J. Fry, Schedule 12 (Exhibit R-13-F).

[11] Confidential schedules to the expert affidavit of J. Fry, Schedule 11 ( Exhibit R-13-C).

This is not to say that it is unlikely that there is competition, broadly conceived, between aspartame and cyclamates. The critical question for present purposes is the extent to which this broad competition limits the ability of aspartame producers to raise prices. The information on which the measurement of cross-elasticity is based is simply too inadequate for the measurement to be useful in this regard. Finally, the fact that sales of aspartame for table-top use represent a very small percentage of total sales of aspartame means that the extent to which aspartame is in direct or indirect competition in this area has a correspondingly small effect on changes in profitability resulting from price changes.

---

[12] Supplementary expert affidavit of J. Fry, Schedule 24, Table 2 (Exhibit R-13-G).

The most potent source of competition for aspartame is likely to be from new high-intensity sweeteners. It is, however, difficult to weigh the potential competitive impact of a product that has not yet been approved for any use in any jurisdiction and will undoubtedly take a number of years to be brought into full-scale production after it is approved. The same comment applies to the possible legalization of cyclamates in the United States. While cyclamates are regarded as a good blended sweetener for soft drinks, whether they will be allowed for this purpose and will be an ingredient that beverage producers choose to use is unknown.

The best way of judging the extent to which the price of aspartame is constrained by sweeteners currently on the market, and those that are anticipated to be introduced, is to compare the price of aspartame in jurisdictions where the only competition comes from these other sweeteners to the price in jurisdictions where there is at least the possibility of competing aspartame suppliers. The former is the case in the United States where the use patent has been extended; the latter is the case in Canada. The average price of aspartame in the United States is more than 50 percent higher than it is in Canada. Alternative sweeteners do not provide sufficient competition to limit the market power of NSC in the United States.

In considering the competitive impact of alternative sweeteners it is also relevant to consider the decision of NSC to double, approximately, its production capacity. This decision has been taken in order to safeguard its market share once its United States use patent expires at the end of 1992. In weighing the risks posed by other sweeteners the decision was clearly taken to confront potential competition from other producers of aspartame by developing a highly efficient production capacity capable of meeting much of the future demand.

Conclusion as to the Product Market

To sum up, there is no evidence of direct competition between aspartame and caloric sweeteners and very weak evidence of indirect competition between diet and full-caloric products. There is, in comparison, some direct competition from other currently approved high-intensity sweeteners serving the diet market. None by itself, however, is a good substitute in large market segments, and there is also little indication that there is a serious threat from blends. We therefore would define the product market as being aspartame. It really matters little, however, whether the relevant product is defined as "aspartame" or "high-intensity sweeteners" so long as the limited extent to which other high-intensity sweeteners constrain aspartame prices is kept in mind. In Canada, aspartame is the only high-intensity sweetener allowed as a food additive.

Any competition in the table- top segment is likely to have very limited effect on overall prices. Therefore, the effect in Canada of competition from other high-intensity sweeteners must be indirect, flowing from foreign to Canadian aspartame prices. The critical question is the extent to which the Canadian market is insulated from the effects of competition, if any, elsewhere. The answer to this question lies in the definition of the geographic market.

III. THE GEOGRAPHIC MARKET

Given that there is no production of aspartame in Canada, from the point of view of source of manufacturers' supply Canada is necessarily part of a geographic market that extends beyond its borders. Since Canadian buyers are dependent on manufacturers in other countries, the further question arises as to whether Canada is a separate geographic market at the level of distribution.

The Director takes the position that the relevant geographic market for assessing the impact of the respondent's practices on competition in the sale of aspartame is Canada. He submits that this is supported by: price relationships in different geographic areas (in particular, as between Canada and the EEC); the separate treatment of Canada with respect to volume and price in multi-country contracts between NSC and Coke and Pepsi; and Canada's own regulatory scheme for admitting intense sweeteners as food additives, a scheme that leads to results different from those found in countries within the EEC. In the view of the Tribunal, the latter consideration is not very helpful in the delineation of geographic markets. It is true that more restrictive regulations regarding other high-intensity sweeteners are likely to increase the demand for aspartame and allow for higher prices. However, this consideration does not address the critical question required to be answered in defining geographic markets, namely, whether an area is sufficiently insulated from price pressures emanating from other areas so that its unique characteristics can result in its prices differing significantly for any period of time from those in other areas.

The respondent's position is that the geographic market is worldwide (save for those countries where NSC still holds a use patent, presumably). It is based on the considerations that transportation costs are low, that there are no Canadian tariff or non-tariff barriers[13] and that, according to Professor Mathewson, an expert witness for the respondent, the minimal required infrastructure for distribution makes entry easy. Professor Mathewson concludes that as long as there are existing suppliers outside Canada they would quickly enter, directly or through others, should NSC attempt to raise Canadian prices.

---

[13] The nominal tariff rates for aspartame are as follows: Most-Favoured-Nation Tariff, 12.5%; General Preferential Tariff, 8%; United States Tariff (as of 1 January 1990), 7.5%. See Customs Tariff, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-54, item 2924-29.00.10. Under the Chemicals and Plastics Duties Reduction or Removal Order, 1988, SOR/88-74, as am. SOR/88-340, SOR/89-327, SOR/90-383, aspartame comes into Canada free of duty until30 June 1991. On that date the exemption will likely be renewed for another year; an extension is apparently a routine matter.

Geographic market definition represents an attempt to determine the extent of the territory where there is competition and in which prices for a product tend toward uniformity. In most industries, the absence of governmental trade barriers and low transportation costs is enough to ensure that national boundaries do not create separate markets, particularly where there is easy entry into distribution. Under these circumstances one is usually justified in assuming that sellers (or even buyers) will move product from lower-priced areas to higher-priced areas so that attempts to charge higher prices in any region will be frustrated. This cannot, however, be taken for granted.

Any tendency towards equalization of aspartame prices 1s unlikely to result from arbitrage in a narrow sense, i.e. the physical movement of goods from lower-priced to higher-priced areas, since supply contracts for aspartame are country or region specific. To the extent equalization occurs, it is more likely to come from the negotiating position of multinationals who account for a large fraction of purchases. Even in companies that do not negotiate centrally, personnel in the different regions know the prices paid elsewhere.

On the supply side, HSC has an incentive to push its selling efforts in the region that offers the higher returns, thus tending to create downward pressure in the region with higher prices. Potential new entrants into distribution would have the same incentive. Professor Mathewson's conclusion on the ease of entry into distribution should be qualified by noting that the mere existence of the NutraSweet logo, its history and its use on the packaging of most of the major aspartame buyers is one of the conditions of entry faced by new distributors. Whether and to what extent the logo constitutes a barrier to entry need not be discussed here. The most important test of the operation of this and other factors in segregating the Canadian market from the rest of the world where there is competition (i.e. except for patent protected areas) is in the prices actually paid. The most complete price information in evidence is for Canada and Europe, particularly the EEC, and, in fact, these are the only two significant areas of aspartame consumption outside of the patent areas, the United States and Australia.

Conclusion as to the Geographic Market

The bottom line price of NSC, or the "net/net price" to use the term employed by NSC, is arrived at by applying a series of discounts that may be region or customer specific. NSC's average net/net prices in Europe were 10 percent higher than Canadian prices in 1987, the year that the use patents expired in Canada and in the United Kingdom (which had the largest sales of aspartame in Europe), 6 percent higher in 1988, and 13 percent lower in 1989.[14] Country-specific clauses in multi-country contracts along with these average price differences indicate that market conditions in Canada, which include the marketing practices of NSC, can and have produced prices that differ significantly from those in other regions of competition. In other words, it is reasonable to treat Canada as a separate geographic market for the purposes of evaluating the effects of NSC's marketing practices.

IV. ASPARTAME PRODUCTION: POTENTIAL ENTRANTS AND ENTRY CONDITIONS INTO MANUFACTURING

Aspartame is produced by combining (or "coupling") aspartic acid and phenylalanine. The former is available from a number of sources because it has uses other than in the production of aspartame. Phenylalanine, on the other hand, is almost exclusively used as an input in aspartame and aspartame producers must integrate in one way or another into its production.

[14] Exhibit D-3 (confidential).

NSC has two plants for the production of aspartame, one in University Park, Illinois and the other in Augusta, Georgia. The former was opened in 1982 and employs a less capital intensive, but overall apparently more costly coupling technology, the "Z" process. The Augusta plant, started up in 1985, uses the "F" process that is based on technology developed by NSC's parent, Monsanto Company.[15] HSC uses the "Z" process, but it employs an enzymatic rather than a chemical process. Although having expertise in both processes, Ajinomoto apparently employs a third chemical process.

There are a number of steps in aspartame production. Each or several combined, depending on the technology, is the subject of patents held by different firms. Apart from NSC (through its licensing agreements with Ajinomoto) and Ajinomoto, no single firm holds patents covering all steps. Ajinomoto is the sole firm with patents covering crystallization, which comes near the end of the production process. Ajinomoto has, according to the evidence of HSC, launched suits in England and Holland against HSC claiming patent infringement. A number of firms are known to hold patents covering one or more steps. Apart from the current large scale producers (NSC, Ajinomoto and HSC), only Mitsui Toatsu of Japan is known to hold a relatively full patent portfolio. It covers all production steps save for crystallization.

[15] The cost estimates provided by NutraSweet did not include a cost for the use of capital apart from depreciation. Allowing for the cost of capital would have a greater effect on the more capital intensive "F" process and tend to eliminate or reverse the cost difference that is estimated to exist without this cost component.

The Director takes the position that existing patent portfolios create a significant barrier to would-be entrants. He is also of the view that this barrier is reinforced by the economies of scale and sunk costs of aspartame production. The respondent's position with regard to patent portfolios is that it is in the interest of those holding unutilized technology to license their patents and the fact that individual firms do not have patents covering all processes does not create a barrier. The Tribunal accepts that it is not necessary to hold patents in order to produce aspartame; it is only necessary to have access to technology that does not violate patents held by others. Further, the fact that a patent is held does not indicate that the technology covered by the patent is low cost. The Tribunal is of the view that technology and proprietary technology protected by trade secrecy is an impediment to entry, but the available evidence is not sufficiently detailed to go beyond this mild conclusion. Potential entrants probably face a trade-off between investing in low cost technology and using available higher cost techniques. Firms contemplating large-scale entry through dedicated plants would almost certainly have to make investments in technology to assure that they could achieve competitive costs.

Dr. Fry and Professor Mathewson take the position that there are numerous potential entrants, represented by general fine chemical firms or former aspartame producers, who can easily enter or re-enter the industry. Professor Mathewson summarizes Dr. Fry's evidence and its implications:

> James Fry lists the current producers of aspartame in the world, including their production capacities, as well as potential new producers of aspartame. Further, he details the costs and time lags for converting fine chemical plants to the production of aspartame or reconverting former aspartame facilities to produce aspartame again. In general, any conversion costs are low and the time lags are short....
>
> [Given low transportation costs and ease of entry into distribution in Canada], the competitive pressures of potential suppliers under these circumstances would seem to be substantial. The ease of entry into the production and distribution of aspartame implies that NSC must act competitively to survive.[16]

Dr. Fry and Professor Mathewson stress the length of time it would take a fine chemical producer to convert to aspartame production. Their analysis does not take account of the fact that fine chemical producers must have a source of phenylalanine and this requires investment in the production of this input directly or through a contractual commitment. Mr. Minarich, Vice-President of Operations and Technology for NSC, stated that it should be possible to purchase phenylalanine. The price range he suggested is well above NSC's cost of producing this ingredient. The evidence of Dr. Fry and of Professor Mathewson also avoids the key question regarding relative costs of producing aspartame in dedicated and general purpose plants. The uncontested evidence of Mr. Vermijs, General Manager of HSC, is that it is considerably more expensive to produce in general purpose plants which would presumably be the type used by fine chemical firms to commence aspartame production.

---

[16] Expert affidavit of F. Mathewson at paras 31-32 (Exhibit R-20-C) [footnotes omitted].

A tolling agreement between NSC and Hexcel, a fine chemical producer, does not support the view that such producers can easily enter the industry. Under this agreement Hexcel is to manufacture aspartame for NSC. The apparently more costly "Z" coupling technology is to be employed, presumably because it requires equipment that the toll producer, for the most part, has on hand. The price to be paid to Hexcel may not reflect its production costs since NSC will be supplying the know-how, essential raw materials and some equipment. Furthermore, the other alternatives open to Hexcel are not known. The returns that it could earn from producing other fine chemicals would determine what it would demand from NSC. A restrictive covenant in the contract prevents Hexcel from producing aspartame for a five-year period following the termination of its supply agreement with NSC.

Dr. Fry cited a number of firms that have produced aspartame at one time, are currently producing it, or have expressed an interest in producing it. The latter evidence is too inconclusive with respect to potential competition to be meaningful (or useful). The information regarding former or current producers is summarized below. The scale of the plants is based on the evidence of Dr. Fry[17] but the evidence of other witnesses has been taken into account in establishing their status where his evidence was not definite or was contradicted. The first six firms are European, the two following Japanese, and the last two Korean.

| FIRMS | SCALE (tonnes/yr) | STATUS |
|---|---|---|
| Laboratoires Bottu | 50 | Produced in mid-1980s |
| Isochem | 70 | Not producing |
| Farmitalia (currently Antibioticus) | 1000 | Will produce under contract |
| Farchemia | 100 | Not producing |
| Pierrel | 630 | Last produced m 1985 or 1986 |
| Orgamol | 25 | Produced in mid-1986 |

[17] Expert affidavit of J. Fry at 1-1 to 1-7 (Exhibit R-13-E).

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Mitsui Toatsu | 15 | Laboratory or pilot plant[18] |
| Tosoh | 25 | Pilot plant |
| Cheil Sugar | 25 | Not producing |
| Green Cross | 125 | Recently stopped producing[19] |

Although a number of firms have produced aspartame, very little is known about the cost at which they could do so if they chose to re- enter into production. The European firms discontinued production in the mid-1980s when the price of aspartame was two to three times higher than its current price outside the United States. In almost all cases such production occurred (or is occurring) in pilot or general purpose plants.

The opportunity cost, and thus the willingness to begin producing aspartame, of existing fine chemical producers obviously depends on the returns that they can earn by producing other fine chemicals. Even though it is appreciably more expensive to produce in a general purpose fine chemical plant than one dedicated to the production of aspartame (and phenylalanine) when the cost comparison is made for plants constructed de novo, fine chemical producers might nevertheless have costs more comparable to dedicated producers when there are anticipated depressed conditions in the fine chemical industry.

[18] Dr. Fry cites Mitsui Toatsu as having a pilot plant but according to the evidence of Mr. Vermijs it is not clear whether this company is at the laboratory or pilot plant stage.

[19] Dr. Fry does not state whether Green Cross is currently producing. The evidence of Mr. Kuipers, Marketing Manager of HSC, is that it is not.

Pierrel, Farmitalia and Green Cross appear to have been the most serious entrants. Pierrel produced out of a general purpose facility. It supplied NSC for a time when NSC had inadequate capacity to satisfy demand. Pierrel also tried to sell on its own account. It reportedly discontinued production with large, unsold inventories. Pierrel, like the other firms that left the industry, faced formidable difficulties because the volume of sales possible outside of the areas covered by NSC's use patent was very small.

Farmitalia supplied NSC during the period 1982-85. It will be supplying NSC under a tolling agreement during part of 1990-91. It has equipment for all of the production steps and will be employing its own technology. NSC will be supplying the two basic raw materials. The high price to be received by Farmitalia under the agreement does not support the view that its potential entry would provide a constraint on the pricing of existing producers. In any event, Farmitalia is excluded, as is Hexcel, from producing aspartame for five years following the expiration of its supply agreement.

Little is in evidence regarding Green Cross other than that it recently discontinued production and that it was not considered to be a useful toll producer by NSC.

Based on its patent portfolio, Mitsui Toatsu appears to be a potential entrant. Dr. Fry states that it has a pilot plant but according to Mr. Vermijs it may not yet be at that stage. In any event, it takes about two years to construct a full-scale aspartame plant and then several months to overcome production problems. Since there is no evidence that Mitsui Toatsu has embarked on construction it is at least that far away from entry. If it does not have a pilot plant its entry would be delayed by a further two years or so, based on the experience of HSC.

Access to technology is a necessary first step for entry. However, even a firm with comparable technology to that used by existing firms may find entry conditions difficult, particularly prior to the expiration of the United States use patent at the end of 1992. According to the evidence of Mr. Minarich, there are economies of scale for a plant with a capacity of up to more than one-third of current world output. This is consistent with the evidence submitted by Mr. Vermijs that a decline in capital equipment requirements per unit as scale increases is a common feature in the chemical industry; that is, the cost of vessels and pipes increases less quickly than their capacity. The new 2100-tonne plant that is being constructed in Augusta falls short of Mr. Minarich's estimate of minimum efficient scale, but it nevertheless represents more than a quarter of world output and more than the total sales outside the United States. Thus, a firm that hopes to achieve cost parity with NSC must achieve a large market share. Such large scale entry entails significant risks since, according to the evidence of Mr. Vermijs, much of the investment in a dedicated aspartame plant is sunk: its value is much less in alternative uses. Another difficulty for would-be entrants is the existence of a marked learning curve in phenylalanine and aspartame production. Even a large, fully utilized plant may not provide costs comparable to those of NSC's present costs until the entrant has accumulated production experience.

Conclusion as to Entry Barriers

The Tribunal is satisfied that there are very serious barriers to the entry of new manufacturers of aspartame other than NSC. Entry is difficult because would-be entrants who hope to attain production costs comparable to those of NSC face barriers in the form of the patent portfolios of existing producers, significant economies of scale relative to existing world demand for aspartame and sunk costs that increase the risks of entry. Moreover, even for firms that have the necessary technology in place and the experience of pilot plant production behind them, there is a minimum two year lag before they can begin large-scale production.

V. SECTION 79

The Director alleges that NSC is engaging (and has been engaging since the expiry of its Canadian use patent) in the practice of a number of anti-competitive acts resulting in the likely substantial lessening of competition. The elements that must be met under section 79, quoted below, are found in paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of subsection (1).

> 79. (1) Where, on application by the Director, the Tribunal finds that
>
> (a) one or more persons substantially or completely control, throughout Canada or any area thereof, a class or species of business,
> (b) that person or those persons have engaged in or are engaging in a practice of anti-competitive acts, and
> (c) the practice has had, is having or is likely to have the effect of preventing or lessening competition substantially in a market,
>
> the Tribunal may make an order prohibiting all or any of those persons from engaging in that practice.

1. "Control"

Paragraph (l)(a) requires that:

> one or more persons substantially or completely control, throughout Canada or any area thereof, a class or species of business.

This first element raises a question regarding the meaning to be attributed to "control" in "substantially or completely control".

The Director submits that the ordinary dictionary definition of "control" should be applied:

> To exercise restraint or direction upon the free action of; to dominate, command.[20]

In the view of the Director, "control" is control over supply, which can be evaluated by looking to NSC's share of worldwide capacity and share of Canadian sales, or alternatively to the fact that it holds exclusive contracts covering over 90 percent of Canadian sales.

---

[20] Written argument of the Director at 17.

The respondent's view is that "control" is most meaningfully treated as synonymous with "market power". Market power is generally accepted to mean an ability to set prices above competitive levels for a considerable period. While this is a valid conceptual approach, it is not one that can readily be applied; one must ordinarily look to indicators of market power such as market share and entry barriers. The specific factors that need to be considered in evaluating control or market power will vary from case to case.

The Tribunal is persuaded that the respondent's position is in keeping with the logic of the section and the Act. This finding is of little practical import because, ultimately, all relevant indicators of market power must be considered in determining whether there is likely to be a prevention or lessening of competition substantially. Furthermore, it is difficult to see how any definition of control, including the dictionary definition, could exclude a consideration of conditions of entry. The structure of the section does, however, raise a question regarding how far it is necessary to go into the evidence on control since it may include an examination of the alleged anti-competitive acts and their effects. If all of the evidence is taken up here then the three principal elements in paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of subsection 79(1) may become melded in the evaluation of the first element. This is pervasive in competition law because the relevant factors in the different statutory elements are rarely distinct and it is impossible not to draw on common factors whenever required.

In the alternative argument of the Director, if control is defined to mean "market power" or "monopoly power", the evidence supports the conclusion that NSC has control by reason of its very large share of sales and capacity and the existence of barriers to entry into the intense sweetener market. The latter are set out as:

> (a) process patent barriers associated with producing aspartame; (b) significant sunk costs required to produce aspartame efficiently; (c) the Respondent's contractual practices, which preclude marginal entry and therefore increase the scale of and the costs associated with initial entry; (d) marketing practices of the Respondent which require competitors to engage in similar, expensive marketing in order to compete; and (e) delays associated with regulatory approval and subsequent consumer acceptance of any new intense sweetener. In addition, the most logical potential entrant into the market, Ajinomoto, has been expressly precluded by contract with the Respondent from entering the market.[21]

Earlier discussions of entry conditions into manufacturing and the product market cover the Director's points (a), (b) and (e), while (c) and (d) relate to allegations regarding NSC's conduct. Certain terms of NSC's contract with Ajinomoto are also considered by the Director to constitute an anti-competitive act on the part of NSC. For immediate purposes, the relevance of Ajinomoto's relationship with NSC is that virtually their total combined capacity is under the control of NSC.

---

[21] Confidential written argument of the Director at 21.

The respondent's first submission regarding control is that declining prices and increased output since 1987 are evidence that NSC does not have market power. It is difficult to draw this conclusion from the evidence, particularly when it is considered along with the allegation that NSC is engaging in the anti-competitive act of pricing below its cost. What the evidence does show, and this is quite obvious in any event, is that what, if any, market power NSC currently possesses is much less than it held prior to the expiration of its Canadian use patent.

The respondent's key submission concerns the ability of Coke and Pepsi, as very large buyers, to protect their interests and to counteract any power NSC might have. Their strong bargaining power is stated to reside in the fact that they control sufficient volume to be able, if need be, to set up a rival producer to satisfy their demand. Their position is further strengthened, it is submitted, by the existence of NSC's sunk costs that make it highly vulnerable to such a threatened course of action. The respondent's submission is incomplete because it fails to consider that significant sunk costs, particularly when accompanied by extensive economies of scale, also affect the position of Coke and Pepsi as would-be entrants. As a result of this omission the respondent has greatly exaggerated the ability of Coke or Pepsi to enter the industry. Above all, this argument ignores the negative consequences that such entry could have on the relative position of the entrant vis-a-vis its major rival and other producers of diet carbonated beverages. Assuming that either firm could find a producer capable of producing at an acceptable cost level, the effect of sufficiently large scale entry to meet the needs of either Coke or Pepsi would be the creation of significant excess capacity. This would tend to place downward pressure on aspartame prices, and this would redound to the benefit of the firm that did not integrate backwards without cost to it. Meanwhile the soft drink firm that did enter, through long-term contract or ownership, would be locked into a situation that could very well result in higher input costs than those faced by its competitors.

There is no doubt that Coke and Pepsi are extremely important customers to NSC and that it must carefully weigh their likely response to any course it adopts. It is clear that the reverse is also true. Coke and Pepsi will still be critically dependent on NSC even after the United States use patent expires, since they will still have to rely on NSC for significant volumes of a highly important ingredient. They must each also consider how the other will react. For example, the risk to them in terms of lost sales if both remove the NutraSweet logo from their containers[22] is lower than if one of them does so alone, as would be the case if either of them did decide to enter the aspartame business. The history of the adoption of the NutraSweet logo by Coke is instructive in this regard. When aspartame was approved for use in carbonated soft drinks in the United States in 1983, Coke initially chose to use a mixture of aspartame and saccharin and Pepsi opted to use aspartame alone and to display the NutraSweet logo on its containers. Within months Coke had followed.

While Coke and Pepsi have considerable resources to protect their interests, the Tribunal is not persuaded that this consideration eliminates NSC's market power. This is particularly so while the United States use patent is in force and contractual negotiations regarding Canada are affected by it. Whatever conclusions may be reached regarding the nature and the effect of the allegedly anti-competitive contractual terms,[23] it cannot be concluded that NSC lacked market power while these were being negotiated.

---

[22] Under their contracts with NSC, both Coke and Pepsi have agreed to display the NutraSweet brand name and "swirl" logo on their diet product packages in return for a significant price discount on the aspartame they buy.

[23] Exclusivity and the related contract terms are discussed infra at 64ff.

The respondent also submits that NSC does not have market power because of the existence of other competitors and potential competitors. With respect to smaller competitors, the respondent submits that at the price Mr. Minarich stated that phenylalanine could be purchased (on two or three months notice), these firms might be able to achieve cost levels below the current prices in Canada. Although the evidence does not permit a conclusion regarding exact cost levels of general purpose fine chemical producers, it could possibly support the respondent's conclusion. As noted in the discussion of entry conditions, much depends on the returns that could be earned if the facilities were used to produce other products. In any event, it cannot be concluded that a comparison of production costs and prices alone means that NSC does not possess market power because of potential entry; there are other costs associated with distributing the product about which there is no evidence apart from the costs of NSC, which occupies a unique market position.

The evidence that NSC possesses appreciable market power given its market share (over 95 percent of sales in Canada), entry conditions and the constraints operating on its largest customers is sufficiently compelling so that the boundaries of substantial need not be explored. Its "control" is clearly substantial. Nor is it necessary to consider here the effect of the alleged anti-competitive acts on entry into distribution and indirectly into manufacturing.

2. "Class or Species of Business"

In the Director's view, the "class or species of business" referred to in paragraph 79(1)(a) should be interpreted in a "commercial" sense rather than in the economic sense of a product market, and when a commercial interpretation is applied the class or species of business is the manufacture and supply of aspartame. The Tribunal concurs with the opposing view of the respondent that "class or species of business" is synonymous with the relevant product market. This interpretation is consistent with the Tribunal's view that the meaning of "control" is market power since this concept can only meaningfully be related to a product market. Nothing hangs on the distinction in the instant case since the Tribunal considers the relevant product in Canada to be aspartame.

The Director cites Eddy Match Co. v. R.[24] in support of his point of view. This case was brought under the Combines Investigation Act,[25] a predecessor to the Competition Act. Section 32 provided that anyone who was a party to or knowingly assisted in the formation or operation of a combine was guilty of a criminal offence. "Combine" was defined in subsection 2(1) to include:

---

[24] (1953), 109 C.C.C. 1 (Que. Q.B., AS.).

[25] R.S.C. 1927, c. 26, s. 32, 2.

> a merger, trust or monopoly, which combination, merger, trust or monopoly has operated or is likely to operate to the detriment or against the interest of the public, ....

Paragraph 2(4)(b) further specified that "merger, trust or monopoly" could mean:

> one or more persons ... who either substantially or completely control, throughout any particular area or district in Canada or throughout Canada the class or species of business in which he is or they are engaged, .... (emphasis added)

The underlined phrase contains the same wording as paragraph 79(1)(a).

Eddy Match Co. ("Eddy") was charged with operating a combine, namely a merger, trust or monopoly, which controlled the business of manufacturing and distributing wooden matches. Eddy and related companies had pursued an aggressive course of conduct towards and subsequent acquisition of, any new entrants into wooden match production. In identifying wooden matches as the relevant "class or species of business" the court did not consider it necessary to take into account other means of producing a flame as possible substitutes. The court recognized that "lighting devices" was a general class which could contain many types of business but held that "class or species of business" meant wooden matches since that was the only business of Eddy and the matches were distinct from the other lighting devices.

Based on the facts in Eddy Match Co. and the different legislative schemes of the Combines Investigation Act and the Competition Act, the Tribunal does not believe that this case provides a sound basis for identifying "class or species of business" without referring to possible substitutes. The court in that case was seized with charges under a criminal statute, a case in which the accused had engaged in highly aggressive conduct towards other producers of wooden matches; Eddy certainly acted as though wooden matches were sufficiently distinct so that it was worthwhile for it to concentrate its efforts on that industry. In the present statute, however, section 79 provides other remedies and the deciding body is a specialized tribunal. It would run contrary to the spirit of this legislation for the Tribunal to eschew other relevant factors (i.e. possible substitutes) on some presumed technical ground.

Furthermore, the Director recognizes that the product market must be considered at some point in subsection 79(1). In his view, the appropriate place to do so IS m paragraph 79(1)(c) m reference to the substantial lessening of competition m "a market", which requires the identification of both the product and geographic dimensions. In the view of the Tribunal, the logic of the section is better followed if the product market is precisely identified in connection with the question of "control" rather than being partially dealt with under paragraph 79(1)(a) and then revisited m paragraph 79(1)(c).

3. Practice of Anti-Competitive Acts

There are two elements that must be determined in paragraph 79(1)(b), namely whether there is a "practice" and whether there are "anti-competitive acts". Nine anti-competitive acts are set out in section 78:

> 78. For the purposes of section 79, "anti-competitive act", without restricting the generality of the term, includes any of the following acts:
>
> (a) squeezing, by a vertically integrated supplier, of the margin available to an unintegrated customer who competes with the supplier, for the purpose of impeding or preventing the customer's entry into, or expansion in, a market;
> (b) acquisition by a supplier of a customer who would otherwise be available to a competitor of the supplier, or acquisition by a customer of a supplier who would otherwise be available to a competitor of the customer, for the purpose of impeding or preventing the competitor's entry into, or eliminating the competitor from, a market;
> (c) freight equalization on the plant of a competitor for the purpose of impeding or preventing the competitor's entry into, or eliminating the competitor from, a market;

> (d) use of fighting brands introduced selectively on a temporary basis to discipline or eliminate a competitor; (e) pre-emption of scarce facilities or resources required by a competitor for the operation of a business, with the object of withholding the facilities or resources from a market;
> (f) buying up of products to prevent the erosion of existing price levels;
> (g) adoption of product specifications that are incompatible with products produced by any other person and are designed to prevent his entry into, or to eliminate him from, a market;
> (h) requiring or inducing a supplier to sell only or primarily to certain customers, or to refrain from selling to a competitor, with the object of preventing a competitor's entry into, or expansion in, a market; and > (i) selling articles at a price lower than the acquisition cost for the purpose of disciplining or eliminating a competitor.

This list of anti-competitive acts is clearly not meant to be exhaustive and the respondent admits that other conduct not specifically mentioned in section 78 can constitute an anti-competitive act. A number of the acts share common features but, as recognized by the Director and the respondent, only one feature is common to all: an anti-competitive act must be performed for a purpose, and evidence of this purpose is a necessary ingredient. The purpose common to all acts, save that found in paragraph 78(f), is an intended negative effect on a competitor that is predatory, exclusionary or disciplinary.

The term "practice" is mentioned at a number of points in the Act, but it is undefined. This question was addressed by the Director but not by the respondent. The Director submits that the interpretation of "practice" adopted in an Ontario decision on resale price maintenance is an appropriate one. The trial judge found, and was affirmed by the Court of Appeal in R. v. William E. Coutts Co., [26] that conduct with respect to the sale of greeting cards over a week constituted a "practice". The trial judge stated: "I believe the word is used in the section in the sense that it denotes a distinction from an isolated act or acts.[27] The Director also submits that different anti-competitive acts may be considered together, as well as repeated instances of one act, to determine whether there is a "practice".

In considering the meaning of "practice" the Tribunal is mindful of an important difference between resale price maintenance and conduct covered under section 79. The former is a criminal offence (with limited defences) whereas section 79 provides a civil remedy with a number of interrelated elements that must be satisfied before the remedy can be granted. If there is a good reason to avoid a limiting interpretation of "practice" under criminal law, it is all the more important to do so under section 79. The anti-competitive acts covered in section 78 run a wide gamut. Some almost certainly entail a course of conduct over a period of time, such as freight equalization in paragraph 78(c), whereas others consist of discrete acts, such as the setting of product specifications in paragraph 78(g). The interpretation of "practice" must be sufficiently broad so as to allow for a wide variety of anti-competitive acts. Accordingly, the Tribunal is of the view that a practice may exist where there is more than an "isolated act or acts." For the same reasons, the Tribunal is also of the view that different individual anti-competitive acts taken together may constitute a practice. It is important to stress, however, that this does not in any way relieve the Director of the burden of establishing an anti-competitive purpose for each of the acts.

---

[26] [1968] 1 O.R. 549.

[27] Ibid. at 555.

The Director identifies eight anti-competitive acts allegedly practiced by the respondent. With the exception of "anti-competitive pricing", none of them is specifically related to the anti-competitive acts set out in section 78. Four of the alleged anti-competitive acts relate to the terms of NSC's supply contracts and are part of a supposed attempt by NSC to induce the majority of Canadian aspartame buyers to deal exclusively in its product. These are best treated together. (A conclusion as to whether they constitute separate acts or are terms of contracts with a common theme is reserved until later.) Before discussing this area, the allegations of "abuse of governmental reporting" and "contractual exclusion of potential competitors" are taken up. "Anti-competitive pricing" and "use of U.S. patent to foreclose competition" are considered last.

The determination of an anti-competitive act, and particularly its purpose component, is a difficult task. The Director submits that evidence of subjective intent (through verbal or written statements of personnel of the respondent) or a consideration of the act itself (the premise that a corporation can be taken to intend the necessary and foreseeable consequences of its acts) can be used to establish purpose. The Tribunal finds nothing objectionable in these submissions. In most situations, of course, the purpose of a particular act will have to be inferred from the circumstances surrounding it.

(a) Abuse of Governmental Reporting Requirements

The Director submits that the fact that NSC showed a loss in its Canadian income tax returns for 1986-88 constitutes an anti-competitive act given its strong market position and the reasonable expectation that it should have been profitable. The Director's reasoning is that since NSC does not pay Canadian taxes on its Canadian operations, and will not have to do so for the foreseeable future because of its accumulated losses, it is provided with a competitive advantage vis-a-vis existing and potential competition. The respondent denies that NSC is avoiding taxes overall; if it is saving taxes in Canada, it is paying additional taxes in the United States as a result.

The Director also alleges that since there is no clear explanation for NSC's method of fixing the value of imported aspartame as shown on customs declaration forms, this too constitutes an anti-competitive act. He argues that NSC is avoiding the costs (admittedly very small) of accurately filling out the required forms. There is no duty or other monies payable by NSC associated with the import of aspartame and thus there is no financial implication associated with the accuracy of the returns.

In the v1ew of the Tribunal, this allegation fails since the Director does not even attempt to demonstrate an anti-competitive purpose associated with these alleged abuses of governmental reporting requirements.[28]

(b) Contractual Exclusion of Potential Competitors

The Director alleges that the exclusion of Ajinomoto from Canada as an independent supplier of aspartame pursuant to an agreement between Ajinomoto and NSC constitutes an anti-competitive act. The written agreement has not been filed in evidence, but there is testimony from NSC witnesses that Ajinomoto has agreed not to sell in Canada (and the United States) through 1995. The respondent submits that the decision of Ajinomoto not to sell in Canada is not an anti-competitive act but part of an overall agreement that is efficiency enhancing. However, this submission is unsupported by any references to technical or economic complementarities arising from the Ajinomoto/NSC relationship.

[28] Teitelbaum J. makes this further observation: With regard to the reporting by NSC of a financial loss in its Canadian operation on its Government of Canada corporate income tax returns for the 1986-1988 taxation years, information which NSC solemnly declared to be the truth, and although the Director has been unable to demonstrate an anti-competitive purpose to this reporting, I would comment that senior executive representatives of NSC, including its President, testified under oath that NSC made a profit from its Canadian operations. It thus becomes obvious that by "creative accounting" NSC is able to avoid paying to the Government of Canada income taxes on the profits made by NSC in Canada. It is no excuse to state, as a representative of NSC did, that NSC would pay income taxes on its Canadian profits to the Government of the United States and would thus not avoid paying income tax on these profits.

Ajinomoto was selected as a supplier by NSC in the early 1970s (if not before) due to its expertise in areas allied to aspartame production. Until recently, Ajinomoto could not function as an independent supplier since NSC's use patents covered most of the world. The evidence shows that NSC relies on Ajinomoto for a small part of its own supply, all of the supply for the joint venture with Ajinomoto in Europe (NutraSweet AG), and for patented and proprietary technology for which it pays a royalty. Ajinomoto is free to sell in Japan for its own account.

Company documents[29] contain information indicating that NSC made large investments in the Ajinomoto plant in the early 1980s. According to the oral evidence, the price paid by NSC to Ajinomoto for aspartame in the early and mid-1980s was set at a level designed to allow Ajinomoto rapidly to recover its capital. In later years the price had to cover primarily variable costs. A similar approach is to be used for output from a planned expansion of Ajinomoto facilities. Whether NSC will be providing capital as well for this additional capacity is not in evidence.

[29] Exhibit VIII-29 (confidential): NSC 1989 Long Range Plan, table entitled "Capital Expenditure Trends".

On its face, what is known about the arrangement suggests that NSC has ensured that it will not have to confront Ajinomoto as a competitor in the near future. Apart from the licensing of Ajinomoto technology, which is highly likely to be desirable from an efficiency standpoint, it is difficult to perceive any efficiency enhancing or pro-competitive elements in the relationship. Rather, the contrary appears to be true: the two leading producers, each with formidable, if somewhat different, strengths have in effect agreed not to compete.

The critical question is whether the agreement is an anti-competitive act under section 78. In the Director's view, the fact that NSC, given its market position, has an arrangement with Ajinomoto that excludes Ajinomoto from selling in Canada qualifies the arrangement as such. In the Tribunal's view, this by itself is not sufficient. A consistent pattern in the anti-competitive acts cited in section 78 (save for that in paragraph (f)) is that the competitor of the dominant firm is a target not a fellow actor. While the Tribunal is reluctant to conclude that all horizontal arrangements are excluded from sections 78 and 79, we do not believe that we have been provided with adequate justification for including the NSC/Ajinomoto arrangement (insofar as it affects Canada) as an anti-competitive act under section 78.

(c) Contract Terms Associated with Exclusivity

The Director alleges that the respondent's use of the contractual terms described below constitutes a practice of anti-competitive acts.

(i) Exclusive supply clauses require that the customer purchase all of its aspartame requirements from NSC. Exclusive use clauses require that the customer use aspartame produced by the respondent as the sole or primary sweetener in some or all of the customer's products. A common formulation of these clauses is:

> X agrees to use NutraSweet brand aspartame as the sole (or primary) intense sweetening ingredient in its [list of products by name] [diet and sugar-free products] produced in Canada during the duration of this agreement and further agrees to purchase all of its requirements of NutraSweet brand aspartame from NSC.

A reference herein simply to "exclusivity" includes both types of clause. The two are slightly repetitive since NutraSweet brand aspartame cannot normally be purchased from anyone other than NSC. The result of such clauses is that the customer agrees to purchase only NutraSweet brand aspartame for all of its non-caloric sweetener requirements or for all of those requirements for a particular product line.

(ii) The trademark display allowance or logo display allowance provides a substantial discount from the gross price of the aspartame to the customer. In return, the customer must display the NutraSweet name and logo on its packaging and in print and television advertising featuring the product containing NutraSweet brand aspartame. The allowance is fixed at $X/lb calculated on the total number of pounds of aspartame the customer buys, not on the number of uses made of the trade mark. NSC dictates what has to appear on the packaging (the "NutraSweet/NutraSuc" brand name and the swirl logo) and in what colours and sizes.

Cooperative marketing allowances provide a further discount to the customer in the form of a per pound payment by NSC for support of marketing programs promoting customer products containing only NutraSweet brand aspartame. The payment is calculated on the basis of the total amount of aspartame purchased and must be applied towards NSC-approved advertising ventures. The approval process is apparently relatively informal, consisting of mutual ongoing discussions or endorsement after the fact. One witness for a customer said that making sure the NutraSweet name and logo were in the advertisement was all that was necessary. This is in fact also dictated by the terms of the standard trademark display allowance.

(iii) In some contracts, a meet-or-release clause gives NSC the option to meet a lower price offered to its customer or to release the customer to purchase from the other supplier; and a most-favoured-nation clause ensures that the price to a particular customer is the lowest price paid by any customer for an equivalent volume of aspartame. Payment from NSC under a most-favoured-nation clause is made by cheque to the particular customer at year-end, without any further explanation.

The first two items, (i) and (ii), clearly constitute a practice since they appear in virtually every one of the respondent's supply contracts. Since the Coke and Pepsi contracts contain the two clauses in (iii) and they cover a large volume of sales over several years, the Director submits that the inclusion of these clauses constitutes a practice. This viewpoint is not disputed by the respondent and the Tribunal agrees with the Director on this point.

Exclusivity as such is not mentioned among the anti-competitive acts m section 78, but in this case it is wholly consistent with them. Exclusivity and the contract terms related to it stem from NSC's "branded ingredient strategy". The idea of identifying and promoting an ingredient such as aspartame is apparently unique to NSC. Buyers of ingredients to be used in their products tend to be highly informed; they are generally interested in the properties of the ingredient they buy and not in its image. Normally the ultimate consumers are only marginally aware, if at all, of particular ingredients in the product they consume. The NSC branded ingredient strategy was implemented soon after the FDA gave approval for the use of aspartame in carbonated soft drinks in the United States. There is no evidence that NSC ever made the use of the NutraSweet name and logo a condition of supply; rather NSC made the use of the name and logo attractive to customers through the offer of discounts for its display and for joint advertising. However, as long as NSC was, through its patent monopoly, the sole supplier of aspartame, the distinction between inducing the use of the name and logo through price reductions and requiring it as a condition of supply was largely a semantic one since NSC could arrange its prices so that customers had little effective choice. The branded ingredient strategy becomes a matter of exclusivity wherever the use patent expires and customers have at least the legal opportunity of buying from other suppliers.

As stressed in the evidence of Professor Mathewson, there is widespread exclusivity in the economy and there are numerous examples where exclusivity in distribution is required to bring forth the necessary effort for the efficient distribution of the product or service. Exclusivity can clearly be the outcome of competitive markets.

According to internal documents, NSC believes that the branded ingredient strategy is necessary to prevent price from falling to the level of marginal costs of production, which tends to occur with other chemicals that are sold as commodities. The internal documents also stress what is referred to as a "sole supplier strategy", that NSC should endeavour to capture and to keep as much of the market as possible for NutraSweet brand aspartame.[30] On the basis of this evidence and the fact that the strategy was introduced when the use patent was in force and customers did not have a choice of suppliers and marketing approaches, the Tribunal is persuaded that the strategy has been and is pursued for the purpose of excluding future or existing competition and not because it is required for efficient distribution or use of the product.

[30] Section 69 of the Competition Act provides that company documents stand as prima facie proof that the respondent had knowledge of their contents and that they were created with its authority. The Tribunal's conclusions on the purpose of the branded ingredient strategy are drawn from the Strategic Plan 1984-88 of the NutraSweet Group (developed in 1983 for Searle management) and NSC's Long Range Plans (1986 and 1989), prepared by Mr. Shapiro, President, for presentation to the Executive Management Committee of Monsanto Co. (Exhibits V-20, VIII-29, VIII-31)(confidential). It is not disputed that these documents accurately reflect NSC corporate policy; it is only disputed that the implications of such a policy are anti- competitive.

NSC witnesses stated that the purpose of promoting NutraSweet brand aspartame was to dispel consumers' concerns regarding the safety of aspartame -- concerns that were to be expected given the adverse publicity associated with high-intensity sweeteners such as cyclamates and saccharin. In fact, NSC does not promote aspartame, but rather its own name and mark. According to surveys conducted on behalf of NSC, at least some consumers believe that the presence of NutraSweet brand aspartame in products is a positive thing. However, the fact that consumers react positively to the NutraSweet brand is an outcome for which any company engaging in extensive promotion of its product hopes and does not affect the Tribunal's conclusions regarding NSC's purpose in pursuing exclusivity.

The logo display and cooperative marketing allowances create a strong inducement for the logo's use. Any customer who wants to buy from NSC is virtually compelled to use the logo on any packaging containing NutraSweet aspartame, given that the price inducement is of the order of 40 percent when both logo display and promotion allowances are considered, with the discount for logo display comprising by far the major part. The amount of the logo display allowance is not, as far as anything in evidence shows, in any way related to the value to NSC of the exposure obtained when its logo is displayed on one customer's packaging as compared to another's. A recent increase in the amount of this allowance was explained by Mr. Rosa, Group Vice-President and General Manager of the Sweetener Group of NSC, as being NSC's preferred form of price reduction.

The logo and advertising discounts create an "all-or-nothing" choice for customers. In the event that customers decide that they would prefer not to use the logo for a particular product line or not to commit themselves to use it on all of that line, they are forced to purchase all their supply from another supplier because it is too expensive to buy from NSC without the logo and advertising discounts. This means that new suppliers must become sufficiently established so that potential customers are willing to entrust all of their needs for a product line to the new supplier.

Although NSC is obviously interested in promoting its name and mark, exclusivity in its own right, rather than exposure of its product name, is clearly at play in the contracts with Coke and Pepsi. They receive logo display allowances for their diet drinks sold in large returnable bottles that do not bear NutraSweet brand identifiers; the trademark is represented only in tiny lettering on the bottle cap. The allowance is also paid for their diet fountain products which do not carry the logo at all.

Therefore, it is clear that the logo display and promotion allowances are essentially inducements to exclusivity.

The Director objects to the meet-or-release clause, as does Tosoh, on the grounds that it gives NSC an advantage over its competitors. When invoked by a customer, the clause provides NSC with information on competitors' offers. To retain the customer's business (or the part on which the customer received a competing bid), NSC need only match the offer. According to Tosoh, competitors are discouraged from making offers if they know that such offers will only be used as a bargaining chip with NSC. According to Professor Thompson, appearing for the Director, meet-or- release clauses are sometimes regarded by economists as an information exchange device among competing firms. In the instant case, it is his view that the clauses serve as entry-deterring devices that reinforce the anti-competitive effects of exclusivity.

In the view of the Tribunal the meet-or-release clause is there at the behest of the largest customers, Coke and Pepsi, who had entered into long-term exclusive contracts. The clause was seen as a way of mitigating the effects of being locked in by an exclusive contract. If exclusive supply is objectionable in the instant case, so is a meet-or-release clause: by making exclusivity more acceptable to customers it serves as an inducement for customers to enter into exclusive arrangements. There is also no reason to conclude that the clause mitigates the entry-barring effects created by exclusivity. Competitors are discouraged from submitting bids since they know that NSC will be given the opportunity of meeting any price that they submit. In the event that competing bids are submitted, NSC is in a position to ensure that it keeps the business.

The Director's submission regarding the most-favoured-nation clause is that it is an inducement to exclusive dealing because it assures customers that they will not be treated worse than their competitors. The Director submits, correctly in the Tribunal's view, that only a firm with a very large market share can be expected by its customers to provide a most- favoured-nation clause because only it will almost certainly be selling to the customers' competitors. The Tribunal would observe that to the extent that large buyers can exert pressure on their suppliers and thus enhance competition, they are more likely to do so if (unlike the present case) they are assured that they alone will benefit from the pressure they exert and that competitors will not similarly benefit from their efforts. Thus, like the meet- or-release clause, the most-favoured-nation clause does not mitigate the objectionability of exclusive supply.

The Director submits that each of these contract terms associated with exclusive supply should be considered a separate anti-competitive act. In support, he cites case law from the United States relating to exclusive dealing, and case law from the European Commission concerned with "fidelity rebates" similar to the logo display and cooperative marketing allowances, and decisions from the same body relating to meet-or-release clauses. The Tribunal sees little purpose in the context of the present case in determining whether each clause constitutes an anti-competitive act. It is doubtful whether the meet-or-release and most-favoured-nation clauses would exist in the absence of an explicit or implicit exclusive supply agreement. In the Tribunal's view, the issue is whether the agreements requiring exclusive supply, and all the contract terms related to it, have an exclusionary purpose. The Tribunal is persuaded that this is the case.

(d) Selling Below Cost: Relevant Cost Standard

The Director alleges that NSC is engaging m the anti-competitive act described in paragraph 78(i) of "selling articles at a price lower than the acquisition cost for the purpose of disciplining or eliminating a competitor." The Director submits alternative interpretations or sources of cost information for "acquisition cost" in the instant case. The respondent submits, correctly in the Tribunal's view, that acquisition cost does not easily lend itself to manufacturing situations. In fact, the language of the paragraph suggests that Parliament intended this paragraph to be applied to distribution, i.e. to situations where articles are purchased for resale. Since NSC buys product from Ajinomoto, there is a purchase and resale by NSC. The respondent's submission with respect to these purchases, that acquisition cost is restricted to the cost of the articles and not to the cost of distributing them, is consistent with the language of the paragraph; that is, only the price paid to Ajinomoto, and not the marketing and distribution costs of the Canadian operations, conforms to acquisition cost. Under this interpretation, NSC's prices exceeded its acquisition costs by a comfortable margin.

The respondent also submits that if paragraph 78(i) is to be applied to the aspartame manufactured by it then only the cost of manufacturing the product conforms to the meaning of acquisition cost, and other costs, such as marketing and distribution, are excluded. There is no reason, however, for applying paragraph 78(i) to manufacturing situations where there is not a purchase and resale of articles. Therefore, paragraph 78(i) does not apply with respect to NSC's manufacturing and other costs and the Director's allegation that NSC has been selling below acquisition cost fails.

Some considerable time was spent before the Tribunal in argument as to whether, apart from the allegation of selling below acquisition costs, NSC is guilty of an anti-competitive act through some other form of predatory pricing not specified in section 78. The Tribunal is satisfied that the term "anti-competitive act" in section 78 is broad enough to cover other predatory pricing. We will not deal with this question extensively, however.

First, in spite of an exhaustive review of the evidence we find it less than compelling as to whether there has been pricing below cost by NSC. The Director did not present a consistent or coherent case as to the proper measurement of cost for this purpose. While the correct definition of "cost" here is highly debatable, we accept for present purposes the view of Areeda and Turner[31] that marginal cost (that is, the added cost of producing an additional unit) ("MC") is an appropriate standard. We also agree with them that, because MC is so difficult to determine, a proxy for it is normally average variable cost ("AVC"), that is the average cost per unit of all production taking into account only the cost components that vary with output. It flows from this, however, that AVC is only a valid proxy for MC when a firm is producing below capacity. Areeda and Turner, following common usage by economists, define "capacity" with reference to the output level that corresponds to the point where the average total cost per unit of production ("ATC") is a minimum.[32] MC is equal to ATC at this point and therefore ATC rather than AVC is obviously the better proxy for MC for a firm producing at capacity. Capacity in this sense need not correspond to any notion of a physical limit to output since firms can often increase output by more intensively utilizing existing facilities. Doing this will cause MC to rise above ATC.

---

[31] P. Areeda & D.F. Turner, "Predatory Pricing and Related Practices under Section 2 of the Sherman Act" (1975) 88 Harv. L. Rev. 697, reprinted in (1980) 10 J. Reprints for Antitrust L. & Econ. 1.

In the instant case NSC operates its plants 24 hours per day, seven days per week, with an annual shutdown of several weeks for maintenance. In the absence of further information we have adopted "capacity" to be equal to this physical limit, which also probably closely approximates the low point of ATC. Thus when at capacity, NSC can increase output only by investing in additional plant and equipment rather than by utilizing existing facilities more intensively.

It is not clear whether the plants are operated so intensively for technical reasons or because it is (and was) cheaper to do so taking into account existing and anticipated increases in sales. Given that the plants apparently have been operated at their physical limits for some time, a judgment as to whether NSC has been operating at capacity, in the sense of straining to satisfy its level of sales, requires an examination of output and sales or inventory levels. This evidence, along with NSC's investment and purchasing decisions, leaves no doubt that NSC has been and will be fully utilizing its existing capacity to meet its sales. Under these circumstances MC is most closely approximated by ATC, that is all costs including the costs of capital. Identifying a precise date when capacity was reached is not possible, but according to the evidence of Mr. Balbirer, Vice-President of Finance and Planning for NSC, the supply situation of NSC became "very tight" towards the end of 1988. It appears to us that prior to this period, NSC was operating at less than capacity so that the appropriate test of cost would have been AVC. It also appears that during that period its prices were above AVC.

---

[32] Ibid. at 710.

Even if NSC was pricing below cost after 1988, it is highly unlikely that NSC would be able to recoup from Canadian consumers the foregone profits resulting from below-cost pricing. There is, however, evidence that NSC would have a strong commercial motive to sell below cost, outside the United States, having regard to its desire to discourage entry into international markets now so as to preserve its own giant American market when the patent expires there in 1992. However, from the evidence available we can draw only tentative conclusions as to the relationship between prices and ATC, the relevant cost standard for a firm at capacity, after 1988.

Finally, even if we reached a conclusion against NSC in this respect, the Director in his pleadings did not ask for any remedy concerning prices other than that they be forbidden to fall below "acquisition cost", a concept we have found to be irrelevant to this case. Therefore a specific finding on selling below cost is not required in respect of any potential remedy.

(e) Use of United States Patent to Foreclose Competition

The final anti-competitive act alleged by the Director is that NSC has used its United States use patent in three different ways to gain a competitive advantage in Canada.

First, the existence of the patent is stated to have been instrumental in causing Coke and Pepsi to agree to exclusive supply contracts outside of the United States. This matter has already been considered in other contexts and in the view of the Tribunal the evidence does not support a finding that it constitutes or is part of a separate anti-competitive act.

The second way that the patent is stated to have been used anti-competitively is as an instrument for financing below-cost pricing in Canada. The argument that the patent provided NSC with a "deep pocket" is part of the allegation that NSC was and is pricing below cost in Canada, but in the view of the Tribunal this argument does not advance the allegation.

The third way that the patent was allegedly used involved U.F.L. Foods Inc. ("UFL"). UFL is a Canadian co-packer for Nutri/System; it supplies various low calorie dishes or formulations that are marketed by Nutri/System. UFL had had a supply agreement with Tosoh for the purchase of aspartame used in these products. NSC approached Nutri/System and succeeded in obtaining its cooperation by offering it a number of incentives if it would require its co-packer, UFL, to purchase its aspartame from NSC. One of the benefits consisted of a rebate on all products containing NSC aspartame imported by Nutri/System from co-packers in the United States, equal to the difference between the NSC's United States and Canadian prices times the amount of aspartame contained in the imports.

There are several aspects to this rebate which lead to the conclusion that the United States patent is being used to exclude competition, and in a most heavy-handed fashion. It is virtually impossible for HSC or any other competitor to meet NSC's offer, short of providing customers with a blank cheque. Competitors cannot know how much the rebates on a customer's United States imports will amount to. The large difference between the price in the United States and Canada and the effect that rebating this amount has on the net/net price is evidence that NSC is willing to price without regard to its cost in order to prevent the expansion of HSC. NSC would not have any way of knowing how costly its offer might be.

This is a form of dumping in that NSC can in effect export its product at a price below that charged in the United States, without any risk to its domestic price which is protected by its exclusive patent rights.

The Tribunal accepts the Director's submission that the use of a monopoly position (created by the United States patent) to obtain a competitive advantage for a dominant firm in another market is an anti-competitive act.

4. Preventing or Lessening Competition Substantially in a Market

The final element that must be satisfied for an order to issue is that the practice of anti-competitive acts has or is likely to have "the effect of preventing or lessening competition substantially in a market." For reasons that have been previously addressed, the market in question is the sale and purchase of aspartame in Canada.

The factors to be considered in deciding whether competition has been or is likely to be substantially lessened are similar to those that were discussed in concluding that NSC has market power. In essence, the question to be decided is whether the anti-competitive acts engaged in by NSC preserve or add to NSC's market power.

The issue with respect to the contract terms associated with exclusivity and the use of the United States patent as leverage in competing for Canadian customers is the degree to which these anti-competitive acts add to the entry barriers into the Canadian market and, additionally therefore, into the industry.

The arguments of the Director and the respondent can be summed up as follows. The Director submits that the NSC supply contracts and their terms tie up a very large percentage of the market and prevent small scale or "toe-hold entry" and that the proof lies in the very limited inroads into NSC's market share by HSC and would-be entrants. The respondent submits that: the supply terms are not particularly restrictive; HSC's failure to make more rapid progress is due to growing pains which are now being overcome; NSC's large market share is due to superior economic performance; and, finally, the presence of large buyers who are able to create supply options for themselves is a guarantee that they will not accept supply contracts that injure their (and their consumers') interests.

The HSC plant was originally scheduled for completion in November 1987, but it did not get into production until mid-1988, and it did not achieve its rated capacity until the end of 1989. Prior to output being available from its plants, HSC relied on the limited output from the Tosoh pilot plant and the accumulated inventories from that operation. As a result of having to rely on output from the pilot plant, Tosoh ran into some difficulties in providing consistent samples for product testing and this delayed the acceptance of its product by some buyers. There were, however, no difficulties with acceptance by most prospective customers and, in particular, there were none with those in the carbonated soft drink industry which accounts for 84 percent of aspartame purchases. But the delay in getting the plant into full production could have caused a more general credibility problem that contributed to HSC's difficulty in attracting customers. The importance of this consideration is greatly diluted by the fact that, as its Canadian patent expired, NSC entered into exclusive contracts running, for the most part, to the end of 1988. Even upon expiry of those contracts, the customer/supplier relationship entrenched by the contract terms (discussed further below) dictated that a new supplier would have to be able to meet all of a customer's requirements, or at least those for a product line; the customers did not have the option of placing small orders with suppliers as a way of trying them and contributing to their survival. Thus, to the extent that HSC may have had a credibility problem at the end of 1988, it cannot be separated from the effect of NSC's practices.

Success or failure for an entrant into aspartame sales hinges on its ability to obtain business from Coke or Pepsi. Both companies had entered into worldwide exclusive contracts in 1986. There was a possible opening for an entrant due to the meet-or-release clauses in those contracts.

In response to overtures from HSC/Tosoh both Coke and Pepsi asked for bids for all of their 1989 requirements. HSC/Tosoh refused on the stated ground that it did not have sufficient free capacity to meet all the needs of both companies and it wanted to deal with both in the same way. It submitted a bid covering a substantial volume but much less than that requested. The respondent submits that in so doing HSC/Tosoh was the author of its lack of success in obtaining any volume from Coke or Pepsi. We agree with Tosoh's view that it was being used by Coke and Pepsi to obtain a better price from NSC and that there was little chance that either of them was seriously considering giving all of its Canadian business to Tosoh. The fact that neither Coke nor Pepsi had conducted consumer surveys to determine the effect of removing the NutraSweet name and logo from its packages (upon changing aspartame supplier) is very strong evidence of this. It is highly unlikely that either would take such an important step without testing likely consumer reaction. This conclusion is strongly supported by the impression left by the witnesses representing the two companies in the proceedings. As potential markets for which HSC can compete, these two companies are more restricted in their decisions on sourcing aspartame than a smaller buyer that can easily have its total requirements met by HSC. Their strategic position is also much affected by their rivalry.

The Tribunal is convinced that the exclusivity in NSC's contracts, which includes both the clauses reflecting agreement to deal only or primarily in NutraSweet brand aspartame and the financial inducements to do so, impedes "toehold entry" into the market and inhibits the expansion of other firms in the market. Since exclusive use and supply clauses appear in virtually all of NSC's 1989 contracts, and thus cover over 90 percent of the Canadian market for aspartame, it is clear that during the currency of those contracts there is little room for entry by a new supplier.

It is true that these contracts are generally only one year in duration. Theoretically, therefore, the bulk of the market is only tied up for a year at the most and then a new supplier would have the same chance as NSC of bidding for and winning the supply contracts that have expired.

There are, however, significant differences m such circumstances m the position of a new supplier and that of NSC.

There is the question of the logo unit that appears on the packaging of those customers using NutraSweet brand aspartame who also receive the logo display allowance (in 1989, all of them). If a customer switched suppliers or sourced with two suppliers, the logo unit would have to be removed from its packaging. (The practicality of sourcing from different suppliers by product or product line and thus leaving the NutraSweet logo unit on some packages and not others will be dealt with below.) If changes to advertising are involved and must be put in on short notice, then there are additional costs. There was no evidence that any customer considered the costs of removing the logo to be prohibitive to a change in aspartame supplier, although it would certainly be a factor in the decision. In the cases of Cadbury-Schweppes and Stafford Foods, who did switch to Tosoh aspartame and thus removed the logo from some or all of their packaging, Tosoh contributed to the costs of changing over.

More important than the physical or advertising costs of removing the logo is the uncertainty expressed by customers, particularly the soft drink franchisers, as to the effect of the removal, both on consumers and on their position relative to their competitors. Although Cadbury-Schweppes has removed the logo from certain canned diet products sold in Ontario and Quebec, namely Schweppes Diet Ginger Ale and Diet Tonic Water, and buys its aspartame for those products from Tosoh, Mr. Matthews, Managing Director at Cadbury Beverages Canada Ltd., indicated that before his company would give more business to Tosoh, entailing the removal of the logo unit from other products, it would want to see one of the major cola brands (i.e. Coke or Pepsi) stop using the swirl. Cadbury-Schweppes has no concrete information that the logo is significant to consumers and is not aware of any direct negative effects resulting from the limited removal already undertaken. There is, however, obviously considerable uncertainty as to whether the logo might have some value and, as Mr. Matthews put it, Cadbury-Schweppes is not willing to risk putting itself at a competitive disadvantage vis-a-vis the major cola companies by taking it off all packaging.

Even Coke and Pepsi themselves expressed similar reluctance to take a chance in removing the logo. Neither has conducted market research into how their consumers feel about the logo although both Mr. Eames, President of Coca-Cola Ltd. (the Canadian subsidiary), and Ms. Price, Manager of Package Marketing for Pepsi-Cola Co., believed that there was some NSC-conducted research that appeared to indicate that diet consumers may feel that the logo indicates a safer product. Mr. Eames stated that the issue of having the logo or not is "pretty tough now it has been on for several years".[33]

---

[33] Confidential transcript at 622 (25 January 1990).

Before recommending that his company take the logo off its products, Mr. Eames would want to be very comfortable that there would be no negative impact from a consumer perspective. He said that putting the logo on is "primarily a function of price; taking it off would be more than that ... ".[34] Coke does in fact sell its products without the logo in certain EEC countries. Pepsi also has some products in the EEC which do not carry the logo but Ms. Price admitted that Pepsi had been concerned that NSC and Coke would take a strong marketing position in support of a Coke brand containing NutraSweet brand aspartame and against the Pepsi products without it and that Pepsi management thoroughly canvassed this issue before the decision was taken to launch those products. The major cola companies may be ambivalent about the consumer reaction to the logo; they are certainly very apprehensive about taking a chance on removing it that a rival has not taken.

The cost of removing the logo and customers' concerns about a possible negative impact on sales from removal would be present even if all NSC contract clauses relating to exclusivity were removed. Nevertheless, the effect of the logo on entry conditions is relevant in evaluating whether exclusivity and the inducements thereto have the effect of substantially lessening competition.

---

[34] Ibid. at 626.

Past exclusivity has contributed to the present importance of the logo. More importantly, the starting position as well as the change in market power resulting from a practice need to be considered in evaluating its effects.

Furthermore, the attitude of customers to sourcing from two different aspartame suppliers, thus allowing a smaller supplier to enter the market and gain a track record, is significant. Most of the buyers have an internal policy of using two suppliers for key ingredients, if possible. With respect to aspartame the only practical way to source from two suppliers, given the NSC pricing structure, seems to be to split sources by product line or (for soft drink makers) by package type (e.g. fountain drinks or returnable bottles). In this manner, the logo can be retained on the packaging for products containing NutraSweet brand aspartame and the logo display and cooperative allowances will still apply to that line of product or packaging. If these rebates are not available because all of the aspartame is mixed together, then the higher price on the NSC-sourced component makes the overall price too high. Sourcing from two suppliers means maintaining two inventories and keeping all the aspartame totally separate. In addition, it is not practical for all customers to split off product lines in this manner. Crush, for example, promoted all of its products jointly since none of them generated enough sales on its own to justify independent promotion and thus could not advertise separately those lines containing NSC aspartame. Wrigley's has only one sugar-free brand of chewing gum ("Extra") as does Adams Brands ("Trident").

The Director further submits that the failure of two particular Canadian distributors of food additives and other ingredients to make any headway in attracting aspartame customers is due to the exclusionary tactics of NSC. In one case the distributor represented Lark and Pierrel (Italy) and in the other Mitsui Toatsu (Japan). The evidence of aspartame buyers is that they were not interested in purchasing from distributors who did not represent manufacturers with ongoing production. This evidence illustrates that in the presence of NSC's branded ingredient strategy, it is difficult to see any potential for "hit and run" entry of fine chemical producers into aspartame production. It is also true that NSC's price was falling rapidly. This was not mentioned as a consideration by buyers, but it obviously affected the potential profitability of the distributors.

The respondent, through its expert witness Professor Mathewson, submits that exclusivity is necessary for NSC to make the investments to meet customers' needs. A similar submission is that overall inventory costs are lower under exclusivity than they would be if each customer had to look after its own needs, as per-unit inventory costs are less when inventories are centrally managed (by NSC) . This line of reasoning, it should be noted, is not an "efficiency defence". It leads, rather, to the conclusion that customers are, on balance, better off as a result of exclusivity and that they pass these cost savings on to consumers. Under exclusivity customers are able to negotiate a band of minimum and maximum purchases. Without it, the customers would presumably have to commit to a specific volume and would have to hold inventories to satisfy higher-than-anticipated demand, or would have to make higher-than-required purchases in the event that requirements were less than anticipated. An executive of a major customer stated that the broad band negotiated by the customer in its exclusive contract does not mean that this is an important consideration; the customer is, in any event, quite capable of accurately forecasting demand for its product. Whatever the customer's abilities, the Tribunal does not see much merit in the respondent's line of reasoning. It can always be claimed that the risk and cost of holding plant and inventory are reduced if there is a single supplier rather than several. Unless it can be shown that an industry has special characteristics that make this claimed source of cost savings important, there is no reason to give it any weight.

The respondent also submits that exclusivity is necessary to protect NSC against "free riding". NSC bore all the costs of obtaining regulatory approvals and developing markets for aspartame and now other suppliers could reap the benefit of those investments. The Tribunal does not accept that NSC is entitled to any more protection against competition than it was able to obtain through patent grants that provided it with a considerable head start on potential competitors.

Conclusion on Section 79

The Tribunal therefore concludes that NSC substantially controls through its market power a class or species of business, namely the sale of aspartame in Canada.

Further, we conclude that NSC has engaged, and is engaging, in a practice of anti-competitive acts. There are several such acts, and they have been frequently repeated. They include the use in its supply contracts of exclusive supply and use clauses, logo display allowances, cooperative marketing allowances, meet-or-release clauses, and most-favoured-nation clauses. They also include the use of its United States patent to foreclose competition by a system of rebates on exports from the United States to induce Canadian importers to have only NSC aspartame used in products purchased by them in Canada.

We also conclude that these practices have had and are having the effect of preventing or lessening competition substantially.

VI. SECTION 77

1. Exclusive Dealing

Section 77(1) defines "exclusive dealing" as:

> (a) any practice whereby a supplier of a product, as a condition of supplying the product to a customer, requires that customer to
>
> (i) deal only or primarily in products supplied by or designated by the supplier or the supplier's nominee, or > (ii) refrain from dealing in a specified class or kind of product except as supplied by the supplier or the nominee, and
>
> (b) any practice whereby a supplier of a product induces a customer to meet a condition set out in subparagraph (a)(i) or (ii) by offering to supply the product to the customer on more favourable terms or conditions if the customer agrees to meet the condition set out in either of those subparagraphs; ....

The Director submits that it can be proven that, as a condition of supplying aspartame to its Canadian customers, NSC required the customers to enter into exclusive contracts or, alternatively, that the various "fidelity rebates" (logo display allowance and cooperative marketing funds) in the contracts constitute inducements for a customer to deal exclusively in NutraSweet brand aspartame. These arguments are put forward to meet the requirements of paragraphs (a) and (b), respectively, of subsection 77(1).

In support of his first submission, the Director argues that the presence of an exclusivity clause in the supply contracts constitutes exclusive dealing since failure by a customer to comply with the exclusivity requirement would entitle NSC to suspend its performance under the contract, namely the supply of aspartame. This follows either because of a specific rescission clause in the contract or because the exclusivity clauses are essential to the contract. The Director also argues that a "condition" of supply is simply a term or provision of the supply contract and that, therefore, the mere inclusion of an exclusivity clause in a supply contract constitutes exclusive dealing.

The Director may be correct in his submission that the exclusivity clauses constitute a "condition" of the contract once the contract is entered into, in the sense that under contract law they must be complied with or certain results will flow, including the right to repudiate. But we are of the view that in considering an allegation of exclusive dealing it is the circumstances in which the particular terms of supply were agreed upon that are critical. The ordinary meaning of the words used in paragraph 77(1)(a) is that the supplier must have refused to supply the product unless the buyer agrees to the terms described in subparagraph 77(1)(a)(i) or (ii). The respondent submits that the evidence does not show any refusal to supply aspartame or threats of such refusal unless customers agreed to purchase exclusively from NSC. The Tribunal agrees that there is no evidence on the record that customers were refused or threatened with a refusal of aspartame supply if they did not enter into exclusive contracts with NSC. Several customers explicitly denied any coercion and admitted that the request for exclusivity originated with them. The Tribunal therefore accepts that there is no exclusive dealing in this case in the sense set out in paragraph 77(1)(a).

The Director then argues that the fidelity rebates constitute clear financial inducements to the customer both to deal only in the respondent's brand of aspartame and to refrain from using another producer's aspartame. The provision of rebates in the form of the logo display allowance and the cooperative marketing funds encourages customers to use only NutraSweet brand aspartame. In order to qualify for those discounts the logo must appear on the customer's packaging and in its television and print advertising.

Obviously, if the logo appears on the package or in the advertising, it follows that only NutraSweet brand aspartame may be used in the particular product or product line to which the packaging and the advertising belong. A customer would have to pay NSC substantially more for aspartame if he did not qualify himself for these rebates. In its written argument, the respondent concedes that the set of circumstances surrounding these customer contracts

> probably does amount to an "inducement" of exclusivity by NutraSweet within the meaning of Section 77(1)(b), simply because a real benefit passes from NutraSweet to the customer in return for the commitment in the form of lower price or other better value.[35]

Therefore we conclude that the financial incentives and the exclusivity clause amount to exclusive dealing within the meaning of paragraph 77(1)(b): the customers clearly agreed to deal only or primarily in the products of NSC and in return received various rebates whose existence depends on exclusive use of NutraSweet brand aspartame. There are, however, other requirements to be met before an order can be made.

(a) "Practice"

The Director submits that the same definition of "practice" as holds for sections 78 and 79 should apply here (something other than an isolated act). The Tribunal accepts that this is an appropriate approach. The respondent does not dispute that a practice of exclusive dealing exists on these particular facts in view of the number of contracts containing exclusive use and supply clauses.

[35] Written argument of NSC at 156.

(b) Other Requirements for Order

Once the existence of a practice of exclusive dealing is established, subsection 77(2) sets out the requirements for a Tribunal order to issue:

> 77. (2) Where, on application by the Director, the Tribunal finds that exclusive dealing or tied selling, because it is engaged in by a major supplier of a product in a market or because it is widespread in a market, is likely to
>
> (a) impede entry into or expansion of a firm in the market,
> (b) impede introduction of a product into or expansion of sales of a product in the market, or > (c) have any other exclusionary effect in the market,
>
> with the result that competition is or is likely to be lessened substantially, the Tribunal may make an order directed to all or any of the suppliers against whom an order is sought prohibiting them from continuing to engage in exclusive dealing or tied selling and containing any other requirement that, in its opinion, is necessary to overcome the effects thereof in the market or to restore or stimulate competition in the market.

In considering whether NSC is a "major supplier" of a "product" m a "market", the Tribunal adopts the definition of a "major supplier" established by the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission ("RTPC") in Director of Investigation and Research v. Bombardier Ltd.:

> A major or important supplier is one whose actions are taken to have an appreciable or significant impact on the markets where it sells.[36]

In that case, which dealt with exclusive dealing in the snowmobile industry, the RTPC went on to state that a firm's market share is a good indicator of its importance, along with characteristics such as its financial strength and record as an innovator, and possibly other factors depending on the industry.

The relevant product and geographic market having been previously defined, it is not necessary to look beyond the respondent's extremely large market share and share of production capacity in order to conclude that NSC is a major supplier in the Canadian aspartame market. The respondent admits that if "major" denotes nothing more than quantitative sales share, then NSC is a major supplier. The respondent does not advance any other factors that might be taken into account that would affect this conclusion, and does not dispute, in any event, that the practice of exclusive dealing is widespread in Canada since virtually all customers buy pursuant to requirements contracts from either NSC or Tosoh.

---

[36] (1980), 53 C.P.R. (2d) 47 at 55.

There remains the further question of whether there has been a "substantial lessening of competition". Paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of subsection 77(2) are most conveniently, and logically, considered as part of the overall question of whether the exclusive dealing results in a substantial lessening of competition in the market. These paragraphs provide clarification of how such an effect on competition would be achieved. This was the approach adopted in Bombardier:

> Whether exclusive dealing by a supplier impedes expansion or entry of competitors in the market is most easily and meaningfully considered as part of the determination of whether there is or is likely to be a substantial lessening of competition as a result of the practice.[37]

The effect on competition of exclusivity and the related contractual terms, specifically the logo display allowance and cooperative marketing funds, have been discussed thoroughly in the context of section 79. Since the fundamental test of substantial lessening of competition is the same in both sections of the Act, the same conclusions apply.[38]

The Director also argues that the exclusive dealing practices of the NSC will have an adverse effect on the introduction of a new intense sweetener.

---

[37] Ibid. at 56.

[38] See supra at 80ff.

Not only will regulatory approval have to be obtained, he submits, but a new producer will have to await the expiry of the contracts of the major users of intense sweeteners. We are not convinced that the effects on the introduction of new sweeteners would be significant and, in the light of our other conclusions it is not necessary to consider this further.

2. Tied Selling

Subsection 77(1) also defines tied selling. For the purposes of the section, "tied selling" means:

> (a) any practice whereby a supplier of a product, as a condition of supplying the product (the "tying" product) to a customer, requires that customer to
> (i) acquire any other product from the supplier or the supplier's nominee, or > (ii) refrain from using or distributing in conjunction with the tying product another product that is not of a brand or manufacture designated by the supplier or the nominee, and
> (b) any practice whereby a supplier of a product induces a customer to meet a condition set out in subparagraph (a)(i) or (ii) by offering to supply the tying product to the customer on more favourable terms if the customer agrees to meet the condition set out in either of those subparagraphs.

The Director submits that the respondent's trademark constitutes a tying product. He argues that, as a condition of supplying the trademark (the NutraSweet brand name and logo) to a customer, the respondent requires that the customer purchase another of its products, namely aspartame, and refrain from using the aspartame of any other producer in conjunction with the trademark. He further argues that the respondent also offers to supply the trademark on more favourable terms, through the logo display allowance, if the customer purchases aspartame from NSC and does not use any other aspartame with the trademark.

The Tribunal recognizes that, in appropriate circumstances, a trademark might be the subject of a tying arrangement. It is not, however, convinced by the Director's argument that such is the case on the facts before it. In fact, the Director's argument on this point has not been consistent. As pointed out by the respondent, in his notice of application the Director alleged that the tying product was NutraSweet brand aspartame; in his written argument the trademark itself is alleged to be the tying product. Further, it is not clear that the Director seeks any additional remedy in this respect beyond those designed to deal more generally with exclusivity practices. In fact, the Director recognised that the respondent's proprietary rights in its trademark should not be interfered with. Therefore we are making no finding with respect to tied selling.

Conclusion on Section 77

The Tribunal therefore concludes that NSC has induced exclusive dealing with its aspartame customers through its financial incentives or fidelity rebates, and its exclusivity clauses. These inducements amount to a practice. NSC is a major supplier and this exclusive dealing has lessened, and is likely to lessen, competition substantially.

VII. REMEDIES

Having reached the above conclusions as to the applicability of sections 79 and 77 to this situation, the Tribunal is authorised by subsections 79(1) and 77(2) to make orders prohibiting the respondent from engaging in the practices complained of and found to have been committed. It is also authorised by subsections 79(2) and 77(2) to make orders to overcome the effect of such practices as may have already occurred.

In formulating an appropriate order the Tribunal is of the view that it must confine itself essentially to the kind of orders requested by the Director in his original application with such modifications as may fairly be considered to have been in issue in the case. While other possible remedies were discussed during argument, no amendment was sought to the application in this respect.

It is a matter of fairness that the respondent not now be faced with a remedy of which it had no formal notice. Further, although Tosoh suggested various other remedies, it is not a party and cannot define the issues including that of the remedies being sought.

This means that the Tribunal must confine itself to the consideration of the remedies applied for by the Director whose particulars are set out at pages 28 to 31 of his Notice of application, filed on June 1, 1989.

As already noted, this means that we cannot make any order as to selling below cost, as those particulars only request a prohibition against sale below acquisition cost, a concept we have found to be irrelevant. It also means that we cannot make an order specifically addressed to the kind of rebates that NSC offered to UFL to compensate it for the difference between the United States and Canadian prices, even though we found this to be an anti-competitive act.

We have been asked in effect to declare various contracts, some of them not even made in Canada, to be invalid in whole or in part. Some questions have been raised in the pleadings as to our jurisdiction to make such declarations. Without addressing that issue, we find it preferable to confine ourselves to certain directions to the respondent both with respect to enforcing certain terms of existing contracts or entering into such terms in the future.

Apart from these considerations we will also confine our order to terms which we believe will be relatively certain and enforceable.

We will therefore issue an order prohibiting NSC from enforcing, or entering into, certain terms of contracts for the supply of aspartame to Canadian customers: terms which require the purchaser to purchase or use only NSC aspartame; terms which provide financial inducements to purchase NSC aspartame through trademark display, advertising, or similar allowances; meet-or-release terms; and most-favoured- nation clauses, unless such clauses are also inserted in supply contracts between the respondent and any competitor of that Canadian customer.

VIII. CONSTITUTIONAL VALIDITY OF THE TRIBUNAL

1. The Issues

After the Tribunal had heard all the evidence in the present case, but before final argument had been presented, Philippon J. of the Superior Court of Quebec rendered a decision in the case of Alex Couture Inc. c. P.G. Canada. [39] In that decision he concluded that major sections of the Competition Act are constitutionally invalid and he also found the Competition Tribunal to be invalidly constituted. His reasons may perhaps be adequately summarized in the following paragraph from his decision:

> A notre avis, le Parlement n'a pas la compétence d'accorder les pouvoirs que la Loi accorde au Tribunal de la concurrence, l'assimilant à une cour supérieure d'archives avec taus les pouvoirs d'une véritable cour, sans accorder à ce tribunal les attributs essentiels d'indépendance.[40]

An unofficial translation has rendered this paragraph as follows:

> In our opinion, Parliament does not have jurisdiction to grant the powers which the Act confers on the Competition Tribunal, treating it like a superior court of record with all the powers of a true court, without giving the Tribunal the characteristics essential to independence.

As a result of this decision, counsel for the respondent, NSC, m the present case requested and obtained, on April 26, 1990, leave to amend its response in order to challenge the constitutionality of the Tribunal. As a result the following paragraph was added to its response:

---

[39] (6 April 1990), Quebec 200-05-001361-877. This decision has been appealed to the Quebec Court of Appeal.

[40] Ibid. at 86.

> 25a. The Respondent says that the Competition Tribunal is constituted pursuant to the Competition Tribunal Act in a manner contrary to the Constitution Act, 1982, and the Canadian Bill of Rights, and is therefore without jurisdiction to adjudicate in this matter in that, although it is required to act judicially:
>
> (a) the legislative provisions providing for the appointment and removal of members of the Competition Tribunal other than Federal Court judges, pursuant to which appointments have purportedly been made, do not safeguard the independence and impartiality of the Tribunal; and
>
> (b) F. Roseman, a full-time, non-judicial member of the Tribunal, continues as a member of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission under the Combines Investigation Act with statutory responsibilities that are inconsistent with constitutional requirements of neutrality, impartiality and independence that are necessary for the Competition Tribunal to act judicially.[41]

Consequently, an additional date was set aside in July 1990 for argument of the constitutional issue.

For convenience we will first set out the legislative provisions which give rise to this challenge. Subsections 5(2) and (3) of the Competition Tribunal Act[42] provide as follows:

> (2) Each lay member shall be appointed for a term not exceeding seven years and holds office during good behavior but may be removed by the Governor in Council for cause.

---

[41] Amended response of NSC.

[42] R.S.C. 1985 (2d Supp.), c. 19.

> (3) A member of the Tribunal, on the expiration of a first or any subsequent term of office, is eligible to be re-appointed for a further term.

When the Competition Act was extensively amended and the Competition Tribunal was established, it was provided in the amending legislation as follows:

> 60(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the members of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission appointed under the Combines Investigation Act (in this section referred to as the "members" and the "Commission"), while this subsection is in force, continue in office as such and may exercise such of the powers and perform such of the duties and functions as were, before the coming into force of this Act, vested in them as such for the purpose only of completing any inquiry or other matter or proceeding commenced under the Combines Investigation Act or any other Act of Parliament before the coming into force of this section.
>
> (2) For the purposes of any inquiry or other matter or proceeding referred to in subsection (1), the Combines Investigation Act and any other Act of Parliament amended by this Act shall be read as if this Act has not come into force.
>
> (3) While the members continue in office in accordance with this section, they may, if so appointed, hold office as members of the Competition Tribunal, but any person who, pursuant to this subsection, holds more than one office is entitled to be remunerated only in respect of one of those offices.
>
> (4) The Governor in Council may, by proclamation, repeal subsection (1) when he is satisfied that the Commission no longer has any inquiry or other matter or proceeding referred to in subsection (1) before it and that the Commission has reported to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs in respect of all inquiries before it.[43]

---

[43] An Act to establish the Competition Tribunal and to amend the Combines Investigation Act and the Bank Act and other Acts in consequence thereof, R.S.C. 1985 (2d Supp.), c. 19.

The panel of the Tribunal hearing the present case is composed of two judicial members who are judges of the Federal Court- Trial Division, and one "lay member". The two judicial members, Strayer and Teitelbaum JJ., were appointed members of the Tribunal for a period of seven years effective June 30, 1986. The "lay member" is Dr. Frank Roseman who is presently serving under an appointment by the Governor in Council for a term of seven years commencing May 12, 1987.

The challenge to the validity of the Tribunal here is based on the presence of Dr. Roseman on the panel. The contention is that, as a matter of law, the Tribunal panel cannot be validly constituted because: (1) Dr. Roseman does not enjoy sufficient independence because he is appointed for a limited term of seven years but is eligible, under subsection 5(3) of the Competition Tribunal Act, for re-appointment should the Governor in Council so choose, and because he may be removed, according to subsection 5(2) of that Act, by the Governor in Council "for cause"; (2) Dr. Roseman is still a member of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission ("RTPC") in accordance with the provisions of section 60 of the amending Act as quoted above and in that role has executive functions which are "institutionally inconsistent with a duty to act judicially".[44]

---

[44] Memorandum of constitutional argument of NSC at para. 43.

It must be emphasized at the outset that the respondent is not disputing the personal integrity, independence and impartiality of Dr. Roseman in fact. In its factum it states the following:

> The Respondent has complete confidence in the actual personal sense of independence, impartiality and neutrality of Dr. Roseman, just as it does with respect to the other members of the Tribunal. However, it is respectfully submitted, that is not the issue.[45]

It should also be noted that when the respondent first raised this issue before the Tribunal, Dr. Roseman stated for the record that he had had absolutely nothing to do with the work of the RTPC since becoming a member of the Tribunal. He offered to provide an affidavit to this effect but none was requested.

No issue has been raised as to the independence of the judicial members of the Tribunal. They have full independence as judges of the Federal Court. They are appointed for limited terms of up to seven years as members of the Tribunal. This involves only a portion of their time since work at the Tribunal is conducted in place of some Federal Court work and carries no additional remuneration. There is no provision for the removal of judicial members of the

---

[45] Ibid.

Tribunal before their terms as judicial members are completed, provided they continue as judges of the Federal Court.

The Tribunal accepts that it must deal with the constitutional issue to the extent that it is relevant to the hearing of this particular case by this particular panel. We are not in a position such as that of a judge of the Quebec Superior Court in the Alex Couture Inc. case to issue declarations as to the general validity or invalidity of legislation, but we must, in determining the law applicable to the case before us, have regard to all of the law including the law of the constitution. The determination of these questions of law must, in accordance with paragraph 12(1)(a) of the Competition Tribunal Act, be made by the two judicial members of the panel.

It is not suggested that the composition of the present panel in any way conflicts with legislation duly enacted by Parliament: indeed, it is clearly in accordance with the provisions of the Competition Tribunal Act and subsection 60(3) of the amending Act quoted above. Therefore the whole issue is a constitutional one. It involves a question of whether our constitution requires Parliament to provide some prescribed standard of independence for members of a tribunal such as this, such independence to involve some minimum security of tenure and a separation from the exercise of non-judicial functions.

To underline further the nature of the issues involved here, it must be emphasized that the legislation under attack is federal legislation dealing with a federal appointment to a federal tribunal. This has no direct relationship to the creation of provincial tribunals and the constraints which section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867[46] has been held to impose on provincial legislation.

While a variety of alleged constitutional constraints on Parliament were suggested in argument, we believe they may be most conveniently grouped in two categories: implied constraints, and specific constraints arising out of the judicature provisions of the Constitution Act, 1867 (sections 96-101).

2. Implied Constitutional Constraints

The essential argument made here is that the Competition Tribunal performs judicial functions and therefore the constitution implicitly requires that all members of the Tribunal must enjoy some degree of independence akin to that enjoyed by the traditional senior courts.

---

[46] (U.K.), 30 & 31 Viet., c. 3.

It is admitted that there is no express constitutional requirement precisely to this effect. While some reference was made to section 7 and paragraph 11(d) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms,[41] counsel for the respondent conceded that these provisions do not apply to the situation. Section 7 in guaranteeing the right to "life, liberty and security of the person" and the right not to be deprived thereof "except in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice" does not apply: there is no life, liberty or security interest involved in these proceedings which relate to alleged anti-competitive practices by the respondent in the marketing of aspartame. Further, it is clear that as a corporation the respondent cannot invoke section 7.[48]

Paragraph 11(d) of the Charter, guaranteeing the right to a hearing by an "independent and impartial tribunal", only guarantees that right to a "person charged with an offence". The respondent is not charged with an offence in these proceedings.

The respondent has also made reference to paragraph 2(e) of the Canadian Bill of Rights[49] which requires that:

---

[47] Part I of the Constitution Act, 1982, being Schedule B of the Canada Act 1982 (U.K.), 1982, c. 11.

[48] A.G. Quebec v. Irwin Toy Ltd., [1989] 1 S.C.R. 927 at 1003, 1004, 1009.

[49] S.C. 1960, c. 44.

> no law of Canada shall be construed or applied so as to
>
> …
>
> (e) deprive a person of the right to a fair hearing in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice for the determination of his rights and obligations; ....

While this is not a constitutional requirement it does require us to interpret the Competition Tribunal Act so as not to deny the respondent a "fair hearing in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice". But unless that paragraph must be read to have abolished per se a multitude of federal tribunals exercising judicial and quasi-judicial power whose members are not given an independence akin to that of judges, which we do not accept, then it must be understood to permit an examination of the circumstances in each case as to whether fairness or natural justice is being denied. We will come back to this question later.

It was argued that even if the above provisions do not create a specific requirement binding on Parliament in this specific situation, they are but examples of a broader principle which is implicit in the constitution. This principle is also said to be, impliedly, part of the constitution of Canada because of the words of the preamble of the Constitution Act, 1867, which stated that Canada was to have "a constitution similar in principle to that of the United Kingdom." It is said that the independence of the judiciary is part of the constitution of the United Kingdom and therefore the Canadian constitution also requires that anyone who exercises judicial functions must enjoy the kind of independence accorded to judges of senior courts.

It might first be noted that this line of argument proceeds on an idealized view of separation of powers in the United Kingdom. The phrase "separation of powers" should, in relation to the United Kingdom constitution, be understood as descriptive rather than prescriptive. Even as a description it must be seen as a generalisation to which there are many exceptions. While it would not be productive to explore this question in detail, it might be observed, for example, that if Canada fully adopted the model of the constitution of the United Kingdom, the Chief Justice of Canada would, like the Lord Chancellor, be a member of the federal Cabinet and would preside in the Senate. Also, at the time of Confederation, when we inherited the principles of the United Kingdom constitution, the Master of the Rolls (the Chief Justice of the Court of Appeal) was still entitled to sit as a member of the House of Commons.[50]

Further, the United Kingdom constitution does not appear to require that judicial functions be confined to legally trained full-time judges with security of tenure. There are, for example, some 25,000 active justices of the peace in [50] S. Shetreet, Judges on Trial: A Study of the Appointment and Accountability of the English Judiciary (Amsterdam: North-Holland, 1976) at 15.

England and Wales who try criminal cases and who can impose sentences of up to six months. They are mostly lay people who have no security of tenure and who serve part time.[51] Lay juries have long been a feature of both British and Canadian law. All that is required of these lay adjudicators is that they not be biased in the particular case before them. They are not constitutionally disqualified from performing judicial functions. It is also instructive to note that the constitution of the United Kingdom seemingly accommodates the existence of a tribunal similar in many respects to this Tribunal. The Restrictive Practices Court, which deals with issues of the nature before the Tribunal in this case, is composed of five superior court judges and up to ten lay members. The lay members serve for limited terms as fixed by Her Majesty on the recommendation of the Lord Chancellor and may be removed by the Lord Chancellor (himself a member of the government in power) "for inability or misbehaviour" or for conflict of interest. They are also eligible for re-appointment. Unlike this Tribunal, the Restrictive Practices Court is expressly made a "superior court of record".[52]

It must always be remembered that when the Constitution Act, 1867 gave Canada a constitution "similar in principle to that of the United Kingdom" it also included the principle of parliamentary sovereignty which was to be subject only to such limitations as were imposed by other provisions of the constitution. Therefore any implied guarantees of separation of powers or independence of those exercising a judicial function must be weighed against the implied powers of Parliament to provide what it regards as the most effective means for adjudicating difficult economic and social issues.

---

[51] S.A. de Smith, Constitutional and Administrative Law, 5th ed. by H. Street & R. Brazier (Harmondsworth, Eng.: Penguin, 1985) at 369-70, 389.

[52] Restrictive Practices Court Act 1976 (U.K.), 1976, c. 33, s. 1,3. Restrictive Trade Practices Act 1976 (U.K.), 1976, c. 34.

The respondent instead argues that Parliament is precluded by the constitution from conferring any judicial functions on any person or body who or which does not enjoy the kind of individual and institutional independence typical of conventional courts. The terms of this alleged constitutional imperative, however, are drawn by counsel from cases involving the judges of conventional courts and involving other constitutional provisions.[53] They are of little help in defining the constitutional requirements of independence, if such there be, in relation to specialized tribunals such as the Competition Tribunal.

The Tribunal recognizes that most of its functions are of a judicial nature. In substance we determine facts on the basis of evidence and we apply pre-existing law to those facts to render binding decisions. Procedurally it is clear that we must respect the rules of natural justice and fairness in the conduct of our hearings. But we are, as the Federal Court of Appeal has recently pointed out, "an inferior Court".[54] We do not have the implied powers of a superior court and we are subject to the supervision of a superior court.[55]

---

[53] Valente v. R., [1985] 2 S.C.R. 673; R. v. Beauregard, [1986] 2 S.C.R. 56.

If there is any implied constitutional requirement, which we doubt, for Parliament to legislate certain safeguards of independence for such a tribunal, that implied requirement would surely be consonant with the common law requirements traditionally recognized in England and in Canada. These are probably well expressed in paragraph 2(e) of the Canadian Bill of Rights, also relied on by the respondent, which obliges us to interpret an Act of Parliament such as the Competition Tribunal Act as not depriving a person of the right "to a fair hearing in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice". Insofar as those principles of fundamental justice would require independence, they have probably been best summed up by de Grandpre J. in The Committee for Justice and Liberty v. The National Energy Board:

---

[54] Chrysler Canada Ltd. v. Competition Tribunal, (10 July 1990), A-135-90 at 4. This was the position taken by both counsel which the Court accepted.

[55] There is a right of appeal under section 13 of the Competition Tribunal Act from the Tribunal to the Federal Court of Appeal on any question of law and with leave on any question of fact; the Superior Court of Quebec has taken the position, apparently, that the Tribunal is also subject to the review powers of the superior courts of the provinces: see Alex Couture Inc. c. P.G. Canada (6 August 1987), Quebec 200-05-001361-877 (S.C.), granting a stay against the Tribunal, confirmed by the Court of Appeal in P.G. Canada c. Alex Couture Inc., [1987] R.J.Q. 1971.

> The proper test to be applied in a matter of this type was correctly expressed by the Court of Appeal. As already seen by the quotation above, the apprehension of bias must be a reasonable one, held by reasonable and right minded persons, applying themselves to the question and obtaining thereon the required information. In the words of the Court of Appeal, that test is "what would an informed person, viewing the matter realistically and practically -- and having thought the matter through-- conclude. Would he think that is more likely than not that Mr. Crowe, whether consciously or unconsciously, would not decide fairly."[56]

This test has subsequently been applied by the Federal Court of Appeal in at least two cases involving allegations of bias.[57] It will be noted that all of these decisions specifically involved the standard applicable to federal tribunals other than ordinary courts.

Using this test, we do not accept that because of the tenure and re-appointment provisions of the Competition Tribunal Act and the fact that Dr. Roseman is still a member of the RTPC, the presence of Dr. Roseman would create in a reasonable, informed person an apprehension of bias. This imaginary reasonable, informed person would take into account factors such as the following: that each member of the Tribunal, including lay members, must before commencing his duties take an oath that he will "duly and faithfully, and to the best of his skill and knowledge, execute the powers and trusts reposed in him as a member of the Tribunal";[58] that no member can take part in any matter before the Tribunal in which he has a direct or indirect financial interest;[59] that a lay member must be assigned to a particular case by the Chairman who is a judge of the Federal Court and who will, presumably, take into account any valid reason including that of possible bias for not assigning a particular lay member to a particular case; that every panel hearing a case is presided over by a judge of the Federal Court who will also, presumably, be conscious of any apparent bias in a lay member and halt proceedings where he feels such bias to exist;[60] that lay members do not participate in the decision of any question of pure law;[61] and that there is an appeal from the Tribunal to the Federal Court of Appeal as of right on any question of law or mixed law and fact, and with leave on any question of fact alone.[62] Surely a reasonable, informed person would see in these arrangements adequate protection against bias on the part of a given lay member.

---

[56] [1978] 1 S.C.R. 369 at 394. This test has been approved as a constitutional requirement in certain contexts; in Valente v. R, supra note 53 at 689, in respect of the requirement of an "independent and impartial tribunal" under paragraph 11(d) of the Charter; and by Mahoney J. in Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce v. Rifou, [1986] 3 F.C. 486 at 493 (CA.), as a suggested implied constitutional requirement on Parliament in respect of the exercise of its authority to create courts under section 101 of the Constitution Act, 1867.

[57] Sethi v. Minister of Employment and Immigration (1988), 87 N.R. 389 at 393, 31 Admin L.R. 123 at 129-30 (F.CA.), leave to appeal denied (1988), 36 Admin L.R. xln (S.C.C.); Mohammad v. Minister of Employment and Immigration (1988), 91 N.R. 121 at 132 (F.CA.), leave to appeal denied (1989), 101 N.R. 157 (S.C.C.).

---

[58] Competition Tribunal Act, s. 7(1).

[59] Ibid., s. 10(3).

[60] Ibid., s. 10(2).

[61] Ibid., s. 12(1)(a).

[62] Ibid., s. 13.

It is argued by the respondent, of course, that the conditions of tenure of lay members such as Dr. Roseman, given that they are appointed for a term not exceeding seven years and hold office "during good behavior but may be removed by the Governor in Council for cause", combined with the possibility of re-appointment, would make it appear to the reasonable observer that such members would decide for the Director of Investigation and Research and against a respondent in order to avoid dismissal or to create favour in hope of re-appointment. We do not accept that the right of dismissal "for cause" gives the Governor in Council the right to dismiss a member simply because he has decided a case or cases against the Director. In our view, the word "cause" must be interpreted as confined to a reason for removal involving the conduct of the member in relation to his ability to perform his duties properly, and the test of proper performance of his duties cannot depend on whether he decides in favour of the Director rather than a respondent. Instead it must depend on whether he performs his duties "duly and faithfully, and to the best of his skill and knowledge" as he has taken an oath to do.

If there is any ambiguity in the words "for cause" then we must interpret them in a way which is consistent with paragraph 2(e) of the Canadian Bill of Rights, as we are obliged to do by that section, and we should interpret them consistently with the alleged requirement of the constitution that such members be independent.[63] Further we respectfully concur with the view of the Federal Court of Appeal in the Sethi case[64] to the effect that the reasonable, informed observer should not be taken to assume that the government will favour a member of a tribunal who deals unfairly with a party before that tribunal. While it is true that a government officer, the Director of Investigation and Research, is typically a party before the Competition Tribunal, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs who nominates lay members of the Tribunal has a broader responsibility to ensure that the Competition Tribunal Act and the Competition Act are administered in accordance with the law, and the law requires a fair hearing for parties before the Tribunal including a lack of bias on the part of members of the Tribunal.

It is also in effect argued by the respondent that a reasonable, informed person would conclude that by the mere fact of his membership in the RTPC, Dr. Roseman cannot be seen to be an unbiased member of the Competition Tribunal. But this informed observer would also note that by the very words of section 60 of the amending Act, quoted above, which continued Dr. Roseman as a member of the Commission and enabled him to sit on the Tribunal at the same time, it would be impossible for a matter which had been commenced before the Commission, in respect of which it is argued Dr. Roseman might have had some administrative involvement by his membership in the Commission, to come before the Tribunal. Therefore, he could not reasonably be seen to have an institutional bias in respect to any matter coming before the Competition Tribunal. If there were, as counsel hypothesized, a case before the Tribunal closely related to matters which had previously been before the Commission it would be time enough for Dr. Roseman to disqualify himself from that particular case or for the Chairman to refrain from assigning him to it. There is no suggestion that any such circumstance exists in respect of the present case with which we are dealing.

---

[63] See e.g. Slaight Communications Inc. v. Davidson, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 1038 at 1078.

[64] Supra, note 57 at 394.

The other aspect of the argument that Dr. Roseman's membership in the RTPC constitutionally disqualifies him as a member of this Tribunal is really based on some imagined constitutional imperatives. That is, it is contended that if a person may be called upon in another role to exercise executive functions, he cannot legally exercise any judicial functions. We see no support in the law for such a rigid separation of powers, assuming there is no reasonable apprehension of bias in respect of a given case.

We therefore conclude that, even if the legislative provisions authorizing the membership of Dr. Roseman in the Tribunal must be tested against some constitutional standard appropriate for such tribunals, the relevant legislation meets that standard for the purposes of this case. It may well be that longer terms of appointment and clear safeguards as to security of tenure would, in the interest of good public administration, be desirable but we are not persuaded that there is an implied constitutional imperative which prevents Dr. Roseman from sitting on this panel in this case.

3. Express Judicature Provisions of the Constitution Act, 1867

This aspect of the respondent's argument is to the effect that the Tribunal has been given "superior court functions" and that sections 96 to 100 of the Constitution Act, 1867 preclude not only provincial legislatures but also the Parliament of Canada from conferring such functions on any body other than a superior court. In support of this argument the respondent relies essentially on jurisprudence concerning the constitutional limitations on provincial legislatures in respect of the creation of provincially-appointed bodies with powers analogous to those of superior, district and county courts. There are several reasons why this jurisprudence is of little help in determining the power of Parliament in respect of the creation of courts and tribunals.

It must first be observed that the limitation on provincial legislative powers in this respect has usually been tied to the provision in section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867 that the judges of superior, district and county courts are to be appointed by the Governor in Council. Impugned provincial legislation has, of course, provided for appointment by provincial authorities. In the present case, however, there is no such issue as the members of the Competition Tribunal are appointed by the Governor in Council and for that reason such appointments do not per se conflict with section 96.

The significance of section 96 has usually been seen in its keystone role in the distribution of powers -- both executive and legislative -- in respect of the constitution, maintenance, and staffing of the provincial courts. It was an essential part of the Confederation "deal", a compromise whereby provincial courts would administer all provincial laws and most federal laws. For this reason each level of government would have a role in the operation of those courts: the province through its legislative role under section 92, head 14 of the Constitution Act, 1867, Parliament through its role in assigning jurisdiction to such courts and in providing for the salaries of their judges, and the Governor in Council through his power of appointment of judges. It is this rationale which is referred to in McEvoy v. A.G. New Brunswick,[65] a case heavily relied upon by the respondent. In a unanimous judgment, the Court stated:

---

[65] [1983] 1 S.C.R. 704.

> The traditional independence of English Superior Court judges has been raised to the level of a fundamental principle of our federal system by the Constitution Act, 1867 and cannot have less importance and force in the administration of criminal law than in the case of civil matters. Under the Canadian constitution the Superior Courts are independent of both levels of government. The provinces constitute, maintain and organize the Superior Courts; the federal authority appoints the judges. The judicature sections of the Constitution Act, 1867 guarantee the independence of the Superior Courts; they apply to Parliament as well as to the Provincial Legislatures.[66]

From the context it is obvious that this refers only to provincial superior courts, and that the "independence" being referred to is the lack of complete dependence on one level of government or the other which these courts enjoy.

It was also part of the Confederation "deal", however, that Parliament would retain the authority under section 101 of the Constitution Act, 1867 to create other courts for the administration of federal law. That section provides:

> 101. The Parliament of Canada may, notwithstanding anything in this Act, from Time to Time provide for the

---

[66] Ibid. at 720.

> Constitution, Maintenance, and Organization of a General Court of Appeal for Canada, and for the Establishment of any additional Courts for the better Administration of the Laws of Canada. (emphasis added)

It is fundamental to note that Parliament is given power to establish "additional courts for the better administration of the laws of Canada" and that this authority is conferred "notwithstanding anything in this Act". Of these words, Duff C.J. once said:

> Whatever is granted by the words of the section, read and applied as prima facie intended to endow Parliament with power to effect high political objects concerning the self-government of the Dominion ... in the matter of judicature, is to be held and exercised as a plenary power in that behalf with all ancillary powers necessary to enable Parliament to attain its objects fully and completely.[67]

These words were quoted with approval in the judgment of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on appea1.[68]

---

[67] Reference Re Abolition of Appeals to the Privy Council, [1940] S.C.R. 49 at 63-64, affd (sub nom. A.G. Ontario v. A.G. Canada) [1947] A.C. 127 (P.C.).

[68] A.G. Ontario v. A.G. Canada, ibid. at 152.

With all due respect to those of a different view[69] section 101 does not read "notwithstanding some things in this Act". Thus, whatever limitations flow from sections 96 to 100 of the Constitution Act, 1867 with respect to the nature of tribunals which provincial legislatures can create, those limitations cannot apply to Parliament in the exercise of its overriding authority under section 101. Cases such as McEvoy are not relevant because there what was in issue was the hypothetical exercise of Parliament's criminal law jurisdiction under section 91, head 27 of the Constitution Act, 1867. It was held that the exercise of that authority could not override the distribution of legislative and executive powers pertaining to provincial courts as specified in sections 96 to 100. McEvoy did not involve the exercise of Parliament's authority under section 101.

In fact the respondent's case rests, not on distribution of powers arguments which might be relevant if a provincial tribunal were involved, but on some kind of separation of powers which, it contends, applies to federal organs of government. In effect, it is arguing that Parliament cannot exercise its power to create courts under section 101 in a way which confers certain kinds of [69] See e.g. W.R. Lederman, "The Independence of the Judiciary" (1956) 34 Can. Bar Rev. 769, 1139 at 1175-76. It is accepted by the Tribunal, of course, that Parliament could not, for example, use its power under section 101to preclude any judicial review on constitutional issues. That flows, however, not from other provisions of the Constitution Act, 1867, but from the power of judicial review that is implicit in a constitution which limits the powers of governments. Stone, J. in Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce v. Rifou, supra, note 56 at 510-15 also held that Parliament's power under section 101 was not limited as to the nature of the "courts" it could create.

---

judicial functions on bodies other than traditional courts. In support of this proposition the respondent has referred to the statements by two judges of the Federal Court of Appeal in Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce v. Rifou[70]. One of the issues involved in that case was whether an adjudicator under the Canada Labour Code had been validly given 'judicial powers" by Parliament. The three members of the panel hearing the case agreed that the particular powers in question had been validly conferred. However, two members of the panel, Urie and Mahoney JJ., did not accept that Parliament's powers in this respect were completely unfettered. It appears that these comments were obiter dicta, and it was therefore unnecessary for those learned judges to define the source or scope of such a limitation on Parliament's powers. The point upon which they agreed in this respect was that as long as Parliament did not preclude judicial review of the decision of such an adjudicator it would not offend the constitutional limitation. This conclusion supports the validity of the Competition Tribunal as there is not only judicial review of it provided, but full powers of appeal from its decisions.

If however we should be wrong in the conclusion that Parliament is not constrained in the exercise of its powers under section 101 in the matter of courts or tribunals which it can create, we will outline briefly why we believe the traditional limitations imposed on provincial legislatures, if applicable to the establishment of federal tribunals, would not invalidate the inclusion of lay members such as Dr. Roseman in the Competition Tribunal.

---

[70] Supra, note 56.

It should first be underlined that the Tribunal is not a "superior court". This has been recently confirmed by the Federal Court of Appeal in Chrysler Canada Ltd. v. Competition Tribunal[71] with the result that this "inferior tribunal" does not have the implied powers of a superior court. It was held in that case that the Competition Tribunal, unlike a superior court, has no power to punish for a contempt committed ex facie of the Tribunal as no such power was specifically conferred on it.

It is true, of course, that the Tribunal does exercise essentially judicial functions. But that fact by itself does not invalidate the creation of a tribunal other than a superior, district or county court. It is a long recognized principle of administrative law that inferior tribunals can exercise judicial functions: indeed, until recently the supervising writs of prohibition and certiorari were available only in respect of tribunals exercising judicial and quasi-judicial functions. The criteria now accepted for determining whether a provincial court or tribunal is in reality a superior, district or country court and therefore invalidly constituted

---

[71] Supra, note 54.

if not staffed with section 96 judges, are those set out by the Supreme Court of Canada in the Reference Re The Residential Tenancies Act, 1979.[72] Three criteria were identified there, and unless a tribunal comes within all three it does not violate the requirements of sections 96 to 100 of the Constitution Act, 1867. We will refer to the first test only which is:

> ... whether the power or jurisdiction conforms to the power or jurisdiction exercised by superior, district or county courts at the time of Confederation. [73]

We are satisfied that the kind of jurisdiction exercised by the Competition Tribunal in the present case was not exercised by a superior, district or county court at the time of Confederation. In general terms, what we are called upon to decide in this case is whether the respondent has been practising "exclusive dealing", "tied selling", or "anti-competitive acts" in its sale of aspartame in Canada. If we find that the respondent has committed any or all of these acts we must still be satisfied that the result of such acts is that competition is or is likely to be lessened substantially. There was no comparable law at the time of Confederation or for many years thereafter, and provincial, county and district courts at the time of Confederation had no comparable power or jurisdiction to intervene in the market-place as the Tribunal is called upon to do. The issues involved are in many respects essentially economic and require the input of specialized knowledge in a manner unknown to pre-Confederation courts.[74]

---

[72] [1981] 1 S.C.R. 714 at 734-36.

[73] Ibid. at 734.

Further, the contest is, in effect, between an officer of the state and the respondent, the proceedings, though civil in nature, being brought to protect the public interest and not simply to advance the personal interests of the initiating party. In this respect they fall between the civil and criminal law proceedings which were typical of the jurisdiction of pre-Confederation courts. Therefore the Tribunal fails to come within the first criterion of the Residential Tenancies Act case and it is unnecessary to consider the other criteria of that case.

In a sense, the respondent's contention that Parliament can only confer such judicial functions on section 96 courts, or possibly on federal superior courts, fails because it proves too much. It is implicit in such an argument that a "superior court" created by Parliament under section 101 has also to meet any relevant requirements in sections 96-100. The result would be that any federal tribunal to which such judicial functions are assigned could consist only of lawyers, members of the Bars of the respective provinces as prescribed in sections 97 and 98. Further, if they exercise any "superior court functions" they would have to have security of tenure to age 75 in accordance with section 99 and presumably they would have to devote themselves full time to the tribunal. This would not only invalidate a host of existing federal tribunals but would also preclude for the future the inclusion in such tribunals of persons with specialized knowledge (other than that of law) or persons who wish to continue on a part-time basis the careers from which they derive the economic, business, or other special knowledge which they are expected to bring to that tribunal. We find it difficult to believe that the constitution of Canada compels such a result.

---

[74] For a history of the development of competition legislation see the reasons of Dickson J. in A.G. Canada v. Canadian National Transportation, Ltd., [1983] 2 S.C.R. 206 at 250-54.

Conclusion on Constitutional Issues

We therefore conclude that the Tribunal panel hearing this case has been validly constituted.

IX. ORDER

FOR THESE REASONS, THE TRIBUNAL HEREBY ORDERS THAT:

1. In this order "Canadian customer" includes any person or corporation entering into agreements whether inside or outside of Canada for the purchase of aspartame, in respect of any aspartame to be delivered in Canada for use as a food ingredient.

2. The respondent, The NutraSweet Company, shall not enter into, or enforce, any term of an agreement for the supply of aspartame which:

(a) requires a Canadian customer

(i) to buy all of its aspartame requirements from the respondent; or

(ii) to use the respondent's aspartame exclusively or primarily as the sweetener in some or all of the customer's products;

(b) entitles a Canadian customer to receive

(i) a discount or allowance in return for the use of the respondent's trademark or logo on the customer's products or in its advertising; or

(ii) any similar discount or allowance whose purpose is to induce such customer to buy aspartame exclusively from the respondent as an ingredient for any or all of that customer's products;

(c) entitles a Canadian customer

(i) to require the respondent either to meet any price at which aspartame is offered to the Canadian customer by a competitor of the respondent or to allow that customer to be relieved from his contractual obligations to the respondent; or

(ii) to require the respondent to supply aspartame to the Canadian customer on terms as favourable as those on which the respondent supplies aspartame to any of the customer's competitors, unless such requirements is also included in the respondent's contracts for the supply of aspartame to any of that customer's competitors.

DATED at Ottawa, this 4th day of October, 1990.

SIGNED on behalf of the Tribunal by the presiding judicial member.

(s) B.L. Strayer
B.L. Strayer

15

Federal Court Cour fédérale

Date: 20230717

Docket: T-2627-22

Citation: 2023 FC 870

Ottawa, Ontario, July 17, 2023

PRESENT: The Honourable Madam Justice Aylen

BETWEEN:

JANSSEN INC.

Applicant

and

THE MINISTER OF HEALTH AND THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA

Respondents

PUBLIC JUDGMENT AND REASONS
(Confidential version issued on June 21, 2023)

[1] The Applicant, Janssen Inc [Janssen], seeks judicial review of a decision of the Office of Submissions and Intellectual Property [OSIP] on behalf of the Minister of Health dated November 15, 2022. OSIP determined that Canadian Patent No. 3,113,837 [837 Patent] was not eligible to be added to the Patent Register against STELARA® with respect to two supplementary new drug submissions.

[2] While Janssen has raised a number of issues on this application, of central importance are the following two issues: (i) whether OSIP's decision that a supplemental new drug submission approved for additional safety data that could provide a clinician more confidence in prescribing a drug long-term is not a "change in use of the medicinal ingredient" as prescribed by subsection 4(3) of the Patented Medicines (Notice of Compliance) Regulations, SOR/93-133 [PMNOC Regulations] if the approved indication never included a temporal restriction on its use was reasonable; and (ii) whether the Canadian patent filing date requirement in subsection 4(6) of the PMNOC Regulations is ultra vires the Patent Act.

[3] For the reasons that follow, I am not satisfied that Janssen has demonstrated that there is any basis for the Court's intervention. Accordingly, the application for judicial review shall be dismissed in its entirety, with costs.

I. Background

A. Drug Approval under the Food and Drug Regulations

[4] Drug manufacturers who wish to advertise or sell a new drug in Canada must first obtain a Notice of Compliance [NOC] pursuant to the Food and Drug Regulations, CRC, c 870, by filing a drug submission with the Minister.

[5] The Food and Drug Regulations refer to several types of drug submissions, including a new drug submission [NDS] and a supplemental new drug submission [SNDS]. An NDS is typically filed by the innovator drug manufacturer in order to obtain an NOC. An NDS contains a variety of clinical, non-clinical, chemistry and manufacturing data relating to the safety, efficacy and quality of the drug. The Minister evaluates this information to determine whether the drug meets the regulatory requirements in order to initially approve the drug for sale on the Canadian market. After an NOC for an NDS is issued, a manufacturer will typically continue to file information about the drug. Significant changes made to the information or material contained in the NDS are made by filing an SNDS. An NOC is also issued by the Minister for each approved SNDS.

B. Product Monographs

[6] As part of the drug review process for an NDS or SNDS, Health Canada reviews a Product Monograph which is a factual, scientific document that describes a drug product's properties, claims, indications, contra-indications, conditions, dosage, administration and any other relevant information that may be required for the optimal, safe and effective use of the drug. The "Indications and Clinical Use" section of a Product Monograph, among other things, lists the uses for which the drug has been approved through the issuance of an NOC.

C. The PMNOC Regulations

[7] The PMNOC Regulations, which were enacted in 1993 and have subsequently been amended on a number of occasions, were promulgated pursuant to the authority granted to the Governor in Council by subsection 55.2(4) the Patent Act, RSC 1985, c P-4, which provides:

The Governor in Council may make regulations respecting the infringement of any patent that, directly or indirectly, could result or results from the making, construction, use or sale of a patented invention in accordance with subsection (1), including regulations

(a) respecting the conditions that must be fulfilled before a document — including a notice, certificate or permit — concerning any product to which a patent may relate may be issued to any person under any Act of Parliament that regulates the manufacture, construction, use or sale of that product, in addition to any conditions provided for by or under that Act;

(b) respecting the earliest day on which such a document may be issued to a person and the earliest day on which it may take effect, and respecting the manner in which each day is to be determined;

(c) respecting the issuance, suspension or revocation of such a document in circumstances where, directly or indirectly, the document's issuance could result or results in the infringement of a patent;

(d) respecting the prevention and resolution of disputes with respect to the day on which such a document may be issued or take effect;

(e) respecting the prevention and resolution of disputes with respect to the infringement of a patent that could result directly or indirectly from the manufacture, construction, use or sale of a product referred to in paragraph (a);

Le gouverneur en conseil peut, par règlement, régir la contrefaçon de tout brevet qui résulte ou pourrait résulter, de façon directe ou autrement, de la fabrication, de la construction, de l'utilisation ou de la vente, au titre du paragraphe (1), d'une invention brevetée, et notamment :

a) régir les conditions complémentaires nécessaires à la délivrance à quiconque, relativement à un produit auquel peut se rapporter un brevet, de tout titre — avis, certificat, permis ou autre — en vertu de lois fédérales régissant la fabrication, la construction, l'utilisation ou la vente d'un tel produit;

b) régir la première date à laquelle un tel titre peut être délivré et celle à laquelle il peut prendre effet, ainsi que la manière de fixer chacune de ces dates;

c) régir la délivrance, la suspension ou la révocation d'un tel titre lorsque la délivrance de celui-ci entraîne ou pourrait entraîner, de façon directe ou autrement, la contrefaçon d'un brevet;

d) régir la prévention et le règlement de différends portant sur la date à laquelle un tel titre peut être délivré ou prendre effet;

e) régir la prévention et le règlement de différends portant sur la contrefaçon d'un brevet qui pourrait résulter, de façon directe ou autrement, de la fabrication, de la construction, de l'utilisation ou de la vente d'un produit visé à l'alinéa a);

f) régir le règlement de différends portant sur la contrefaçon d'un brevet qui résulte, de façon directe ou autrement, de la fabrication, de la

(f) respecting the resolution of disputes with respect to the infringement of a patent that results directly or indirectly from the manufacture, construction, use or sale of such a product;

(g) conferring rights of action with respect to disputes referred to in any of paragraphs (d) to (f);

(h) restricting or excluding the application of other rights of action under this Act or another Act of Parliament to disputes referred to in any of paragraphs (d) to (f);

(i) designating the court of competent jurisdiction in which a proceeding with respect to rights of action referred to in paragraph (g) is to be heard;

(j) respecting such proceedings, including the procedure of the court in the matter, the defences that may be pleaded, the remedies that may be sought, the joinder of parties and of rights of action and the consolidation of other proceedings, the decisions and orders the court may make and any appeals from those decisions and orders; and construction, de l'utilisation ou de la vente d'un tel produit;

(k) specifying who may be an interested person for the purposes of subsection 60(1) with respect to disputes referred to in paragraph (e).

g) conférer des droits d'action concernant les différends visés à l'un ou l'autre des alinéas d) à f); h) limiter ou interdire le recours à d'autres droits d'action prévus par toute loi fédérale concernant les différends visés à l'un ou l'autre des alinéas d) à f); i) désigner le tribunal compétent à l'égard des procédures résultant de l'exercice des droits d'action visés à l'alinéa g);

j) régir ces procédures, notamment la procédure devant ce tribunal, les moyens de défense qui peuvent être invoqués, les conclusions qui peuvent être recherchées, la jonction de parties, la réunion de droits d'action ou d'autres procédures, les décisions et ordonnances qui peuvent être rendues ainsi que les appels de ces décisions et ordonnances;

k) préciser qui peut être un intéressé pour l'application du paragraphe 60(1) dans le cadre des différends visés à l'alinéa e).

[8] As confirmed by the Supreme Court of Canada in AstraZeneca Canada Inc v Canada (Minister of Health), 2006 SCC 49 at paragraph 12, the PMNOC Regulations lie at the intersection of two regulatory systems with sometimes conflicting objectives – (i) the law governing the approval of new drugs (Food and Drug Act) with the objective of encouraging the bringing of safe and effective medicines to market to advance the nation's health; and (ii) patent protection provided to innovators under the Patent Act.

[9] The Regulatory Impact Analysis Statement [RIAS] related to the 2006 amendments to the PMNOC Regulations describes the balancing function as follows:

> The Government's pharmaceutical patent policy seeks to balance effective patent enforcement over new and innovative drugs with the timely market entry of their lower priced generic competitors. The current manner in which that balance is realized was established in 1993, with the enactment of Bill C-91, the Patent Act Amendment Act, 1992, S.C. 1993, c. 2.
>
> On the one end of the balance lies subsection 55.2(1) of the Patent Act, better known as the "early-working" exception. In the pharmaceutical industry, early-working allows second and subsequent entry drug manufacturers (typically generic drug companies) to use a patented innovative drug for the purpose of seeking approval to market a competing version of that drug. Normally, conduct of this kind would constitute patent infringement but an exception has been made so that generic drug companies can complete Health Canada's regulatory approval process while the equivalent innovative drug is still under patent, in order to be in a position to enter the market as soon as possible after patent expiry. The generic pharmaceutical industry estimates that early-working can accelerate the market entry of its products in Canada by some three to five years.
>
> The PM(NOC) Regulations represent the other half of the balance. As explained in the original Regulatory Impact Analysis Statement (RIAS) which accompanied their passage in 1993, in creating the early-working exception, Bill C-91 removed an exclusive right otherwise available to patentees and the PM(NOC) Regulations are therefore required "…to ensure that this new exception to patent infringement is not abused by generic drug applicants seeking to sell their products during the term of the competitor's patent…" The PM(NOC) Regulations do this by linking Health Canada's ability to approve a generic drug to the patent status of the equivalent innovative product the generic seeks to copy. Under the current scheme, a generic drug company which compares its product directly or indirectly with a patented, innovative drug in order to > establish the former's safety and efficacy and secure marketing approval from Health Canada (which comes in the form of a "notice of compliance" or 'NOC") must make one of two choices. It can either agree to await patent expiry before obtaining its NOC or make an allegation justifying immediate market entry that is either accepted by the innovator or upheld by the court.

>
> Thus, while early-working is intended to promote the timely market entry of generic drugs by allowing them to undergo the regulatory approval process in advance of patent expiry, the PM(NOC) Regulations are intended to provide effective patent enforcement by ensuring the former does not result in the actual issuance of a generic NOC until patent expiry or such earlier time as the court or innovator considers justified having regard to the generic company's allegations. Despite their seemingly competing policy objectives, it is important that neither instrument be considered in isolation as the intended policy can only be achieved when the two operate in a balanced fashion.

D. The Patent Register

[10] The Minister maintains a Patent Register, which is a list of patents and certifications of supplementary protection associated with each approved drug. Pursuant to subsections 3(2) to 3(8) of the PMNOC Regulations, the Minister has the discretion to maintain the Patent Register, including the ability to add or delete patents in various prescribed circumstances.

[11] A "first person" who files an NDS or SNDS may, pursuant to subsection 4(1) of the PMNOC Regulations, submit to the Minister a patent for listing on the Patent Register in respect of the drug for which approval is sought. A patent will only be added to the Patent Register if the Minister is satisfied that the relevant regulatory criteria are met.

[12] In the case of an SNDS, paragraph 4(3)(c) sets out the product specificity requirements that must be met for a patent to be listed on the Patent Register:

| | |
|---|---|
| (3) A patent on a patent list in relation to a supplement to a new drug submission is eligible to be added to the register if the supplement is for a change in formulation, a change in dosage form or a change in use of the medicinal ingredient, and… in the case of a change in use of the medicinal ingredient, the patent contains a claim for the changed use of the medicinal ingredient that has been approved through the issuance of a notice of compliance in respect of the supplement. | (3) Est admissible à l'adjonction au registre tout brevet, inscrit sur une liste de brevets, qui se rattache au supplément à une présentation de drogue nouvelle visant une modification de la formulation, une modification de la forme posologique ou une modification de l'utilisation de l'ingrédient médicinal, s'il contient, selon le cas :c) dans le cas d'une modification d'utilisation de l'ingrédient médicinal, une revendication de l'utilisation modifiée de l'ingrédient médicinal, l'utilisation ayant été approuvée par la délivrance d'un avis de conformité à l'égard du supplément. |

[13] Subsection 4(4) of the PMNOC Regulations prescribe what must be included in a patent list:

| | |
|---|---|
| A patent list shall contain the following:(a) an identification of the new drug submission or the supplement to a new drug submission to which the list relates;(b) the medicinal ingredient, brand name, dosage form, strength, route of administration and use set out in the new drug submission or the | La liste de brevets comprend :a) l'identification de la présentation de drogue nouvelle ou du supplément à la présentation de drogue nouvelle qui s'y rattachent;b) l'ingrédient médicinal, la marque nominative, la forme posologique, la concentration, la voie d'administration et l'utilisation prévus à la | supplement to a new drug submission to which the list relates;

(c) for each patent on the list, the patent number, the filing date of the patent application in Canada, the date of grant of the patent and the date on which the term limited for the duration of the patent will expire under section 44 or 45 of the Patent Act;(d) for each patent on the list, a statement that the first person who filed the new drug submission or the supplement to a new drug submission to which the list relates is the owner of the patent,

has an exclusive licence to the patent or to a certificate of supplementary protection in which that patent is set out, or

(iii) has obtained the consent of the owner of the patent to its inclusion on the list;

(e) the address in Canada for service, on the first person, of a notice of allegation referred to in paragraph 5(3)(a) or the name and address in Canada of another person on whom service may be made with the same effect as if service were made on the first person; and

(f) a certification by the first person that the information submitted under this subsection is accurate and that each patent on the list meets the eligibility requirements of subsection (2) or (3).

présentation ou au supplément qui s'y rattachent;

c) à l'égard de chaque brevet qui y est inscrit, le numéro de brevet, la date de dépôt de la demande de brevet au Canada, la date de délivrance de celui-ci et la date d'expiration du brevet aux termes des articles 44 ou 45 de la Loi sur les brevets;

d) à l'égard de chaque brevet qui y est inscrit, une déclaration portant que la première personne qui a déposé la présentation de drogue nouvelle ou le supplément à une présentation de drogue nouvelle qui s'y rattache :

(i) soit en est le propriétaire,

(ii) soit en détient la licence exclusive ou détient une telle licence à l'égard d'un certificat de protection supplémentaire qui mentionne ce brevet,

(iii) soit a obtenu le consentement du propriétaire pour l'inscrire sur la liste;

e) l'adresse au Canada de la première personne aux fins de signification de l'avis d'allégation visé à l'alinéa 5(3)a) ou les nom et adresse au Canada d'une autre personne qui peut en recevoir signification comme s'il s'agissait de la première personne elle-même;

f) une attestation de la première personne portant que les renseignements fournis aux termes du présent paragraphe sont exacts et que chaque brevet qui y est inscrit est conforme aux conditions d'admissibilité prévues aux paragraphes (2) ou (3).

[14] The PMNOC Regulations also prescribe timing requirements related to patent listing, which depend on when the patent is issued. Specifically, subsections 4(5) and (6) provide:

(5) Subject to subsection (6), a first person who submits a patent list must do so at the time the person files the new drug submission or the supplement to a new drug submission to which the patent list relates.

(6) A first person may, after the date of filing of a new drug submission or a supplement to a new drug submission, and within 30 days after the issuance of a patent that was issued on the basis of an application that has a filing date in Canada that precedes the date of filing of the submission or supplement, submit a patent list, including the information referred to in subsection (4), in relation to the submission or supplement.

(5) Sous réserve du paragraphe (6), la première personne qui présente une liste de brevets doit le faire au moment du dépôt de la présentation de drogue nouvelle ou du supplément à une présentation de drogue nouvelle qui s'y rattachent.

(6) La première personne peut, après la date de dépôt de la présentation de drogue nouvelle ou du supplément à une présentation de drogue nouvelle et dans les trente jours suivant la délivrance d'un brevet faite au titre d'une demande de brevet dont la date de dépôt au Canada est antérieure à celle de la présentation ou du supplément, présenter une liste de brevets, à l'égard de cette présentation ou de ce supplément, qui contient les renseignements visés au paragraphe (4).

[15] As such, only patents that have a filing date in Canada before the filing date of an SNDS are eligible to be added to the Patent Register.

[16] For the purpose of the administration of the patent list, the Minister utilizes a form entitled "Form IV" that the Minister requires be completed by each first person. Form IV states in its header in bold to "COMPLETE ONE FORM PER PATENT PER SUBMISSION".

[17] Having a patent listed on the Patent Register in relation to a particular drug affords significant protections to an innovator. If a second person files a drug submission that directly or indirectly compares their drug with, or makes reference to, a first person's drug that is marketed in Canada under an NOC and which has one or more patents listed on the Patent Register, the second person must, pursuant to subsection 5(1) and (2.1) of the PMNOC Regulations, address each listed patent. One manner of addressing a listed patent is to serve on the first person a notice of allegation [NOA], pursuant to subsection 5(2.1)(c), alleging that the listed patent is invalid or would not be infringed by the second person making, constructing, using or selling their drug product. The first person then has the right, within 45 days of being served with a NOA, to bring an action against the second person pursuant to subsection 6(1) seeking a declaration that making, constructing, using or selling of the second person's drug product in accordance with the second person's drug submission would infringe the listed patent(s) addressed in the NOA. When such an action is brought, the Minister is prohibited from issuing a NOC to the second person for 24 months from the date of commencement of the action or such other periods of time prescribed by subsection 7(1) of the PMNOC Regulations.

[18] However, not all patents will receive the aforementioned protection afforded by the regulatory regime simply by relating to a drug for which an NOC has been issued. Only those patents that meet the product specificity and timing requirements of the PMNOC Regulations will benefit from the regime's protections.

E. STELARA®

[19] STELARA® is a Schedule D biologic drug containing the medicinal ingredient ustekinumab [STELARA]. First approved in Canada in December of 2008 for the treatment of psoriasis, STELARA has since gained approvals for several other indications including its use to treat plaque psoriasis, active psoriatic arthritis and moderately to severely active Crohn's disease.

[20] There are currently no patents listed on the Patent Register in respect of STELARA. Canadian Patent No. 2,418,961 was previously listed on November 17, 2009, but expired on August 9, 2021.

[21] Health Canada's "Submissions Under Review" page shows at least one company has filed a submission for approval of a biosimilar of STELARA in January of 2023.

(1) SNDS 244739

[22] On February 15, 2019, the Applicant filed SNDS 224739 [SNDS 739] seeking approval for a new use of STELARA for the treatment of adult patients with moderately to severely active ulcerative colitis and updates to the Product Monograph. Supporting studies were submitted, including approximately one year of data (44 weeks) from a UNIFI-M maintenance study.

[23] On January 23, 2020, the Minister approved the use of STELARA for the treatment of ulcerative colitis, issuing an NOC for SNDS 739. The NOC stated, under the heading "Reasons for Supplement":

> New indication: The treatment of adult patients with moderately to severely active ulcerative colitis who have had an inadequate response with, lost response to, or were intolerant to either conventional therapy or a biologic or have medical contraindications to such therapies.

[24] The "Dosage and Administration" section of the approved Product Monograph included a recommended induction treatment regimen for ulcerative colitis, as well as a recommended maintenance dose regimen. No temporal limitation on the duration of treatment was included in the Product Monograph. Put differently, the NOC for SNDS 739 did not approve the use of STELARA to treat ulcerative colitis for a limited period of time.

(2) SNDS 244670

[25] On October 1, 2020, Janssen filed SNDS 244670 [SNDS 670] seeking to update the Product Monograph of STELARA with updated two-year safety and efficacy data (96 weeks) from the same on-going UNIFI-M study on its use for ulcerative colitis (which use had been previously approved with SNDS 739).

[26] The Clinical Evaluation Executive Summary notes, under the heading "Subject", that SNDS 670 is to "update the product monograph to include results from the long-term extensions of two Phase 3 studies for the treatment of adult patients with moderately to severely active Crohn's disease or ulcerative colitis".

[27] Both the General Note to Reviewer and Regulatory Executive Summary notes the purpose of the submission was to provide data on safety and efficacy of STELARA through five years of treatment in subjects with Crohn's disease and two years of treatment in subjects with ulcerative colitis, including relevant data in regard to a post-marketing adverse drug reaction for hypersensitivity vasculitis.

[28] Janssen indicated in the Product Information Regulatory Process Form for SNDS 670 that "there [were] no changes to the indication/Use/Dosage (including the maximum daily dose)".

[29] On September 9, 2021, Health Canada issued an NOC for SNDS 670. Under the heading "Reason for Supplement", the NOC states "Updates to the Product Monograph". The approval resulted in two changes to the Product Monograph, as shown in bold and underlined below:

| Product Monograph (SNDS 739) | Product Monograph (SNDS 670) |
|---|---|
| (1) In the "Clinical Trial Adverse Drug Reactions" section addressing adverse drug reactions reported in studies related to ulcerative colitis, on page 12: | |
| The safety of STELARA®/STELARA® I.V. was evaluated in two randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled studies (UNIFI-I and UNIFI-M) in 960 adult patients with moderately to severely active ulcerative colitis. The overall safety profile was similar for patients | The safety of STELARA®/STELARA® I.V. was evaluated in two randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled studies (UNIFI-I and UNIFI-M) in 960 adult patients with moderately to severely active ulcerative colitis. The overall safety profile was similar for patients with psoriasis, psoriatic |

| | |
|---|---|
| with psoriasis, psoriatic arthritis, Crohn's disease and ulcerative colitis. | arthritis, Crohn's disease and ulcerative colitis.The safety profile remaining generally consistent throughout the Week 96 safety analysis. |
| (2) In the "Study and Demographics and Trial Design" section on page 58: | |
| The maintenance study (UNIFI-M), evaluated 523 patients who achieved clinical response at Week 8 following the administration of STELARA® I.V. in UNIFI-I. These patients were randomized to receive a subcutaneous maintenance regimen of either 90 mg of STELARA® every 8 weeks, 90 mg STELARA® every 12 weeks or placebo for 44 weeks. Randomization was stratified by clinical remission status at maintenance baseline (yes/no), oral corticosteroid use at maintenance baseline (yes/no), and induction treatment.The primary endpoint was the proportion of patients in clinical remission at Week 44. Secondary endpoints included the proportion of patients maintaining clinical response through Week 44, the proportion of patients with improvement of endoscopic appearance of the mucosa at Week 44, the proportion of patients with corticosteroid-free clinical remission at Week 44, and the proportion of patients maintaining clinical remission through Week 44 in patients who achieved clinical remission 8 weeks after induction. | The maintenance study (UNIFI-M), evaluated 523 patients who achieved clinical response at Week 8 following the administration of STELARA® I.V. in UNIFI-I. These patients were randomized to receive a subcutaneous maintenance regimen of either 90 mg of STELARA® every 8 weeks, 90 mg STELARA® every 12 weeks or placebo for 44 weeks. Randomization was stratified by clinical remission status at maintenance baseline (yes/no), oral corticosteroid use at maintenance baseline (yes/no), and induction treatment.The primary endpoint was the proportion of patients in clinical remission at Week 44. Secondary endpoints included the proportion of patients maintaining clinical response through Week 44, the proportion of patients with improvement of endoscopic appearance of the mucosa at Week 44, the proportion of patients with corticosteroid-free clinical remission at Week 44, and the proportion of patients maintaining clinical remission through Week 44 in patients who achieved clinical remission 8 weeks after induction. Patients who completed the maintenance study through Week 44 were eligible to continue treatment through Week 96. |

| | |
|---|---|

(3) The 837 Patent

[30] On September 24, 2019, Janssen filed in Canada a patent application for the 837 Patent. The 837 Patent, entitled "Safe and effective method of treating ulcerative colitis with anti-IL 12/IL23 antibody", claims priority from three U.S. provisional patents applications, the earliest one having been filed on September 24, 2018.

[31] The 837 Patent contains 68 claims generally directed toward the use of an anti-IL-12/IL-23p40 antibody (including ustekinumab) for the treatment of moderately to severely active ulcerative colitis, where the subject failed to respond to or was intolerant of at least one enumerated therapy or the subject demonstrated corticosteroid dependence and compositions for use in such treatment.

[32] The claims of the 837 Patent are directed to the treatment of ulcerative colitis, including numerous claims where the clinical response of the subject "continues at least 44 weeks after week 0".

[33] The 837 Patent was issued on July 12, 2022.

[34] On July 25, 2022, Janssen sought to list the 837 Patent in relation to SNDS 670 by submitting three Form IVs for the 837 Patent (one for each DIN).

[35] No Form IV was ever submitted for the 837 Patent in relation to SNDS 739. The deadline by which Janssen could have submitted a patent list for SNDS 739 (as prescribed by subsection 4(6) of the PMNOC Regulations) was August 11, 2022. There is no evidence in the record as to why this was not done.

F. OSIP's Preliminary Decision

[36] By letter dated July 29, 2022, OSIP acknowledged receipt of Janssen's patent lists for the 837 Patent in relation to SNDS 670. OSIP advised Janssen, in detail, of the basis for its preliminary view that SNDS 670 was not approved for a change in use of the medicinal ingredient and as such, SNDS 670 did not provide a basis to list the 837 Patent. Even if SNDS was considered to be approved for a change in use of a medicinal ingredient, OSIP advised that its preliminary view was that the 837 Patent did not contain a claim to the very change sought for approval in the submission.

[37] OSIP also noted the existence of SNDS 739 and that had a patent list been submitted in respect of the 837 Patent and SNDS 739, it would not meet the timing requirements of subsection 4(6), as the filing date for SNDS 739 was February 15, 2019 and the date of filing in Canada of the 837 Patent was subsequent to that date.

[38] OSIP requested that Janssen provide representations as to the eligibility of the 837 Patent for listing on the patent register in respect of SNDS 670.

G. Janssen's Response to the Preliminary Decision

[39] By letter dated September 14, 2022, Janssen provided detailed submissions in response to OSIP's request. With respect to SNDS 670, Janssen asserted that the 837 Patent claims [redacted] are a new method of use approved through SNDS 670, which is the submission against which Janssen originally sought listing on July 19, 2022. Janssen asserted that it was of the view that the 837 Patent is also listable as against SNDS 739 and that there are in fact no timing issues under subsection 4(6) as the only rational date to be used is the claim date and not the Canadian filing date. Janssen asserted that the use of the Canadian filing date in the PMNOC Regulations was illogical, arbitrary and ultra vires the scheme of the Patent Act and of the PMNOC Regulations themselves. Janssen asserted that OSIP ought to apply the intent of the PMNOC Regulations with respect to the timing of the patent and the submission under subsection 4(6) and when the claim date is properly applied, the 837 Patent is listable.

[40] In relation to Janssen's request that the 837 Patent also be listed in relation to SNDS 739, Janssen stated at footnote 2 of its submission:

> As a patent list was already submitted with respect to the '837 Patent within the requisite 30 days of its issuance we trust that the OPML will not consider this request to be out of time under subsection 4(6) of the Regulations. Further, we understand that the OPML has already considered the listing of the '837 Patent against SNDS 224739, as reflected in the Letter. If the OPML rejects this request, then we respectfully request that the OPML advise us of the reason and allow us an opportunity to respond.

[41] For reasons unknown to the Court, Janssen did not include a Form IV with its submission in relation to SNDS 739 and the 837 Patent.

[42] In support of its assertion that the 837 Patent claims [redacted] are a new method of use approved through SNDS 670, Janssen asserted that a clinician reviewing the new Product Monograph approved with SNDS 670 would change their prescribing practices, especially a clinician who may have been otherwise hesitant to prescribe STELARA beyond 44 weeks. Janssen supported this assertion regarding a clinician's understanding of the new additions to the Product Monograph with an expert statement from Dr. Brian Feagan and two publications.

[43] With respect to the publications, Janssen made the following submissions:

> A clinician's understanding of the additions to the Product Monograph is also reflected in publications reporting on the data collected for the treatment of patients with ustekinumab up to Week 96, including Panaccione R, et al. Ustekinumab is effective and safe for ulcerative colitis through 2 years of maintenance therapy. Aliment Pharmacol Ther. 2020; 52: 1658-1675 ("Pannaccione (2020)"; enclosed). Panaccione (2020) concluded that the "efficacy of ustekinumab in patients with [ulcerative colitis] was sustained through 92 weeks" (abstract), that "[r]ates of symptomatic remission were maintained from Week 44 through Week 92" (page 1671), and that "[t]he results reported here in patients with moderately-to-severely active [ulcerative colitis], together with both clinical trial and registry data confirm the positive long-term efficacy and safety profile of ustekinumab-treated patients" (page 1672). With respect to safety, Panaccione (2020) concluded that "[n]o new safety signals were observed" (abstract) and that "[t]he safety profile observed for ustekinumab in the second year of maintenance treatment was consistent with that reported through the first year during the maintenance study and with the established ustekinumab safety profile" (page 1672). […]
>
> The importance of safety data for ustekinumab beyond one year was also stated in an integrated safety study, Sandborn WJ, et al. Safety > of Ustekinumab in Inflammatory Bowel Disease: Pooled Safety Analysis Results from Phase 2/3 Studies. Inflamm Bowel Dis. 2021; 27(7): 994-1007 ("Sandborn (2021)", enclosed). Sandborn (2021) pooled data from six studies, including the UNIFI study for ulcerative colitis, through one year. The authors concluded (pages 1006-7):

>
> > Though these and previously reported findings are reassuring, longer-term longitudinal data and larger (eg, real-world observational) studies are ongoing to confirm current findings of no increased malignancy risk with IL-12/23 inhibition.
> >
> > …
> >
> > There are several limitations to this study. In a lifetime disease, 1 year of treatment is relatively short; longer-term data will be needed to further support these findings. This may limit comparisons, especially for long latency events like malignancies or certain infections. Although the data contained in this article are only from clinical trials, limitations on interpretation may differ from outcomes observed in real-world.
>
> The information added to the Stelara Product Monograph via SNDS 24470 thus provided clinicians with support of the safety findings made one year after that Sandborn (2021) indicated was required.
>
> [Emphasis in original.]

[44] With respect to the expert statement of Dr. Feagan, Dr. Feagan is a gastroenterologist at London Health Sciences Centre and a Professor of Medicine at the Schulich School of Medicine and Dentistry at Western University, with a research focus on the design, conduct and execution of large-scale randomized controlled trials in Crohn's disease and ulcerative colitis. Dr. Feagan's mandate was to: (i) provide brief background information on ulcerative colitis and its treatment options (including STELARA); and (ii) to advise how, if at all, a clinician's prescribing practices would be influenced by the additions to the STELARA Product Monograph arising from the NOC for SNDS 670. Dr. Feagan provided no evidence in relation to the aforementioned publications relied upon by Janssen.

[45] While Janssen did not make specific submissions related to Dr. Feagan's evidence (other than as detailed in paragraph 42 above), Dr. Feagan opined that community gastroenterologists (who are gastroenterologists not located in a teaching or research hospital) would "take comfort" in the additional information (as it would "alleviate fears relating to potential side effects") and would be more willing to prescribe or be more comfortable prescribing STELARA based on the additional information contained in the Product Monograph.

II. The Decision under Review

[46] On November 15, 2022, OSIP provided Janssen with its final decision. OSIP found that SNDS 670 was not approved for a change in formulation, change in dosage form or change in use of the medicinal ingredient and did not present an opportunity to list a patent on the Patent Register in accordance with subsection 4(3) of the PMNOC Regulations. OSIP noted that SNDS 670 amended STELARA's Product Monograph to include updated safety and efficacy data generated through an on-going study, which was the very same on-going study that had been previously included in the Product Monograph for SNDS 739. OSIP considered the text, context and purpose of subsection 4(3) of the PMNOC Regulations, the relevant jurisprudence and the submissions of Janssen, before concluding that updating the safety information in the product monograph did not result in a change in use in SNDS 670.

[47] OSIP went on to examine whether the 837 Patent would have been eligible for listing if one were to assume that SNDS 670 was in fact for a change in use. However, OSIP found that the 837 Patent did not contain a claim to the very change that Janssen alleged was approved by the NOC for SNDS 670 as required by subsection 4(3).

[48] In relation to SNDS 739, OSIP determined that Janssen had not filed a patent list to add the 837 Patent to the Patent Register against SNDS 739. The OSIP went on to find that, even if Janssen had submitted a patent list to add the 837 Patent against SNDS 739, Janssen would not have met the timing requirements in subsection 4(6) of the PMNOC Regulations, as the 837 Patent application was filed in Canada after the filing date of SNDS 739. OSIP held that to consider the claim date/priority date (as opposed to the Canadian filing date) as the appropriate date when assessing the application of subsection 4(6) as urged by Janssen would be to ignore the clear words of the PMNOC Regulations, circumvent the strict timing requirements and undo the balance struck by the PMNOC Regulations and subsection 55.2(1) of the Patent Act.

III. Issue and Standard of Review

[49] This application raises the following issues:

A. Whether OSIP's decision not to add the 837 Patent to the Patent Register in relation to SNDS 670 and SNDS 739 was unreasonable and in particular:

i. Whether OSIP's determination that SNDS 670 was not approved for a change in use of the medicinal ingredient was unreasonable;

ii. Whether OSIP's determination that the 837 Patent was not eligible to be added to the Patent Register as it did not meet the product specificity requirements of paragraph 4(3)(c) was unreasonable; and

iii. Whether OSIP's determination that Janssen failed to provide a patent list in relation to SNDS 739 was unreasonable.

B. Whether the Canadian filing date requirement in subsection 4(6) of the PMNOC Regulations is ultra vires the Patent Act.

[50] The parties agree and I concur that the first issue is reviewable on a standard of reasonableness. When reviewing for reasonableness, the Court must determine whether the decision under review, including both its rationale and outcome, is transparent, intelligible and justified. A reasonable decision is one that is based on an internally coherent and rational chain of analysis and that is justified in relation to the facts and law that constrain the decision-maker [see Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration) v Vavilov, 2019 SCC 65 at paras 15, 85]. The Court must be able to trace the decision maker's reasoning without encountering any fatal flaws in the overarching logic and the Court must be satisfied that there is a line of analysis within the given reasons that could reasonably lead the decision maker from the evidence before it to the conclusion at which it arrived [see Vavilov, supra at para 102].

[51] A number of elements will generally be relevant in evaluating whether a given decision is reasonable, including the governing statutory scheme, other relevant statutory or common law, the principles of statutory interpretation, the evidence before the decision maker and facts of which the decision maker may take notice, the submissions of the parties, the past practices and decisions of the decision maker and the potential impact of the decision on the individual to whom it applies [see Vavilov, supra at para 106].

[52] Where a decision involves a matter of statutory interpretation, the Court does not undertake a de novo analysis of the question. Rather, the Court still undertakes a reasonableness review, examining the administrative decision as a whole, including the reasons provided and the outcome reached. An administrative decision maker's task is to interpret the contested provision in a manner consistent with the text, context and purpose, applying its particular insight into the statutory scheme at issue. The modern principles of statutory interpretation apply equally when an administrative decision maker interprets a provision. Where the meaning of a statutory provision is disputed in administrative proceedings, the decision maker must demonstrate in its reasons that it was alive to these essential elements [see Vavilov, supra at para 115-116, 120, 121].

[53] The Court will intervene only if it is satisfied there are sufficiently serious shortcomings in the decision such that it cannot be said to exhibit the requisite degree of justification, intelligibility and transparency [see Adenjij-Adele v Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration), 2020 FC 418 at para 11].

[54] With respect to the second issue, both parties agree that the issue of whether the Canadian filing date requirement in subsection 4(6) of the PMNOC Regulations is ultra vires the Patent Act is reviewable on a reasonableness standard. However, they disagree as to whether, as the Respondent asserts, the pre-Vavilov case law (and in particular, Katz Group Canada Inc v Ontario (Health and Long-Term Care), 2013 SCC 64) remains instructive and applicable to vires challenges to regulations.

[55] Prior to Vavilov, the Supreme Court of Canada outlined the method to determine if regulations were ultra vires in Katz, supra at paragraphs 24 to 28. The Katz approach requires the party challenging the vires of the regulations to show that the regulations (which benefit from a presumption of validity) are inconsistent with the purposes and objectives of the enabling statute or the scope of the statutory mandate when read as a whole. The three parts to the Katz rule are: (1) the challenging party bears the burden of proof; (2) the Court is directed to take a broad and purposive approach to interpreting the challenged regulation and the enabling statute, consistent with general guidance on statutory interpretation; and (3) the challenging party must overcome the presumption that the regulations are valid, which can only be done by establishing that the regulations are irrelevant, extraneous or completely unrelated to objectives of the governing statute. In particular, the Supreme Court directs that a vires challenge does not involve assessing the policy merits of the regulations as the motives or other considerations (political, economic, social or partisan) are irrelevant.

[56] After Vavilov established a general framework for review of administrative decisions, this prompted a debate regarding the extent to which the principles established in Katz were affected by Vavilov. Some decisions of this Court continued to be guided by the Katz approach, mindful of this debate [see Innovative Medicines Canada v Canada (Attorney General), 2020 FC 725 at paras 66-72; Bertrand v Acho Dene Koe First Nation, 2021 FC 287 at paras 73-76].

[57] The Federal Court of Appeal weighed into this debate in Portnov v Canada (Attorney General), 2021 FCA 171. Justice Stratas, writing for the Court, explained how the approach outlined in Katz had been overtaken by Vavilov and thus, the Federal Court of Appeal did not follow the guidance of Katz but applied reasonableness review as per Vavilov [see Portnov, supra at paras 18-28].

[58] The Federal Court of Appeal weighed in again in International Air Transport Association v Canadian Transportation Agency, 2022 FCA 211, also considering the jurisprudence on whether courts reviewing the validity of regulations should apply a Vavilov standard of review analysis or the ultra vires doctrine from Katz. In International Air Transport Association, the appellant challenged numerous provisions of new regulations (in particular, challenging the Minister's Direction requiring the Agency to make regulations in respect of tarmac delays of three hours or less) on the basis that they exceeded the Agency's authority under the Canada Transportation Act. The Federal Court of Appeal discussed the analytical framework in the Dunsmuir era, wherein the reviewing court interpreted the statutory grant of authority to determine whether it fell within or outside its ambit. Justice de Montigny, writing for the Court, goes on to discuss the judicial review framework that was later applied in cases such as Katz, concluding that Vavilov did not bring clarity to the confusion around what framework to apply in the context of delegated legislation. Further, the References re Greenhouse Gas Pollution Pricing Act, 2021 SCC 11, wherein the Supreme Court reviewed the validity of regulations at issue, made no mention of the ultra vires doctrine or Vavilov and reasonableness review. The Federal Court of Appeal noted that the issue is far from settled:

> [188] Unfortunately, Vavilov did not bring much clarity to that confusion. Because the Supreme Court purported to adopt the reasonableness standard as the default standard of review to all administrative actions, most intermediate appeal courts adopted the view that delegated legislation would henceforth be reviewed against that standard: see, for example, 1193652 B.C. Ltd. v. New Westminster (City), 2021 BCCA 176 at paras. 48-59; Portnov v. Canada (Attorney General), 2021 FCA 171; Canadian Association of Refugee Lawyers v. Canada (Citizenship and Immigration), 2020 FCA 196 [2021] 1 F.C.R. 271; Paul Daly, "Regulations and Reasonableness Review" (January 29, 2021), online (blog): Administrative Law Matters <https://www.administrativelawmatters.com/blog/2021/01/29/regulations-and-reasonableness-review/and the cases cited therein>.
>
> [189] This approach, however, has not been followed unanimously: see, for example, Hudson's Bay Company ULC v. Ontario (Attorney General), 2020 ONSC 8046, 154 O.R. (3d) 103; Friends of Simcoe Forest Inc. v. Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing, 2021 ONSC 3813 at para. 25. Indeed, the reasonableness standard review is fraught with difficulties, not the least of which is that it assumes the body or person that has been granted the power to adopt delegated legislation has also been vested with the power to decide questions of law and to determine the proper interpretation of the habilitating statute; yet, this is obviously not always the case: see John M. Evans, "Reviewing Delegated Legislation After Vavilov: Vires or Reasonableness?" (2021) 34:1 Can. J. Admin. L.& P. 1.
>
> [190] More recently, the Supreme Court has brought grist to the mill of those who support the view that the Vavilov judicial review framework does not apply to delegated legislation. In References re Greenhouse Gas Pollution Pricing Act, 2021 SCC 11, 455 D.L.R. (4th) 1 [Ref re Greenhouse Gas], the Court reviewed the validity of the regulations at issue on the basis of its own interpretation of the enabling statute, without expressing any deference to Cabinet on the interpretative issue. It is true that the majority (in contrast to the dissenting opinion of Rowe J.) made no mention of the ultra > vires doctrine, but neither did it refer to Vavilov nor to reasonableness review. On the contrary, the majority took it upon itself to interpret the scope of the regulation-making powers found in the Greenhouse Gas Pollution Pricing Act, S.C. 2018, c. 12. While this is clearly not the last word on the subject, it signals at the very least that the issue is far from settled.

>
> [191] That being said, and whether we assess the validity of the Direction and of section 8 of the Regulations through the lens of the reasonableness standard of review or through the more exacting prism of the ultra vires doctrine, the result would be the same. For the appellants to succeed with their argument that subsection 86.11(2) of the CTA does not encompass the power to issue the Direction (and section 8 of the Regulations) because it relates to matters covered at paragraph 86.11(1)(f), they would have to show either that the Direction: 1) is irrelevant, extraneous or completely unrelated to the statutory purpose (Katz at para. 28; Shell Canada Products Ltd. v. Vancouver (City), [1994] 1 S.C.R. 231, 1994 CanLII 115 (SCC) at p. 280), or 2) rests on an unreasonable interpretation of subsection 86.11(2). If the Direction (and section 8 of the CTA) satisfies the more exacting ultra vires framework, it will obviously meet the less stringent reasonableness standard of review analysis.

[59] However, in its most recent decision in Innovative Medicines Canada v Canada (Attorney General), 2022 FCA 210, Justice Stratas, writing on behalf of the Court, held that Portnov, a unanimous and binding decision of this Court, binds future panels of the Federal Court of Appeal (and thus this Court), such that the methodology to be used to assess a regulation is that set out in Vavilov, not Katz [see Innovative Medicines, supra, at paras 26-27].

[60] The Federal Court of Appeal offers specific guidance in Innovative Medicines, supra, to the review of regulations enacted by the Governor in Council:

> [39] …Under Vavilov, the broader the regulation-making power in a statute, particularly in matters of policy that are quintessentially the preserve of the executive, the less constrained the regulation-> maker will be in enacting the regulation: Entertainment Software Association v. Society of Composers, Authors and Music Publishers of Canada, 2020 FCA 100, [2021] 1 F.C.R. 374 at para. 28 (applying Vavilov and earlier cases consistent with it), aff'd 2022 SCC 30.

>
> [40] This is especially so for the Governor in Council. The Governor in Council is "at the apex of the executive", serves as "the grand co-ordinating body for the divergent provincial, sectional, religious, racial and other interests throughout the nation", and represents "different geographic, linguistic, religious, and ethnic groups": Canada (Citizenship and Immigration) v. Canadian Council for Refugees, 2021 FCA 72, 458 D.L.R. (4th) 125 at paras. 36-38. Thus, subject to limiting statutory language passed by our elected representatives, the Governor in Council's regulation-making power is often relatively unconstrained. The key is the limiting statutory language. Vavilov goes straight to that key, focusing on what meanings the language of the regulation-making power can reasonably bear. Katz doesn't. […]

[61] In conducting a reasonableness review, the Court is to assess the constraints on the administrative decision-maker (the primary constraint being the empowering legislation) and whether the decision maker has remained within them. The Court is entitled to look at the reasons offered by the decision maker, associated documents that shed light on the reasoning process, any submissions made to the decision maker and the record before the decision maker. In the case of decisions of the Governor in Council, reasoned explanations can often be found in the text of the legal instrument it is issuing, prior legal instruments related to it and any associated RIAS. Express explanations can be quite brief, yet still "pass muster" [see Portnov, supra at paras 33-34; Innovative Medicines, supra at para 44].

[62] I am satisfied that in this case, as no exception set out in Vavilov to reasonableness review applies, the standard of review is reasonableness and that the Court is to be guided by Vavilov (not Katz) and the cases of the Federal Court of Appeal that apply Vavilov in conducting its reasonableness review.

IV. Analysis

A. OSIP's decision not to add the 837 Patent to the Patent Register for SNDS 670 and SNDS 739 was reasonable

[63] Paragraph 4(3)(c) of the PMNOC Regulations sets out the relevant product specificity requirement that must be met for a patent to be listed on the Patent Register in relation to an SNDS. A patent is eligible to be added to the Patent Register if: (i) the SNDS is for a "change in use of the medicinal ingredient"; and (ii) the patent contains a claim for the changed use of the medicinal ingredient that has been approved through the issuance of an NOC in respect of the SNDS.

[64] In relation to SNDS 670, Janssen takes issue with OSIP's determination that: (a) SNDS 670 was not for a change of use of a medicinal ingredient; and (b) that the 837 Patent does not contain a claim for the alleged changed use of the medicinal ingredient. I will address those issues in turn.

[65] In relation to SNDS 739, Janssen takes issue with OSIP's determination that no patent list to add the 837 Patent was filed by Janssen in relation to SNDS 739. The vires of the filing date requirement in subsection 4(6) of the PMNOC Regulations and its impact on Janssen's ability to add the 837 Patent to the Patent Register in relation to SNDS 739 is addressed separately below.

(1) OSIP's determination that SNDS 670 was not approved for a change in use of the medicinal ingredient was reasonable

[66] Before turning to Janssen's submissions and a consideration of the decision under review, I want to begin by looking at any prior consideration (judicial or otherwise) of the phrase "a change in use of the medicinal ingredient".

[67] The phrase "change in the use of a medicinal ingredient" is not defined in the Patent Act or the PMNOC Regulations.

[68] One can have reference to subsection 2(1) of the PMNOC Regulations which defines a "claim for the use of the medicinal ingredient". Subsection 4(1) permits a first person to submit a patent list in relation to an NDS and paragraph 4(2)(d) provides that a patent on a patent list in relation to an NDS is eligible to be added to the register if the patent contains a "claim for the use of the medicinal ingredient" and the use has been approved through the issuance of an NOC in respect of the NDS. While the focus of paragraph 4(2)(d) is on whether the patent contains a claim for the changed use of a medicinal ingredient, it is focused on the "use of the medicinal ingredient" that is later sought to be "changed" in paragraph 4(3)(c). A "claim for the use of the medicinal ingredient" is defined in subsection 2(1) to mean "a claim for the use of the medicinal ingredient for the diagnosis, treatment, mitigation or prevention of a disease, disorder or abnormal physical state, or its symptoms".

[69] In Abbott Laboratories Ltd v Canada (Attorney General), 2008 FCA 244, one of the issues before the Court was whether the patent at issue contained a claim for the very change in use that was approved by the issuance of an NOC with respect to an SNDS. In that case, it was not disputed that a new indication for a drug (to treat NSAID ulcers) constituted a change in use in the medicinal ingredient.

[70] In Solvay Pharma Inc v Canada (Attorney General), 2009 FC 102, this Court dismissed an application for judicial review of a decision of the Minister refusing to add Solvay's patent to the Patent Register pursuant to paragraph 4(3)(c). The Minister had refused to add the patent as the SNDS against which listing was sought did not approve a change in use of the medicinal ingredient. The drug in question, AndroGel, had initially been approved on the basis of safety and efficacy information from a clinical trial following patients to whom the drug was administered for six months. Solvay filed an SNDS to provide additional safety and efficacy information following the extension of that clinical trial to 42 months, including making associated updates to the Product Monograph. An NOC issued in connection with the SNDS and indicated that the reason for the SNDS was to "Update PM with long term extension study results".

[71] Solvay asserted that the SNDS approved a change in use of the medicinal ingredient "as the safe and effective duration of use is extended and important changes to the implied use of the product, as authorized to be described in the Product Monograph, are clearly the essential subject of the SNDS". The Minister rejected this argument and also found that the patent did not contain a claim for the changed use introduced in the Product Monograph by way of the SNDS. Specifically, the Minister held that the patent did not contain "a claim for the changed use of the medicinal ingredient, for the long term use and relative safety of AndroGel". Rather, the Minister held that the uses of AndroGel are the same uses that were previously approved by an earlier SNDS.

[72] The Court found that the evidence supported the Minister's conclusion that Solvay did not meet either requirement for the listing of its patent on the Patent Register. With respect to the first requirement – that the SNDS represent a change in use of the medicinal ingredient – the Court held:

> [79] The evidence in the record satisfies me that the SNDS, filed on March 11, 2005, did not represent a change in use of the medicinal ingredient of AndroGel testosterone in the form of topical gel. The jurisprudence supports the proposition that "change in use" as that term is used in subsection 4(3) of the NOC Regulations is measured by the approved use in AndroGel's product monograph, as approved by Health Canada, which is described in the Indications and Clinical Use section of that document. AndroGel is indicated for hormone replacement therapy in men suffering from conditions associated with a testosterone deficiency. No change of indication and use was made to Solvay's AndroGel product monograph as a result of the 2006 NOC.

[73] In discussing the amendments to the PMNOC Regulations in 2006, the 2006 RIAS also provides some insight into the intended meaning of the phrase "a change in use of the medicinal ingredient", where it states:

> The amendments to section 4 also formally confirm the right to list new patents on the basis of SNDS filings and introduce listing requirements governing that right. Under these requirements, a patent which had been applied for prior to the filing of an SNDS may be submitted in relation to that SNDS provided the purpose of the latter is to obtain approval for a change in use of the medicinal > ingredient (i.e. a new method of use or new indication), a change in formulation or a change in dosage form and the patent contains a claim to the formulation, dosage form or use so changed…

>
> [Emphasis added.]

(a) Janssen's submissions

[74] Janssen asserts that OSIP's determination that SNDS 670 was not approved for a change in use is an improper fettering of OSIP's decision making power and is unreasonable. If a clinician's change in treatment duration or in prescribing practices would be changed by an SNDS, Janssen asserts that this should be sufficient to establish a change in use.

[75] Janssen asserts that OSIP's decision was unreasonable in light of the evidence before them – namely, the expert statement of Dr. Feagan and the two studies. In relation to Dr. Feagen, Janssen asserts that his evidence clearly demonstrated that the additional safety data would change prescribing practices of a community gastroenterologist. In the absence of any competing evidence procured by OSIP, Janssen asserts that there is no reasonable basis upon which OSIP could conclude that the approved health and safety data regarding the 96-week treatment and safety profile of STELARA in SNDS 670 is not a change in use.

[76] Janssen also points to the Sandborn and Panaccione studies, in which Janssen asserts the authors commented on the need for longer-term data to confirm findings of no increased malignancy risk with IL-12/23 inhibition. Janssen asserts that SNDS 670 provided that longer-term safety data that the authors called for and that Dr. Feagan stated would bring comfort or confidence to Canadian clinicians to prescribe STELARA beyond 44 weeks. While OSIP held that a clinician who was "up to date" on ulcerative colitis research could have referred to either of the two studies before the approval of SNDS 670 to obtain information and "comfort" regarding prescribing STELARA for a longer period of time, Janssen says that this is irrelevant and does not change the fact that the addition of safety data to the approved Product Monograph is a change in use. Moreover, Janssen asserts that OSIP's finding is unsupported by any expert evidence and importantly, would not apply to clinicians who are not up to date on ulcerative colitis research, which is the sector of clinicians that Dr. Feagan was opining about. Janssen notes that there is no requirement in paragraph 4(3)(c) that all physicians change their prescribing practices, rather simply that there be a change in use and that Janssen has demonstrated such a change.

[77] Janssen further asserts that OSIP unreasonably applied Solvay to conclude that the addition of safety data can never be a change in use, whereas there is no express exclusion of safety data from the possible changes in use that can be covered by paragraph 4(3)(c) of the PMNOC Regulations. At the hearing, Janssen argued that OSIP was "blinded" by the Solvay decision and it tainted the entirety of OSIP's assessment of the meaning of "change in use".

[78] Moreover, Janssen asserts that the Solvay decision was guided by the evidentiary record before OSIP and in this case, the evidentiary record is distinguishable. Specifically:

A. In Solvay, there was no evidence before the Minister to support the conclusion that the SNDS contained a change in use, whereas in this case, the Minister had the evidence of Dr. Feagan and the two studies.

B. In Solvay, the Office of Patent Submissions and Liaison had sought the opinion of Health Canada experts, who concluded that there was no change in use, whereas in this case, the Minister did not adduce any of its own expert evidence or contradict Janssen's expert evidence.

C. In Solvay, the Court held that the patent claims contain no limitation on the duration of use and that the patent did not address the issue of the duration of testosterone therapy, whereas in this case, the nexus to the patent is present as the 837 Patent [redacted]

[79] Janssen asserts that OSIP failed to take into consideration these distinctions and that each of the aforementioned points of distinction alone undermines OSIP's "strong reliance" on Solvay and establish that OSIP's decision was based on a misapprehension of the law and evidence, thus rendering it unreasonable.

[80] Janssen further asserts that OSIP's interpretation of the product specificity requirement of a "change in use of the medicinal ingredient" is inconsistent with the context, language and purpose of the Patent Act and the PMNOC Regulations. Janssen asserts that the Governor in Council enacted paragraph 4(3)(c) with the broad terminology of change in use and the 2006 RIAS confirms an intention that a change in use was broad enough to include a new indication and a new method of use. Janssen asserts that the RIAS supports an understanding that change in use is not to be restricted to changes to particular sections of the Product Monograph and that a change in use includes changes in the duration of treatment.

[81] Janssen asserts that the PMNOC Regulations must be read in line with the purpose of the Patent Act and should be considered in light of the societal imperative of encouraging new and better medical therapies and the difficulties associated with protecting pharmaceutical patent rights by way of conventional infringement litigation. Janssen asserts that the PMNOC Regulations are intended to protect that which the innovator has invested time and money to test and have approved for sale (or put different, to protect the patentee's contribution to the public through skill and ingenuity). The clinical trial data in SNDS 670 is the result of time and money invested by Janssen to obtain safety data for STELARA in patients with moderately or severely active ulcerative colitis, the exact type of substantive change intended to be protected by the PMNOC Regulations. By adopting an unduly restrictive meaning to change in use, Janssen asserts that it is being improperly denied the full benefit of the patent protection it should be provided as part of the balance of the early working exception. Such an unduly restrictive meaning also, according to Janssen, reduces incentives to research the safety and efficacy of existing medicinal ingredients because it stands in the way of listing patents tied to such research.

[82] Moreover, Janssen notes that the product specificity requirements were intended to prevent the listing of patents in respect of SNDSs for purely administrative changes (such as changes of manufacturer) and asserts that SNDS 670 is not akin to an administrative change.

(b) Consideration of Janssen's submissions

[83] In interpreting a "change in use of the medicinal ingredient", the 2006 RIAS provides guidance that a change in use can be a new indication or a new method of use, but cannot be an administrative change (such as a change in drug or company name). There is no dispute that SNDS 670 was not for a new indication, as the treatment of ulcerative colitis was added to the Product Monograph by SNDS 739.

[84] The question then becomes whether, on the record before OSIP and considering the text, context and purpose of section 4(3)(c) of the PMNOC Regulations, the guidance provided by the RIAS, this Court's decision in Solvay and Janssen's submissions, OSIP reasonably determined that SNDS 670 was not approved for a change in use.

[85] In reaching their decision, OSIP considered the following evidence that was before them:

A. The existing Product Monograph as approved in relation to SNDS 739 approved STELARA to be used to treat adult patients with moderately to severely active ulcerative colitis who have had an inadequate response with, lost response to, or were intolerant to either conventional therapy or a biologic or have medical contraindications to such therapies. That approved use did not include a limitation on the duration of time STELARA could be used to treat ulcerative colitis (notwithstanding that the clinical trial data was limited to 44 weeks). Moreover, SNDS 670 did not seek to add a limitation on the duration of time STELARA could be used to treat ulcerative colitis.

B. The relevant NOC stated that SNDS 670 was approved for updates to the Product Monograph.

C. SNDS 670 did not result in any changes to the "Indications and Clinical Use" section of the product monograph, but rather only added safety and efficacy date to the "Clinical Trial Adverse Drug Reaction" and "Study Demographics and Trial Design" sections of the Product Monograph.

D. Dr. Feagan's evidence was that community gastroenterologists would "take comfort" in the additional information and would be more willing to prescribe or be more comfortable prescribing STELARA based on the additional information contained in the Product Monograph. However, he did not state that community gastroenterologists (or any other gastroenterologists) would not have prescribed STELARA for longer than 44 weeks based on the prior Product Monograph.

E. In Janssen's Product Information Regulatory Enrollment Process form, Janssen wrote (as opposed to checking a box) in relation to SNDS 670 that "there are no changes to the indication/Use/Dosage (including the maximum daily dose)".

[86] OSIP properly considered the aforementioned evidence, the text, context and purpose of the PMNOC Regulations (which I will address more fully below), considered the guidance provided in the 2006 RIAS, considered this Court's decision in Solvay (which I will also address in more detail below) and considered the submissions of Janssen before concluding as follows:

The OSIP recognizes that a change to the method of use of a medicinal ingredient can be reflected in sections of the product monograph other than the "Indications and Clinical Use" section. For example, the "Contraindications", "Warning and Precautions", and "Dosage and Administration" sections. However, the OSIP disagrees with Janssen's characterization that SNDS 244670 was approved for such a change. Rather, as detailed above, the OSIP is of the view that SNDS 244670 was approved for updates to the product monograph to include results from the long-term extensions of two Phase 3 studies for the treatment of adult patients with moderately to severely active Crohn's disease or ulcerative colitis.

Following the approval of SNDS 224739, STELARA (I.V.) could be used in the treatment of ulcerative colitis for an indefinite period of time. Both Janssen and Dr. Feagan submit that a clinician would change their prescribing practices upon reading the two sentences added to the STELARA (I.V.) product monograph following the approval of SNDS 244670. It is the position of Janssen and Dr. Feagan that the clinician practice would have changed given their increased comfort in prescribing STELARA (I.V.) beyond 44 weeks. However a clinician's reluctance to prescribe a drug is not a limitation on the approved use of that drug.

Clinicians were not prevented from prescribing the drug for the long-term use in treating ulcerative colitis. Dr. Feagan states at paragraph 21 that a community gastroenterologist may not be up to date on ulcerative colitis research and would have concerns about the potential for issues to arise after one year's administration of STELARA (I.V.). Therefore, a clinician who was up to date on ulcerative colitis could have referred to either of the two studies enclosed in Janssen's representations before the approval of SNDS 244670 and could have obtained the comfort needed to change their prescribing practices in accordance with the use for which SNDS 224739 was approved. In any event, a submission approved for additional data that could provide a clinician more confidence in prescribing a drug long-term is not sufficient for the submission to be considered as having been approved for a change in use of the drug if the indication never included a temporal restriction on its use.

Implicit in Janssen's position is the idea that the use of STELARA (I.V.) was limited by the period of time during which ustekinumab was administered to patients in the clinical trials underlying the approval of SNDS 224739. Janssen had made this position explicit on page 7 of its representations, where it states that the use set out in SNDS 224739 is for the treatment of ulcerative colitis "for up to 44 weeks". The OSIP disagrees with Janssen's position that the > length of time for which STELARA (I.V.) could be used was limited. No such limitation was provided in the STELARA (I.V.) product monograph. As STELARA (I.V.) was approved for the use in treating ulcerative colitis for an indefinite period of time, the inclusion of updates to the product monograph to include results from the long-term extension of two Phase 3 studies could not have changed the approved use of STELARA (I.V.), irrespective of any additional confidence the information may provide clinicians.

>
> As noted above, the Federal Court considered substantially similar facts in Solvay and held that the inclusion of safety and efficacy information into the product monograph following an extension of a clinical trial did not constitute a change to the use of the medicinal ingredient as required by paragraph 4(3)(c) of the PM(NOC) Regulations. Similarly, the inclusion of updates to the STELARA (I.V.) product monograph to include results from the long-term extensions of two Phase 3 studies does not meet the requirements of paragraph 4(3)(c) of the PM(NOC) Regulations.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

[87] I find that OSIP's decision is based on an internally coherent and rational chain of analysis and is justified in relation to the facts and law that constrain OSIP. I see nothing unreasonable about OSIP's focus, in its interpretation and application of paragraph 4(3)(c), on the actual approved use of STELARA (i.e. the use as approved by the Minister) and not the prescribing practices of clinicians, as that which is being "changed" in subsection 4(3) is the use as previously approved by the Minister.

[88] I will now turn to address the specific arguments raised by Janssen.

[89] Turning first to the evidence of Dr. Feagan, OSIP clearly considered Dr. Feagan's evidence and did not dispute his statements regarding the influence that the additional safety and efficacy data would have on certain gastroenterologists. However, OSIP's decision turned on their determination that STELARA was approved for use to treat ulcerative colitis with no temporal limitation on its use and that a clinician's reluctance to prescribe a drug is not a limitation on the approved use of that drug. Similarly, OSIP considered the two studies and regardless of whether a clinician may or may not have read the studies, OSIP found that a submission approved for additional data that could provide a clinician more confidence in prescribing a drug long-term is not sufficient for the submission to be considered as having been approved for a change in use of the drug if the indication never included a temporal restriction on its use. I see no error on OSIP's part in reaching these conclusions.

[90] With respect to Solvay, I reject Janssen's characterization of OSIP's treatment of the decision. On a fair reading, OSIP's reasons do not state that the addition of safety data can never be a change in use. Rather, OSIP considered this Court's decision in Solvay, outlined the facts of that case and summarized the Court's findings. OSIP noted the factual similarities between this case and Solvay and noted that its finding was supported by the Court's reasoning in Solvay.

[91] Janssen's suggestion that OSIP was "blinded" by Solvay and that Solvay tainted the entirety of OSIP's decision is baseless. OSIP is obligated to follow applicable precedents originating from this Court [see Bank of Montreal v Li, 2020 FCA 22 at para 37] and given the factual similarities between the two cases, it was reasonable for OSIP to rely on Solvay as an influential precedent. Moreover, a fair reading of OSIP's 23-page decision reveals that OSIP considered all relevant factors in interpreting and applying paragraph 4(3)(c), not just Solvay.

[92] While Janssen has attempted to distinguish Solvay and faults OSIP for failing to take into account the factual differences between the two cases, I would note that Janssen did not raise Solvay with OSIP or put any of its purported distinguishing facts to OSIP to suggest that OSIP should not follow Solvay. In any event, I am not satisfied that the factual differences identified by Janssen render OSIP's reliance on Solvay unreasonable. OSIP did not state that the two cases were identical, but rather that they were similar and the presence or absence of expert evidence did not play a central role in OSIP's determination that there had not been a change in use in either case. As for Janssen's third argument, that argument relates to the next issue and thus I will address it there.

[93] Moreover, while Janssen made much of the fact that Dr. Feagan's evidence was uncontradicted and that OSIP had failed to secure its own expert evidence on the issue of change of use, this ignores the fact that the burden rested on Janssen to demonstrate that it meets the product specificity requirements of the PMNOC Regulations. OSIP was under no obligation to produce an expert statement in response to Dr. Feagan or that otherwise addressed the issue of change in issue. As noted by the Respondent, the only obligation on OSIP was to make a reasonable and procedurally fair determination of the issues before them and in doing so, OSIP was entitled to rely on OSIP's own expertise.

[94] I also reject Janssen's submissions that OSIP's interpretation of the product specificity requirement is inconsistent with the context, language and purpose of the Patent Act and PMNOC Regulations. I begin by noting that there is no express inconsistency between OSIP's interpretation of subsection 4(3) and the Patent Act. Rather, what Janssen asserts is that there is a "conceptual" inconsistency between the two.

[95] It must be recalled that OSIP agreed with Janssen's interpretation of subsection 4(3) in part, expressly acknowledging that a change in use of a medicinal ingredient includes a change to the method of use (as recognized in the 2006 RIAS) and that a change to the method of use can be reflected in sections of the Product Monograph other than the "Indications and Clinical Use" section. Where OSIP and Janssen part ways is on the question of whether a change in use of the medicinal ingredient in subsection 4(3) includes the "change" asserted by Janssen.

[96] It is clear from a review of OSIP's reasons that OSIP was very much alive to the dispute between OSIP and Janssen as to the interpretation of subsection 4(3). In considering the reasonableness of OSIP's interpretation of subsection 4(3), the Court is guided by the following commentary of the Federal Court of Appeal in Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration) v Mason, 2021 FCA 156:

> [16] Hillier begins by reminding reviewing courts of three basic things they should appreciate when conducting reasonableness review. First, in many cases, administrators may have a range of interpretations of legislation open to them based on the text, context and purpose of the legislation. Second, in particular cases, administrators may have a better appreciation of that range than courts because of their specialization and expertise. And, third, the legislation--the law on the books that reviewing courts must follow--gives administrators the responsibility to interpret the legislation, not reviewing courts.
>
> [17] For these reasons, Hillier tells reviewing courts to conduct themselves in a way that gives administrators the space the legislator intends them to have, yet still hold them accountable. Reviewing courts can do this by conducting a preliminary analysis of the text, context and purpose of the legislation just to understand the lay of the land before they examine the administrators' reasons. But the lay of the land is as far as they should go. They should not make any definitive judgments and conclusions themselves. That would take them down the road of creating their own yardstick and measuring the administrator's interpretation to make sure it fits.

[18] Instead, Hillier recommends (at para. 16) that a reviewing court should "focus on the administrator's interpretation, noting what the administrator invokes in support of it and what the parties raise for or against it", trying to understand where the administrator was coming from and why it ruled the way it did: Hillier at paragraph 16.

[19] Under this approach, the reviewing court does not act in an "external" way, i.e., "arrive at a definitive conclusion about the best way to read the statutory provision under review before considering how the [administrator's] interpretation matched up with [the] preferred reading". Rather, as Professor Daly has observed, the reviewing court acts in an "internal" way, i.e., "a relatively cursory examination of the provision at issue, with a view to analyzing the robustness of the [administrator's] interpretation". See Paul Daly, "Waiting for Godot: Canadian Administrative Law in 2019" (online: https://canlii.ca/t/t23p at 11).

[20] By necessary implication, Vavilov supports the Hillier approach. Vavilov warns us that even though reviewing courts are accustomed in other contexts to interpret legislative provisions themselves, when conducting reasonableness review of administrative interpretations they should avoid that. Reviewing courts must not "ask how they themselves would have resolved [the] issue", "undertake a de novo analysis", "ask itself what the correct decision would have been" or "[decide] the issue themselves": Vavilov, at paragraphs 75, 83 and 116. In other words, reviewing courts must not "make [their] own yardstick and then use that yardstick to measure what the administrator did": Vavilov, at paragraph 83, citing Delios, at paragraph 28. Instead, reviewing courts must exercise "judicial restraint" and respect "the distinct role of administrative decision makers": Vavilov, at paragraph 75. They are to do this by examining the administrator's reasons with "respectful attention" and by "seeking to understand the reasoning process": Vavilov, at paragraph 84.

[97] Determining the meaning of “change in use of the medicinal ingredient” very much falls within OSIP’s area of expertise. In arriving at their interpretation of that phrase, OSIP considered the plain wording of subsection 4(3) and related provisions of the PMNOC Regulations and the intent of the 2006 amendments to subsection 4(3) as reflected in the 2006 RIAS (as cited above) and as acknowledged by the Court of Appeal in GD Searle & Co v Canada (Health), 2009 FCA 35. I see nothing unreasonable with that approach and OSIP’s reasons allow the Court to understand how the text, context and purpose of the PMNOC Regulations factored into its reasoning process in arriving at its interpretation of subsection 4(3).

[98] There is no dispute between the parties as to the purpose of the Patent Act and the protections that it affords to innovators. However, I reject Janssen’s assertion that OSIP’s interpretation improperly denies Janssen the full benefit of the patent protection it should be provided as part of the balance of the early working exception. As stated above, the PMNOC Regulations seek to balance the patent rights associated with innovative drugs against the timely market entry of lower-priced competitor drugs [see Fresenius Kabi Canada Ltd v Canada (Health), 2020 FC 1013]. In striking that balance, the product specificity requirements reflected in section 4 inherently acknowledge that not every patent is eligible for listing on the Patent Register, notwithstanding the time and money invested by the innovator. As noted by this Court in Solvay, supra at paragraph 69:

> …Under the heading Patent Listing Requirements, the RIAS states, at page 1511, that the NOC Regulations "are intended to operate as a very potent patent enforcement mechanism", citing the 24-month automatic stay when an innovator launches a prohibition application, adding that "it is this very potency which calls for moderation in the application" with the result that "[o]nly those > patents which meet the current timing, subject matter and relevance requirements set out in section 4 of the regulations are entitled to be added to ... register and to the concurrent protection of the 24-month stay."

>
> [Emphasis added.]

[99] It must also be recalled that Janssen is not without the protections of the Patent Act under OSIP's interpretation, retaining the right to bring a patent infringement action outside of the PMNOC regime.

[100] Subsection 4(3) limits the subset of patents eligible for listing and I am not satisfied that Janssen has demonstrated how OSIP's interpretation unreasonably denies Janssen the patent protection intended by the balance struck by the PMNOC Regulations.

[101] Having determined that OSIP's decision that SNDS 670 did not meet the first product specificity requirement of paragraph 4(3)(c) was reasonable, Janssen's application in relation to the listing of the 837 patent in relation to SNDS 670 cannot succeed. While I need not do so, I will nonetheless go on to consider whether OSIP's determination in relation to the second product specificity requirement was reasonable.

(2) OSIP's determination that the 837 Patent was not eligible to be added to the Patent Register as it did not meet the product specificity requirements of paragraph 4(3)(c) was reasonable

[102] In considering whether the patent sought to be listed in relation to a particular SNDS meets the product specificity requirement of paragraph 4(3)(c) of the PMNOC Regulations, OSIP was required to apply what is known as the Abbott test, as originally set out by Justice Hughes in Abbott Laboratories Limited v Canada (Attorney General), 2008 FC 700 and later affirmed in Canada (Attorney General) v Abbott Laboratories Limited, 2008 FCA 354 and applied by the Federal Court of Appeal in a number of other cases, such as Searle, supra, Purdue Pharma v Canada (Attorney General), 2011 FCA 132, Gilead Sciences Canada Inc v Canada (Health), 2012 FCA 254 and Eli Lilly Canada Inc v Canada (Attorney General), 2015 FCA 166.

[103] Pursuant to the Abbott test, OSIP was required to consider the following three questions: (i) what does the 837 Patent claim? (ii) what is the change approved by SNDS 670? and (iii) does the 837 Patent claim the very change approved in SNDS 670?

[104] The current version of the PMNOC Regulations makes product specificity between the patent claims and the NOC for the approved drug a key requirement for a patent to be considered eligible for listing on the patent register [see Gilead, supra at para 33]. Under the prior version of the PMNOC Regulations, if the patent claims were shown merely to be "relevant to" the approved drug, the submitted patents were generally accepted for listing. The wording of the current PMNOC Regulations, as well as their object and purpose, suggest that the product specificity requirement sets a high threshold of consistency between the patent claims and the NOC [see Gilead, supra at para 40].

[105] In Canada (Attorney General) v Abbott Laboratories Limited, 2008 FCA 244, leave to appeal refused, [2008] SCCA No 408, [2008] 3 SCR v (Abbott Prevacid) [Abbott 244], Justice Pelletier commented on the level of specificity required under paragraph 4(3)(c). The debate there concerned the eligibility for listing of a patent in relation to an NOC issued pursuant to an SNDS approving a new use. The Federal Court concluded that the patent was eligible for listing because the patent could be construed as including the new approved use notwithstanding that it was not explicitly claimed in the patent. The Federal Court of Appeal disagreed, stating at paragraphs 47 and 49:

> It stands to reason that if a patent must contain a claim for the changed use identified in Abbott's SNDS, that patent cannot simply claim the use which formed the basis of the original submission. Such a patent does not specifically claim the changed use, even though the changed use may come within the claims of the patent. In other words, the Regulations envisage as a condition of listing a patent in respect of a change in the use of a medicinal ingredient that the patent specifically claims the changed use as opposed to non-specific claims which are wide enough to include the changed use.
>
> […]
>
> I conclude that paragraph 4(3)(c) of the Regulations requires, as a condition of listing a patent on the Patent Register, that the patent must specifically claim the very change in use which was approved by the issuance of a Notice of Compliance with respect to an SNDS.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

[106] Before turning to Janssen's submission on this application, I note that before OSIP, Janssen asserted:

> Further and contrary to the clear wording of the Regulations, which simply requires "a claim for the changed use … that has been approved", in its Letter, the OPML instead identified what it framed as the very change approved in SNDS 244670 and asked whether the '837 Patent claims the "very change" approved in SNDS 244670. In doing so, the OPML's approach was too narrow and required a nexus between the change approved in SNDS 244670 and > the ‘837 Patent that is more stringent than what is in fact required by the Regulations.

[107] Janssen’s aforementioned description of the product specificity requirement for the 837 Patent as prescribed by subsection 4(3) is reflective of the approach prior to the 2006 amendments to the PMNOC Regulations and inconsistent with the clear enunciation of the applicable test as affirmed repeatedly by the Federal Court of Appeal.

[108] Before this Court, Janssen persists with this position in part, refusing in its written submissions to agree with OSIP’s interpretation of subsection 4(3) and its application of the Abbott test, yet taking no issue with the application of the Abbott test at the hearing. There is no merit to any suggestion that OSIP has misconstrued the applicable legal test and I find that OSIP properly formulated and applied the Abbott test by requiring that the 837 Patent claim the “very change in use” approved for SNDS 670.

[109] Without agreeing with OSIP’s interpretation of the requirements of subsection 4(3), Janssen asserts that OSIP’s decision is unreasonable as the 837 Patent meets the “very change in use” standard, as the 837 Patent contains claims covering the [redacted].

[110] [redacted] do not take issue with OSIP’s determination in relation to step one of the Abbott test and [redacted], in simple terms, the 837 Patent claims the use of the antibody to treat ulcerative colitis for at least 44 weeks after week zero or for 44 weeks and after.

[111] For step two of the Abbott test, one would have to presume that the change in use is as proposed by Janssen (albeit rejected by OSIP) – namely, the addition of longer term safety data up to 96 weeks that changes prescribing practise so as to prescribe STELARA beyond 44 weeks.

[112] It is at step three of the Abbott test that the parties' positions regarding the reasonableness of OSIP's determination greatly diverge. I will begin with OSIP's reasons for decision on step three, which provide as follows:

> The '837 Patent does not contain a claim to the very change for which SNDS 244670 was approved. In particular, the '837 patent does not contain a claim directed toward the use of ustekinumab for the treatment of moderately to severely active ulcerative colitis wherein ustekinumab is administered for 96 weeks as maintenance therapy.
>
> As explained above and as set out by the Federal Court of Appeal in Abbott FCA and Searle FCA, in order to meet the requirements of paragraph 4(3)(c) of the PM(NOC) Regulations, the patent must contain a claim to the very changed use. While the '837 patent contains claims directed towards the use of ustekinumab for the treatment of moderately to severely active ulcerative colitis, the duration of time within which the use of ustekinumab is claimed as a maintenance therapy is not limited to 96 weeks. The OSIP is of the view that reference at page 52 of the '837 patent description that the anti-IL-12/IL-23p40 antibody, which may be ustekinumab, could be administered for a total of two years does not restrict the duration of time within which the anti-IL-12/IL-23p40 antibody could be used in any of the 837 patent claims.

[113] Janssen asserts that OSIP unreasonably imposed a standard of "exact matching" between claim language. Janssen asserts that it was sufficient that the claims of the 837 Patent include [redacted]

[114] Janssen asserts that OSIP placed unreasonable reliance on Abbott 244, which Janssen asserts is distinguishable from this case. Janssen asserts that in Abbott 244, the issue was whether a patent with claims to the treatment of ulcers generally claimed the very change in an SNDS approved for a new use of a drug to treat ulcers caused by non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs. In that case, the Court held that the patent did not specifically claim the changed use even though the changed use may come within the claims of the patent. By contrast, Janssen asserts that at least some of the 837 Patent's claims provide the required specificity [redacted]

[115] Janssen further asserts that Solvay is distinguishable, as none of the claims of the patent at issue contained a claim directed to the duration of treatment. By contrast, Janssen asserts that the 837 Patent has "claims that include [redacted]

[116] Janssen urged the Court to find that the circumstances in Eli Lilly Canada Inc v Canada (Attorney General), 2015 FCA 166, were more akin to those in this case and that OSIP should have followed Eli Lilly rather than Abbott 244 (despite Janssen not raising either authority with OSIP). In Eli Lilly, one of the issues before the Federal Court of Appeal was whether this Court had erred in determining whether the formulation claimed in the relevant patent was the formulation found in the appellant's drug submission for Trifexis. Janssen asserts that Eli Lilly is instructive as the Federal Court of Appeal held that a claim to a broader class of compound includes a specific compound in that class.

[117] I am not satisfied that Janssen has established that OSIP's determination regarding step three of the Abbott test is unreasonable. Rather, what Janssen urges the Court to do is to reassess the issue and come to a different result, which is not the role of the Court on an application for judicial review.

[118] I find that there was nothing unreasonable in OSIP's reliance on Abbott 244, which was a paragraph 4(3)(c) case. While Janssen urges the Court to find that Eli Lilly has somehow "overtaken" Abbott 244, I am not satisfied that that is the case. Eli Lilly was a change in formulation case, not a change in use case and on that basis alone, I find that it is distinguishable. More specifically, I agree with the Respondent that in Eli Lilly, at the first step of the Abbott test, the Federal Court of Appeal found that the general class of compounds that the patent claimed actually included the very specific formulation that was approved in the NDS. The Federal Court of Appeal found that in such circumstances, this Court was unreasonable in requiring identical wording at step three of the Abbott test. The circumstances in this case are distinct.

[119] As confirmed in Abbott 244, the PMNOC Regulations require that a patent specifically claim the change in use, as opposed to broader claims that are wide enough to subsume the specific change in use. With that principle in mind, I see nothing unreasonable in OSIP's determination that a patent having broad "temporal features" (as described by Janssen) for the use of ustekinumab for an indefinite period of time (for 44 weeks or more) is not the very change in use approved in relation to SNDS 670 (even on Janssen's interpretation thereof) which specifically included safety data to only 96 weeks.

[120] With respect to Solvay, I note that OSIP did not refer to Solvay in its reasons for decision on this issue.

[121] Accordingly, even if Janssen had established that OSIP's decision in relation to a "change in use of the medicinal ingredient" was unreasonable, Janssen's application in relation to the listing of the 837 patent in relation to SNDS 670 could not succeed on this ground either.

(3) OSIP's determination that Janssen failed to provide a patent list in relation to SNDS 739 was reasonable

[122] Janssen asserts that OSIP's determination that Janssen failed to file a patent list for the 837 Patent in relation to SNDS 739 was unreasonable as a patent list was filed for the 837 Patent within 30 days of the issuance of the 837 Patent and Janssen sought, by way of its September 14, 2022 submission, to add SNDS 739 to an already submitted patent list, given that it had been raised by OSIP in its preliminary decision letter. Janssen asserts that subsection 4(7) of the PMNOC Regulations obligates a first person to keep their patent list up to date, so the Minister clearly contemplated amendments to a patent list.

[123] Moreover, Janssen asserts that the PMNOC Regulations do not contain a requirement to add to a patent list by using Form IV, but rather only that a first person must provide all of the information set out in subsection 4(4). Janssen submits that its September 14, 2022 submission provided all of the necessary information prescribed by subsection 4(4). As such, to refuse to add the 837 Patent to the Patent Register on the basis that Janssen did not provide the same information by way of a Form IV would be an unreasonably harsh result and an extreme example of "form over substance".

[124] Turning to OSIP's reasons for decision, OSIP held:

> The PM(NOC) Regulations do not permit a patent list to be submitted in relation to multiple submissions. As noted above, subsection 4(1) of the PM(NOC) Regulations allows a first person to seek to add a patent to the Patent Register by submitting a patent list to the Minister. The content of a patent list is prescribed by subsection 4(4). Notably, paragraph 4(4)(a) of the PM(NOC) Regulations requires that the patent list identify the submissions to which the patent list relates. The patent list submitted in accordance with 4(6) provides a section dedicated for this purpose and allows the first person to identify the submission in relation to which it submits the patent list.
>
> The patent lists submitted by Janssen seeking to add the '837 patent to the Patent Register identified SNDS 244670. Janssen did not seek to add the '837 patent to the Patent Register against SNDS 224739. Janssen's suggestion that the submission in relation to which a patent list was filed can shift after its receipt would ignore the operation of paragraph 4(4)(a) of the PM(NOC) Regulations. The statements made on page 7 of Janssen's representations purporting to change the submission in relation to which its patent lists were submitted are not akin to filing a patent list in accordance with subsection 4(1). As such, the OSIP is of the view that no patent list was filed in relation to SNDS 224739 and that Janssen has not met the requirements to seek to add the '837 patent against SNDS 224739.
>
> In addition, the OSIP disagrees with Janssen's view that the '837 patent was considered for addition to the Patent Register against SNDS 224739 in its preliminary decision letter dated July 29, 2022. Rather, the OSIP is of the view that the use for which SNDS 224739 was approved was included in its preliminary decision letter to contextualize the change for which SNDS 244670 was approved.

[125] I see nothing unreasonable in OSIP's analysis and determination of this issue. OSIP properly considered the requirements of subsection 4(4) of the PMNOC Regulations, noting that the regulations prescribe one SNDS per patent list (as also set out in Form IV) and to permit Janssen to add a second SNDS to a pre-existing patent list would run afoul of the express mandatory language of paragraph 4(4)(a), which limits a patent list to one SNDS.

[126] Moreover, I find nothing unreasonable in OSIP's determination that Janssen's attempt to change/amend the SNDS in relation to which its patent lists for the 837 Patent were submitted was not akin to filing a patent list. Janssen was well aware of the requirement to file one patent list per SNDS, given that it had already filed multiple Form IVs in relation to STELARA and given the language of paragraph 4(4)(a). Why Janssen did not file a patent list for SNDS 739 in relation to the 837 Patent is unknown, but Janssen is bound by the consequences of that decision.

[127] While not expressly addressed by OSIP, I would note that, even if I were inclined to find that Janssen's September 14, 2022 submission could constitute a patent list for the 837 Patent, Janssen's September 14, 2022 submission did not, in fact, contain all of the information required by subsection 4(4) of the PMNOC Regulations. For example, the submission does not set out the Canadian patent filing date, the patent issue date, the patent expiry date or the address for service of the first person of a NOA. While that information might otherwise be available to OSIP in other documents, there is no obligation on the part of OSIP to search for missing information. Rather, the obligation rested on Janssen to clearly identify all of the information required by subsection 4(4) in its "patent list" [see Hoffmann-La Roche Ltd v Canada (Health), 2005 FC 1415 at para 21].

[128] As acknowledged by Janssen in its written submissions, the Minister has the discretion to determine the manner in which a patent list is to be submitted and the Minister has done so by requiring the use of Form IV. Form IV requires that, in completing the form, a first person provide all of the mandatory information required by subsection 4(4) of the PMNOC Regulations. Janssen has pointed to nothing that is unreasonable about the Minister's adoption of Form IV or the Minister's requirement that it be completed by first persons. Rather, Janssen appears to be inviting the Court to find that it was open to the Minister to accept a deviation to the Minister's practices, but without pointing to any error made by the Minister or any lack of coherent and rational chain of analysis in the Minister's determination.

[129] Janssen further asserts that in footnote 2 of its September 14, 2022 submission, Janssen requested that if OSIP rejected their request to add SNDS 739 to the patent list for the 837 Patent, that Janssen be advised of the reason and given an opportunity to respond. Janssen asserts that their procedural fairness rights were breached as OSIP never gave them a chance to address the issue. I reject this assertion. I am not satisfied that OSIP was under any duty to alert Janssen as to its views on Janssen's failure to file a Form IV patent list for SNDS 739 and to provide Janssen an opportunity to make further submissions on the issue. The burden rested on Janssen to take the appropriate steps to submit a patent list for the 837 Patent in relation to each of its SNDSs within the time limits prescribed by the PMNOC Regulations and in any event, by September 14, 2022, the deadline for submission of a patent list for the 837 Patent for SNDS 739 had already passed.

[130] In its reply oral submissions, Janssen asserted that it also relied on section 32 of the Interpretation Act, RSC 1985, c I-21, which provides that "where a form is prescribed, deviations from that form, not affecting the substance or calculated to mislead, do not invalidate the form used" and identified two decisions of the Federal Court addressing section 32. This argument, and the related statute and case law, were not raised by Janssen in its memorandum of fact and law filed in this proceeding (nor were they raised in Janssen's submissions before OSIP) and did not arise from something unexpectedly raised by the Respondent in their oral submissions. In the circumstances, it is not open to Janssen to raise the argument now and most certainly inappropriate to attempt to raise it only in reply. Accordingly, I will not consider this portion of Janssen's submission, as to do so would be unfair to the Respondent.

[131] For the reasons stated above, I am not satisfied that Janssen has demonstrated that OSIP's determination that Janssen did not file a patent list for the 837 Patent for SNDS 739 was unreasonable. While I appreciate that Janssen views the impact of OSIP's determination of this issue as unreasonably harsh, the PMNOC Regulations contain numerous mandatory requirements (such as the 30 day requirement in subsection 4(6)) that result in harsh consequences when not met. This is a function of the nature of the regulatory regime [see Fournier Pharma Inc v Canada (Attorney General), [1999] 1 FC 327; Immunex Corporation v Canada (Health), 2008 FC 1409; Merck Canada Inc v Canada (Minister of Health), 2021 FC 345].

[132] My finding on this issue is sufficient to dispose of Janssen's application for judicial review in relation to OSIP's refusal to list the 837 Patent in relation to SNDS 739. Notwithstanding, I will nonetheless go on to consider whether the Canadian filing date requirement in subsection 4(6) of the PMNOC Regulations is ultra vires the Patent Act.

B. The Canadian Filing Date Requirement in Subsection 4(6) of the PMNOC Regulations is intra vires the Patent Act

[133] Notwithstanding OSIP's determination that no patent list had been filed for the 837 Patent in relation to SNDS 739, OSIP went on to consider whether the 837 Patent could have been listed against SNDS 739 if such a patent list had been provided. OSIP determined that Janssen would not have met the timing requirement in subsection 4(6) as the 837 Patent was filed in Canada after SNDS 739 was filed. OSIP further determined that the consideration of the claim date or priority date of the 837 Patent when assessing the application of subsection 4(6) would be to ignore the clear wording of the PMNOC Regulations (which states "filing date in Canada"), circumvent the strict timing requirements and undo the balance struck by the PMNOC Regulations and subsection 55.2(1) of the Act.

[134] Janssen does not take issue with OSIP's interpretation of subsection 4(6) and acknowledges that the filing date requirement in subsection 4(6) refers to the date that the patent application was filed in Canada, rather than the claim date or priority date. Rather, Janssen asserted before OSIP and now before this Court that the filing date requirement in subsection 4(6) is ultra vires.

[135] In the alternative, Janssen asserts that the Canadian filing date is an illogical, irrational and/or arbitrary date to employ in subsection 4(6). However, Janssen did not, in its written submissions and at the hearing, develop these arguments and as such, I will not consider them separately. Rather, I will consider the arguments as they were advanced by Janssen.

[136] In conducting a reasonableness review of this issue, the Court is to determine the constraints on the Governor in Council and whether the Governor in Council remained within them, with the focus on any reasons given by the Governor in Council.

[137] In this case, the parties agree that the primary constraint on the Governor in Council is subsection 55.2(4) of the Patent Act (as set out above), which contains the Governor in Council's regulation making authority. Section 55.2(4) of the Patent Act provides for a broad grant of authority for the making of such regulations as the Governor in Council "considers necessary for preventing the infringement of a patent" by any person who makes use of the early working exception. The specific authority outlined in paragraphs (a) to (e) is said not to limit the generality of the initial grant. Rather, the only limitation lies in the limited purpose for which regulations may be made – the prevention of infringement by those who use the patented invention for the early working exception [see Apotex Inc v Merck & Co Inc, 2009 FCA 187 at para 40]. As such, in enacting the PMNOC Regulations, the Governor in Council had to interpret the scope of its regulation making power and enact a regulation (subsection 4(6)) that, in its reasonable view, was within that power [see Innovative Medicines, supra at para 44].

[138] In considering Janssen's submissions, I note that Janssen does not assert that including a reference to a filing date of the patent in subsection 4(6), in and of itself, exceeds the Governor in Council's regulation making authority. In that regard, I note that Janssen originally sought to quash the entirety of subsection 4(6) but, at the hearing, substantially modified the relief sought and now only seeks the quashing of the words "that has a filing date in Canada". This is an important point, as Janssen concedes that the Governor in Council has the authority to enact a regulation that includes a filing date requirement. This is not necessarily surprising given this Court's determination in Fournier, supra at para 20, that the Governor in Council's authority and discretion in subsection 55.2(4) are sufficiently broad to embrace the enactment of subsections 4(3) and 4(4) of the PMNOC Regulations, which impose time limits on the registration of patent lists.

[139] On Janssen's wording, section 4(6) would read as follows:

> A first person may, after the date of filing of a new drug submission or a supplement to a new drug submission, and within 30 days after the issuance of a patent that was issued on the basis of an application that precedes the date of filing of the submission or supplement, submit a patent list, including the information referred to in subsection (4), in relation to the submission or supplement.

[140] Janssen's argument therefore boils down to an assertion that the specific choice of the Canadian filing date over the claim date or priority date is ultra vires. In that regard, Janssen asserts that the Canadian filing date requirement does not conform with the purpose of the Patent Act and the PMNOC Regulations.

[141] Turning to the purpose of the Patent Act, Justice Manson described its purpose as follows in Innovative Medicines:

> [76] The policy rationale underlying the Patent Act is the patent bargain, or quid pro quo. The patent bargain encourages innovation by offering an inventor exclusive rights in a new and useful invention for a limited period in exchange for disclosure of the invention so that society can benefit from this knowledge (Teva Canada Ltd v Pfizer Canada Inc, 2012 SCC 60, [2012] 3 S.C.R.

> 625, at paragraph 32). Two central objectives of the Patent Act as a whole are to "advance research and development and to encourage broader economic activity" (Free World Trust v Électro Santé Inc, 2000 SCC 66, [2000] 2 S.C.R. 104 at paragraph 42; Harvard College v Canada (Commissioner of Patents), 2002 SCC 76, [2002] 4 S.C.R. 45 (Harvard College) at paragraph 185).
>
> [77] As acknowledged by both the applicants and the respondent, patent monopoly rights are not unlimited, and Parliament has at times balanced promotion of ingenuity against other considerations (Harvard College, above, at paragraph 185)…

[142] The purpose of the PMNOC Regulations, as noted previously, is to balance effective patent enforcement over new and innovative drugs with the timely market entry of their lower priced generic competitors.

[143] Only limited information is known about the rationale for the Governor in Council's choice to use the Canadian patent filing date. The 2006 RIAS indicates that the Government was aware that "an increasing number of court decisions interpreting the PM(NOC) Regulations have given rise to the need to clarify the patent listing requirements" and that these decisions addressed issues of timing and relevance.

[144] Among those decisions was Justice Blanchard's decision in Pfizer Canada Inc v Canada (Attorney General) (TD), 2002 FCT 706, in which the Court was considering an earlier version of subsection 4(4) of the PMNOC Regulations which provided:

> A first person may, after the filing of a submission for a notice of compliance and within 30 days after the issuance of a patent that was issued on the basis of an application that has a filing date that precedes the date of filing of the submission, submit a patent list, or > an amendment to an existing patent list, that includes information referred to in subsection (2).

[145] The issue before the Court was whether the "filing date" in subsection 4(4) should be interpreted to be the priority filing date (in that case, the date of filing in the United States) or the Canadian filing date. The Minister had determined that "filing date" meant the Canadian filing date. The Applicants advanced a number of arguments in support of their assertion that "filing date" meant the priority filing date, including that the Minister's interpretation would place patentees who file their patent applications first in a country other than Canada at a disadvantage compared to patentees who choose to file first in Canada and results in a loss of rights during the priority period. In rejecting the Applicant's submissions, Justice Blanchard stated:

> [50] At the risk of stating the obvious, the Patent Act is Canadian legislation and provides for the grant of a patent to an inventor, "if an application for the patent in Canada is filed" (see subsection 27(1) [as am. idem, s. 31] of the Patent Act). Moreover, the Patent Act specifically defines "filing date" to be the Canadian filing date. In my view, any reference to "filing date" in the Act, or in the Regulations thereunder, must be read with regard to this definition. Such an interpretation is consistent with other provisions of the Patent Act and the Regulations which, for the most part, explicitly set out, in the context of the specific section, when "filing date" is meant as a date other than the Canadian filing date.

[146] Given the Pfizer decision, the Government was accordingly well aware of the issue raised by stakeholders as to the use of the Canadian filing date and the consequences thereof and engaged in consultations with stakeholders prior to the enactment of the current version of subsection 4(6) during which submissions could be made by stakeholders on this issue. The Governor in Council ultimately decided, in enacting subsection 4(6), to expressly include the Canadian filing date.

[147] With respect to subsection 4(6), the only commentary thereon in the 2006 RIAS provides as follows:

> By stipulating that the application filing date of the patent precede the date of the corresponding drug submission, the timing requirement promotes a temporal connection between the invention sought to be protected and the product sought to be approved. This ensures that patents for inventions discovered after the existence of a product do not pre-empt generic competition on that product.

[148] No express rationale is given in the 2006 RIAS as to why the Canadian filing date was specifically chosen. In its reasons for decision, OSIP notes that the Governor in Council chose for subsection 4(6) to refer to the first date of a patent term, as opposed to a date relevant to considerations of novelty, inventiveness or prior use and that this was a deliberate choice.

[149] Janssen asserts that the choice of the Canadian filing date is inconsistent with the aforementioned purpose of the timing requirement (namely, to prevent patents for inventions discovered after the existence of a product from pre-empting generic competition on that product), as the date of the invention's discovery is actually the claim date and not the Canadian filing date. Janssen stresses that the claim date (which is defined in sections 2 and 28.1 of the Patent Act) is the relevant date in several sections of the Patent Act, including those directed at novelty, inventiveness and the prior use defence, which are concepts at the core of an invention, and demonstrate that within the overall scheme of the Patent Act, the invention sought to be protected is linked to the claim date.

[150] Further, Janssen asserts that the selection of the Canadian filing date fails to advance effective enforcement of patents that would be infringed by the use of the early-working exception, such that there is no rational connection between the early-working exception and the requirement that a Canadian patent application be filed before a drug submission to be listed.

[151] I am not convinced by Janssen's submissions. While the 2006 RIAS expresses a rationale for subsection 4(6), the expressed rationale is in regard to why the filing of the patent application must occur before the submission of the SNDS. It was about the sequencing of the patent application and the SNDS, not about the rationale for picking the Canadian filing date over the claim date.

[152] The Governor in Council was well aware that since 1998, the Minister has "sought to apply the amendments on timing and relevance in order to place reasonable limits on the ability of innovator drug companies to list new patents on the basis of SNDS filings" [see 2006 RIAS] and that:

> It is recognized that there may be instances where a patent which does not qualify for the protection of the PM(NOC) Regulations is ultimately infringed by the fact of generic market entry. However, the Government's view is that where the patent fails to meet the listing requirements described above, policy considerations tip the balance in favour of immediate approval of the generic drug, and the matter is better left to the alternative judicial recourse of an infringement action. It follows that the continued viability of the regime greatly depends upon the fair and proper application of these listing requirements.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

[153] The Governor in Council made a choice that struck a particular balance between the PMNOC regime's competing objectives. The enactment of subsection 4(6) was within the Governor in Council's regulation making authority. As recognized by the Federal Court of Appeal in Innovative Medicines, having acted within the limits of the statutory language, the Governor in Council's regulation-making power is relatively unconstrained and it certainly falls within Governor in Council's purview to make policy-based choices such as this when deciding the balance to be struck. Could the Governor in Council have chosen to use the claim date in subsection 4(6)? Certainly. But the balance chosen by the date selected need not be perfect and it is not the role of the Court on this application to consider whether a different balance (as urged by Janssen) could have or ought to have been struck [see Sanofi-Aventis Canada Inc v Teva Canada Limited, 2012 FC 551 at para 24]. The burden rested on Janssen to demonstrate that the inclusion of the Canadian filing date was not in pursuance of and connected with the prevention of patent infringement and I am not satisfied that they have done so. Rather, I am satisfied that requiring that a patent meet certain timing requirements based on its Canadian filing date, which ensures timely market entry of subsequent generic drugs, is reasonably in keeping with the balance of the competing policy interests at issue.

[154] In some circumstances, the operation of the regulatory regime may benefit a subsequent entry drug manufacturer and in others, the innovator, depending on when the innovator choses to file their patent application in Canada. However, I am not satisfied that this renders subsection 4(6) ultra vires or otherwise arbitrary, illogical or irrational. I agree with the Respondent that, in Janssen's view, the language chosen by the Governor in Council must be the most beneficial to innovators in order to be rationally connected to the purpose of the Patent Act and the PMNOC

Regulations. But such an approach ignores the balancing of interests that must be undertaken. Moreover, it also ignores that innovators (whose patents benefit from a priority application) who chose to file their Canadian patent after their SNDS retain their right to bring patent infringement actions under the Patent Act regime and are not deprived of the benefit of their priority date in such actions.

[155] Janssen bears the burden of demonstrating that the Governor in Council's inclusion of the Canadian filing date in subsection 4(6) was unreasonable. For the reasons stated above, I am not satisfied that they have done so.

V. Conclusion

[156] Having found that Janssen has failed to demonstrate that any aspect of OSIP's decision is unreasonable and that the Canadian filing date requirement in subsection 4(6) of the PMNOC Regulations is ultra vires, illogical, irrational or arbitrary, the application for judicial review shall be dismissed.

VI. Costs

[157] At the hearing of the application, the parties advised that they agreed that the successful party should be awarded their costs fixed in the amount of $7,500.00. As the Respondents were successful on the application, they shall be awarded their costs in accordance with the parties' agreement.

JUDGMENT in T-2627-22

THIS COURT'S JUDGMENT is that:

1. The application for judicial review is dismissed.

2. The Applicant shall pay to the Respondents their costs of this application fixed in the amount of $7,500.00, inclusive of disbursements and taxes.

"Mandy Aylen"
Judge

FEDERAL COURT

SOLICITORS OF RECORD

| | |
|---|---|
| DOCKET: | T-2627-22 |
| STYLE OF CAUSE: | JANSSEN INC. v THE MINISTER OF HEALTH AND THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA |
| PLACE OF HEARING: | TORONTO, ONTARIO |
| DATE OF HEARING: | MAY 25, 2023 |
| JUDGMENT AND REASONS: | AYLEN J. |
| DATED: | JULY 17, 2023 |

APPEARANCES:

| | |
|---|---|
| Sana HalwaniJordana SanftAllison Jandura | FOR THE APPLICANT |
| Elizabeth KoudysLeah Bowes | FOR THE RESPONDENTS |

SOLICITORS OF RECORD:

| | |
|---|---|
| Lenczner Slaght LLPBarristersToronto, Ontario | FOR THE APPLICANT |
| Attorney General of CanadaToronto, Ontario | FOR THE RESPONDENTS |

16

Federal Court of Appeal | Cour d'appel fédérale

Date: 20231121

Docket: A-192-23

Citation: 2023 FCA 229

CORAM: WEBB J.A.
LASKIN J.A.
LOCKE J.A.

BETWEEN:

JANSSEN INC.

Appellant

and

THE MINISTER OF HEALTH and ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA

Respondents

Heard at Ottawa, Ontario, on November 21, 2023.
Judgment delivered from the Bench at Ottawa, Ontario, on November 21, 2023.

REASONS FOR JUDGMENT OF THE COURT BY: LOCKE J.A.

Federal Court of Appeal | Cour d'appel fédérale

Date: 20231121

Docket: A-192-23

Citation: 2023 FCA 229

CORAM: WEBB J.A.
LASKIN J.A.
LOCKE J.A.

BETWEEN:

JANSSEN INC.

Appellant

and

THE MINISTER OF HEALTH and ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA

Respondents

REASONS FOR JUDGMENT OF THE COURT
(Delivered from the Bench at Ottawa, Ontario, on November 21, 2023).

LOCKE J.A.

[1] Janssen Inc. (Janssen) obtained notices of compliance in respect of supplemental new drug submissions (SNDSs) numbered 224739 and 244670 on January 23, 2020 and September 9, 2021, respectively. Canadian Patent No. 3,113,837 (the 837 Patent) issued on July 12, 2022, and on July 25, 2022, Janssen submitted a patent list (pursuant to the Patented Medicines (Notice of Compliance) Regulations, S.O.R./93-133 (the Regulations)) in respect of SNDS 244670 identifying the 837 Patent. SNDS 224739 was not mentioned in this July 25, 2022 submission. It was only on September 14, 2022 that Janssen sought to include SNDS 224739 in the patent list.

[2] Health Canada's Office of Submissions and Intellectual Property (OSIP), on behalf of the Minister of Health, refused to accept the patent list in respect of SNDS 224739 citing several reasons. Janssen sought judicial review of OSIP's decision before the Federal Court, but this was dismissed (2023 FC 870, per Justice Mandy Aylen). For the purposes of the present appeal, it is sufficient to address only one of the reasons cited by OSIP: that the patent list submitted on July 25, 2022 did not relate to SNDS 224739, and the submission on September 14, 2022 that did mention SNDS 224739 was outside the 30-day period from the date of issuance of the 837 Patent, as contemplated in subsection 4(6) of the Regulations. Because of our conclusion on this issue, it is not necessary to address other questions raised in this appeal, such as (i) whether the September 14, 2022 submission satisfied the other requirements for a patent list, and (ii) whether part of subsection 4(6) of the Regulations (unrelated to the 30-day period referred to above) is ultra vires.

[3] The parties agree on the standard of review, and we concur. As discussed in Agraira v. Canada (Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness), 2013 SCC 36, [2013] 2 S.C.R. 559 at para. 45, the question for this Court to decide is whether the Federal Court identified the appropriate standard of review and applied it correctly. We are to step into the shoes of the Federal Court and focus on OSIP's decision. The parties also agree, as do we, that the Federal Court identified the appropriate standard of review: reasonableness. The issue therefore is whether the Federal Court correctly applied the reasonableness standard of review.

[4] In respect of the one issue that we must address in this appeal, OSIP noted that subsection 4(4) of the Regulations enumerates requirements for a patent list, including paragraph 4(4)(a) concerning identification of the SNDS (or new drug submission) to which the list relates. OSIP noted correctly that the patent list submitted on July 25, 2022 did not identify SNDS 224739, and hence this requirement was not met. OSIP rejected Janssen's arguments that (i) the later September 14, 2022 submission could change the nature of the July 25, 2022 patent list, and (ii) OSIP's preliminary response to the July 25, 2022 patent list acknowledged that it also concerned SNDS 224739. OSIP also noted that the 30-day deadline contemplated in subsection 4(6) of the Regulations expired on August 11, 2022. Therefore, the September 14, 2022 submission was too late, even assuming (contrary to OSIP's view) that it met the requirements for a patent list.

[5] We are not convinced that there was anything unreasonable in OSIP's analysis in this regard. We also do not agree with Janssen's argument that subsection 4(7) of the Regulations should be read to permit it to update the patent list by adding reference to an additional SNDS. Subsection 4(7) provides that a first person "must keep the information on the list up to date"; this subsection does not permit adding a patent to the list. We see nothing in the patent list in this case that would have engaged this provision. The information on the patent list was up to date. Janssen cannot, under the guide of keeping the information on the patent list up to date, add a different SNDS to an existing patent list.

[6] It follows from the foregoing that we find no reviewable error in the Federal Court's conclusion that OSIP's refusal to add the patent list against SNDS 224739 was reasonable.

[7] We will dismiss this appeal with costs.

"George R. Locke"
J.A.

FEDERAL COURT OF APPEAL

NAMES OF COUNSEL AND SOLICITORS OF RECORD

| | |
|---|---|
| DOCKET: | A-192-23 |
| STYLE OF CAUSE: | JANSSEN INC. v. THE MINISTER OF HEALTH and ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA |
| PLACE OF HEARING: | OTTAWA, ONTARIO |
| DATE OF HEARING: | NOVEMBER 21, 2023 |
| REASONS FOR JUDGMENT OF THE COURT BY: | WEBB J.A.LASKIN J.A.LOCKE J.A. |
| DELIVERED FROM THE BENCH BY: | LOCKE J.A. |

APPEARANCES:

| | |
|---|---|
| Sana HalwaniJordana Sanft | FOR THE APPELLANTJANSSEN INC. |
| Elizabeth KoudysJames SchneiderLeah Bowes | FOR THE RESPONDENTSTHE MINISTER OF HEALTHand ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA |

SOLICITORS OF RECORD:

| | |
|---|---|
| Lenczner Slaght LLPToronto, Ontario | FOR THE APPELLANTJANSSEN INC. |
| Shalene Curtis-MicallefDeputy Attorney General of Canada | FOR THE RESPONDENTSTHE MINISTER OF HEALTHand ATTORNEY GENERAL OF CANADA |

17

Competition Tribunal | Tribunal de la Concurrence

Reference: Nadeau Poultry Farm Limited v. Groupe Westco Inc. et al., 2008 Comp. Trib. 7
File No.: CT-2008-003
Registry Document No.: 0029

IN THE MATTER of the Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, as amended;

AND IN THE MATTER of an Application by Nadeau Ferme Avicole Limitée/Nadeau Poultry Farm Limited for an Order pursuant to section 103.1 granting leave to make an Application under section 75 of the Competition Act;

AND IN THE MATTER of an Application by Nadeau Ferme Avicole Limitée/Nadeau Poultry Farm Limited for an Interim Order pursuant to section 104 of the Competition Act.

B E T W E E N:

Nadeau Ferme Avicole Limitée/
Nadeau Poultry Farm Limited
(applicant)

and

Groupe Westco Inc. and Groupe Dynaco, Coopérative Agroalimentaire, and Volailles Acadia S.E.C. and Volailles Acadia Inc./
Acadia Poultry Inc.
(respondents)

Decided on the basis of the written record.
Presiding Judicial Member: Blanchard J.
Date of Reasons and Order: May 12, 2008
Reasons and Order signed by: Justice Edmond P. Blanchard

REASONS FOR ORDER AND ORDER GRANTING AN APPLICATION FOR LEAVE UNDER SECTION 103.1 OF THE COMPETITION ACT

I. INTRODUCTION

[1] Nadeau Ferme Avicole Limitée/Nadeau Poultry Farm Limited (the Applicant) applies to the Competition Tribunal (the Tribunal), pursuant to section 103.1 of the Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34 as amended (the Act), for leave to bring an application under section 75 of the Act. If leave is granted it further seeks orders under subsection 75(1) and section 104 of the Act directing the Respondents to continue to deal with the Applicant and to supply it with live chickens on the usual trade terms, in the volumes previously supplied.

[2] Pursuant to subsections 103.1(1) and (6) of the Act, the Tribunal has relied on the affidavit of Anthony Tavares, Chief Executive Officer of Maple Lodge (the Tavares Affidvit), and the written representations of the parties, including the Applicant's reply, in deciding this application for leave.

II. THE PARTIES

[3] The Applicant is a corporation incorporated under the laws of the Province of New Brunswick and is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Maple Lodge Holding Corporation (Maple Lodge), which is one of the largest processors of chicken in Canada. Maple Lodge employs about 2,300 people and operates two processing facilities in Canada; one in Norval, Ontario and one in St-François de Madawaska, New Brunswick (the St-François Plant). The St-François Plant processes chickens for the Quebec and Maritime markets and is operated by the Applicant.

[4] The Respondent, Groupe Westco Inc. (Westco) is a corporation incorporated under the laws of the Province of New Brunswick. Westco is highly integrated in the chicken industry. It owns or controls hatching egg production quota, farms, chicken production quota and chicken production farms. Its chicken production facilities are located in New Brunswick and elsewhere. A brochure published by Westco (Exhibit B to the Tavares Affidavit) indicates that it currently has, besides its chicken production facilities, hatcheries and transportation facilities. The brochure also refers to "Volailles Acadia" as a "coentreprise" that was acquired in 2006. The brochure states that Westco has 51% of New Brunswick's chicken production, and "Volailles Acadia" has 17%, for a total of 68%. The Applicant states that Westco supplies close to 33% of its live chickens.

[5] The Respondent, Groupe Dynaco, Coopérative Agroalimentaire (Dynaco), is a cooperative registered in the Province of Quebec. Dynaco has interests in certain chicken production facilities in the Province of New Brunswick. Dynaco is highly integrated in a number of industries, including the chicken industry. The Applicant says that Dynaco supplies 4.6% of its live chickens. It offers a wide range of products and services to meet the needs of agricultural producers and consumers. In Westco's submissions it is conceded that it owns one of Dynaco's 734 shares.

[6] The Respondent, Volailles Acadia S.E.C., created under the laws of the Province of Quebec, is registered as an extra-provincial limited partnership in the Province of New Brunswick, and the Respondent, Volailles Acadia Inc./Acadia Poultry Inc., incorporated under the laws of Canada, is registered as an extra-provincial corporation in the Province of New Brunswick (collectively Acadia). Acadia also supplies the Applicant with live chickens. The Applicant alleges that Acadia is jointly owned by Westco and Dynaco. In Westco's submissions it is conceded that it has a 25% interest in Volailles Acadia S.E.C.

III. THE RELEVANT FACTS

[7] The production of chicken for the Canadian market is managed under a national supply management system that operates through co-ordinated federal-provincial regulatory schemes. Essentially the Chicken Farmers of Canada (CFC), an agency established under the Farm Products Agencies Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. F-4, among other things, establishes chicken production quotas federally and distributes quota to each member province. In New Brunswick, the Chicken Farmers of New Brunswick (CFNB), a provincial commodity board established by regulation under the New Brunswick Natural Products Act, S.N.B. 1999, c. N-1.2, regulates the intra-provincial production and marketing of chicken in New Brunswick. The quotas allotted to New Brunswick by the CFC are, in turn, allotted to the various producers in New Brunswick by the CFNB.

[8] The supply management system applies only to impose live chicken production quotas on producers. There is nothing to require a producer to direct its live chicken supply to any particular processor within or outside New Brunswick. Nor does there appear to be any express restriction on producers becoming involved in chicken processing.

[9] Historically, the Applicant has obtained 100% of its live chickens from New Brunswick producers, of which almost 75% has come from quota now owned by the Respondents. At the time of this application, live chickens were also being supplied to the Applicant from Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. A number of chicken producers in New Brunswick have consolidated their quotas into three main producer groups, namely the Respondents, which together produce almost 75% of New Brunswick's live chickens. The undisputed evidence is that while the quotas remain in the names of the original producers, the ownership or control of the production has been transferred to the Respondents. At the time of this application the Respondents are supplying about 48% of the Applicant's chickens.

[10] Olymel, a Quebec based processor and the Applicant's primary competitor in Quebec and the Eastern provinces, in consort with Westco wanted to buy the St-François Plant. On August 19, 2007, Olymel and Westco, (the Consortium) informed the Applicant that if it was not prepared to sell at a price acceptable to the Consortium, then all of the chicken produced by Westco and Dynaco would temporarily be diverted to Olymel's processing facility in Quebec while the Consortium built its own plant in New Brunswick. Westco had let it be known that it had always been its intention to integrate processing into its business plan.

[11] Negotiations for the purchase of the St-François Plant between the Applicant and the Consortium failed. As a result, on January 21, 2008, Westco notified the Applicant that it would cease supplying live chickens to the Applicant effective July 20, 2008, by reason of its decision to have its live chickens processed at the Consortium's new New Brunswick plant.

[12] On January 24, 2008, Dynaco advised the Applicant that it would also cease to supply the Applicant with live chickens because the Applicant had sullied its name by referring to Dynaco in correspondence with the New Brunswick Minister of Agriculture. On February 6, 2008, notwithstanding an apology by the Applicant for the mistaken reference to Dynaco in the letter to the Minister, Dynaco confirmed that its supply to the Applicant would terminate in the middle of September, 2008.

[13] By letter dated February 28, 2008, Acadia gave formal notice that it would cease supplying live chickens to the Applicant, effective September 15, 2008.

[14] The Applicant contends that the refusal to deal by the Respondents collectively will reduce by 75% the supply of live chickens from New Brunswick to the Applicant. This translates, on average, to approximately 48% of the 565,800 chickens (i.e. 271,350) processed weekly at the plant. The Applicant's evidence is that it requires a guarantee of 350,000 live chickens per week to stay viable and that the absolute minimum supply required to simply "get by" is 300,000 live chickens per week.

[15] The Applicant's evidence is that losing Westco's 186,230 chickens alone would cause revenue loss of over $830,000 per week, and loss of profit of more than $139,000 per week. Because of the high level of fixed costs at the St-François Plant, loss of the Westco chickens alone would reduce profits by about 50% on an annual basis.

[16] The Applicant contends that if the Respondents cut off the Applicant's supply, the St-Francois Plant will only be able to run at 40% of capacity. Processing would be reduced to just over ¾ of one shift and a majority of the 340 jobs would be lost immediately. According to the Applicant, the viability of the whole plant would be severely compromised.

[17] The Applicant argues that the refusal of each of Westco, Dynaco and Acadia, separately, would substantially affect its business. Together, they might destroy the business completely.

IV. ANALYSIS

[18] Subsection 103.1(7) of the Act sets out the test for leave on an application under section 75 of the Act. It reads:

| | |
|---|---|
| 103.1(7) The Tribunal may grant leave to make an application under section 75 or 77 if it has reason to believe that the applicant is directly and substantially affected in the applicants' business by any practice referred to in one of those sections that could be subject to an order under that section. | 103.1(7) Le Tribunal peut faire droit à une demande de permission de présenter une demande en vertu des articles 75 ou 77 s'il a des raisons de croire que l'auteur de la demande est directement et sensiblement gêné dans son entreprise en raison de l'existence de l'une ou l'autre des pratiques qui pourraient faire l'objet d'une ordonnance en vertu de ces articles. |

[19] The test to be followed on an application for leave was first applied by Madam Justice Dawson in National Capital News Canada v. Milliken, 2002 Comp. Trib. 41, par. 14. The test as articulated by Madam Justice Dawson was subsequently adopted by the Federal Court of Appeal in Barcode Systems Inc. v. Symbol Technologies Canada ULC, [2004] FCA 339. Pursuant to this test, the Tribunal must determine whether the leave application is supported by sufficient credible evidence to give rise to a bona fide belief that the applicant may have been directly and substantially affected in the applicant's business by a reviewable practice and that the practice in question could be subject to an order.

[20] In considering a leave application, all the elements of the reviewable trade practice of refusal to deal set out in subsection 75 (1) of the Act must be addressed. See Barcode, above, at paragraph 18.

[21] Subsection 75(1) of the Act provides as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| 75.(1) Where, on application by the Commissioner or a person granted leave under section 103.1, the Tribunal finds that | 75.(1) Lorsque, à la demande du commissaire ou d'une personne autorisée en vertu de l'article 103.1, le Tribunal conclut : |
| (a) a person is substantially affected in his business or is precluded from carrying on business due to his inability to obtain adequate supplies of a product anywhere in a market on usual trade terms, | a) qu'une personne est sensiblement gênée dans son entreprise ou ne peut exploiter une entreprise du fait qu'elle est incapable de se procurer un produit de façon suffisante, où que ce soit sur un marché, aux conditions de commerce normales; |
| (b) the person referred to in paragraph (a) is unable to obtain adequate supplies of the product because of insufficient competition among suppliers of the product in the market, | b) que la personne mentionnée à l'alinéa a) est incapable de se procurer le produit de façon suffisante en raison de l'insuffisance de la concurrence entre les fournisseurs de ce produit sur ce marché; |
| (c) the person referred to in paragraph (a) is willing and able to meet the usual trade terms of the supplier or suppliers of the product, | c) que la personne mentionnée à l'alinéa a) accepte et est en mesure de respecter les conditions de commerce normales imposées par le ou les fournisseurs de ce produit; |
| (d) the product is in ample supply, and | d) que le produit est disponible en quantité amplement suffisante; |
| (e) the refusal to deal is having or is likely to have an adverse effect on competition in a market, | e) que le refus de vendre a ou aura vraisemblablement pour effet de nuire à la concurrence dans un marché, |
| the Tribunal may order that one or more suppliers of the product in the market accept the person as a customer within a specified time on usual trade terms unless, within the specified time, in the case of an article, any customs duties on the article are removed, reduced or remitted and the effect of the removal, reduction or remission is to place the | le Tribunal peut ordonner qu'un ou plusieurs fournisseurs de ce produit sur le marché en question acceptent cette personne comme client dans un délai déterminé aux conditions de commerce normales à moins que, au cours de ce |

person on an equal footing with other persons who are able to obtain adequate supplies of the article in Canada.

délai, dans le cas d'un article, les droits de douane qui lui sont applicables ne soient supprimés, réduits ou remis de façon à mettre cette personne sur un pied d'égalité avec d'autres personnes qui sont capables de se procurer l'article en quantité suffisante au Canada.

[22] I will now turn to the first part of the test: whether the evidence before the Tribunal is sufficient to satisfy it that there is reason to believe that the Applicant is directly and substantially affected in its business by a practice referred to in section 75.

[23] The Applicant's affiant attests that the St-François Plant is the Applicant's only business and that the Respondents' refusals will have a substantial and direct impact on that business. The evidence indicates that the Respondents' refusals will collectively lead to a loss of approximately 48% of its current supply of live chickens reducing the Applicant's operations to approximately 40% of capacity. While the Respondents Dynaco and Acadia submit that their respective refusals cannot substantially affect the Applicant's business because of their small numbers, I am satisfied that there is evidence of ties between the Respondents which leads me to consider, for the purpose of this leave application, the collective impact of refusals by all Respondents.

[24] The Tribunal has not accepted the Respondents' submissions that the business to be examined is that of Maple Lodge. Rather, when considering an application for leave under section 103.1 of the Act, the Tribunal must examine the "applicant's business". The Applicant is not Maple Lodge.

[25] The uncontested evidence before the Tribunal indicates that the Respondents will cut off supply shortly. In my view, one should not have to wait until harm actually occurs before bringing an application under subsection 103.1(1) of the Act (see also Robinson Motorcycle Limited v. Fred Deely Imports Ltd., 2005 Comp. Trib. 52, where leave was granted before supply was scheduled to cease).

[26] I am therefore satisfied that the Tribunal has reason to believe that the Applicant is directly and substantially affected in its business by the Respondents' refusals.

[27] I will now turn to the second part of the test, the factors in subsection 75(1) of the Act.

[28] As I explained above, the Applicant's affiant attests that the Respondents' refusals will have a substantial and direct impact on the Applicant's business. The parties appear to agree at this stage that the "product" at issue for the purposes of paragraph 75(1)(a) is live chickens.

[29] The Respondents contend in their written submissions that the Applicant adduced no evidence to establish the geographic market or show what efforts were made by the Applicant to secure alternate supplies.

[30] However, the Applicant's affiant attests that "Nadeau cannot obtain replacement supplies of live chicken from within or outside New Brunswick …" and that "Because the supply management system creates monopoly production rights for producers and all production is already allocated to other processing plants, Nadeau would be unable to replace the lost volumes from other sources."

[31] Given the uncontested evidence that all the Respondents are about to cut off supply to the Applicant, I am satisfied that the Tribunal could conclude that the Applicant's business is substantially affected due to its inability to obtain adequate supplies of live chickens.

[32] With respect to paragraph 75(1)(b) of the Act, the evidence shows that 74.18% of the chicken quota in New Brunswick is in the hands of the three Respondents. The production of chicken for the Canadian market is managed under a national supply management system. However, that system leaves producers free to sell to the processors of their choice at negotiated prices above a regulated minimum. It is noteworthy that Westco concedes in its submissions that there is "vigorous" competition in the production of live chickens.

[33] In these circumstances and considering the fact that 75% of the New Brunswick supply is controlled by the Respondents, the Tribunal could conclude that the Applicant is unable to obtain adequate supplies of live chickens because of insufficient competition among suppliers.

[34] With respect to paragraph 75(1)(c), the Respondents do not appear to challenge the evidence that the Applicant is willing and able to meet the Respondents' usual trade terms. In any event, I am satisfied that the Tribunal could conclude that the Applicant is willing and able to meet the usual trade terms of the suppliers.

[35] Paragraph 75(1)(d) requires that the product be in ample supply. The evidence indicates that the Respondents' ability to supply the Applicant has never been a problem. The Supreme Court of Canada has recognized that "[t]he quota system is an attempt to maintain an equilibrium between supply and demand and attenuate the inherent instability of the markets" (see Fédération des producteurs de volailles du Québec v. Pelland, [2005] 1 S.C.R. 292, 2005 SCC 20, at par. 38). I am satisfied in the circumstances that the Tribunal could conclude that live chickens are in "ample supply".

[36] The market at issue for the purposes of paragraph 75(1)(e) is the market in which the Applicant participates, involving the sale of processed chickens. The Applicant's affiant attests that the refusals could lead to the closure of the Applicant's processing plant, thereby eliminating a major competitor in the market place. He explains that the closure of the St-François Plant "…would result in a significant reduction of competition in the chicken market in Quebec and the Maritime provinces." In the circumstances, I am satisfied that the Tribunal could conclude that the refusals are likely to have an adverse effect on competition in a market.

[37] For these reasons, I conclude that the Tribunal "could" make an order requiring the Respondents to supply the Applicant.

[38] The Tribunal has therefore reason to believe that the Applicant is directly and substantially affected in the Applicant's business by a practice referred to in section 75 that could be subject to an order under that section. Accordingly, leave is granted.

FOR THESE REASONS THE TRIBUNAL ORDERS THAT:

[39] The Application for leave to apply under section 75 of the Act is granted.

DATED at Ottawa, this 12th day of May 2008.

SIGNED on behalf of the Tribunal by the presiding judicial member.

(s) Edmond P. Blanchard

COUNSEL:

For the applicant

Nadeau Ferme Avicole Limitée/Nadeau Poultry Farm Limited

Leah Price
Andrea McCrae

For the respondents

Groupe Westco Inc.

Denis Gascon
Geoffrey Conrad
Éric C. Lefebvre

Groupe Dynaco, Coopérative Agroalimentaire

Paul Routhier
Paul Michaud
Louis Masson

Volailles Acadia S.E.C. and Volailles Acadia Inc./Acadia Poultry Inc.

Pierre Beaudoin
Valérie Belle-Isle

18

Reference: National Capital News Canada v. Milliken, 2002 Comp. Trib. 41
File no.: CT2002005
Registry document no.: 0004

IN THE MATTER OF an application by Mr. Robert Gilles Gauthier, carrying on business as The National Capital News Canada, pursuant to section 103.1 of the Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, for leave to make an application under section 75 of the Act.

B E T W E E N :

The National Capital News Canada
(applicant)

and

The Honourable Peter Milliken, M.P.
(respondent)

Decided on the basis of the written record.
Member: Dawson J. (presiding)
Date of reasons and order: 20021213
Reasons and order signed by: Dawson J.

REASONS AND ORDER REGARDING APPLICATION FOR LEAVE TO MAKE AN APPLICATION UNDER SECTION 75 OF THE *COMPETITION ACT

I. INTRODUCTION

[1] This is the first application to the Competition Tribunal ("Tribunal") brought by a party other than the Commissioner of Competition ("Commissioner"). Pursuant to recent amendments to the Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, ("Act") an application by a party other than the Commissioner can only be commenced if leave is granted by a judicial member of the Tribunal.

II. RELEVANT FACTS

[2] Mr. Robert Gilles Gauthier ("applicant") filed, pursuant to subsection 103.1(1) of the Act, an application for leave ("leave application") to make an application under section 75 of the Act ("application") against the Honourable Peter Milliken. Mr. Milliken is named in his capacity as Speaker of the House of Commons ("Speaker"). Sections 75 and 103.1 of the Act are attached to these reasons as Schedule A.

[3] In substance, Mr. Gauthier, as proprietor of The National Capital News Canada ("National Capital News"), seeks an order under section 75 of the Act requiring that he and his associates and employees be provided with access to the Parliamentary Press Gallery, without becoming a member of Canadian Parliamentary Press Gallery Inc., and without " . . . being required to meet unfair or arbitrarily restrictive conditions of any other person, group or government official."

[4] Contained within the leave application is a statement of grounds and material facts on which the applicant relies. The applicant also filed an affidavit sworn by him in support of the leave application. The applicant asserts that he has been substantially affected in his business, and is significantly precluded from carrying on business, due to his alleged inability to obtain full access to substantial supplies of information and to essential services (including listing on the Press Gallery journalist list) that are provided to his competitors by the Speaker. The Speaker is said to control such access on behalf of the Parliament of Canada. The affidavit describes the history of the National Capital News and its business environment, its alleged need to gain access to sources of information related to the Parliament and Government of Canada and the difficulties encountered over the years to obtain access. Exhibits attached to the affidavit consist of: (1) a copy of a March 25, 1994, letter from Mr. Brian A. Crane, Q.C., counsel for the Speaker of the House of Commons at the time; (2) a letter dated November 10, 1989, from Mr. Marcel R. Pelletier, Q.C., the House of Commons Law Clerk and Parliamentary Counsel, confirming that there has been no legislation ceding a certain power to the Parliamentary Press Gallery; (3) an order of the Ontario Court (General Division) dated January 8, 1996, prohibiting Mr. Gauthier from coming onto the premises of the Canadian Parliamentary Press Gallery; and (4) a letter dated October 16, 1995, from M.G. Cloutier, the Sergeant-at-Arms, House of Commons, confirming there is no restriction on Mr. Gauthier's access to the buildings on Parliament Hill on the same basis as other visitors, with the exception of access to the Press Gallery premises.

[5] The affidavit does not describe in any detail the facilities and services provided to the media by the Speaker, the physical location of the Parliamentary Press Gallery, or the location at which other services are provided.

[6] The Speaker did not file any material in reply to the leave application. While a respondent to a leave application is not required to make any response, the Tribunal would generally be assisted by relevant material and submissions filed by a respondent in opposition to a leave application.

III. THE TEST FOR THE GRANTING OF LEAVE UNDER SECTION 103.1 OF THE ACT

[7] The test for the granting of leave is contained in subsection 103.1(7) of the Act. It provides as follows:

> The Tribunal may grant leave to make an application under section 75 or 77 if it has reason to believe that the applicant is directly and substantially affected in the applicants' business by any practice referred to in one of those sections that could be subject to an order under that section. (emphasis added)

[8] In order to exercise its discretion to grant leave, the Tribunal must therefore be satisfied that it has reason to believe that: (1) the applicant is directly and substantially affected in the applicant's business by any practice referred to in section 75 or 77 of the Act; and (2) the alleged practice could be subject to an order under that section.

IV. THE REQUIREMENT OF "REASON TO BELIEVE"

[9] While the phrase "reason to believe" is new to the Act, it has been judicially considered in other contexts. In Regina v. Rollins, 80 C.C.C. (3d) 385, the British Columbia Supreme Court considered the phrase as it was contained in section 756 of the Criminal Code, R.S.C. 1985, c. 27 (1st Supp), which generally allowed a justice to place an offender in custody for observation where there was reason to believe that evidence might be obtained as a result of the observation that would be relevant to dangerous offender proceedings. The Court concluded that the expression "reason to believe" requires reasonable grounds for the "reason to believe". McKinnon J. wrote, at page 395, that:

> I accept that s. 756 requires reasonable grounds for the "reason to believe." That is a precondition to the belief and in most cases will come from the medical opinion but might come from other sources as well; however, in any event, there nevertheless exists the requirement that the court's opinion must be supported by the evidence of at least one medical practitioner. There are, therefore, criteria which offer controlled direction in the exercise of the court's discretion and an ability to obtain a "settled meaning" in relation to the wording or test enunciated in s. 756 which can be used in each application.
>
> I find that s. 756 is a broad test that is not unduly vague and which does set forth an "intelligible" standard, albeit not a difficult one to meet. (emphasis added)

[10] I accept that the requirement that the Tribunal has "reason to believe" does not require that it be satisfied that an applicant be directly and substantially affected, but rather that there are reasonable grounds to believe the applicant's allegations that he has been so affected.

[11] As to the nature of the evidence required to establish reasonable grounds upon which to believe that an applicant has been directly and substantially affected, the Federal Court has considered the standard of proof required to show the existence of reasonable grounds for a belief.

[12] In Canada (Attorney General) v. Jolly, [1975] F.C. 216 (C.A.), the Federal Court of Appeal was asked to determine whether there were "reasonable grounds for believing" that an organization, with whom the respondent was associated, was a subversive organization. The Court concluded that, even after prima facie evidence had been adduced by the respondent denying the fact, it was only necessary for the Minister to show the existence of reasonable grounds for believing the fact. It was unnecessary for the Minister to go further and establish the subversive character of the organization. The Court stated at paragraph 18:

> . . . But where the fact to be ascertained on the evidence is whether there are reasonable grounds for such a belief, rather than the existence of the fact itself, it seems to me that to require proof of the fact itself and proceed to determine whether it has been established is to demand the proof of a different fact from that required to be ascertained. It seems to me that the use by the statute of the expression "reasonable grounds for believing" implies that the fact itself need not be established and that evidence which falls short of proving the subversive character of the organization will be sufficient if it is enough to show reasonable grounds for believing that the organization is one that advocates subversion by force, etc. In a close case the failure to observe this distinction and to resolve the precise question dictated by the statutory wording can account for a difference in the result of an inquiry or an appeal. (emphasis added)

[13] Subsequently, in Chiau v. Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration) (C.A.), [2001] 2 F.C. 297, the Federal Court of Appeal, when asked to determine the proper interpretation of the term "reasonable grounds" in the context of paragraph 19(1)(c.2) of the Immigration Act of Canada, R.S.C. 1985, c. I-2, stated at paragraph 60:

> As for whether there were "reasonable grounds" for the officer's belief, I agree with the Trial Judge's definition of "reasonable grounds" . . . as a standard of proof that, while falling short of a balance of probabilities, nonetheless connotes "a bona fide belief in a serious possibility based on credible evidence." See Attorney General of Canada v. Jolly, [1975] F.C. 216 (C.A.). (emphasis added)

Leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada was denied (see [2001] S.C.C.A. No. 71).

[14] Accordingly, on the basis of the plain meaning of the wording used in subsection 103.1(7) of the Act and the jurisprudence referred to above, I conclude that the appropriate standard under subsection 103.1(7) is whether the leave application is supported by sufficient credible evidence to give rise to a bona fide belief that the applicant may have been directly and substantially affected in the applicant's business by a reviewable practice, and that the practice in question could be subject to an order.

V. APPLICATION OF THE TEST TO THIS LEAVE APPLICATION

[15] I turn now to whether the evidence before the Tribunal is sufficient to satisfy it that there is reason to believe that:

> (1) the applicant is directly and substantially affected in his business by a practice referred to in section 75 of the Act; and
> (2) the alleged practice could be subject to an order under section 75 of the Act.

[16] It is the second element of the test which I consider to be dispositive of the leave application. I conclude that, for the following reasons, the applicant has failed to establish that the alleged reviewable practice could be subject to an order under section 75 of the Act.

[17] The order sought by the applicant against the Speaker is an order that:

> . . . pursuant to Section 75(1), (2) and (3) of the Competition Act, Restrictive Trade Practices, Refusal to Deal . . . full access to the Press Gallery facilities and services, including mailbox, listing and other benefits, be provided immediately to the applicant and his employees and associates without further delay . . . (application, paragraph 10)

[18] In the statement of grounds and material facts the applicant alleges that access to the services which he seeks is controlled by the Speaker, " . . . who controls such access on behalf of the Parliament of Canada." (application, paragraph 3) The evidence adduced by the applicant in his affidavit as it touches on this point is as follows:

> 6. I have invested 20 years of my life and more than my own financial resources into this business and have been seriously impeded by the Speaker of the House of Commons who finances and controls the facilities and services provided for the media by the House of Commons.
>
> . . .
>
> 17. The House of Commons provides substantial facilities and services made available to members of the media and which allow journalists and their employers to earn their living and realize serious commercial rewards.
>
> . . .
>
> 36. The facilities and services provided by the House of Commons fall under the direct control of the Speaker of the House of Commons who has the sole authority to determine who may have access to the Press Gallery facilities and services.
>
> . . .

38. The power to regulate the admission of strangers to the precincts of Parliament, including the Press Gallery, resides with Parliament alone and has customarily been exercised by the Speaker. (Erskine May's Treatise on the Law, Privileges, Proceedings and Usage of Parliament, 16th ed. London: Butterworths, 1976.)

39. There has been no delegation of that power by either Parliament itself nor the Speaker of the House of Commons to the privately-owned Canadian Parliamentary Press Gallery Corporation, as confirmed by the House of Commons Law Clerk and Parliamentary Counsel, in his letter 10 November 1989 to the applicant's Legal Counsel at that time, being Exhibit "B" to this my affidavit.

40. The applicant alleges that the Speaker is the sole person in control of the media facilities and services and therefore to the resultant commercial benefits derived by journalists and publishers who have access.

41. The Speaker has the duty to administer these publicly-funded facilities and services in a fair manner pursuant to the provisions of the Competition Act.

[19] The applicant is, I believe, correct that it is the Speaker who alone has the power to control access to any part of the House, including the Press Gallery. What is significant, however, is that the Speaker does so through constitutional powers and parliamentary privilege.

[20] The origin and nature of parliamentary privilege was reviewed by the Supreme Court of Canada in New Brunswick Broadcasting Co. v. Nova Scotia (Speaker of the House of Assembly) [1993] 1 S.C.R. 319. There, Justice McLachlin, as she then was, writing for the majority noted that Canadian legislative bodies possess those historically recognized inherent constitutional powers which are necessary to their proper functioning. Writing with respect to the historical tradition of parliamentary privilege, Justice McLachlin stated at pages 378 to 379:

> . . . It has long been accepted that in order to perform their functions, legislative bodies require certain privileges relating to the conduct of their business. It has also long been accepted that these privileges must be held absolutely and constitutionally if they are to be effective; the legislative branch of our government must enjoy a certain autonomy which even the Crown and the courts cannot touch.
>
> The Parliamentary privilege of the British Parliament at Westminster sprang originally from the authority of Parliament as a court. Over the centuries, Parliament won for itself the right to control its own affairs, independent of the Crown and of the courts. The courts could determine whether a parliamentary privilege existed, but once they determined that it did, the courts had no power to regulate the exercise of that power. One of those privileges, held absolutely and deemed to be constitutional, was the power to exclude strangers from the proceedings of the House.

[21] Justice McLachlin went on to confirm that Canadian legislative bodies properly claim as inherent privileges those rights which are necessary to their capacity to function as legislative bodies (page 381), and, added at page 383, that:

> . . . If a matter falls within this necessary sphere of matters without which the dignity and efficiency of the House cannot be upheld, courts will not inquire into questions concerning such privilege. All such questions will instead fall to the exclusive jurisdiction of the legislative body. (emphasis added)

[22] As to the scope of that exclusive jurisdiction, at page 384 Justice McLachlin wrote:

> . . . The parameters of this jurisdiction are set by what is necessary to the legislative body's capacity to function. So defined, the principle of necessity will encompass not only certain claimed privileges, but also the power to determine, adjudicate upon and apply those privileges. Were the courts to examine the content of particular exercises of valid privilege, and hold some of these exercises invalid, they would trump the exclusive jurisdiction of the legislative body, after having admitted that the privilege in issue falls within the exclusive jurisdiction of the legislative body. The only area for court review is at the initial jurisdictional level: is the privilege claimed one of those privileges necessary to the capacity of the legislature to function? A particular exercise of a necessary privilege cannot then be reviewed, unless the deference and the conclusion reached at the initial stage be rendered nugatory. (emphasis added)

[23] One of the specific privileges discussed by Justice McLachlin was the parliamentary privilege to eject strangers from the House and its precincts. She observed that this ancient privilege was now reposed in the Speaker "who alone has the power, whenever he or she sees fit, to order the withdrawal of strangers from any part of the House" (page 386). This privilege is necessary because the legislative chamber is at the core of the system of representative government (page 387).

[24] J.P. Joseph Maingot, Q.C., in Parliamentary Privilege in Canada, 2nd Ed. (Montreal: McGill-Queen's University Press, 1997) enumerates the rights, privileges and powers of the Senate and House of Commons in Chapter 11. One such privilege is the right to regulate internal affairs free from interference. This is said to include the right to administer internal affairs both within its precincts and beyond the debating chamber.

[25] No evidence or information was provided to suggest that any of the facilities or services that the applicant seeks fall outside the scope of Parliamentary privilege. The applicant asserts that the facilities and services which he seeks are provided by the House of Commons, and are financed and controlled by the Speaker who exercises Parliament's power to regulate the admission of strangers to its precincts.

[26] Applying the principles articulated in New Brunswick Broadcasting, cited above, to the evidentiary record before me, I am satisfied that the Speaker's alleged refusal to grant to the applicant full access to the Parliamentary Press Gallery facilities and services is an exercise of the parliamentary privilege to control access to the House and its precincts and to regulate the internal affairs of the House. Such privilege also encompass the power to adjudicate and apply those privileges.

[27] A similar conclusion was reached by the Ontario Court (General Division) in Gauthier v. Canada (Speaker of the House of Commons), (1994), 25 C.R.R. (2d) 286 where Madam Justice Bell found that the Court did not have jurisdiction to review the Speaker's decision to deny the plaintiff access to the precincts of Parliament.

[28] Just as a court may not examine a particular exercise of these privileges, I conclude that the Tribunal is without jurisdiction to embark upon such examination. The Tribunal is, pursuant to section 9 of the Competition Tribunal Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. 19 (2nd Supp.), a court of record and principles of Parliamentary privilege are as important and applicable to it as they are to other courts. Therefore the practice complained of could not be the subject of any order of the Tribunal under section 75 of the Act.

[29] It follows that the Tribunal does not have, and can not have, any basis upon which to believe that the practice complained of by the applicant could be subject to an order. This requirement of subsection 103.1(7) of the Act is not met and therefore the application for leave must fail. In view of this conclusion it is unnecessary to consider whether the applicant adduced sufficient evidence to meet the first element of the test for leave.

FOR THESE REASONS THE TRIBUNAL ORDERS THAT:

[30] The leave application is denied.

DATED at Ottawa, this 13th day of December, 2002.

SIGNED on behalf of the Tribunal by the judicial member.

(s) Eleanor R. Dawson

[31] Schedule A: Legislative References to sections 75 and 103.1 of the Act.

75. (1) Where, on application by the Commissioner or a person granted leave under section 103.1, the Tribunal finds that

(a) a person is substantially affected in his business or is precluded from carrying on business due to his inability to obtain adequate supplies of a product anywhere in a market on usual trade terms,

(b) the person referred to in paragraph (a) is unable to obtain adequate supplies of the product because of insufficient competition among suppliers of the product in the market,

(c) the person referred to in paragraph (a) is willing and able to meet the usual trade terms of the supplier or suppliers of the product,
(d) the product is in ample supply, and
(e) the refusal to deal is having or is likely to have an adverse effect on competition in a market,

the Tribunal may order that one or more suppliers of the product in the market accept the person as a customer within a specified time on usual trade terms unless, within the specified time, in the case of an article, any customs duties on the article are removed, reduced or remitted and the effect of the removal, reduction or remission is to place the person on an equal footing with other persons who are able to obtain adequate supplies of the article in Canada. (emphasis added)

(2) For the purposes of this section, an article is not a separate product in a market only because it is differentiated from other articles in its class by a trade-mark, proprietary name or the like, unless the article so differentiated occupies such a dominant position in that market as to substantially affect the ability of a person to carry on business in that class of articles unless that person has access to the article so differentiated.

(3) For the purposes of this section, the expression "trade terms" means terms in respect of payment, units of purchase and reasonable technical and servicing requirements.

(4) In considering an application by a person granted leave under section 103.1, the Tribunal may not draw any inference from the fact that the Commissioner has or has not taken any action in respect of the matter raised by the application.

103.1 (1) Any person may apply to the Tribunal for leave to make an application under section 75 or 77. The application for leave must be accompanied by an affidavit setting out the facts in support of the person's application under section 75 or 77.

(2) The applicant must serve a copy of the application for leave on the Commissioner and any person against whom the order under section 75 or 77 is sought.

(3) The Commissioner shall, within 48 hours after receiving a copy of an application for leave, certify to the Tribunal whether or not the matter in respect of which leave is sought

(a) is the subject of an inquiry by the Commissioner; or (b) was the subject of an inquiry that has been discontinued because of a settlement between the Commissioner and the person against whom the order under section 75 or 77 is sought.

(4) The Tribunal shall not consider an application for leave respecting a matter described in paragraph (3)(a) or (b) or a matter that is the subject of an application already submitted to the Tribunal by the Commissioner under section 75 or 77.

(5) The Tribunal shall as soon as practicable after receiving the Commissioner's certification under subsection (3) notify the applicant and any person against whom the order is sought as to whether it can hear the application for leave.

(6) A person served with an application for leave may, within 15 days after receiving notice under subsection (5), make representations in writing to the Tribunal and shall serve a copy of the representations on any other person referred to in subsection (2).

(7) The Tribunal may grant leave to make an application under section 75 or 77 if it has reason to believe that the applicant is directly and substantially affected in the applicants' business by any practice referred to in one of those sections that could be subject to an order under that section.

(8) The Tribunal may set the time within which and the conditions subject to which an application under section 75 or 77 must be made. The application must be made no more than one year after the practice that is the subject of the application has ceased.

(9) The Tribunal must give written reasons for its decision to grant or refuse leave and send copies to the applicant, the Commissioner and any other person referred to in subsection (2).

(10) The Commissioner may not make an application for an order under section 75, 77 or 79 on the basis of the same or substantially the same facts as are alleged in a matter for which the Tribunal has granted leave under subsection (7), if the person granted leave has already applied to the Tribunal under section 75 or 77.

(11) In considering an application for leave, the Tribunal may not draw any inference from the fact that the Commissioner has or has not taken any action in respect of the matter raised by it.

(12) If the Commissioner has certified under subsection (3) that a matter in respect of which leave was sought by a person is under inquiry and the Commissioner subsequently discontinues the inquiry other than by way of settlement, the Commissioner shall, as soon as practicable, notify that person that the inquiry is discontinued.

REPRESENTATIVE

For the applicant:

Robert Gilles Gauthier, carrying on business as the National Capital News Canada

Robert Gilles Gauthier

For the respondent:

The Honourable Peter Milliken, M.P.

not represented

19

Competition Tribunal | Tribunal de la Concurrence

Reference: Paradise Pharmacy Inc. and Rymal Pharmacy Inc. v. Novartis Pharmaceuticals Canada Inc., 2004 Comp. Trib. 21
File No.: CT-2004-004
Registry Document No.: 0008

IN THE MATTER OF the Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34;

AND IN THE MATTER OF an application by Paradise Pharmacy Inc. and Rymal Pharmacy Inc. (Paradise et al.) for an order pursuant to section 103.1 of the Competition Act, granting leave to bring an application under section 75 of the Act;

BETWEEN:

Paradise Pharmacy Inc. and Rymal Pharmacy Inc.
(applicants)

And

Novartis Pharmaceuticals Canada Inc.
(respondent)

Decided on the basis of the written record.
Presiding Member: Blais J.
Date of Reasons for Order and Order: September 20, 2004

REASONS FOR ORDER AND ORDER

APPLICATION

[1] The applicants are Paradise Pharmacy Inc. and Rymal Pharmacy Inc. (Paradise et al.), corporations incorporated under the laws of the Province of Ontario carrying on business in Hamilton, Ontario. Both pharmacies are owned and operated by Shirley Silberg, a licensed pharmacist.

[2] The respondent is Novartis Pharmaceuticals Canada Inc./Novartis Pharma Canada Inc. (Novartis), corporations incorporated under the laws of Canada. Novartis carries on business as a pharmaceutical manufacturer across Canada, including Ontario.

[3] Paradise et al. operate retail pharmacies in Hamilton since 1996, for Paradise, and 1997, for Rymal. The applicants offer the products and services associated with a neighbourhood pharmacy - health and beauty aides, cosmetics and prescription and over the counter medicines.

[4] There is significant competition among retail pharmacies in the area adjacent to Paradise et al. Both pharmacies have at least one large drugstore operation - Shoppers Drug Mart, Pharma Plus, Wal-Mart - within one mile of their location. Pharmacies depend on manufacturers to supply pharmaceutical products. In some cases, generic products are available. In other patent-protected cases, the drug manufacturer (including its authorized distributors) is the sole source of supply.

[5] Paradise et al. have been selling Novartis products since they began operating. Drugs produced by Novartis represent for each pharmacy approximately 7 per cent of their total annual pharmaceutical drug sales. Novartis manufactures a variety of prescription drugs for various ailments, including diabetes (Actos), high blood pressure (Diovan, Lotensin), breast cancer prevention (Femara) and psychiatric disorders (Zyprexa).

[6] Paradise et al.'s two distributors have advised them that Novartis has directed the distributors not to supply the pharmacies with any Novartis product. This refusal to deal has led to very serious disruptions, in loss of sales and loss of customer base. Paradise et al. submit that if customers need to fill multiple prescriptions and one of the products is unavailable, customers will simply change pharmacies to enable them to fill all their prescriptions in one same location. Paradise et al. allege that Novartis is seriously threatening their financial viability.

[7] Novartis occupies a dominant position in the marketplace with respect to its patented pharmaceutical products. Its products are widely available in the Hamilton area, including from Paradise et al.'s large competitors.

RESPONDENT'S POSITION

[8] Novartis Pharmaceuticals Canada Inc./Novartis Pharma Canada Inc. (respondent) opposes the application on two grounds: the business of the applicants is not directly and substantially affected, and the test to be applied in considering an application under section 103.1 of the Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, (the "Act") includes a review of section 75.

Direct and substantial impact:

[9] Nine of the eleven products listed by the applicants as being Novartis products actually are, while two (Actos and Zyprexa) are manufactured and sold by Eli Lilly, a pharmaceutical competitor of the respondent. According to IMS, the total sales for the nine products to the applicants for 2003 was approximately $3149.

[10] The respondent argues that the applicants are not substantially affected, given the way the Competition Tribunal (the "Tribunal") has construed this term in past decisions.

[11] The respondent has reason to believe the applicants have been involved in internet export sales of pharmaceutical products, contrary to the directions that the respondent has given to its independent distributors, in conformity with its Terms and Conditions of Sale.

Test for leave under section 103.1:

[12] The respondent argues that there are two separate conditions which must be satisfied for leave to be granted under section 103.1 : the business of the applicant must be directly and substantially affected by the practice of the respondent, and the practice could be subject to an order under section 75.

[13] The respondent submits that for a refusal to deal to be subject to a section 75 order, all five conditions specified at section 75 must be met. Yet the Tribunal has been provided with no evidence as to the inability of the applicants to obtain adequate supplies (75(l)(a)) when complying with usual trade terms, nor have the applicants shown that there is any adverse effect on competition (75(l)(e)). In the latter case, in fact, the applicants indicate that competition thrives in the areas surrounding both pharmacies. The respondent therefore contends that the Tribunal has no reason to believe that the respondent's practice could be subject to an order under section 75, since its conditions are not met.

ANALYSIS

[14] Section 103.1 of the Act is a new section which has been the basis of five decisions so far, which can be briefly summarized as follows:

[15] In National Capital News Canada v. Milliken, 2002 Comp. Trib. 41, Justice Dawson found that the refusal to grant the applicant full access to the Parliamentary Press Gallery was entirely within the privilege of Parliament, as vested in the Speaker, and thus could not be subject to an order under section 75 since the Tribunal did not have the jurisdiction, any more than the courts, to examine that particular exercise of the privilege. For this reason, the requirement of subsection l03.l(7) was not met.

[16] In Barcode Systems Inc. v. Symbol Technologies Canada ULC, 2004 Comp. Trib. 1, Justice Lemieux granted leave to Barcode, having found sufficient credible evidence to give the Tribunal reason to believe that the applicant may have been directly and substantially affected.

There was evidence that on petition of the Royal Bank of Canada, an interim Receiver had been appointed for all property, assets and undertakings of Barcode. Barcode also asserted in its materials that it had laid off half of its employees.

[17] In Allan Morgan and Sons Ltd. v. La-Z-Boy Canada Ltd., 2004 Comp. Trib. 4 (Justice Lemieux), the applicant Allan Morgan and Sons Ltd. filed an application under section 103.1 for leave to make an application under section 75, alleging that the respondent La-Z-Boy Canada Ltd., by terminating its right to act as representative of the respondent, had directly and substantially affected its business.

[18] The applicant presented various tables to show sales by category, gross profits and estimates of profit loss due to the respondent's restrictions which occurred before the contract was terminated. Based on these figures, Justice Lemieux found that there was sufficient credible evidence to satisfy himself that the applicant "may have been directly and substantially affected by the actions of La-Z-Boy." He then added: "Morgan's Furniture, at the leave stage, is not required to meet any higher standard of proof threshold."

[19] Madam Justice Simpson has recently rendered two decisions on section 103.1 applications, Robinson Motorcycle Limited. v. Fred Deeley Imports Ltd., 2004 Comp. Trib. 13 and Quinlan 's of Huntsville Inc. v. Fred Deeley Imports Ltd., 2004 Comp. Trib. 15. In both cases, leave was granted. Justice Simpson indicated that leave requirements set in subsection 103.1(7) of the Act had been met; she then added that under section 75, an order could issue, because for each condition the Tribunal could conclude that the condition was satisfied.

[20] In this case, I believe the applicants have failed to meet the test of "directly and substantially affected in the applicant's business." It is therefore not necessary to consider whether an order could be issued under section 75. The applicants must show sufficient credible evidence of a direct and substantial effect. In Barcode, for example, the company was in receivership and fifty per cent of the employees had been laid off. In La-Z-Boy, the applicant had figures showing a 46 per cent decrease in its sales. There was thus a credible basis as to substantial effect.

[21] The Tribunal has never defined specifically what was to be considered "substantial"; however, it stated as follows in Canada (Director of Investigation and Research) v. Chrysler Canada Ltd. (1989), 27 C.P.R. (3d) 1:

> The Tribunal agrees that "substantial" should be given its ordinary meaning, which means more than something just beyond de minimis. While terms such as "important" are acceptable synonyms, further clarification can only be provided through evaluations of actual situations.
>
> The cut-off resulted in a decline of over $200,000 in sales between 1986 and 1988. 1987 was a year of transition during most of which Brunet was able to obtain parts from Chrysler Canada dealers and Chrysler Canada continued to fill orders received by Brunet before October, 1986. The slight rise in 1988 sales of Chrysler US-sourced parts suggests that some substitution may have occurred between Chrysler Canada and Chrysler US. sourced parts, perhaps because of the increasing difficulty of obtaining parts in Canada. If such substitution did occur, it was far too limited to alleviate the decline in sales and gross profits from Chrysler auto parts. The decline in profits between 1986 and 1988 from sourcing Chrysler parts in Canada > was in excess of $30,000. Losses of the order of magnitude of $200,000 in sales and $30,000 in gross profits constitute a substantial effect for a small business such as Brunet's.

[22] In its application, the applicants submit that the action of the respondent will have consequences for the business beyond the loss of sales of the respondent's products. Customers will go elsewhere if they cannot fill their prescription, or part of their prescription, at the applicants' pharmacies.

[23] No figures are provided to show exactly what has occurred in terms of the impact of the decision of the respondent on the applicants' businesses. Subsection 103.1(7) states that the Tribunal may grant leave if it has reason to believe that the applicant is directly and substantially affected. In other words, the evidence must be direct, not speculative. Since no figures are given, it is difficult for the Tribunal to form a bona fide belief that the financial viability of the business is threatened.

[24] From the materials submitted, it appears the applicants fear that loss of business will occur. There are no explanations given as to how loss is calculated, no basis nor reference point to show the effect of the loss of the respondent's product. In my view, evidence is insufficient to grant leave.

THEREFORE THE TRIBUNAL ORDERS THAT:

[25] Leave to make an application under subsection 75 is dismissed.

DATED at Ottawa, this 20th day of September, 2004.

SIGNED on behalf of the Tribunal by the presiding judicial member.

(s) Pierre Blais

REPRESENTATIVES

For the applicants:

Paradise Pharmacy Inc. et al.

Mark Adilman
D.H. Jack

For the respondents:

Novartis Pharmaceuticals Canada Inc.

A. Neil Campbell
Karen S. Kuzumowich

20

Pioneer Corporation,
Pioneer North America, Inc.,
Pioneer Electronics (USA) Inc.,
Pioneer High Fidelity Taiwan Co., Ltd. and Pioneer Electronics of Canada Inc.
Appellants

v.

Neil Godfrey Respondent

- and -

Toshiba Corporation, Toshiba Samsung Storage Technology Corp., Toshiba Samsung Storage Technology Corp. Korea, Toshiba of Canada Ltd., Toshiba America Information Systems, Inc., Samsung Electronics Co., Ltd., Samsung Electronics Canada Inc., Samsung Electronics America, Inc., Koninklijke Philips Electronics N.V., Lite-On IT Corporation of Taiwan, Philips & Lite-On Digital Solutions Corporation, Philips & Lite-On Digital Solutions USA, Inc., Philips Electronics Ltd., Panasonic Corporation, Panasonic Corporation of North America, Panasonic Canada Inc., BENQ Corporation, BENQ America Corporation and BENQ Canada Corp. Appellants

v.

Neil Godfrey Respondent

and

Option consommateurs,
Consumers Council of Canada,
Canadian Chamber of Commerce and
Consumers' Association of Canada
Interveners

Indexed as: Pioneer Corp. v. Godfrey
2019 SCC 42

Pioneer Corporation,
Pioneer North America, Inc.,
Pioneer Electronics (USA) Inc.,
Pioneer High Fidelity Taiwan Co., Ltd.
et Pioneer Électronique du Canada, inc.
Appelantes

c.

Neil Godfrey Intimé

- et -

Toshiba Corporation, Toshiba Samsung Storage Technology Corp., Toshiba Samsung Storage Technology Corp. Korea, Toshiba du Canada Limitée, Toshiba America Information Systems, Inc., Samsung Electronics Co., Ltd., Samsung Electronics Canada Inc., Samsung Electronics America, Inc., Koninklijke Philips Electronics N.V., Lite-On IT Corporation of Taiwan, Philips & Lite-On Digital Solutions Corporation, Philips & Lite-On Digital Solutions USA, Inc., Philips Electronics Ltd., Panasonic Corporation, Panasonic Corporation of North America, Panasonic Canada Inc., BENQ Corporation, BENQ America Corporation et BENQ Canada Corp. Appelantes

c.

Neil Godfrey Intimé

et

Option consommateurs,
Consumers Council of Canada,
Chambre de commerce du Canada et
Association des consommateurs du Canada
Intervenants

Répertorié : Pioneer Corp. c. Godfrey
2019 CSC 42

File Nos.: 37809, 37810.

2018: December 11; 2019: September 20.

Present: Wagner C.J. and Abella, Moldaver, Karakatsanis, Gascon, Côté, Brown, Rowe and Martin JJ.

ON APPEAL FROM THE COURT OF APPEAL FOR BRITISH COLUMBIA

Civil procedure — Class actions — Certification — Plaintiff alleging that defendants conspired to fix prices of optical disc drives and related products — Plaintiff's action certified as class proceeding — Class membership including direct purchasers, indirect purchasers and umbrella purchasers — Whether umbrella purchasers have cause of action under Competition Act — Whether Competition Act bars plaintiff from bringing common law or equitable claims — Whether plaintiff's proposed questions relating to loss suffered by class members meet standard for certification as common issues — Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, s. 36(1) — Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 50, s. 4(1).

Limitation of actions — Competition Act setting out limitation period of two years from day on which conduct was engaged in — Action brought against some defendants more than two years after alleged conduct occurred — Whether action against those defendants barred by statutory limitation period — Whether discoverability rule or doctrine of fraudulent concealment applies to extend statutory limitation period — Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, s. 36(4).

The proposed representative plaintiff applied for certification of a class proceeding under the British Columbia Class Proceedings Act. The plaintiff alleges that the defendants, who manufacture Optical Disc Drives ("ODDs") and ODD products, conspired to fix prices of ODDs and ODD products between 2004 and 2010 ("class period"). He advances various causes of action based on that alleged conduct. They include a cause of action under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act, which allows for the recovery of damages or loss that resulted from conduct contrary to Part VI of the Competition Act, as well as common law and equitable claims. The plaintiff seeks to bring the proposed class proceeding on behalf of all British Columbia residents who purchased an ODD or an ODD product during

N[os] du greffe : 37809, 37810.

2018 : 11 décembre; 2019 : 20 septembre.

Présents : Le juge en chef Wagner et les juges Abella, Moldaver, Karakatsanis, Gascon, Côté, Brown, Rowe et Martin.

EN APPEL DE LA COUR D'APPEL DE LA COLOMBIE-BRITANNIQUE

Procédure civile — Recours collectifs — Autorisation — Allégation du demandeur que les défenderesses ont comploté pour fixer les prix de lecteurs de disques optiques et de produits connexes — Action du demandeur autorisée en tant que recours collectif — Groupe composé d'acheteurs directs, d'acheteurs indirects et d'acheteurs sous parapluie — Les acheteurs sous parapluie ont-ils une cause d'action au titre de la Loi sur la concurrence? — La Loi sur la concurrence empêche-t-elle le demandeur d'intenter des recours de common law ou d'equity? — Les questions proposées par le demandeur qui ont trait à la perte subie par les membres du groupe satisfont-elles à la norme d'autorisation de questions en tant que questions communes? — Loi sur la concurrence, L.R.C. 1985, c. C-34, art. 36(1) — Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 50, art. 4(1).

Prescription — Loi sur la concurrence établissant un délai de prescription de deux ans à compter de la date du comportement en question — Action intentée contre certaines défenderesses plus de deux ans après le comportement reproché — Le délai de prescription prévu par la loi fait-il obstacle à l'action intentée contre ces défenderesses? — La règle de la possibilité de découvrir ou la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse s'applique-t-elle de manière à prolonger le délai de prescription établi par la loi? — Loi sur la concurrence, L.R.C. 1985, c. C-34, art. 36(4).

Le représentant proposé des demandeurs a demandé l'autorisation d'un recours collectif en vertu de la Class Proceedings Act de la Colombie-Britannique. Le demandeur allègue que les défenderesses, qui fabriquent des lecteurs de disques optiques (« LDO ») et des produits munis de LDO, ont comploté pour fixer les prix des LDO et des produits munis de LDO entre 2004 et 2010 (« période visée par le recours collectif »). Il avance diverses causes d'action fondées sur ce comportement reproché, notamment une cause d'action au titre de l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence, qui permet l'indemnisation d'une perte ou des dommages qui découlent d'un comportement allant à l'encontre de la partie VI de cette loi, ainsi que l'exercice de recours de common law et d'equity. Le the class period. The proposed class consists of direct purchasers, indirect purchasers, and umbrella purchasers, that is, purchasers whose ODD or ODD product was manufactured and supplied by a non-defendant. Although the action against most of the defendants was filed within two years of the end of the class period, the action against a subset of the defendants ("Pioneer defendants") was filed more than two years after the end of the class period.

The certification judge certified the action as a class proceeding, subject to certain exceptions and conditions. He was not satisfied that it was plain and obvious that the action against the Pioneer defendants was barred by the two-year limitation period set out in s. 36(4) of the Competition Act. He also held that the umbrella purchasers had a cause of action against the defendants under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act, that a breach of the Competition Act could represent the unlawfulness element of the various causes of action advanced by the plaintiff, thereby affirming the availability of those common law and equitable actions, and that the plaintiff's proposed questions in relation to loss suffered by the class were certifiable as common questions. The Court of Appeal dismissed the appeals brought by the defendants.

Held (Côté J. dissenting in part): The appeals should be dismissed.

Per Wagner C.J. and Abella, Moldaver, Karakatsanis, Gascon, Brown, Rowe and Martin JJ.: It is not plain and obvious that the plaintiff's claim against the Pioneer defendants will fail on the basis that it was commenced after the two-year limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) of the Competition Act because the discoverability rule applies to extend the limitation period. As for the inclusion of umbrella purchasers, the pleadings against all the defendants disclose a cause of action for them under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act, thereby satisfying the conditions under s. 4(1)(a) of the Class Proceedings Act for certification. Also, as s. 36(1) of the Competition Act does not bar common law or equitable claims, it is not plain and obvious that the plaintiff's other claims cannot succeed. Furthermore, the certification judge identified the correct standard to certify commonality of loss as a common issue demandeur cherche à intenter le recours collectif projeté au nom de tous les résidents de la Colombie-Britannique qui ont acheté un LDO ou un produit muni de LDO durant la période visée par le recours collectif. Le groupe projeté est composé des acheteurs directs, des acheteurs indirects et des acheteurs sous parapluie, c'est-à-dire les acheteurs dont les LDO ou produits munis de LDO ont été fabriqués et fournis par une personne qui n'est pas une défenderesse. Bien que l'action contre la plupart des défenderesses ait été déposée moins de deux ans après la fin de la période visée par le recours collectif, l'action contre un sous-groupe des défenderesses (« défenderesses Pioneer ») a été déposée plus de deux ans après la fin de cette période.

Le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a autorisé l'action comme recours collectif, sous réserve de certaines exceptions et conditions. Il n'était pas convaincu que l'action intentée contre les défenderesses Pioneer était évidemment et manifestement prescrite en raison de l'écoulement du délai de prescription de deux ans prévu au par. 36(4) de la Loi sur la concurrence. Il a également conclu que les acheteurs sous parapluie avaient une cause d'action fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence contre les défenderesses, qu'une infraction à la Loi sur la concurrence pouvait constituer l'élément d'illégalité des diverses causes d'action avancées par le demandeur, confirmant ainsi qu'il est possible de se prévaloir de ces recours de common law et d'equity, et que les questions proposées par le demandeur relativement à la perte subie par le groupe pouvaient être autorisées en tant que questions communes. La Cour d'appel a rejeté les appels formés par les défenderesses.

Arrêt (la juge Côté est dissidente en partie) : Les pourvois sont rejetés.

Le juge en chef Wagner et les juges Abella, Moldaver, Karakatsanis, Gascon, Brown, Rowe et Martin : Il n'est pas évident et manifeste que la demande du demandeur contre les défenderesses Pioneer doit être rejetée au motif qu'elle a été introduite après le délai de prescription de deux ans prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) de la Loi sur la concurrence parce que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique de façon à prolonger le délai de prescription. Quant à l'inclusion des acheteurs sous parapluie, les actes de procédure contre toutes les défenderesses révèlent une cause d'action dont ils sont les titulaires en vertu de l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence, répondant ainsi aux conditions d'autorisation prévues à l'al. 4(1)a) de la Class Proceedings Act. En outre, puisque le par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence ne fait pas obstacle aux recours de common law ou d'equity, il n'est pas évident et and there is no basis to interfere with his certification of these loss-related questions.

Where a limitation period is subject to the rule of discoverability, a cause of action will not accrue for the purposes of the running of the limitation period until the material facts on which the cause of action is based have been discovered or ought to have been discovered by the plaintiff by the exercise of reasonable diligence. The discoverability rule is not a universally applicable rule of limitations, but a rule of construction to aid in the interpretation of statutory limitation periods. It can therefore be displaced by clear legislative language. In determining whether discoverability applies, substance, not form, is to prevail: even where the statute does not explicitly state that the limitation period runs from "the accrual of the cause of action", discoverability applies if it is evident that the operation of a limitation period is conditioned upon accrual of a cause of action or knowledge of an injury. Discoverability will apply where the event triggering the limitation period is an element of the cause of action because, in such cases, the legislature has shown its intention that the limitation period be linked to the cause of action's accrual.

The discoverability rule applies to extend the two-year limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) of the Competition Act, such that it begins to run only when the material facts on which the cause of action granted by s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act is based are discovered or ought to have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence. The event triggering this particular limitation period is the occurrence of an element of the underlying cause of action — specifically, conduct contrary to Part VI of the Competition Act. Consideration of the rationales for limitation periods affirms the application of the discoverability rule to this provision.

Furthermore, it is not plain and obvious that the doctrine of fraudulent concealment could not delay the running of the limitation period. Fraudulent concealment is a form of equitable fraud that arises so as to delay the running of a limitation period when it would be, for any manifeste que les autres recours exercés par le demandeur ne peuvent être accueillis. Qui plus est, le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a arrêté la norme applicable à l'autorisation, en tant que question commune, de la question de la communauté de la perte et il n'y a aucune raison de modifier sa décision d'autoriser ces questions relatives à la perte.

Quand un délai de prescription est assujetti à la règle de la possibilité de découvrir, une cause d'action ne prendra naissance, pour les besoins de l'écoulement du délai de prescription, qu'au moment où les faits importants sur lesquels repose cette cause d'action ont été découverts par le demandeur ou auraient dû l'être s'il avait fait preuve de diligence raisonnable. La règle de la possibilité de découvrir n'est pas une règle de prescription d'application universelle; c'est plutôt une règle d'interprétation visant à faciliter l'interprétation des délais de prescription fixés par la loi. Elle peut donc être écartée par un texte législatif clair. Pour décider si la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique, le fond, non la forme, doit prévaloir : même si la loi ne précise pas que le délai de prescription commence à courir à compter de « la naissance de la cause d'action », la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique s'il est évident que le point de départ du délai de prescription dépend de la naissance de la cause d'action ou de la connaissance d'un préjudice. La règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique lorsque l'événement marquant le point de départ du délai de prescription est un élément de la cause d'action car, en pareil cas, la législature a manifesté son intention que le délai de prescription soit lié à la naissance de la cause d'action.

La règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique de façon à prolonger le délai de prescription de deux ans établi au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) de la Loi sur la concurrence de sorte que ce délai ne commence à courir qu'au moment où les faits importants sur lesquels repose la cause d'action reconnue par l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence sont découverts ou auraient dû l'être par diligence raisonnable. Le fait déclencheur de ce délai de prescription est la survenance d'un élément de la cause d'action sous-jacente — plus précisément, le comportement qui va à l'encontre de la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence. L'examen des justifications qui sous-tendent les délais de prescription confirme que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique à cette disposition.

De plus, il n'est pas évident et manifeste que la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse ne pouvait retarder le point de départ du délai de prescription. La dissimulation frauduleuse est une forme de fraude d'equity dont la présence permet de retarder le point de départ d'un délai reason, unconscionable for the defendant to rely on the advantage gained by having concealed the existence of a cause of action. The inquiry is not into the relationship within which the conduct occurred, but into the unconscionability of the conduct itself. Its application is therefore not conditioned upon a special relationship between the parties.

Umbrella purchasers have a cause of action under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act. Under the theory of umbrella pricing, the entire market for the subject product is affected because anti-competitive cartel activity causes non-cartel manufacturers to also raise their prices. The text of s. 36(1)(a), which provides a cause of action to "[a]ny person who has suffered loss or damage as a result of" conduct contrary to s. 45 of the Competition Act, supports the view that umbrella purchasers have a cause of action thereunder. Parliament's use of the words "[a]ny person" empowers any claimant who can demonstrate that loss or damage was incurred as a result of a defendant's conduct to bring a claim. Also, interpreting s. 36(1)(a) so as to permit umbrella purchaser actions furthers the purpose of the Competition Act set out in s. 1.1, which is to "maintain and encourage competition in Canada" with a view to providing consumers with "competitive prices and product choices". This interpretation also furthers two other objectives of the Competition Act: it furthers the objective of deterrence because it increases the potential liability falling upon those who engage in anti-competitive behaviour, and it furthers the objective of compensation because it affords umbrella purchasers recourse to recover from loss arising from what is assumed to have been anti-competitive conduct. Moreover, departmental and parliamentary statements fortify the view that Parliament intended that the cause of action in s. 36(1)(a) be broadly available to anyone who suffers a loss from anti-competitive behaviour.

Recognizing that umbrella purchasers have a cause of action under s. 36(1)(a) does not risk exposing defendants to indeterminate liability. Firstly, liability of defendants is limited by the class period, and by the specific products whose prices are alleged to have been fixed. Also, in order for cartel members to profit from a conspiracy, the entire market price has to increase — the umbrella effect is therefore an intended consequence of the anti-competitive behaviour. Intended results are not indeterminate, but rather de prescription lorsqu'il serait abusif pour le défendeur de profiter de l'avantage obtenu en dissimulant l'existence d'une cause d'action. L'examen ne porte pas sur la relation dans le cadre de laquelle le comportement a eu lieu, mais sur le caractère abusif du comportement lui-même. Son application ne tient donc pas à l'existence d'une relation spéciale entre les parties.

Les acheteurs sous parapluie ont une cause d'action fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence. Selon la théorie de l'effet parapluie sur les prix, c'est l'ensemble du marché du produit en cause qui est touché parce que les activités anticoncurrentielles du cartel provoquent également une hausse des prix chez les fabricants ne faisant pas partie du cartel. Le texte de l'al. 36(1)a), qui accorde un droit d'action à « [t]oute personne qui a subi une perte ou des dommages par suite » d'un comportement allant à l'encontre de l'art. 45 de la Loi sur la concurrence, étaye le point de vue selon lequel, sous son régime, les acheteurs sous parapluie ont une cause d'action. L'emploi, par le législateur, de l'expression « [t]oute personne » habilite à intenter un recours tout demandeur capable de démontrer que la perte ou les dommages ont été subis par suite du comportement d'une défenderesse. De plus, interpréter l'al. 36(1)a) de façon à autoriser les actions des acheteurs sous parapluie favorise l'atteinte de l'objet de la Loi sur la concurrence décrit à l'art. 1.1, qui est de « préserver et de favoriser la concurrence au Canada » dans le but d'assurer aux consommateurs « des prix compétitifs et un choix dans les produits ». Cette interprétation favorise également l'atteinte de deux autres objectifs de la Loi sur la concurrence : elle favorise l'atteinte de l'objectif de dissuasion, en ce que le risque de responsabilité auquel s'exposent ceux qui se livrent à des comportements anticoncurrentiels augmente et elle favorise l'atteinte de l'objectif d'indemnisation, parce que les acheteurs sous parapluie ont ainsi la possibilité de recouvrer les pertes découlant de ce qui est présumé être un comportement anticoncurrentiel. Qui plus est, certaines déclarations ministérielles et parlementaires renforcent l'opinion que le législateur entendait que la cause d'action prévue à l'al. 36(1)a) soit largement accessible pour quiconque subit une perte par suite d'un comportement anticoncurrentiel.

La reconnaissance d'une cause d'action fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a) aux acheteurs sous parapluie ne risque pas d'exposer les défenderesses à une responsabilité indéterminée. Premièrement, la responsabilité des défenderesses est limitée par la période visée par le recours collectif et par les produits dont les prix auraient été fixés. De plus, pour que les membres du cartel puissent tirer profit du complot, les prix du marché global doivent augmenter. L'effet parapluie est ainsi une conséquence voulue du pre-determined. Secondly, as s. 36(1)(a) limits recovery to only those purchasers who can show that they suffered a loss or damage "as a result of" a defendant's conspiratorial conduct, recovery is limited to claimants with a loss that is not too remote from the conduct and umbrella purchasers will have to demonstrate that they suffered such loss or damage. Thirdly, the elements of the wrongful conduct outlined in the text of s. 45(1) in force at the relevant time limit the reach of liability to those who, at a minimum, specifically intend to agree upon anti-competitive conduct.

Section 36(1) of the Competition Act does not bar common law or equitable claims, such as claims in civil conspiracy. Prior to the enactment of the cause of action contained in what is now s. 36(1) of the Competition Act, a breach of s. 45(1) of the Competition Act was, as it still is, able to satisfy the "unlawful means" element of the tort of civil conspiracy. The enactment of the statutory cause of action in s. 36(1) of the Competition Act did not oust common law and equitable actions by its express terms or by necessary implication. Section 36(1) is not duplicative of the tort of civil conspiracy, it does not provide a new and superior remedy, nor does it represent a comprehensive and exclusive code regarding claims for anti-competitive conspiratorial conduct. In addition, s. 62 of the Competition Act contemplates the subsistence of common law and equitable rights of action. It is therefore not plain and obvious that the plaintiff is precluded from bringing common law and equitable causes of action alongside his s. 36(1)(a) claim.

In order for loss-related questions to be certified as common issues, a plaintiff's expert's methodology need only be sufficiently credible or plausible to establish that loss reached the requisite purchaser level. It is not necessary that it establish that each and every class member suffered a loss nor must it be able to identify those class members who suffered no loss so as to distinguish them from those who did. In Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. v. Microsoft Corporation, 2013 SCC 57, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 477, the Court directed that, for a court to certify loss-related questions as common issues in a price-fixing class proceeding, it must be satisfied that the plaintiff has shown a plausible methodology to establish that loss reached one or more claimants at the purchaser level. For indirect purchasers, this would involve demonstrating that the direct purchasers comportement anticoncurrentiel. Des résultats voulus ne sont pas indéterminés, mais bien déterminés à l'avance. Deuxièmement, comme l'al. 36(1)a) limite le recours en indemnisation aux seuls acheteurs qui peuvent démontrer qu'ils ont subi une perte ou des dommages « par suite » du complot d'une défenderesse, seuls les demandeurs ayant subi une perte qui n'est pas trop éloignée du comportement peuvent donc être indemnisés et les acheteurs sous parapluie devront démontrer qu'ils ont subi une telle perte ou de tels dommages. Troisièmement, les éléments du comportement répréhensible décrits dans le libellé du par. 45(1) qui était en vigueur durant la période en question limitent l'étendue de la responsabilité à ceux qui, au minimum, ont eu l'intention expresse de convenir d'un comportement anticoncurrentiel.

Le paragraphe 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence ne fait pas obstacle aux recours de common law ou d'equity, tels qu'une action pour complot civil. Avant l'adoption de la disposition conférant une cause d'action qui se trouve dans ce qui est devenu le par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence, une infraction au par. 45(1) de cette loi pouvait, et peut encore, satisfaire à l'élément « moyens illégaux » du délit de complot civil. L'adoption de la disposition du par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence conférant une cause d'action n'a pas écarté les recours de common law et d'equity de façon expresse ou par déduction nécessaire. Le paragraphe 36(1) ne fait pas double emploi avec le délit de complot civil, il ne prévoit pas de nouvelle façon supérieure de remédier à un manquement et il n'est pas non plus un code complet et exclusif régissant les actions pour comportement ou complot anticoncurrentiel. De plus, l'art. 62 de la Loi sur la concurrence prévoit le maintien des droits d'action en common law et en equity. Il n'est donc pas évident et manifeste que le demandeur ne peut exercer des recours de common law et d'equity en même temps qu'une action fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a).

Pour que les questions relatives à la perte soient autorisées en tant que questions communes, la méthode de l'expert du demandeur n'a qu'à être suffisamment fiable ou acceptable pour établir que l'acheteur du niveau requis a subi une perte. Il n'est pas nécessaire que cette méthode établisse que chaque membre du groupe a subi une perte. Il n'est pas non plus nécessaire qu'elle permette d'identifier les membres du groupe qui n'ont subi aucune perte de manière à les distinguer de ceux qui en ont subi une. Dans Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. c. Microsoft Corporation, 2013 CSC 57, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 477, la Cour a prescrit que, pour autoriser les questions liées à la perte en tant que questions communes dans un recours collectif pour fixation du prix, le tribunal doit être convaincu que le demandeur a présenté une méthode valable pour établir que passed on the overcharge. Additionally, showing that loss reached the indirect purchaser level satisfies the criteria for certifying a common issue, since it will significantly advance the litigation, is a prerequisite to imposing liability upon the defendants and will result in common success. Showing loss reached the requisite purchaser level will advance the claims of all the purchasers at that level, because a common issues trial will either determine liability or terminate the litigation, with either scenario advancing the litigation toward resolution.

Aggregate damages under s. 29(1)(b) of the Class Proceedings Act are purely remedial, and available only after all other common issues have been determined, including liability. Irrespective, then, of whether aggregate damages are certified as a common issue, it is for the trial judge to determine, following the common issues trial, whether the statutory criteria are met such that the aggregate damages provisions can be applied to award damages. Aggregate damages provisions cannot be used to establish liability. In order for individual class members to participate in the award of damages, the trial judge must be satisfied that each has actually suffered a loss where proof of loss is essential to a finding of liability (as it is for liability under s. 36 of the Competition Act). Whether a plaintiff's expert's methodology is sufficient for the purposes of establishing a defendant's liability to all class members will depend on the findings of the trial judge.

Per Côté J. (dissenting in part): Both appeals should be allowed in part. The Pioneer defendants have not demonstrated that the plaintiff's claim for recovery under s. 36(1) of the Competition Act is time-barred by the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i). While the discoverability rule does not apply to toll the limitation period, it is not plain and obvious that the fraudulent concealment doctrine has no application in this case. There is agreement with the majority, though for different reasons, that the existence of the statutory cause of action in s. 36(1) of the Competition Act does not preclude the plaintiff from advancing claims at common law or in equity based on the same conduct prohibited by Part VI. However, there is disagreement that the umbrella purchasers have a claim against the la perte a été transférée à un ou à plusieurs demandeurs du niveau de l'acheteur. Dans le cas des acheteurs indirects, cela implique de démontrer que les acheteurs directs ont refilé la majoration. Qui plus est, démontrer que la perte a été transférée aux acheteurs indirects satisfait au critère d'autorisation d'une question commune, puisqu'une telle démonstration permettra de faire progresser substantiellement l'instance, qu'elle est essentielle pour imposer une responsabilité aux défenderesses et qu'elle débouche sur un succès commun. Démontrer que la perte a été transférée aux acheteurs du niveau requis fera progresser les réclamations de tous les acheteurs de ce niveau, car l'audition des questions communes déterminera la responsabilité ou mettra fin au litige; les deux scénarios contribuent au règlement du litige.

Les dommages-intérêts globaux au sens de l'al. 29(1)b) de la Class Proceedings Act ont un objectif purement réparateur et ne peuvent être octroyés qu'après le règlement de toutes les autres questions communes, y compris la responsabilité. Peu importe, donc, si les dommages-intérêts globaux sont autorisés en tant que question commune, il revient au juge du procès de décider, au terme de l'audition des questions communes, si les critères établis par la loi sont respectés de sorte que les dispositions sur les dommages-intérêts globaux peuvent s'appliquer pour octroyer ceux-ci. Les dispositions sur les dommages-intérêts globaux ne peuvent servir à établir la responsabilité. Pour que les membres du groupe participent à l'octroi des dommages-intérêts, le juge du procès doit être convaincu que chacun d'eux a réellement subi une perte lorsque la preuve de la perte est essentielle à une conclusion de responsabilité (comme c'est le cas de la responsabilité fondée sur l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence). La réponse à la question de savoir si la méthode de l'expert du demandeur suffit pour établir la responsabilité d'un défendeur envers tous les membres du groupe dépend des conclusions du juge du procès.

La juge Côté (dissidente en partie) : Il y a lieu d'accueillir les deux pourvois en partie. Les défenderesses Pioneer n'ont pas démontré que le recours en indemnisation intenté par le demandeur au titre du par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence est prescrit en raison du délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i). Bien que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique pas de manière à repousser le point de départ du délai de prescription, il n'est pas évident et manifeste que la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse ne trouve pas application en l'espèce. Il est convenu avec les juges majoritaires — bien que pour des motifs différents — que l'existence de la cause d'action prévue au par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence n'empêche pas le demandeur d'intenter des recours en defendants under s. 36(1) of the Competition Act. There is also disagreement that the certification judge identified the correct standard for certifying loss as a common issue pursuant to s. 4(1)(c) of the Class Proceedings Act and therefore that the plaintiff's methodology met the correct standard in the present case.

The discoverability rule does not apply to toll the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) of the Competition Act that is applicable to the plaintiff's claim for recovery under s. 36(1) of that statute. Discoverability is a judge-made rule of statutory interpretation that assists in determining whether the event triggering the commencement of a limitation period depends upon the state of the plaintiff's knowledge. This rule applies only where a legislature provides that the limitation period runs from the accrual of the cause of action (or wording to that effect) or from the occurrence of some event that is related to the state of the plaintiff's knowledge. Conversely, where a legislature provides that a limitation period is triggered by an event that occurs without regard to the plaintiff's state of mind, courts cannot apply the discoverability rule to postpone the commencement of the limitation period until such time as the plaintiff discovered that the event had taken place.

Statutory language referring to the occurrence of an element of the cause of action cannot be equated with language referring to the accrual or arising of the cause of action in its entirety such that the discoverability rule automatically applies in the former case. This would expand the scope of the discoverability rule in a manner that is neither consistent with precedent nor justifiable in principle and would create an arbitrary distinction between triggering events that are related to the cause of action and those that are not, even though both may occur independently of the plaintiff's state of mind. A preferable approach is instead one that considers each statutory limitation clause on its own terms, recognizing that a triggering event that relates to a cause of action can, but need not, be dependent on the plaintiff's state of mind.

The limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) commences on the day on which the conduct contrary to Part VI of the common law ou en equity qui visent le même comportement interdit par la partie VI. Toutefois, il y a désaccord pour dire que les acheteurs sous parapluie ont un recours contre les défenderesses en vertu du par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence. Il y a également désaccord sur le fait que le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a appliqué la bonne norme pour autoriser la question de la perte en tant que question commune en vertu de l'al. 4(1)(c) de la Class Proceedings Act et, donc, que la méthode du demandeur a satisfait à la bonne norme en l'espèce.

La règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique pas de façon à repousser le point de départ du délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) de la Loi sur la concurrence qui s'applique au recours en indemnisation intenté par le demandeur au titre du par. 36(1) de cette loi. La règle de la possibilité de découvrir est une règle prétorienne d'interprétation statutaire qui aide à déterminer si l'événement qui marque le point de départ du délai de prescription dépend de la connaissance qu'en avait le demandeur. Cette règle s'applique uniquement dans les affaires où le législateur précise que le délai de prescription commence à courir au moment où la cause d'action prend naissance (ou toute autre formulation allant dans le même sens) ou au moment où survient un événement qui a un rapport avec la connaissance du demandeur. À l'inverse, lorsqu'une législature prévoit que le point de départ d'un délai de prescription est marqué par un événement qui survient indépendamment de l'état d'esprit du demandeur, les tribunaux ne peuvent appliquer la règle de la possibilité de découvrir pour reporter le point de départ du délai de prescription jusqu'à ce que le demandeur découvre la survenance de l'événement.

Les mots d'une disposition législative qui font mention de la survenance d'un élément de la cause d'action ne sauraient être assimilés à des mots qui désignent la naissance de la cause d'action dans son ensemble de telle sorte que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique automatiquement dans le premier cas. Cela étendrait la portée de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir d'une manière qui n'est ni conforme à la jurisprudence ni justifiable en principe et créerait une distinction arbitraire entre les faits déclencheurs ayant un rapport avec la cause d'action et ceux qui n'en ont pas, même si les deux peuvent se produire indépendamment de l'état d'esprit du demandeur. Il vaut mieux plutôt examiner chaque disposition statutaire de prescription selon ses propres termes, en tenant compte qu'un fait déclencheur ayant un rapport avec une cause d'action peut, mais ne doit pas nécessairement, dépendre de la connaissance du demandeur.

Le délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) commence à courir à la date à laquelle le comportement allant

Competition Act actually takes place and not the day on which a potential claimant discovers that it took place. There is simply no link between the triggering event and the plaintiff's state of mind. The provision does not contain wording to the same effect as accrual of the s. 36 cause of action. Applying discoverability would make the limitation period chosen by Parliament virtually meaningless and create uncertainty around the likelihood and timing of significant litigation.

A special relationship between the parties — one that is based on trust and confidence — is not always a prerequisite or a necessary element for the operation of the doctrine of fraudulent concealment. This doctrine operates to prevent a limitation clause from being used as an instrument of injustice in circumstances where a defendant conceals the facts giving rise to a potential cause of action from a plaintiff. In such circumstances, equity suspends the running of the limitation clock until the injured party can reasonably discover the cause of action. Fraud in equity is broader than it is at common law and what constitutes unconscionable conduct will vary from case to case and depend in part on the connection between the parties. Based on this understanding of the fraudulent concealment doctrine, it is not plain and obvious that equity can intervene to toll the applicable limitation period only in cases where there exists a special relationship; it may be that it can also intervene in cases — at least in the commercial context, as here — where the plaintiff can demonstrate something commensurate with or tantamount to a special relationship. However, simply establishing the existence of the conspiracy will not suffice for the fraudulent concealment doctrine to toll the applicable limitation period.

It is plain and obvious that the claims by umbrella purchasers — those class members who purchased from a non-defendant a product that was not manufactured or supplied by a defendant — under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act cannot succeed. While on its face, s. 36(1) appears to be worded broadly enough to capture umbrella purchaser claims, so long as they can prove that they suffered loss or damage as a result of the conduct specified in para. (a) or (b) of subs. (1), this statutory provision must be interpreted in a manner that is consistent with the principles of indeterminacy and remoteness that limit the extent of liability at common law. Indeterminacy is a policy consideration that negates the imposition of a duty of care in negligence where it would expose the defendant to liability in an indeterminate amount for an indeterminate à l'encontre de la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence se produit, et non à la date où le demandeur éventuel découvre que le comportement en question s'est produit. Il n'existe tout simplement aucun lien entre ce fait déclencheur et l'état d'esprit du demandeur. La disposition en cause ne contient pas des mots dans le sens de naissance de la cause d'action fondée sur l'art. 36. Si la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'appliquait, le délai de prescription choisi par le Parlement perdrait pratiquement tout son sens et laisserait planer l'incertitude quant à la probabilité d'engager de nombreuses poursuites et au moment de les engager.

L'existence d'une relation spéciale — fondée sur la confiance — entre les parties ne constitue pas toujours une condition préalable ou un élément nécessaire à l'application de la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse. Cette doctrine vise à empêcher que le délai de prescription serve à créer une injustice, lorsque le défendeur cache au demandeur les faits à l'origine d'une cause d'action potentielle. En pareille situation, l'equity permet de suspendre l'écoulement du délai de prescription jusqu'à ce que la partie lésée puisse raisonnablement découvrir l'existence de la cause d'action. Le terme « fraude » comporte un sens plus large en equity qu'en common law et ce en quoi consiste une conduite abusive varie d'une affaire à l'autre et dépend en partie du lien qui unit les parties. Vu cette conception de la dissimulation frauduleuse, il n'est pas évident et manifeste que l'equity peut intervenir pour repousser le point de départ du délai de prescription uniquement dans les cas où il existe une relation spéciale; il se peut qu'elle puisse aussi intervenir dans les cas — du moins en matière commerciale, comme dans le cas présent — où le demandeur peut démontrer quelque chose correspondant ou d'équivalent à une relation spéciale. Cependant, le simple fait d'établir l'existence du complot ne suffit pas pour que la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse repousse le point de départ du délai de prescription applicable.

Il est évident et manifeste que les acheteurs sous parapluie — les membres du groupe qui ont acheté, d'une personne qui n'est pas une défenderesse, un produit qui n'a pas été fabriqué ou fourni par une défenderesse — ne peuvent avoir gain de cause contre les défenderesses dans leur recours fondé sur l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence. Bien qu'à première vue, le libellé du par. 36(1) semble suffisamment général pour englober les réclamations des acheteurs sous parapluie, pourvu qu'ils puissent établir qu'ils ont subi une perte ou des dommages par suite des comportements énumérés aux al. a) et b) du par. (1), il faut interpréter cette disposition conformément aux principes de l'indétermination et du caractère éloigné qui limitent l'étendue de la responsabilité en common law. L'indétermination correspond à une considération time to an indeterminate class and remoteness limits the scope of liability in negligence where the harm is too unrelated to the wrongful conduct to hold the defendant fairly liable. Although these principles relate primarily to liability in negligence, they can inform the analysis of claims under s. 36 for pure economic loss. Section 36(1) should not be interpreted in a manner that would permit claimants to recover from defendants for any losses that in some way flowed from the alleged price-fixing conspiracy as it would expose defendants to liability that is potentially limitless in scope for loss and damage that are too remote from any price-fixing that occurred. Consistent with the principles underlying indeterminacy and remoteness, the cause of action in s. 36(1) should be read as limiting the scope of liability of defendants to loss and damage flowing from their own pricing decisions, not those of third parties. Any overcharges the umbrella purchasers may have incurred in the present case were the direct result of pricing decisions made by non-defendant manufacturers and suppliers of ODDs, regardless of whether those choices were influenced by broader market trends. The defendants have control over their own business decisions but not over those of third parties. For this reason, it would be unfair to hold the defendants liable to the umbrella purchasers where they had no control over such liability.

It is not plain and obvious that s. 36(1) bars a plaintiff from alleging common law and equitable causes of action in respect of conduct that breaches the prohibitions in Part VI of the Competition Act. The coexistence of statutory and common law or equitable claims arising from conduct contrary to Part VI of the Competition Act is contemplated by s. 62 of that statute. The inclusion of s. 62 in the statutory framework suggests that Parliament did not intend the provisions of the Competition Act to intrude upon the provinces' jurisdiction over civil rights and liberties. That s. 62 applies only to Part VI of the Competition Act is not consequential as the cause of action created by s. 36(1)(a) is expressly tied to conduct that would constitute an offence under that part. When the words of s. 62 are read in their entire context and in their grammatical and ordinary sense harmoniously with the scheme and object de politique générale qui vient écarter l'imposition d'une obligation de diligence en droit de la négligence lorsque le défendeur serait exposé à une responsabilité pour un montant indéterminé, pour un temps indéterminé et envers une catégorie indéterminée, et le caractère éloigné a pour effet de limiter l'étendue de la responsabilité pour négligence si le préjudice a trop peu de lien avec l'acte fautif pour que le défendeur puisse raisonnablement être tenu responsable. Bien que ces principes se rapportent principalement à la responsabilité pour négligence, ils peuvent guider l'analyse des réclamations fondées sur l'art. 36 pour des pertes purement économiques. Le paragraphe 36(1) ne devrait pas être interprété d'une manière qui permettrait aux demandeurs de se faire indemniser par les défenderesses pour toute perte découlant d'une façon ou d'une autre du complot allégué de fixation des prix parce que cela aurait pour effet d'exposer les défenderesses à une responsabilité potentiellement illimitée, ainsi qu'à une responsabilité à l'égard de pertes et de dommages qui sont trop éloignés de toute fixation des prix. Conformément aux principes sous-tendant l'indétermination et le caractère éloigné, il y a lieu de considérer que la cause d'action prévue au par. 36(1) limite l'étendue de la responsabilité des défendeurs aux pertes et aux dommages découlant de leurs propres décisions, et non de celles prises par des tiers. Toute majoration que les acheteurs sous parapluie auraient pu absorber en l'espèce était en fin de compte la conséquence directe des choix en matière de prix effectués par ces fabricants et fournisseurs de LDO autres que les défenderesses, que ces choix aient ou non été influencés par des tendances générales du marché. Les défenderesses exercent un contrôle sur leur propres décisions d'affaires, mais non sur celles des autres fabricants et fournisseurs. Pour ce motif, il serait injuste de tenir les défenderesses responsables envers les acheteurs sous parapluie alors qu'elles n'avaient aucun contrôle sur cette responsabilité.

Il n'est pas évident et manifeste que le par. 36(1) empêche le demandeur d'exercer des recours de common law et d'equity à l'égard d'un comportement qui enfreint les prohibitions prévues à la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence. La coexistence des recours fondés sur la loi et des recours fondés sur la common law ou l'equity qui découlent d'un comportement allant à l'encontre de la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence est prévue à l'art. 62 de cette loi. L'inclusion de l'art. 62 dans le cadre législatif donne à penser que le Parlement ne voulait pas que les dispositions de la Loi sur la concurrence portent atteinte à la compétence des provinces sur les droits et libertés civils. Le fait que l'art. 62 s'applique seulement à la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence est sans conséquence parce que la cause d'action créée par l'al. 36(1)a) est expressément liée au comportement qui constituerait of the act and the intention of Parliament, this provision has the effect of preserving all civil rights of action that a claimant may have in respect of anti-competitive conduct contemplated under Part VI of that Act. Section 62 would be meaningless if s. 36(1) were interpreted as exhaustive in respect of civil claims for such conduct.

For questions to be certified as common issues under s. 4(1)(c) of the Class Proceedings Act, the representative plaintiff must show there is some basis in fact for the commonality requirement — that is, that the questions be capable of resolution on a class-wide basis. What the "some basis in fact" standard requires in any given case depends on what it is that the proposed questions ask; different questions will impose different requirements. In class actions where loss is an essential element of liability, loss-related questions can be certified as common issues only if the representative plaintiff's expert methodology will be able to actually identify which class members suffered a loss at trial.

In the present case, in order for loss-related questions to be certified as common issues among indirect purchasers pursuant to s. 4(1)(c) of the Class Proceedings Act, the representative plaintiff's proposed methodology must be capable of establishing at trial that at least some identifiable indirect purchasers actually suffered a loss. The plaintiff has not met the required standard in the present case because his methodology is only capable of establishing at trial that loss was occasioned somewhere at the indirect purchaser level of the distribution chain. Such a methodology will not enable the common issues trial judge to determine which class members actually suffered a loss — an essential element of the causes of action pleaded, and necessary for the purpose of making determinations as to liability. The proposed loss-related questions will therefore not be capable of resolution on a class-wide or common basis. What is required of the plaintiff in this case is a methodology capable of answering the loss-related questions on an individualized basis, either by showing that all of the indirect purchasers suffered a loss or at least by identifying those who did and separating them from those who did not.

une infraction sous le régime de cette partie. Lorsqu'on lit les termes de l'art. 62 dans leur contexte global en suivant le sens ordinaire et grammatical qui s'harmonise avec l'économie de la loi, l'objet de la loi et l'intention du Parlement, cette disposition a pour effet de préserver tous les droits d'action au civil que peut exercer le demandeur relativement à un comportement anticoncurrentiel envisagé à la partie VI de cette loi. L'article 62 serait vide de sens si le par. 36(1) était interprété comme une disposition exhaustive en ce qui concerne les recours civils relatifs à ce type de comportement.

Pour qu'une question soit autorisée en tant que question commune conformément à l'al. 4(1)(c) de la Class Proceedings Act, le représentant des demandeurs doit établir l'existence d'un certain fondement factuel pour respecter l'exigence de la question commune, c'est-à-dire que la question doit pouvoir faire l'objet d'une résolution à l'échelle du groupe. Dans un cas donné, la norme fondée sur l'existence d'« un certain fondement factuel » dépend de la teneur des questions proposées; des exigences différentes seront imposées selon les questions soulevées. Dans des recours collectifs où la perte constitue un élément essentiel pour établir la responsabilité, les questions de perte ne peuvent être autorisées en tant que questions communes que si la méthode de l'expert du représentant des demandeurs permet d'identifier au procès les membres du groupe qui ont subi une perte.

En l'espèce, pour que les questions liées à la perte soient autorisées en tant que questions communes aux acheteurs indirects en application de l'al. 4(1)(c) de la Class Proceedings Act, la méthode que propose le représentant des demandeurs doit permettre d'établir au procès qu'au moins un certain nombre d'acheteurs indirects identifiables ont effectivement subi une perte. Le demandeur n'a pas satisfait à la norme applicable en l'espèce parce que sa méthode permet seulement d'établir au procès qu'une perte a été subie quelque part au niveau de l'acheteur indirect dans la chaîne de distribution. Cette méthode ne permettra pas au juge appelé à statuer sur les questions communes de déterminer quels membres du groupe ont réellement subi une perte — un élément essentiel des causes d'action plaidées et nécessaires à la prise de décisions sur la responsabilité. Les questions de perte proposées par le demandeur ne pourront donc pas être résolues à l'échelle du groupe ou en commun. Il incombe au demandeur en l'espèce de proposer une méthode permettant de répondre aux questions liées à la perte de façon individuelle : en démontrant que tous les acheteurs indirects ont subi une perte ou, à tout le moins, en identifiant ceux qui ont subi une perte et en les distinguant de ceux qui n'en ont pas subi.

Cases Cited

By Brown J.

Applied: Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. v. Microsoft Corporation, 2013 SCC 57, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 477; referred to: Watson v. Bank of America Corp., 2015 BCCA 362, 79 B.C.L.R. (5th) 1; Ryan v. Moore, 2005 SCC 38, [2005] 2 S.C.R. 53; Alberta v. Elder Advocates of Alberta Society, 2011 SCC 24, [2011] 2 S.C.R. 261; Hollick v. Toronto (City), 2001 SCC 68, [2001] 3 S.C.R. 158; Central Trust Co. v. Rafuse, [1986] 2 S.C.R. 147; Peixeiro v. Haberman, [1997] 3 S.C.R. 549; Ermineskin Indian Band and Nation v. Canada, 2006 FCA 415, [2007] 3 F.C.R. 245, aff'd 2009 SCC 9, [2009] 1 S.C.R. 222; Bowes v. Edmonton (City), 2007 ABCA 347, 425 A.R. 123; Fehr v. Jacob (1993), 14 C.C.L.T. (2d) 200; M. (K.) v. M. (H.), [1992] 3 S.C.R. 6; Burt v. LeLacheur, 2000 NSCA 90, 189 D.L.R. (4th) 193; Rizzo & Rizzo Shoes Ltd. (Re), [1998] 1 S.C.R. 27; Fanshawe College of Applied Arts and Technology v. AU Optronics Corp., 2016 ONCA 621, 132 O.R. (3d) 81; Guerin v. The Queen, [1984] 2 S.C.R. 335; Kitchen v. Royal Air Forces Association, [1958] 2 All E.R. 241; T.P. v. A.P., 1988 ABCA 352, 92 A.R. 122; Performance Industries Ltd. v. Sylvan Lake Golf & Tennis Club Ltd., 2002 SCC 19, [2002] 1 S.C.R. 678; Shah v. LG Chem, Ltd., 2015 ONSC 6148, 390 D.L.R. (4th) 87; Kone AG and Others v. ÖBB-Infrastruktur AG, [2014] EUECJ C-557/12; Fairhurst v. Anglo American PLC, 2014 BCSC 2270; Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. v. Infineon Technologies AG, 2009 BCCA 503, 98 B.C.L.R. (4th) 272; Irving Paper Ltd. v. Atofina Chemicals Inc. (2009), 99 O.R. (3d) 358; Crosslink Technology Inc. v. BASF Canada, 2014 ONSC 1682, 54 C.P.C. (7th) 111; Shah v. LG Chem, Ltd., 2018 ONCA 819, 142 O.R. (3d) 721; Infineon Technologies AG v. Option consommateurs, 2013 SCC 59, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 600; Sun-Rype Products Ltd. v. Archer Daniels Midland Company, 2013 SCC 58, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 545; R. v. Imperial Tobacco Canada Ltd., 2011 SCC 42, [2011] 3 S.C.R. 45; R. c. Proulx, 2016 QCCA 1425; Proprietary Articles Trade Association v. Attorney General for Canada, [1931] A.C. 310; International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Therien, [1960] S.C.R. 265; Gagnon v. Foundation Maritime Ltd., [1961] S.C.R. 435; Cement LaFarge v. B.C. Lightweight Aggregate, [1983] 1 S.C.R. 452; A.I. Enterprises Ltd. v. Bram Enterprises Ltd., 2014 SCC 12, [2014] 1 S.C.R. 177; Gendron v. Supply and Services Union of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, Local 50057, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 1298; Western Canadian Shopping Centres Inc. v. Dutton, 2001 SCC 46, [2001] 2 S.C.R. 534; Vivendi Canada Inc. v. Dell'Aniello, 2014 SCC 1, [2014] 1 S.C.R. 3; Bisaillon v. Concordia University, 2006 SCC 19, [2006] 1 S.C.R. 666.

Jurisprudence

Citée par le juge Brown

Arrêt appliqué : Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. c. Microsoft Corporation, 2013 CSC 57, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 477; arrêts mentionnés : Watson c. Bank of America Corp., 2015 BCCA 362, 79 B.C.L.R. (5th) 1; Ryan c. Moore, 2005 CSC 38, [2005] 2 R.C.S. 53; Alberta c. Elder Advocates of Alberta Society, 2011 CSC 24, [2011] 2 R.C.S. 261; Hollick c. Toronto (Ville), 2001 CSC 68, [2001] 3 R.C.S. 158; Central Trust Co. c. Rafuse, [1986] 2 R.C.S. 147; Peixeiro c. Haberman, [1997] 3 R.C.S. 549; Bande et nation indienne d'Ermineskin c. Canada, 2006 CAF 415, [2007] 3 R.C.F. 245, conf. par 2009 CSC 9, [2009] 1 R.C.S. 222; Bowes c. Edmonton (City), 2007 ABCA 347, 425 A.R. 123; Fehr c. Jacob (1993), 14 C.C.L.T. (2d) 200; M. (K.) c. M. (H.), [1992] 3 R.C.S. 6; Burt c. LeLacheur, 2000 NSCA 90, 189 D.L.R. (4th) 193; Rizzo & Rizzo Shoes Ltd. (Re), [1998] 1 R.C.S. 27; Fanshawe College of Applied Arts and Technology c. AU Optronics Corp., 2016 ONCA 621, 132 O.R. (3d) 81; Guerin c. La Reine, [1984] 2 R.C.S. 335; Kitchen c. Royal Air Forces Association, [1958] 2 All E.R. 241; T.P. c. A.P., 1988 ABCA 352, 92 A.R. 122; Performance Industries Ltd. c. Sylvan Lake Golf & Tennis Club Ltd., 2002 CSC 19, [2002] 1 R.C.S. 678; Shah c. LG Chem, Ltd., 2015 ONSC 6148, 390 D.L.R. (4th) 87; Kone AG et autres c. ÖBB-Infrastruktur AG, [2014] EUECJ C-557/12; Fairhurst c. Anglo American PLC, 2014 BCSC 2270; Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. c. Infineon Technologies AG, 2009 BCCA 503, 98 B.C.L.R. (4th) 272; Irving Paper Ltd. c. Atofina Chemicals Inc. (2009), 99 O.R. (3d) 358; Crosslink Technology Inc. c. BASF Canada, 2014 ONSC 1682, 54 C.P.C. (7th) 111; Shah c. LG Chem, Ltd., 2018 ONCA 819, 142 O.R. (3d) 721; Infineon Technologies AG c. Option consommateurs, 2013 CSC 59, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 600; Sun-Rype Products Ltd. c. Archer Daniels Midland Company, 2013 CSC 58, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 545; R. c. Imperial Tobacco Canada Ltée, 2011 CSC 42, [2011] 3 R.C.S. 45; R. c. Proulx, 2016 QCCA 1425; Proprietary Articles Trade Association c. Attorney General for Canada, [1931] A.C. 310; International Brotherhood of Teamsters c. Therien, [1960] R.C.S. 265; Gagnon c. Foundation Maritime Ltd., [1961] R.C.S. 435; Cement LaFarge c. B.C. Lightweight Aggregate, [1983] 1 R.C.S. 452; A.I. Enterprises Ltd. c. Bram Enterprises Ltd., 2014 CSC 12, [2014] 1 R.C.S. 177; Gendron c. Syndicat des approvisionnements et services de l'Alliance de la Fonction publique du Canada, section locale 50057, [1990] 1 R.C.S. 1298; Western Canadian Shopping Centres Inc. c. Dutton, 2001 CSC 46, [2001] 2 R.C.S. 534; Vivendi Canada Inc. c. Dell'Aniello, 2014 CSC 1, [2014] 1 R.C.S. 3; Bisaillon c. Université Concordia, 2006 CSC 19, [2006] 1 R.C.S. 666.

By Côté J. (dissenting in part)

M. (K.) v. M. (H.), [1992] 3 S.C.R. 6; Central Trust Co. v. Rafuse, [1986] 2 S.C.R. 147; Peixeiro v. Haberman, [1997] 3 S.C.R. 549; Fehr v. Jacob (1993), 14 C.C.L.T. (2d) 200; Ryan v. Moore, 2005 SCC 38, [2005] 2 S.C.R. 53; Fanshawe College of Applied Arts and Technology v. AU Optronics Corp., 2016 ONCA 621, 132 O.R. (3d) 81; Reference re Pan-Canadian Securities Regulation, 2018 SCC 48, [2018] 3 S.C.R. 189; Snow v. Kashyap (1995), 125 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 182; General Motors of Canada Ltd. v. City National Leasing, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 641; Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce v. Green, 2015 SCC 60, [2015] 3 S.C.R. 801; CCS Corp. v. Secure Energy Services Inc., 2014 ABCA 96, 575 A.R. 1; Laboratoires Servier v. Apotex Inc., 2008 FC 825, 67 C.P.R. (4th) 241; Garford Pty Ltd. v. Dywidag Systems International, Canada, Ltd., 2010 FC 996, 88 C.P.R. (4th) 7; Eli Lilly and Co. v. Apotex Inc., 2009 FC 991, 80 C.P.R. (4th) 1; Fairview Donut Inc. v. The TDL Group Corp., 2012 ONSC 1252; Giroux Estate v. Trillium Health Centre (2005), 74 O.R. (3d) 341; Kitchen v. Royal Air Forces Association, [1958] 2 All E.R. 241; Guerin v. The Queen, [1984] 2 S.C.R. 335; Performance Industries Ltd. v. Sylvan Lake Golf & Tennis Club Ltd., 2002 SCC 19, [2002] 1 S.C.R. 678; First City Capital Ltd. v. B.C. Building Corp. (1989), 43 B.L.R. 29; McMaster University v. Wilchar Construction Ltd. (1971), 22 D.L.R. (3d) 9; Bell ExpressVu Limited Partnership v. Rex, 2002 SCC 42, [2002] 2 S.C.R. 559; R. v. Alex, 2017 SCC 37, [2017] 1 S.C.R. 967; McLean v. British Columbia (Securities Commission), 2013 SCC 67, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 895; ATCO Gas and Pipelines Ltd. v. Alberta (Energy and Utilities Board), 2006 SCC 4, [2006] 1 S.C.R. 140; Ultramares Corp. v. Touche, 174 N.E. 441 (1931); Mustapha v. Culligan of Canada Ltd., 2008 SCC 27, [2008] 2 S.C.R. 114; Taylor v. 1103919 Alberta Ltd., 2015 ABCA 201, 602 A.R. 105; Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. v. Microsoft Corporation, 2013 SCC 57, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 477; Associated General Contractors v. Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519 (1983); Shah v. LG Chem, Ltd., 2015 ONSC 6148, 390 D.L.R. (4th) 87; Shah v. LG Chem, Ltd., 2017 ONSC 2586, 413 D.L.R. (4th) 546; R. v. Imperial Tobacco Canada Ltd., 2011 SCC 42, [2011] 3 S.C.R. 45; Blue Shield of Virginia v. McCready, 457 U.S. 465 (1982); Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720 (1977); Canadian National Railway Co. v. Norsk Pacific Steamship Co., [1992] 1 S.C.R. 1021; Shah v. LG Chem, Ltd., 2018 ONCA 819, 142 O.R. (3d) 721; R. v. Proulx, 2016 QCCA 1425; Gendron v. Supply and Services Union of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, Local 50057, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 1298; Westfair Foods Ltd. v. Lippens Inc. (1989), 64 D.L.R. (4th) 335; Western Canadian Shopping Centres Inc. v. Dutton, 2001 SCC 46, [2001] 2 S.C.R. 534; Bou Malhab v. Diffusion Métromédia CMR inc., 2011 SCC 9, [2011] 1 S.C.R.

Citée par la juge Côté (dissidente en partie)

M. (K.) c. M. (H.), [1992] 3 R.C.S. 6; Central Trust Co. c. Rafuse, [1986] 2 R.C.S. 147; Peixeiro c. Haberman, [1997] 3 R.C.S. 549; Fehr c. Jacob (1993), 14 C.C.L.T. (2d) 200; Ryan c. Moore, 2005 CSC 38, [2005] 2 R.C.S. 53; Fanshawe College of Applied Arts and Technology c. AU Optronics Corp., 2016 ONCA 621, 132 O.R. (3d) 81; Renvoi relatif à la réglementation pancanadienne des valeurs mobilières, 2018 CSC 48, [2018] 3 R.C.S. 189; Snow c. Kashyap (1995), 125 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 182; General Motors of Canada Ltd. c. City National Leasing, [1989] 1 R.C.S. 641; Banque Canadienne Impériale de Commerce c. Green, 2015 CSC 60, [2015] 3 R.C.S. 801; CCS Corp. c. Secure Energy Services Inc., 2014 ABCA 96, 575 A.R. 1; Laboratoires Servier c. Apotex Inc., 2008 CF 825, 67 C.P.R. (4th) 241; Garford Pty Ltd. c. Dywidag Systems International, Canada, Ltd., 2010 CF 996, 88 C.P.R. (4th) 7; Eli Lilly and Co. c. Apotex Inc., 2009 CF 991, 80 C.P.R. (4th) 1; Fairview Donut Inc. c. The TDL Group Corp., 2012 ONSC 1252; Giroux Estate c. Trillium Health Centre (2005), 74 O.R. (3d) 341; Kitchen c. Royal Air Forces Association, [1958] 2 All E.R. 241; Guerin c. La Reine, [1984] 2 R.C.S. 335; Performance Industries Ltd. c. Sylvan Lake Golf & Tennis Club Ltd., 2002 CSC 19, [2002] 1 R.C.S. 678; First City Capital Ltd. c. B.C. Building Corp. (1989), 43 B.L.R. 29; McMaster University c. Wilchar Construction Ltd. (1971), 22 D.L.R. (3d) 9; Bell ExpressVu Limited Partnership c. Rex, 2002 CSC 42, [2002] 2 R.C.S. 559; R. c. Alex, 2017 CSC 37, [2017] 1 R.C.S. 967; McLean c. Colombie-Britannique (Securities Commission), 2013 CSC 67, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 895; ATCO Gas and Pipelines Ltd. c. Alberta (Energy and Utilities Board), 2006 CSC 4, [2006] 1 R.C.S. 140; Ultramares Corp. c. Touche, 174 N.E. 441 (1931); Mustapha c. Culligan du Canada Ltée, 2008 CSC 27, [2008] 2 R.C.S. 114; Taylor c. 1103919 Alberta Ltd., 2015 ABCA 201, 602 A.R. 105; Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. c. Microsoft Corporation, 2013 CSC 57, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 477; Associated General Contractors c. Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519 (1983); Shah c. LG Chem, Ltd., 2015 ONSC 6148, 390 D.L.R. (4th) 87; Shah c. LG Chem, Ltd., 2017 ONSC 2586, 413 D.L.R. (4th) 546; R. c. Imperial Tobacco Canada Ltée, 2011 CSC 42, [2011] 3 R.C.S. 45; Blue Shield of Virginia c. McCready, 457 U.S. 465 (1982); Illinois Brick Co. c. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720 (1977); Cie des chemins de fer nationaux du Canada c. Norsk Pacific Steamship Co., [1992] 1 R.C.S. 1021; Shah c. LG Chem, Ltd., 2018 ONCA 819, 142 O.R. (3d) 721; R. c. Proulx, 2016 QCCA 1425; Gendron c. Syndicat des approvisionnements et services de l'Alliance de la Fonction publique du Canada, Section locale 50057, [1990] 1 R.C.S. 1298; Westfair Foods Ltd. c. Lippens Inc. (1989), 64 D.L.R. (4th) 335; Western Canadian Shopping Centres Inc. c. Dutton, 2001 CSC 46, [2001] 2 R.C.S. 534; Bou Malhab c. Diffusion Métromédia CMR inc., 214; Sun-Rype Products Ltd. v. Archer Daniels Midland Company, 2013 SCC 58, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 545; Pro-Sys v. Microsoft, 2010 BCSC 285.

Statutes and Regulations Cited

Budget Implementation Act, 2009, S.C. 2009, c. 2, s. 410.
Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 50, ss. 1, 4(1), Division 2, 29 to 34, 37(1).
Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15, s. 4.
Combines Investigation Act, R.S.C. 1970, c. C-23.
Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, ss. 1.1, 36, Part VI, 45, 52, 62.
Highway Traffic Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. H.8, s. 206(1).
Land Titles Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. L-4.
Limitation Act, S.B.C. 2012, c. 13, ss. 6 to 8, 21.
Limitation of Actions Act, S.N.B. 2009, c. L-8.5, s. 5.
Limitation of Actions Act, S.N.S. 2014, c. 35, s. 8.
Limitations Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. L-12, s. 3(1).
Limitations Act, R.S.O. 1970, c. 246, s. 45(1).
Limitations Act, S.S. 2004, c. L-16.1, ss. 5 to 7.
Limitations Act, 2002, S.O. 2002, c. 24, Sch. B, ss. 4, 5, 15.
Securities Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. S.5, s. 138.14.
Statute of Limitations, R.S.B.C. 1960, c. 370, s. 3.
Survival of Actions Act, R.S.N.L. 1990, c. S-32, s. 5.

Authors Cited

Canada. Competition Bureau of Canada. Competitor Collaboration Guidelines. Gatineau, December 2009.
Canada. Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Proposals for a New Competition Policy for Canada: First Stage. Ottawa, 1973.
Canada. House of Commons. Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence of the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, Issue No. 45, 1st Sess., 30th Parl., May 8, 1975, p. 45:18.
Driedger, Elmer A. Construction of Statutes, 2nd ed. Toronto: Butterworths, 1983.
Eizenga, Michael A., et al. Class Actions Law and Practice, 2nd ed. Toronto: LexisNexis, 2009 (loose-leaf updated March 2019, release 55).
Inderst, Roman, Frank P. Maier-Rigaud, and Ulrich Schwalbe. "Umbrella Effects" (2014), 10 J. Competition L. & Econ. 739.
Linden, Allen M., et al. Canadian Tort Law, 11th ed. Toronto: LexisNexis, 2018.
Mew, Graeme, Debra Rolph, and Daniel Zacks. The Law of Limitations, 3rd ed. Toronto: LexisNexis, 2016.

2011 CSC 9, [2011] 1 R.C.S. 214; Sun-Rype Products Ltd. c. Archer Daniels Midland Company, 2013 CSC 58, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 545; Pro-Sys c. Microsoft, 2010 BCSC 285.

Lois et règlements cités

Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 50, art. 1, 4(1), division 2, 29 à 34, 37(1).
Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15, art. 4.
Code de la route, L.R.O. 1990, c. H.8, art. 206(1).
Land Titles Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. L-4.
Limitation Act, S.B.C. 2012, c. 13, art. 6 à 8, 21.
Limitation of Actions Act, S.N.S. 2014, c. 35, art. 8.
Limitations Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. L-12, art. 3(1).
Limitations Act, R.S.O. 1970, c. 246, art. 45(1).
Limitations Act, S.S. 2004, c. L-16.1, art. 5 à 7.
Loi d'exécution du budget de 2009, L.C. 2009, c. 2, art. 410.
Loi de 2002 sur la prescription des actions, L.O. 2002, c. 24, ann. B, art. 4, 5, 15.
Loi relative aux enquêtes sur les coalitions, L.R.C. 1970, c. C-23.
Loi sur la concurrence, L.R.C. 1985, c. C-34, art. 1.1, 36, partie VI, 45, 52, 62.
Loi sur la prescription, L.N.-B. 2009, c. L-8.5, art. 5.
Loi sur les valeurs mobilières, L.R.O. 1990, c. S.5, art. 138.14.
Statute of Limitations, R.S.B.C. 1960, c. 370, art. 3.
Survival of Actions Act, R.S.N.L. 1990, c. S-32, art. 5.

Doctrine et autres documents cités

Canada. Bureau de la concurrence Canada. Lignes directrices sur la collaboration entre concurrents, Gatineau, décembre 2009.
Canada. Chambre des communes. Procès-verbaux et témoignages du Comité permanent des finances, du commerce et des questions économiques, fascicule nº 45, 1re sess., 30e lég., 8 mai 1975, p. 45:18.
Canada. Consommation et Corporations. Propositions pour une nouvelle politique de concurrence pour le Canada : première étape, Ottawa, 1973.
Driedger, Elmer A. Construction of Statutes, 2nd ed., Toronto, Butterworths, 1983.
Eizenga, Michael A., et al. Class Actions Law and Practice, 2nd ed., Toronto, LexisNexis, 2009 (loose-leaf updated March 2019, release 55).
Inderst, Roman, Frank P. Maier-Rigaud, et Ulrich Schwalbe. « Umbrella Effects » (2014), 10 J. Competition L. & Econ. 739.
Linden, Allen M., et al. Canadian Tort Law, 11th ed., Toronto, LexisNexis, 2018.
Mew, Graeme, Debra Rolph, et Daniel Zacks. The Law of Limitations, 3rd ed., Toronto, LexisNexis, 2016.

Spry, I. C. F. The Principles of Equitable Remedies: Specific Performance, Injunctions, Rectification and Equitable Damages, 9th ed. Pyrmont, N.S.W.: Lawbook Co., 2014.

Sullivan, Ruth. Sullivan on the Construction of Statutes, 6th ed. Markham, Ont.: LexisNexis, 2014.

Veel, Paul-Erik. Waiting forever for the axe to drop? Discoverability and the limitation period for Competition Act claims, Lenczner Slaght, August 12, 2016 (online: https://litigate.com/waiting-forever-for-the-axe-to-drop-discoverability-and-the-limitation-period-for-competition-act-claims/pdf; archived version: https://www.scc-csc.ca/cso-dce/2019SCC-CSC42_eng.pdf).

Winkler, Warren K., et al. The Law of Class Actions in Canada, Toronto: Thomson Reuters, 2014.

Wright, Kevin, Todd Shikaze, and Emily Snow. "On the 'Level' After Godfrey: Proving Liability in Canadian Price Fixing Class Actions" (2017), 12 C.A.D.Q. 13.

APPEALS from a judgment of the British Columbia Court of Appeal (Newbury, Groberman and Savage JJ.A.), 2017 BCCA 302, 1 B.C.L.R. (6th) 319, [2017] 12 W.W.R. 448, [2017] B.C.J. No. 1618 (QL), 2017 CarswellBC 2245 (WL Can.), affirming a decision of Masuhara J., 2016 BCSC 844, [2016] B.C.J. No. 979 (QL), 2016 CarswellBC 1313 (WL Can.). Appeals dismissed, Côté J. dissenting in part.

W. Michael G. Osborne, Brigeeta Richdale and Jessica Lewis, for the appellants Pioneer Corporation, Pioneer North America, Inc., Pioneer Electronics (USA) Inc., Pioneer High Fidelity Taiwan Co., Ltd. and Pioneer Electronics of Canada Inc.

Laura F. Cooper and Vera Toppings, for the appellants Toshiba Corporation, Toshiba Samsung Storage Technology Corp., Toshiba Samsung Storage Technology Corp. Korea, Toshiba of Canada Ltd. and Toshiba America Information Systems, Inc.

Robert E. Kwinter and Evangelia (Litsa) Kriaris, for the appellants Samsung Electronics Co., Ltd., Samsung Electronics Canada Inc. and Samsung Electronics America, Inc.

Neil Campbell, Joan Young and Samantha Gordon, for the appellants Koninklijke Philips Electronics

Spry, I. C. F. The Principles of Equitable Remedies : Specific Performance, Injunctions, Rectification and Equitable Damages, 9th ed., Pyrmont, N.S.W., Lawbook Co., 2014.

Sullivan, Ruth. Sullivan on the Construction of Statutes, 6th ed., Markham (Ont.), LexisNexis, 2014.

Veel, Paul-Erik. Waiting forever for the axe to drop? Discoverability and the limitation period for Competition Act claims, Lenczner Slaght, August 12, 2016 (en ligne : https://litigate.com/waiting-forever-for-the-axe-to-drop-discoverability-and-the-limitation-period-for-competition-act-claims/pdf; version archivée : https://www.scc-csc.ca/cso-dce/2019SCC-CSC42_eng.pdf).

Winkler, Warren K., et al. The Law of Class Actions in Canada, Toronto, Thomson Reuters, 2014.

Wright, Kevin, Todd Shikaze, et Emily Snow. « On the "Level" After Godfrey : Proving Liability in Canadian Price Fixing Class Actions » (2017), 12 C.A.D.Q. 13.

POURVOIS contre un arrêt de la Cour d'appel de la Colombie-Britannique (les juges Newbury, Groberman et Savage), 2017 BCCA 302, 1 B.C.L.R. (6th) 319, [2017] 12 W.W.R. 448, [2017] B.C.J. No. 1618 (QL), 2017 CarswellBC 2245 (WL Can.), qui a confirmé une décision du juge Masuhara, 2016 BCSC 844, [2016] B.C.J. No. 979 (QL), 2016 CarswellBC 1313 (WL Can.). Pourvois rejetés, la juge Côté est dissidente en partie.

W. Michael G. Osborne, Brigeeta Richdale et Jessica Lewis, pour les appelantes Pioneer Corporation, Pioneer North America, Inc., Pioneer Electronics (USA) Inc., Pioneer High Fidelity Taiwan Co., Ltd. et Pioneer Électronique du Canada, inc.

Laura F. Cooper et Vera Toppings, pour les appelantes Toshiba Corporation, Toshiba Samsung Storage Technology Corp., Toshiba Samsung Storage Technology Corp. Korea, Toshiba du Canada Limitée et Toshiba America Information Systems, Inc.

Robert E. Kwinter et Evangelia (Litsa) Kriaris, pour les appelantes Samsung Electronics Co., Ltd., Samsung Electronics Canada Inc. et Samsung Electronics America, Inc.

Neil Campbell, Joan Young et Samantha Gordon, pour les appelantes Koninklijke Philips Electronics

N.V., Lite-On IT Corporation of Taiwan, Philips & Lite-On Digital Solutions Corporation, Philips & Lite-On Digital Solutions USA, Inc. and Philips Electronics Ltd.

John F. Rook, Q.C., Christiaan A. Jordaan and Emrys Davis, for the appellants Panasonic Corporation, Panasonic Corporation of North America and Panasonic Canada Inc.

Stephen Fitterman, for the appellants BENQ Corporation, BENQ America Corporation and BENQ Canada Corp.

Reidar M. Mogerman, Linda J. Visser, David G. A. Jones, Charles M. Wright, Katie I. Duke and Bridget M. R. Moran, for the respondent.

Maxime Nasr and Violette Leblanc, for the intervener Option consommateurs.

Jonathan J. Foreman and Jean-Marc Metrailler, for the intervener the Consumers Council of Canada.

Sandra A. Forbes and Adam Fanaki, for the intervener the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Jean-Marc Leclerc and Mohsen Seddigh, for the intervener the Consumers' Association of Canada.

The judgment of Wagner C.J. and Abella, Moldaver, Karakatsanis, Gascon, Brown, Rowe and Martin JJ. was delivered by

BROWN J. —

I. Introduction

[1] The proposed representative plaintiff, Neil Godfrey, applied for certification of a class proceeding under the British Columbia Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 50. The defendants manufacture Optical Disc Drives ("ODDs" — a memory storage device that uses laser light or electromagnetic waves near the light spectrum to read and/or record data on optical discs), and ODD products (products that contain ODDs). Godfrey alleges that

N.V., Lite-On IT Corporation of Taiwan, Philips & Lite-On Digital Solutions Corporation, Philips & Lite-On Digital Solutions USA, Inc. et Philips Electronics Ltd.

John F. Rook, c.r., Christiaan A. Jordaan et Emrys Davis, pour les appelantes Panasonic Corporation, Panasonic Corporation of North America et Panasonic Canada Inc.

Stephen Fitterman, pour les appelantes BENQ Corporation, BENQ America Corporation et BENQ Canada Corp.

Reidar M. Mogerman, Linda J. Visser, David G. A. Jones, Charles M. Wright, Katie I. Duke et Bridget M. R. Moran, pour l'intimé.

Maxime Nasr et Violette Leblanc, pour l'intervenante Option consommateurs.

Jonathan J. Foreman et Jean-Marc Metrailler, pour l'intervenant Consumers Council of Canada.

Sandra A. Forbes et Adam Fanaki, pour l'intervenante la Chambre de commerce du Canada.

Jean-Marc Leclerc et Mohsen Seddigh, pour l'intervenante l'Association des consommateurs du Canada.

Version française du jugement du juge en chef Wagner et des juges Abella, Moldaver, Karakatsanis, Gascon, Brown, Rowe et Martin rendu par

LE JUGE BROWN —

I. Introduction

[1] Le représentant proposé des demandeurs, Neil Godfrey, a demandé l'autorisation d'un recours collectif en vertu de la Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 50, de la Colombie-Britannique. Les défenderesses fabriquent des lecteurs de disques optiques (« LDO » — un dispositif de stockage de la mémoire qui utilise la lumière laser ou les ondes électromagnétiques près du spectre optique pour lire ou enregistrer des données sur un disque optique), et des

the defendants conspired to fix prices of ODDs and ODD products.

[2] The certification judge granted Godfrey's application. Two sets of defendants — one led by Pioneer Corporation, and the other by Toshiba Corporation — each appealed from that decision, unsuccessfully, to the British Columbia Court of Appeal. At stake in these appeals is, principally, whether it is plain and obvious that the claim under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, of so-called "umbrella purchasers" who bought ODDs or ODD products manufactured and supplied by someone other than the defendants, but who allege that the defendants' price-fixing conduct raised the market price of the product, cannot succeed. This depends on whether these umbrella purchasers have a cause of action under s. 36(1)(a). For the reasons that follow, I agree with the courts below that they do, and it therefore follows that it is not plain and obvious that their claim cannot succeed.

[3] These appeals also present an occasion to clarify the operation of the statutory limitation period for claims under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act, to affirm the availability of common law and equitable actions in respect of claims also brought under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act, and to reiterate the standard required to certify loss-related questions as common issues in class proceedings.

[4] As I will explain below, my disposition of all these matters would lead me to dismiss the appeals.

II. Background

[5] Godfrey applied for certification of a class proceeding against 42 defendants (collectively, "Toshiba"), produits munis de LDO (produits qui contiennent des LDO). M. Godfrey allègue que les défenderesses ont comploté pour fixer les prix des LDO et des produits munis de LDO.

[2] Le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation de M. Godfrey a accueilli celle-ci. Deux groupes de défendeurs — l'un dirigé par Pioneer Corporation, et l'autre par Toshiba Corporation — ont tous deux fait appel sans succès de cette décision à la Cour d'appel de la Colombie-Britannique. Les présents pourvois soulèvent principalement la question de savoir s'il est évident et manifeste que la demande fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence, L.R.C. 1985, c. C-34, de ceux qu'on appelle les « acheteurs sous parapluie », qui ont acheté des LDO ou des produits munis de LDO fabriqués et fournis par quelqu'un d'autre que les défenderesses, mais qui allèguent que la fixation des prix par les défenderesses s'est traduite par une hausse du prix du produit sur le marché, ne peut être accueillie. La réponse à cette question dépend de la question de savoir si les acheteurs sous parapluie ont une cause d'action fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a). Pour les motifs qui suivent, je suis d'avis, à l'instar des tribunaux d'instance inférieure, qu'ils en ont une, si bien qu'il n'est pas évident et manifeste que leur demande ne peut être accueillie.

[3] En outre, les présents pourvois donnent à la Cour l'occasion d'apporter des précisions sur les délais de prescription applicables aux actions fondées sur l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence, de confirmer qu'il est possible de se prévaloir des recours de common law et d'equity alors qu'une demande a également été introduite sous le régime de l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence, et de rappeler la norme applicable à l'autorisation des questions liées à la perte en tant que questions communes à trancher dans un recours collectif.

[4] Comme je l'expliquerai plus loin, les conclusions auxquelles j'arrive sur ces questions m'amènent à rejeter les pourvois.

II. Contexte

[5] M. Godfrey a demandé l'autorisation d'un recours collectif visant 42 défenderesses (collectivement, alleging a conspiracy to raise, maintain, fix and/or stabilize the price of ODDs between January 1, 2004 and January 1, 2010 ("class period"). He deposed that he purchased ODD products during the class period, and that he seeks to bring the proposed class proceeding on behalf of all British Columbia residents who purchased an ODD or an ODD product during the class period. The proposed class consists of:

(a) direct purchasers, whose ODD or ODD product was manufactured or supplied by a defendant and purchased from that defendant,

(b) indirect purchasers, whose ODD or ODD product was manufactured or supplied by a defendant and purchased from a non-defendant; and

(c) umbrella purchasers, whose ODD or ODD product was manufactured and supplied by a non-defendant.

III. Judicial History

A. British Columbia Supreme Court, 2016 BCSC 844 — Masuhara J.

[6] The certification judge certified the action as a class proceeding, subject to certain exceptions and conditions (para. 221 (CanLII)). One condition was that the class definition be amended so as to satisfy s. 4(1)(b) of the Class Proceedings Act. The certification judge held that the class definition ("[a]ll persons resident in British Columbia who purchased [ODDs and ODD products] in [the class period]") was insufficiently precise, as it was unclear which products were included (paras. 128-31).

[7] In his reasons, the certification judge resolved a number of matters, only two of which are relevant to these appeals: whether the pleadings disclose a cause

« Toshiba »), alléguant que celles-ci avaient comploté pour augmenter, maintenir, fixer ou stabiliser le prix des LDO entre le 1er janvier 2004 et le 1er janvier 2010 (« période visée par le recours collectif »). Il a déclaré avoir acheté des produits munis de LDO au cours de la période visée par le recours collectif, et qu'il cherche à intenter le recours collectif projeté au nom de tous les résidents de la Colombie-Britannique qui ont acheté un LDO ou un produit muni de LDO durant la période visée. Le groupe projeté est composé des acheteurs suivants :

a) acheteurs directs dont les LDO ou les produits munis de LDO ont été fabriqués ou fournis par une défenderesse et achetés de cette défenderesse,

b) acheteurs indirects dont les LDO ou les produits munis de LDO ont été fabriqués ou fournis par une défenderesse et achetés d'une personne qui n'est pas une défenderesse;

c) acheteurs sous parapluie dont les LDO ou les produits munis de LDO ont été fabriqués et fournis par une personne qui n'est pas une défenderesse.

III. Historique judiciaire

A. Cour suprême de la Colombie-Britannique, 2016 BCSC 844 — le juge Masuhara

[6] Le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a autorisé l'action comme recours collectif, sous réserve de certaines exceptions et conditions (par. 221 (CanLII)). Par exemple, il fallait modifier la définition du groupe pour qu'elle respecte l'al. 4(1)(b) de la Class Proceedings Act. Le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a conclu que la définition du groupe [TRADUCTION] (« [t]outes les personnes résidant en Colombie-Britannique qui ont acheté [des LDO et des produits munis de LDO] durant [la période visée par le recours collectif] ») n'était pas suffisamment précise, en ce qu'elle ne permettait pas de savoir quels produits étaient visés (par. 128-131).

[7] Dans ses motifs, le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a tranché plusieurs questions, dont seulement deux sont pertinentes pour les présents pourvois :

of action, and whether Godfrey's proposed questions relating to loss suffered by the class are certifiable as common questions.

(1) Do the Pleadings Disclose a Cause of Action?

[8] The certification judge first considered whether Godfrey's pleadings satisfy s. 4(1)(a) of the Class Proceedings Act, which conditions certification upon the pleadings disclosing a cause of action.

(a) The Pioneer Claim

[9] A subset of the named defendants ("Pioneer") opposed Godfrey's certification application, arguing that the action was bound to fail because it was barred by the two-year limitation period in s. 36(4) of the Competition Act (although the action against the other defendants was filed on September 27, 2010, the action against Pioneer was not filed until August 16, 2013). The certification judge held, however, that this argument could not be considered at the certification stage (para. 46). Further, it was not plain and obvious in any event that the limitation period could not be extended in this case by applying principles of discoverability or fraudulent concealment.

(b) Umbrella Purchasers

[10] Toshiba argued that the umbrella purchasers had no cause of action under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act, because their inclusion would expose it to indeterminate liability. For four reasons, however, the certification judge held that the umbrella purchasers had a cause of action:

1. While "allowing umbrella claims is inconsistent with restitutionary law", restitutionary law does not determine the scope of the Competition Act claims, since s. 36 exists to les actes de procédure révèlent-ils une cause d'action et les questions proposées par M. Godfrey relativement à la perte subie par le groupe peuvent-elles être autorisées en tant que questions communes?

(1) Les actes de procédure révèlent-ils une cause d'action?

[8] Le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation s'est d'abord demandé si les actes de procédure produits par M. Godfrey respectaient l'al. 4(1)(a) de la Class Proceedings Act, qui impose comme condition à l'autorisation que les actes de procédures révèlent une cause d'action.

a) L'action contre Pioneer

[9] Un sous-groupe faisant partie des défenderesses désignées (« Pioneer ») s'est opposé à la demande d'autorisation de M. Godfrey, soutenant que l'action était vouée à l'échec parce qu'elle était prescrite en raison de l'écoulement du délai de prescription de deux ans prévu au par. 36(4) de la Loi sur la concurrence (bien que l'action contre les autres défenderesses ait été déposée le 27 septembre 2010, l'action contre Pioneer a seulement été déposée le 16 août 2013). Le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a conclu, cependant, qu'il ne pouvait pas tenir compte de cet argument à l'étape de l'autorisation (par. 46). Il a ajouté que, de toute façon, il n'était pas évident et manifeste que, dans la présente affaire, le délai de prescription ne pouvait pas être prorogé par application des principes de la possibilité de découvrir ou de la dissimulation frauduleuse.

b) Acheteurs sous parapluie

[10] Toshiba a fait valoir que les acheteurs sous parapluie n'avaient pas de cause d'action suivant l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence, car leur participation au recours collectif exposerait Toshiba à une responsabilité indéterminée. Le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a toutefois conclu, pour quatre motifs, que les acheteurs sous parapluie avaient une cause d'action :

1. S'il est vrai [TRADUCTION] « qu'autoriser l'instruction des demandes présentées par les acheteurs sous parapluie est incompatible avec le droit de la restitution », il reste que le droit de la compensate for losses, not to restore wrongful gains (para. 73).

2. The possibility of indeterminate liability does not militate against affording umbrella purchasers a cause of action, since the defendants' liability exposure, while significant, would not be indeterminate (paras. 75-76).

3. While umbrella claims expose the defendants to liability for the pricing decisions of non-defendants, the pricing decisions of non-defendants, under the theory of umbrella effects, are not truly "independent" (para. 77).

4. The umbrella purchaser claims would further the goals of the Competition Act, including compensation and deterrence (para. 78).

(c) "Unlawfulness" Element

[11] The certification judge then considered Toshiba's argument that a breach of the Competition Act could not constitute the "unlawful" element of civil causes of action, such as the tort of unlawful means conspiracy (para. 83). He held that he was bound by Watson v. Bank of America Corp., 2015 BCCA 362, 79 B.C.L.R. (5th) 1, such that it could. While, for other reasons, the pleadings did not disclose a cause of action for the unlawful means tort, Godfrey was permitted to amend his pleadings (paras. 109-10). And, while finding that Godfrey's pleadings did disclose a cause of action in civil conspiracy (both predominant purpose conspiracy and unlawful means conspiracy), unjust enrichment and waiver of tort (paras. 100, 102, 115 and 119), the certification judge also found that the umbrella purchasers' claims in unjust enrichment and waiver of tort were bound to fail (paras. 116 and 120).

restitution ne définit pas la portée des demandes fondées sur la Loi sur la concurrence, puisque l'art. 36 vise l'indemnisation des pertes, non la restitution des gains illicites (par. 73).

2. L'éventualité d'une responsabilité indéterminée n'empêche pas de reconnaître une cause d'action aux acheteurs sous parapluie, étant donné que la responsabilité à laquelle s'exposent les défenderesses, quoiqu'importante, ne serait pas indéterminée (par. 75-76).

3. Bien que les demandes présentées par les acheteurs sous parapluie puissent exposer les défenderesses à une responsabilité quant à des décisions d'établissement des prix prises par des tiers, il reste que, selon la théorie de l'effet parapluie, ces décisions ne sont pas véritablement « indépendantes » (par. 77).

4. Les réclamations des acheteurs sous parapluie favoriseraient l'atteinte des objectifs de la Loi sur la concurrence, notamment l'indemnisation et la dissuasion (par. 78).

c) Élément d'« illégalité »

[11] Le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a ensuite examiné l'argument de Toshiba suivant lequel une infraction à la Loi sur la concurrence ne pouvait constituer l'élément [TRADUCTION] « illégal » d'une cause d'action civile, telle que le complot qui prévoit le recours à des moyens illégaux (par. 83). Il a conclu qu'il était lié par l'arrêt Watson c. Bank of America Corp., 2015 BCCA 362, 79 B.C.L.R. (5th) 1, et que cela se pouvait donc. Bien que, pour d'autres raisons, les actes de procédure n'aient pas révélé de cause d'action pour délit d'atteinte par un moyen illégal, M. Godfrey a été autorisé à les modifier (par. 109-110). Et bien qu'il ait conclu que les actes de procédure de M. Godfrey révélaient une cause d'action pour complot civil, à la fois pour complot visant principalement à causer un préjudice et complot d'atteinte par un moyen illégal, enrichissement sans cause et renonciation au recours délictuel (par. 100, 102, 115 et 119), le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a également conclu que les actions pour enrichissement sans cause et renonciation au recours délictuel intentées par les acheteurs sous parapluie étaient vouées à l'échec (par. 116 et 120).

(2) Do the Claims Raise Common Issues?

[12] Godfrey sought to have 25 questions certified as common questions under s. 4(1)(c) of the Class Proceedings Act (several of which related to loss alleged to have been suffered by the proposed class (para. 143)). Godfrey's expert, Dr. Keith Reutter, opined that (1) all the proposed class members would have been impacted by Toshiba's alleged conspiracy, and (2) there are methods available to estimate any overcharge that resulted from the alleged conspiracy, as well as aggregate damages (paras. 151-52). Some of the defendants, however, retained their own expert, Dr. James Levinsohn, who opined that it would not be possible to determine the fact of injury for the proposed class members using common evidence and analysis (para. 153).

[13] After examining Dr. Reutter's opinion in detail, the certification judge concluded that his was a plausible methodology which satisfied the standard set in Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. v. Microsoft Corporation, 2013 SCC 57, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 477, for evidence to support certifying loss as a common issue. Specifically, it could establish that overcharges were passed on to the indirect purchaser level (paras. 167 and 179).

[14] The certification judge therefore certified all of the common issues with respect to the direct purchasers and indirect purchasers, except those relating to the unlawful means tort (para. 199). With respect to the umbrella purchasers, he certified all of the common issues except those relating to the unlawful means tort, unjust enrichment, waiver of tort (para. 200) and aggregate damages (para. 188).

B. British Columbia Court of Appeal, 2017 BCCA 302, 1 B.C.L.R. (6th) 319 — per Savage J.A.

[15] Pioneer appealed, arguing the certification judge erred in holding: (1) that the limitation period

(2) Les demandes soulèvent-elles des questions communes?

[12] M. Godfrey a demandé que 25 questions soient autorisées en tant que questions communes au titre de l'al. 4(1)(c) de la Class Proceedings Act (plusieurs de ces questions portent sur la perte que le groupe projeté aurait subie (par. 143)). L'expert de M. Godfrey, M. Keith Reutter, s'est dit d'avis que (1) tous les membres du groupe projeté ont été touchés par le complot auquel aurait participé Toshiba, et que (2) des méthodes permettent d'estimer la valeur de toute majoration ayant découlé du complot et le montant des dommages-intérêts globaux (par. 151-152). Certaines défenderesses ont cependant fait appel à leur propre expert, M. James Levinsohn, selon qui il ne serait pas possible d'établir le préjudice subi par les membres du groupe proposé au moyen d'une preuve et d'analyses communes (par. 153).

[13] Après avoir examiné en détail l'opinion de M. Reutter, le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a conclu que la méthode qu'il proposait était une méthode acceptable qui respectait la norme établie dans l'arrêt Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. c. Microsoft Corporation, 2013 CSC 57, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 477, et qui justifiait l'autorisation de la question liée à la perte en tant que question commune. Plus particulièrement, cette méthode permettait d'établir que la majoration a été refilée aux acheteurs indirects (par. 167 et 179).

[14] Le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a donc autorisé toutes les questions communes concernant les acheteurs directs et les acheteurs indirects, à l'exception de celles portant sur le délit d'atteinte par un moyen illégal (par. 199). Quant aux acheteurs sous parapluie, il a autorisé toutes les questions communes à l'exception de celles portant sur le délit d'atteinte par un moyen illégal, l'enrichissement sans cause, la renonciation au recours délictuel (par. 200) et les dommages-intérêts globaux (par. 188).

B. Cour d'appel de la Colombie-Britannique, 2017 BCCA 302, 1 B.C.L.R. (6th) 319 — le juge Savage

[15] Pioneer s'est pourvue en appel, soutenant que le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation avait defence cannot be considered at the certification stage; (2) that it is not plain and obvious that the discoverability rule never applies to the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) of the Competition Act; and (3) that it is not plain and obvious that the doctrine of fraudulent concealment cannot toll the limitation period in this case (para. 45).

[16] Toshiba also appealed, arguing the certification judge erred by: (1) recasting the standard for certifying loss as a common issue; (2) holding that a breach of s. 45 of the Competition Act can furnish the "unlawfulness" element for common law actions; and (3) allowing the umbrella purchasers' causes of action to proceed (para. 44).

[17] The Court of Appeal dismissed both sets of appeals.

(1) Pioneer's Appeal

[18] Agreeing with the certification judge, the Court of Appeal held that limitations arguments should, generally, not be considered at the certification stage. Further, and that aside, the limitations issue in this case was "intimately connected with the facts of the alleged conspiracy" and should be reserved for trial (paras. 67-68). Alternatively, were discoverability properly considered at the certification stage, it would not be plain and obvious that discoverability does not apply to delay the running of the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) of the Competition Act. While recognizing that some courts have declined to apply discoverability to s. 36(4)(a)(i) (para. 72), the Court of Appeal read this Court's decision in Ryan v. Moore, 2005 SCC 38, [2005] 2 S.C.R. 53, as directing that discoverability applies where the limitation period is explicitly linked to the injured party's knowledge or the basis of the cause of action (para. 89).

commis une erreur en concluant : (1) que la défense de prescription ne peut pas être prise en compte à l'étape de l'autorisation; (2) qu'il n'est pas évident et manifeste que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique jamais au délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) de la Loi sur la concurrence; et (3) qu'il n'est pas évident et manifeste que la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse ne permet pas de repousser le point de départ du délai de prescription en l'espèce (par. 45).

[16] Toshiba s'est également pourvue en appel, soutenant que le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation s'était trompé : (1) en reformulant le critère d'autorisation de la question liée à la perte à titre de question commune; (2) en concluant qu'une infraction à l'art. 45 de la Loi sur la concurrence peut offrir l'élément d'« illégalité » requis pour les actions en common law; et (3) en laissant les causes d'action des acheteurs sous parapluie suivre leur cours (par. 44).

[17] La Cour d'appel a rejeté les deux appels.

(1) Appel de Pioneer

[18] Souscrivant à l'opinion du juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation, la Cour d'appel a conclu que, de façon générale, il ne convenait pas de tenir compte des arguments sur la prescription à l'étape de l'autorisation. Qui plus est, la question de la prescription en l'espèce était [TRADUCTION] « étroitement liée aux faits sous-tendant l'allégation de complot » et elle devait être tranchée au procès (par. 67-68). Subsidiairement, même si l'on tenait compte du principe de la possibilité de découvrir de manière adéquate au stade de l'autorisation, il ne serait pas évident et manifeste que ce principe ne permet pas de reporter le point de départ du délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) de la Loi sur la concurrence. Tout en reconnaissant que certains tribunaux ont refusé d'appliquer ce principe au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) (par. 72), la Cour d'appel a jugé qu'il se dégage de l'arrêt Ryan c. Moore, 2005 CSC 38, [2005] 2 R.C.S. 53, que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique lorsque le délai de prescription est expressément lié à la connaissance de la partie lésée ou au fondement de la cause d'action (par. 89).

[19] Further, the certification judge was correct, said the Court of Appeal, to conclude that it is not plain and obvious that the doctrine of fraudulent concealment could not apply (para. 110). Equitable fraud was sufficient to invoke the doctrine, and a purely commercial relationship could support the requirement for a "special relationship" (paras. 102-3) between the parties so as to toll the applicable limitation period. Accordingly, Godfrey's failure to plead a "special relationship" would not preclude the doctrine's application here (para. 104).

[19] En outre, aux dires de la Cour d'appel, le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a eu raison de conclure qu'il n'était pas évident et manifeste que la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse ne pouvait s'appliquer (par. 110). L'existence d'une fraude en equity suffit pour invoquer la doctrine, et l'existence d'un lien purement commercial permet de satisfaire à l'exigence d'une [TRADUCTION] « relation spéciale » (par. 102-103) entre les parties de manière à repousser le point de départ du délai de prescription applicable. Ainsi, l'omission de M. Godfrey de faire état d'une « relation spéciale » n'empêcherait pas l'application de la doctrine en l'espèce (par. 104).

(2) Certifying Loss as a Common Issue

(2) Autorisation de la question de la perte en tant que question commune

[20] Toshiba argued that, since Dr. Reutter's proposed methodology could neither demonstrate that loss was suffered by each class member nor identify the class members who did not suffer harm, the certification judge erred in certifying questions relating to harm as common questions (para. 113). It also saw error in the certification judge's reference (at para. 169) to the Class Proceedings Act's aggregate damages provisions as supporting the possibility of liability, even where some class members have not demonstrated actual loss.

[20] Toshiba a fait valoir que, puisque la méthode proposée par M. Reutter ne permettait pas de démontrer que la perte a été subie par chacun des membres du groupe, ni d'identifier ceux du groupe qui n'ont pas subi de préjudice, le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation avait commis une erreur en autorisant les questions liées au préjudice en tant que questions communes (par. 113). Elle considère également que le juge a commis une erreur en mentionnant (par. 169) que les dispositions de la Class Proceedings Act portant sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux peuvent étayer une déclaration de responsabilité, même si certains membres du groupe n'ont pas démontré qu'ils avaient réellement subi une perte.

[21] The Court of Appeal rejected these arguments, noting that Microsoft allows loss to be certified as a common issue if "the methodology [is] able to establish that the overcharges have been passed on to the indirect-purchaser level in the distribution chain" (para. 149, citing Microsoft, at para. 115). Certifying an issue as common does not create an ultimate right to recovery; it is merely a procedural step that does not change the substantive rights of the parties (para. 158). And, while the aggregate damages provisions in the Class Proceedings Act are applicable only once liability is established, they do indeed demonstrate that the statute contemplates recovery where certain class members have not proven that they suffered loss (paras. 160-61).

[21] La Cour d'appel a rejeté ces arguments, soulignant que selon l'arrêt Microsoft, les questions liées à la perte peuvent être autorisées en tant que questions communes si « la méthode [permet d']établir que la majoration a été transférée à l'acheteur indirect situé en aval dans la chaîne de distribution » (par. 149, citant Microsoft, par. 115). Autoriser une question en tant que question commune ne crée aucun droit ultime d'indemnisation; il s'agit simplement d'une étape procédurale qui ne change rien aux droits substantiels des parties (par. 158). Et, bien que les dispositions relatives aux dommages-intérêts globaux contenues dans la Class Proceedings Act ne s'appliquent qu'une fois la responsabilité établie,

(3) Unlawfulness Element

[22] The Court of Appeal agreed with the certification judge that a breach of s. 45 of the Competition Act could represent the unlawfulness element of the various causes of action advanced by Godfrey (para. 186).

(4) The Umbrella Purchasers

[23] Here, too, the Court of Appeal found no error in the certification judge's reasons. Umbrella purchasers have a cause of action under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act based on a breach of s. 45(1) (paras. 247-48). Toshiba's arguments that the certification judge did not expressly consider whether the umbrella purchasers have claims at common law, and that the certification judge erred in his interpretation of s. 36, were rejected (paras. 188-89).

[24] Finally, the Court of Appeal agreed with the certification judge that Toshiba's concerns about indeterminate liability did not support denying certification of the umbrella purchasers' claims. An action under s. 36(1)(a) based on a breach of s. 45(1) is subject to internal limitations within ss. 36(1) and 45(1) which address indeterminacy such that it does not arise as a concern in this case (paras. 230-31). Further, Toshiba's additional potential liability to the umbrella purchasers would be significantly less, relative to its potential liability to non-umbrella purchasers (para. 236).

IV. Issues on Appeal

[25] Pioneer's appeal raises the issue of whether it is plain and obvious that the claim against it will not elles démontrent que la loi envisage la possibilité d'indemnisation si certains membres du groupe n'ont pas démontré qu'ils avaient subi une perte (par. 160-161).

(3) Élément d'illégalité

[22] La Cour d'appel a convenu avec le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation qu'une infraction à l'art. 45 de la Loi sur la concurrence pouvait constituer l'élément d'illégalité des diverses causes d'action avancées par M. Godfrey (par. 186).

(4) Les acheteurs sous parapluie

[23] Là encore, la Cour d'appel n'a relevé aucune erreur dans les motifs du juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation. Les acheteurs sous parapluie ont une cause d'action suivant l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence, laquelle est fondée sur une infraction au par. 45(1) (par. 247-248). Les arguments de Toshiba, selon lesquels le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation n'aurait pas expressément examiné si les acheteurs sous parapluie disposaient de recours en common law et le juge aurait commis une erreur dans son interprétation de l'art. 36, ont été rejetés (par. 188-189).

[24] Enfin, la Cour d'appel a partagé l'avis du juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation selon lequel la crainte d'une responsabilité indéterminée manifestée par Toshiba ne justifiait pas le refus d'autoriser les demandes des acheteurs sous parapluie. Toute action fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a) au titre d'un manquement au par. 45(1) est assujettie aux restrictions inhérentes aux par. 36(1) et 45(1), qui circonscrivent la responsabilité de sorte qu'une telle crainte ne se pose pas en l'espèce (par. 230-231). Qui plus est, la responsabilité supplémentaire à laquelle Toshiba pourrait être tenue à l'égard des acheteurs sous parapluie serait substantiellement moindre comparativement à sa responsabilité éventuelle à l'égard des autres acheteurs (par. 236).

IV. Questions en litige

[25] Le pourvoi de Pioneer soulève la question de savoir s'il est évident et manifeste que la demande succeed because it is statute-barred by s. 36(4)(a)(i) of the Competition Act. In answering this question, we must decide:

1. whether the principle of discoverability applies to the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) of the Competition Act; and

2. whether, for fraudulent concealment to toll the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) of the Competition Act, a special relationship between the parties must be established.

[26] The appeals, taken together, raise three common issues:

1. whether it is plain and obvious that the umbrella purchasers' claim under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act cannot succeed;

2. whether it is plain and obvious that s. 36(1) of the Competition Act bars a plaintiff from bringing concurrent common law and equitable claims; and

3. the required standard to certify loss as a common issue, and whether Dr. Reutter's evidence satisfies that standard.

V. Analysis

[27] Section 4(1) of the Class Proceedings Act contains the requirements for certification of a class proceeding in British Columbia. At issue is whether Godfrey has satisfied s. 4(1)(a), which requires that the pleadings disclose a cause of action, and s. 4(1)(c), which requires that the claims of the class members raise common issues. The former requirement is satisfied unless, assuming all the facts pleaded to be true, it is plain and obvious that the plaintiff's claim cannot succeed (Alberta v. Elder Advocates of Alberta Society, 2011 SCC 24, [2011] 2 S.C.R. 261, at para. 20; Hollick v. Toronto (City), 2001 SCC 68, [2001] 3 S.C.R. 158, at para. 25; Microsoft, at para. 63). The latter is satisfied where contre elle ne sera pas accueillie parce qu'elle est prescrite par le sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) de la Loi sur la concurrence. Pour répondre à cette question, nous devons trancher les questions suivantes :

1. Le principe de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique-t-il au délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) de la Loi sur la concurrence?

2. Pour que la dissimulation frauduleuse repousse le point de départ du délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) de la Loi sur la concurrence, faut-il établir une relation spéciale entre les parties?

[26] Pris ensemble, les pourvois soulèvent trois questions communes :

1. Est-il évident et manifeste que la demande des acheteurs sous parapluie fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence ne peut être accueillie?

2. Est-il évident et manifeste que le par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence empêche le demandeur d'exercer concurremment des recours de common law ou d'equity?

3. Quelle est la norme requise pour autoriser la question de la perte en tant que question commune et le témoignage de M. Reutter satisfait-il à cette norme?

V. Analyse

[27] Le paragraphe 4(1) de la Class Proceedings Act énonce les conditions d'autorisation d'un recours collectif en Colombie-Britannique. Il s'agit de savoir si M. Godfrey a respecté l'al. 4(1)a), qui exige que les actes de procédure révèlent une cause d'action, et l'al. 4(1)c), qui exige que les réclamations des membres du groupe soulèvent des questions communes. La première condition est respectée à moins que, en tenant tous les faits allégués pour avérés, il soit évident et manifeste que la réclamation du demandeur au fond est insoutenable (Alberta c. Elder Advocates of Alberta Society, 2011 CSC 24, [2011] 2 R.C.S. 261, par. 20; Hollick c. Toronto (Ville), 2001 CSC 68, [2001] 3 R.C.S. 158, par. 25; Microsoft, there is "some basis in fact" to support a common issue (Hollick, at para. 25; Microsoft, at paras. 99-100).

[28] Although at certification the plaintiff must satisfy s. 4(1)'s requirements that I have just described, the standard of review on appeal for each particular question depends on the nature of the question, and will be identified in turn.

A. Pioneer's Appeal

[29] Noting that the alleged conspiracy is said to have ended on January 1, 2010, and that the action against Pioneer was not commenced until August 16, 2013, Pioneer argues that Godfrey's claim is statute-barred, as it was commenced after the two-year limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) of the Competition Act expired. As I will explain, I agree that the discoverability rule applies to extend the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i). It is not plain and obvious that Godfrey's claim against Pioneer will fail on this basis. Although it is therefore unnecessary to opine on whether the doctrine of fraudulent concealment would apply, I take this opportunity to briefly discuss why its application is not conditioned upon a special relationship between the parties.

[30] Determining whether discoverability applies to the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) is a question of law subject to a standard of correctness, as is the question of whether fraudulent concealment requires a special relationship to be established between the parties. The applicability of either doctrine is, however (and as noted by the Court of Appeal), "bound up in the facts" and must be left to the trial judge to decide (C.A. reasons, at para. 68).

par. 63). La dernière condition est respectée lorsqu'il existe un « certain fondement factuel » pouvant étayer une question commune (Hollick, par. 25; Microsoft, par. 99-100).

[28] Au stade de l'autorisation, le demandeur doit satisfaire aux exigences du par. 4(1) que je viens de décrire; toutefois, la norme de contrôle en appel applicable à chaque question en particulier dépend de la nature de la question et je préciserai quelle norme s'applique dans chaque cas.

A. Appel formé par Pioneer

[29] Soulignant que le complot allégué aurait pris fin le 1er janvier 2010 et que l'action intentée contre elle n'a été introduite que le 16 août 2013, Pioneer soutient que la demande de M. Godfrey est prescrite parce qu'elle a été introduite après l'expiration du délai de prescription de deux ans prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) de la Loi sur la concurrence. Comme je vais l'expliquer, je reconnais que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique de façon à prolonger le délai de prescription établi au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i). Il n'est pas évident et manifeste que la demande de M. Godfrey contre Pioneer doit être rejetée pour ce motif. Bien qu'il ne soit donc pas nécessaire que je me prononce sur la question de savoir si la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse s'applique, je saisis l'occasion d'examiner brièvement les raisons pour lesquelles son application ne tient pas à l'existence d'une relation spéciale entre les parties.

[30] La question de savoir si la possibilité de découvrir s'applique au délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) est une question de droit contrôlée suivant la norme de la décision correcte, tout comme la question de savoir si la dissimulation frauduleuse oblige à établir l'existence d'une relation spéciale entre les parties. Toutefois, comme l'a souligné la Cour d'appel, l'applicabilité de ces deux doctrines est [TRADUCTION] « intimement liée aux faits » et il appartient au juge du procès de trancher cette question (motifs de la C.A., par. 68).

(1) Discoverability

(a) Limitation Periods Run From the Accrual or Knowledge of the Cause of Action

[31] This Court has recognized that limitation periods may be subject to a rule of discoverability, such that a cause of action will not accrue for the purposes of the running of a limitation period until "the material facts on which [the cause of action] is based have been discovered or ought to have been discovered by the plaintiff by the exercise of reasonable diligence" (Central Trust Co. v. Rafuse, [1986] 2 S.C.R. 147, at p. 224; Ryan, at paras. 2 and 22).

[32] This discoverability rule does not apply automatically to every limitation period. While a "rule", it is not a universally applicable rule of limitations, but a rule of construction to aid in the interpretation of statutory limitation periods (Peixeiro v. Haberman, [1997] 3 S.C.R. 549, at para. 37). It can therefore be displaced by clear legislative language (Ermineskin Indian Band and Nation v. Canada, 2006 FCA 415, [2007] 3 F.C.R. 245, at para. 333, aff'd 2009 SCC 9, [2009] 1 S.C.R. 222). In this regard, many provincial legislatures have chosen to enact statutory limitation periods that codify, limit or oust entirely discoverability's application, particularly in connection with ultimate limitation periods (see, e.g., Limitations Act, 2002, S.O. 2002, c. 24, Sch. B, ss. 4, 5 and 15; Limitations Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. L-12, s. 3(1); Limitation Act, S.B.C. 2012, c. 13, ss. 6 to 8 and 21; The Limitations Act, S.S. 2004, c. L-16.1, ss. 5 to 7; Limitation of Actions Act, S.N.B. 2009, c. L-8.5, s. 5; Limitation of Actions Act, S.N.S. 2014, c. 35, s. 8; see also Bowes v. Edmonton (City), 2007 ABCA 347, 425 A.R. 123, at paras. 146-58).

[33] Further, absent legislative intervention, the discoverability rule applies only where the limitation period in question runs from the accrual of the cause of action, or from some other event that

(1) Possibilité de découvrir

a) Le délai de prescription commence à courir à compter de la naissance ou de la connaissance de la cause d'action

[31] Notre Cour a reconnu que les délais de prescription peuvent être assujettis à la règle de la possibilité de découvrir, de sorte que la cause d'action prendra naissance, pour les besoins de l'écoulement du délai de prescription, « lorsque les faits importants sur lesquels repose cette cause d'action ont été découverts par le demandeur ou auraient dû l'être s'il avait fait preuve de diligence raisonnable » (Central Trust Co. c. Rafuse, [1986] 2 R.C.S. 147, p. 224; Ryan, par. 2 et 22).

[32] La règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique pas automatiquement à chaque délai de prescription. C'est une « règle », certes, mais ce n'est pas une règle de prescription d'application universelle; c'est plutôt une règle d'interprétation visant à faciliter l'interprétation des délais de prescription fixés par la loi (Peixeiro c. Haberman, [1997] 3 R.C.S. 549, par. 37). Elle peut donc être écartée par un texte législatif clair (Bande et nation indienne d'Ermineskin c. Canada, 2006 CAF 415, [2007] 3 R.C.F. 245, par. 333, conf. par 2009 CSC 9, [2009] 1 R.C.S. 222). À cet égard, plusieurs législatures provinciales ont choisi d'établir au moyen de lois des délais de prescription qui codifient, limitent ou écartent complètement l'application de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir, notamment en ce qui concerne les délais de prescription maximum (voir, p. ex., la Loi de 2002 sur la prescription des actions, L.O. 2002, c. 24, ann. B, art. 4, 5 et 15; Limitations Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. L-12, par. 3(1); Limitation Act, S.B.C. 2012, c. 13, art. 6 à 8 et 21; The Limitations Act, S.S. 2004, c. L-16.1, art. 5 à 7; Loi sur la prescription, L.N.-B. 2009, c. L-8.5, art. 5; Limitation of Actions Act, S.N.S. 2014, c. 35, art. 8; voir aussi Bowes c. Edmonton (City), 2007 ABCA 347, 425 A.R. 123, par. 146-158).

[33] De plus, en l'absence d'intervention de la législature, la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique que si le délai de prescription en cause commence à courir à compter de la naissance de la occurs when the plaintiff has knowledge of the injury sustained:

> In my opinion, the judge-made discoverability rule is nothing more than a rule of construction. Whenever a statute requires an action to be commenced within a specified time from the happening of a specific event, the statutory language must be construed. When time runs from "the accrual of the cause of action" or from some other event which can be construed as occurring only when the injured party has knowledge of the injury sustained, the judge-made discoverability rule applies. But, when time runs from an event which clearly occurs without regard to the injured party's knowledge, the judge-made discoverability rule may not extend the period the legislature has prescribed. [Emphasis added.]

(Fehr v. Jacob (1993), 14 C.C.L.T. (2d) 200 (Man. C.A.), at para. 22, cited in Peixeiro, at para. 37.)

[34] Two points flow from this statement. First, where the running of a limitation period is contingent upon the accrual of a cause of action or some other event that can occur only when the plaintiff has knowledge of his or her injury, the discoverability principle applies in order to ensure that the plaintiff had knowledge of the existence of his or her legal rights before such rights expire (Peixeiro, at para. 39).

[35] Secondly (and conversely), where a statutory limitation period runs from an event unrelated to the accrual of the cause of action or which does not require the plaintiff's knowledge of his or her injury, the rule of discoverability will not apply. In Ryan, for example, this Court held that discoverability did not apply to s. 5 of the Survival of Actions Act, R.S.N.L. 1990, c. S-32, which stated that an action against a deceased could not be brought after one year from the date of death. As the Court explained (para. 24):

> The law does not permit resort to the judge-made discoverability rule when the limitation period is explicitly linked by the governing legislation to a fixed event unrelated to cause d'action ou de tout autre événement survenant au moment où le demandeur prend connaissance du préjudice subi :

> [TRADUCTION] À mon avis, la règle prétorienne de la possibilité de découvrir le dommage n'est rien de plus qu'une règle d'interprétation. Dans tous les cas où une loi indique que l'action en justice doit être intentée dans un certain délai après un événement donné, il faut interpréter les termes de cette loi. Lorsque ce délai court à partir du « moment où naît la cause d'action » ou de tout autre événement qui peut être interprété comme ne survenant qu'au moment où la [partie lésée] prend connaissance du dommage, c'est la règle prétorienne de la possibilité de découvrir le dommage qui s'applique. Toutefois, si le délai court à compter de la date d'un événement qui survient clairement, et sans égard à la connaissance qu'en a la [partie lésée], cette règle ne peut prolonger le délai fixé par le législateur. [Je souligne.]

(Fehr c. Jacob (1993), 14 C.C.L.T. (2d) 200 (C.A. Man.), par. 22, cité dans Peixeiro, par. 37.)

[34] Deux points se dégagent de cet énoncé. Premièrement, lorsque le point de départ du délai de prescription dépend de la naissance de la cause d'action ou de quelque autre événement ne pouvant survenir qu'au moment où le demandeur prend connaissance de son préjudice, le principe de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique de manière à garantir que le demandeur avait connaissance des droits que la loi lui confère avant qu'ils expirent (Peixeiro, par. 39).

[35] Deuxièmement (et inversement), lorsqu'un délai de prescription légal commence à courir à compter d'un événement qui n'a rien à voir avec la naissance de la cause d'action ou qui n'exige pas que le demandeur ait connaissance du préjudice qu'il a subi, la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'appliquera pas. Dans l'arrêt Ryan, par exemple, la Cour a conclu que la règle ne s'appliquait pas à l'art. 5 de la Survival of Actions Act, R.S.N.L. 1990, c. S-32, qui dispose qu'aucune action ne peut être intentée contre une personne décédée après un an suivant la date de son décès. Comme la Cour l'a expliqué (par. 24) :

> Il n'est pas permis, en droit, de recourir à la règle prétorienne de la possibilité de découvrir le dommage dans les cas où la loi applicable lie expressément le délai de

the injured party's knowledge or the basis of the cause of action. [Emphasis added; citation omitted.]

By tying, then, the limitation period to an event unrelated to the cause of action, and which did not necessitate the plaintiff's knowledge of an injury, the legislature had clearly displaced the discoverability rule (Ryan, at para. 27).

[36] In determining whether a limitation period runs from the accrual of a cause of action or knowledge of the injury, such that discoverability applies, substance, not form, is to prevail: even where the statute does not explicitly state that the limitation period runs from "the accrual of the cause of action", discoverability will apply if it is evident that the operation of a limitation period is, in substance, conditioned upon accrual of a cause of action or knowledge of an injury. Indeed, clear statutory text is necessary to oust its application. In Peixeiro, for example, this Court applied the discoverability rule to s. 206(1) of the Highway Traffic Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. H.8, which stated that an action must be commenced within two years of the time when "damages were sustained" (para. 2). The use of the phrase "damages were sustained" rather than "when the cause of action arose" was a "distinction without a difference", as it was unlikely that the legislature intended that the limitation period should run without the plaintiff's knowledge (para. 38).

[37] It is therefore clear that the "the judge-made discoverability rule will apply when the requisite limitation statute indicates that time starts to run from when the cause of action arose (or other wording to that effect)" (G. Mew, D. Rolph and D. Zacks, The Law of Limitations (3rd ed. 2016), at p. 103 (emphasis added)). And, while my colleague Côté J. claims to disagree with my analysis, I am fortified by the endorsement in her reasons of this formulation of discoverability (paras. 140 and 149).

prescription à un événement déterminé qui n'a rien à voir avec le moment où la partie lésée en prend connaissance ou avec le fondement de la cause d'action. [Je souligne; référence omise.]

En rattachant, alors, le délai de prescription à un événement qui n'a aucun rapport avec la cause d'action et qui n'exige pas que le demandeur ait connaissance d'un préjudice, la législature a clairement écarté la règle de la possibilité de découvrir (Ryan, par. 27).

[36] Pour décider si un délai de prescription commence à courir à la date de la naissance de la cause d'action ou lorsque le demandeur a connaissance du préjudice qu'il a subi, de sorte que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique, le fond, non la forme, doit prévaloir : même si la loi ne précise pas que le délai de prescription commence à courir à compter de « la naissance de la cause d'action », le principe de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique s'il est évident que le point de départ du délai de prescription dépend, en substance, de la naissance de la cause d'action ou de la connaissance d'un préjudice. En fait, pour écarter l'application du principe, il faut un texte législatif clair. Dans l'arrêt Peixeiro, par exemple, notre Cour a appliqué la règle de la possibilité de découvrir au par. 206(1) du Code de la route, L.R.O. 1990, c. H.8, selon lequel l'action devait être intentée dans les deux ans de la date à laquelle les « dommages ont été subis » (par. 2). L'utilisation des mots « où les dommages ont été subis » plutôt que « date où la cause d'action a pris naissance » est une « distinction sans importance », puisqu'il est peu probable que la législature ait voulu que le délai de prescription commence à courir à l'insu du demandeur (par. 38).

[37] Il est donc clair que [TRADUCTION] « la règle prétorienne de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique quand la loi de prescription voulue indique que le délai commence à courir à la date de la naissance de la cause d'action (ou qu'il utilise d'autres mots en ce sens) » (G. Mew, D. Rolph et D. Zacks, The Law of Limitations (3e éd. 2016), p. 103 (je souligne)). Et, bien que ma collègue prétende être en désaccord avec mon analyse, elle me conforte dans mon opinion en cautionnant cette formulation de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir (par. 140 et 149).

[38] The issue raised by this appeal is what constitutes sufficiently clear legislative expression in this regard, such that discoverability will apply. In my view, where the event triggering the limitation period is an element of the cause of action, the legislature has shown its intention that the limitation period be linked to the cause of action's accrual, such that discoverability will apply. As this Court stated in M. (K.) v. M. (H.), [1992] 3 S.C.R. 6, the accrual of a cause of action is a "gradatio[n]" (p. 34). Where all the elements of a cause of action occur simultaneously, the cause of action accrues contemporaneously with the occurrence of each element (M. (K.), at p. 34). Where, however, the occurrence of each element is separated in time, the accrual of the cause of action is a continuing (but not continual) process. That is, the cause of action will continue to accrue as each element of the cause of action occurs.

[38] Il s'agit en l'espèce de savoir ce qui constitue une expression suffisamment claire de la législature en ce sens pour que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique. À mon avis, lorsque l'événement marquant le point de départ du délai de prescription est un élément de la cause d'action, la législature a manifesté son intention que le délai de prescription soit lié à la naissance de la cause d'action, déclenchant du même coup l'application de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir. Comme l'a affirmé notre Cour dans M. (K.) c. M. (H.), [1992] 3 R.C.S. 6, la cause d'action « peut prendre naissance [à différents moments] » (p. 34). Si tous les éléments d'une cause d'action apparaissent simultanément, la cause d'action prend naissance au moment où survient chaque élément (M. (K.), p. 34). En revanche, si les éléments ne surviennent pas tous en même temps, la naissance de la cause d'action est un processus en cours (mais non continu). En d'autres termes, la cause d'action continue de prendre naissance à mesure que survient chacun de ses éléments.

[39] This was what the Court in Ryan was referring to when it said that discoverability does not apply where the limitation period "is explicitly linked by the governing legislation to a fixed event unrelated to the injured party's knowledge or the basis of the cause of action" (para. 24 (emphasis added)). In Ryan, discoverability did not apply because the action was "complete in all its elements" before the operation of the event triggering the limitation period (para. 18). The limitation period was not dependent upon the accrual of the cause of action and thus the limitation period would begin to run independent of the accrual of the cause of action (see Ryan, at paras. 16, 18, 20, 29 and 32). Citing the trial judge with approval, the Court added this:

[39] C'est ce dont parlait la Cour dans Ryan quand elle a dit que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique pas lorsque « la loi applicable lie expressément le délai de prescription à un événement déterminé qui n'a rien à voir avec le moment où la partie lésée en prend connaissance ou avec le fondement de la cause d'action » (par. 24 (je souligne)). Dans Ryan, cette règle ne s'appliquait pas car « tous les éléments » de l'action « [étaient] présents » avant que ne survienne le fait qui marque le point de départ du délai de prescription (par. 18). Le délai de prescription ne dépendait pas de la naissance de la cause d'action et il commencerait donc à courir indépendamment de la naissance de la cause d'action (voir Ryan, par. 16, 18, 20, 29 et 32). Citant le juge de première instance avec approbation, la Cour a ajouté ceci :

> The fact of death is of no relevance to the cause of action in question. It is not an element of the cause of action and is not required to complete the cause of action. Whatever the nature of the cause of action, it is existing and complete before the Survival of Actions Act operates, in the case of a death, to maintain it and provide a limited time window within which it must be pursued. The fact of the death is irrelevant to the cause of action and serves only to provide a time from which the time within which to bring the action is to be calculated. [Emphasis added; para. 32.]

> [TRADUCTION] Le décès en tant que tel n'a aucune pertinence en ce qui concerne la cause d'action en question. Il ne constitue pas un élément de la cause d'action et n'est pas nécessaire pour compléter la cause d'action. Quelle que soit la nature de la cause d'action, elle existe et est complète avant que la Survival of Actions Act s'applique, en cas de décès, pour la maintenir et fixer un délai limité dans lequel l'action devra être intentée. Le décès

[40] Had, however, the event triggering the limitation period been an element of the cause of action, or had it been required to occur before the cause of action could accrue, discoverability could apply (Ryan, at paras. 29-30, citing Burt v. LeLacheur, 2000 NSCA 90, 189 D.L.R. (4th) 193). I do not see my colleague Côté J. as disagreeing on this point: she is quite right when she says that "the words 'basis of the cause of action' in para. 24 of Ryan should be understood as essentially synonymous with the 'arising or accrual of the cause of action'" (para. 148). As this Court held in Peixeiro, where the limitation period is based on an event that can be construed as synonymous with the accrual of the cause of action, discoverability will apply (para. 38).

[41] From all this, it is evident that discoverability continues to apply where the legislature has shown its intent that a limitation period shall run from "when the cause of action arose (or other wording to that effect)" or where the event triggering the limitation period requires the plaintiff's knowledge of his or her injury (Mew et al., at p. 103). Conversely, discoverability does not apply where that triggering event does not depend on the plaintiff's knowledge or is independent of the accrual of the cause of action. This is not, as my colleague suggests, a modified test for discoverability (reasons of Côté J., at para. 154), but rather is the product of this Court's application of Fehr in Peixeiro (regarding when discoverability does apply) and Ryan (regarding when discoverability does not apply).

en tant que tel n'est pas pertinent en ce qui concerne la cause d'action et sert seulement de point de départ pour calculer le délai dans lequel l'action devra être intentée. [Je souligne; par. 32.]

[40] Si en revanche le fait déclencheur du délai de prescription constituait un élément de la cause of action, ou s'il devait se produire avant que la cause d'action puisse prendre naissance, la règle de la possibilité de découvrir pourrait s'appliquer (Ryan, par. 29-30, citant Burt c. LeLacheur, 2000 NSCA 90, 189 D.L.R. (4th) 193). Je ne pense pas que ma collègue la juge Côté est en désaccord sur ce point : elle a parfaitement raison de dire que « l'expression "fondement de la cause d'action" figurant au par. 24 de l'arrêt Ryan devrait être considérée comme étant essentiellement synonyme de l'expression "naissance de la cause d'action" » (par. 148). Comme l'a conclu la Cour dans Pexeiro, lorsque le délai de prescription découle d'un fait susceptible d'être jugé synonyme de la naissance de la cause d'action, la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique (par. 38).

[41] Il ressort clairement de tout ce qui précède que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir continue de s'appliquer lorsque la législature a manifesté son intention que le délai de prescription commence à courir [TRADUCTION] « à la naissance de la cause d'action (ou utilisé d'autres mots en ce sens) », ou encore lorsque le fait déclencheur du délai de prescription exige du demandeur qu'il ait connaissance du préjudice qu'il a subi (Mew et autres, p. 103). En revanche, la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique pas lorsque le fait déclencheur ne dépend pas de la connaissance du demandeur ou est indépendant de la naissance de la cause d'action. Il ne s'agit pas là, contrairement à ce que laisse entendre ma collègue, d'un critère modifié relatif à la possibilité de découvrir (motifs de la juge Côté, par. 154). Il s'agit plutôt de la conséquence de l'application par notre Cour de l'arrêt Fehr dans Peixeiro (à propos des circonstances où la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique) et dans Ryan (au sujet des circonstances où la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique pas).

(b) The Statutory Scheme, and the Objects of Statutory Limitation Periods

[42] Bearing in mind that, as I have explained, the discoverability rule is a rule of construction, its application depends on an examination of the pertinent statutory text to assess what triggers the running of the limitation period in question, supplemented by consideration of the statutory scheme within which it operates, and of the legislature's purpose in enacting limitation periods (Rizzo & Rizzo Shoes Ltd. (Re), [1998] 1 S.C.R. 27, at para. 21).

[43] Turning first to the statutory text, the relevant provisions of s. 36 of the Competition Act state:

36 (1) Any person who has suffered loss or damage as a result of

(a) conduct that is contrary to any provision of Part VI, . . .

. . .

may, in any court of competent jurisdiction, sue for and recover from the person who engaged in the conduct or failed to comply with the order an amount equal to the loss or damage proved to have been suffered by him, together with any additional amount that the court may allow not exceeding the full cost to him of any investigation in connection with the matter and of proceedings under this section.

. . .

(4) No action may be brought under subsection (1),

(a) in the case of an action based on conduct that is contrary to any provision of Part VI, after two years from

(i) a day on which the conduct was engaged in, or

(ii) the day on which any criminal proceedings relating thereto were finally disposed of, whichever is the later; . . .

. . .

b) Le régime législatif et les objectifs des délais de prescription légaux

[42] Compte tenu du fait que, comme je l'ai expliqué, la règle de la possibilité de découvrir est une règle d'interprétation, son application dépend d'un examen du texte législatif pertinent visant à déterminer ce qui marque le point de départ du délai de prescription en question, complété par un examen du régime législatif dans lequel ladite disposition s'inscrit et de l'intention qu'avait la législature quand elle a fixé ce délai de prescription (Rizzo & Rizzo Shoes Ltd. (Re), [1998] 1 R.C.S. 27, par. 21).

[43] Passons d'abord au texte législatif. Les dispositions pertinentes de l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence prévoient :

36 (1) Toute personne qui a subi une perte ou des dommages par suite :

a) . . . d'un comportement allant à l'encontre d'une disposition de la partie VI;

. . .

peut, devant tout tribunal compétent, réclamer et recouvrer de la personne qui a eu un tel comportement ou n'a pas obtempéré à l'ordonnance une somme égale au montant de la perte ou des dommages qu'elle est reconnue avoir subis, ainsi que toute somme supplémentaire que le tribunal peut fixer et qui n'excède pas le coût total, pour elle, de toute enquête relativement à l'affaire et des procédures engagées en vertu du présent article.

. . .

(4) Les actions visées au paragraphe (1) se prescrivent :

a) dans le cas de celles qui sont fondées sur un comportement qui va à l'encontre d'une disposition de la partie VI, dans les deux ans qui suivent la dernière des dates suivantes :

(i) soit la date du comportement en question,

(ii) soit la date où il est statué de façon définitive sur la poursuite;

. . .

[44] The text of s. 36(4)(a)(i) provides that no action may be brought under s. 36(1)(a) after two years from a day on which conduct contrary to Part VI occurred. From this, it is clear that the event triggering this particular limitation period is an element of the underlying cause of action. That is, the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) is triggered by the occurrence of an element of the underlying cause of action — specifically, conduct contrary to Part VI of the Competition Act. Therefore, it is subject to discoverability (Fanshawe College of Applied Arts and Technology v. AU Optronics Corp., 2016 ONCA 621, 132 O.R. (3d) 81, at para. 18).

[45] The scheme of s. 36(4) also supports the view that discoverability was intended to apply to the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i). Section 36(4)(a) sets out two limitation periods — s. 36(4)(a)(i), which runs from the day on which the conduct occurred and s. 36(4)(a)(ii), which runs from the day on which criminal proceedings are disposed of. The applicable limitation period is whichever event occurs later. Pioneer argues that Parliament enacted s. 36(4)(a)(ii) to revive a cause of action where the limitation period has expired under s. 36(4)(a)(i), which revival would mitigate any unfairness created by the operation of the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) (A.F. (Pioneer), at para. 92). I do not view s. 36(4)(a)(ii)'s operation in this way. It is simply an example of a limitation period to which discoverability does not apply because, as the Court of Appeal for Ontario said in Fanshawe, the event triggering the limitation period under s. 36(4)(a)(ii) — the disposition of criminal proceedings — is "not connected to a plaintiff's cause of action or knowledge" (para. 47). When s. 36(4)(a)(i) is contrasted with s. 36(4)(a)(ii), it is likely that Parliament intended that discoverability apply to the former limitation period and not the latter. Further, where criminal proceedings are not brought against a wrongdoer, the putative mitigating effect of s. 36(4)(a)(ii) would be of no assistance to plaintiffs whose right of action has expired by operation of s. 36(4)(a)(i).

[44] Le texte du sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) prévoit que les actions visées à l'al. 36(1)a) se prescrivent dans les deux ans qui suivent la date du comportement qui va à l'encontre de la partie VI. Partant, il est évident que le fait déclencheur de ce délai de prescription est un élément de la cause d'action sous-jacente. En d'autres termes, le délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) court à compter de la survenance d'un élément de la cause d'action sous-jacente — plus précisément, le comportement qui va à l'encontre de la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence. Par conséquent, il est assujetti à la règle de la possibilité de découvrir (Fanshawe College of Applied Arts and Technology c. AU Optronics Corp., 2016 ONCA 621, 132 O.R. (3d) 81, par. 18).

[45] Le régime établi par le par. 36(4) appuie également la thèse selon laquelle la règle de la possibilité de découvrir est censée s'appliquer au délai de prescription du sous-al. 36(4)a)(i). L'alinéa 36(4)a) prévoit deux délais de prescription : celui du sous-al. 36(4)a)(i), qui commence à courir à la date du comportement en question, et celui du sous-al. 36(4)a)(ii), qui commence à courir à la date où il est statué sur la poursuite. Le délai de prescription applicable est celui qui commence à courir à la dernière de ces dates. Pioneer soutient que le Parlement a adopté le sous-al. 36(4)a)(ii) en vue de faire renaître une cause d'action qui est prescrite suivant le sous-al. 36(4)a)(i), et que cette renaissance atténuerait toute iniquité créée par l'application du délai de prescription du sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) (m.a. (Pioneer), par. 92). Selon moi, ce n'est pas ainsi que fonctionne le sous-al. 36(4)a)(ii). Cette disposition n'est qu'un exemple de délai de prescription auquel la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique pas parce que, comme l'a dit la Cour d'appel de l'Ontario dans l'arrêt Fanshawe, le fait déclencheur du délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(ii) — la date à laquelle il est statué sur la poursuite — n'est [TRADUCTION] « pas lié à la cause d'action ou à la connaissance du demandeur » (par. 47). Si l'on compare le sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) au sous-al. 36(4)a)(ii), le législateur voulait probablement que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique au premier délai de prescription, mais non au deuxième. Qui plus est, lorsqu'aucune poursuite *n'*est intentée contre le contrevenant, le soi-disant effet d'atténuation attribué au sous-al. 36(4)a)(ii) ne serait d'aucun secours au demandeur dont le droit d'action a expiré par application du sous-al. 36(4)a)(i).

[46] So much for the statutory text and scheme. I turn, then, to consider this limitation period's relation to the overall object of the Competition Act, which is to "maintain and encourage competition in Canada in order to promote the efficiency and adaptability of the Canadian economy . . . and . . . provide consumers with competitive prices and product choices" (Competition Act, s. 1.1). Anti-competitive agreements — which represent "conduct that is contrary to . . . Part VI" (s. 36(1)(a)) — are invariably conducted through secrecy and deception (Fanshawe, at para. 46; C.A. reasons, at para. 93), meaning that they are, by their very nature, unknown to s. 36(1)(a) claimants. Parliament would have known this when enacting the limitation provision contained in s. 36(4)(a)(i). It would therefore be absurd, and would render the cause of action granted by s. 36(1)(a) almost meaningless, to state that Parliament did not intend for discoverability to apply, such that the plaintiff's right of action would expire prior to his or her acquiring knowledge of the anti-competitive behaviour. I agree with the Court of Appeal that "it cannot be said that Parliament intended to accord such little weight to the interests of injured plaintiffs in the context of alleged conspiracies so as to exclude the availability of the discoverability rule in s. 36(4)" (C.A. reasons, at para. 93).

[47] The application of discoverability to the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) is also supported by the object of statutory limitation periods. This Court has recognized that three rationales underlie limitation periods (M. (K.), at pp. 29-31), which courts must consider in deciding whether the discoverability rule applies to a particular limitation period. The first is that limitation periods foster certainty, in that "[t]here comes a time . . . when a potential defendant should be secure in his reasonable expectation that he will not be held to account for ancient obligations"(M. (K.), at p. 29). This concern must be balanced against the unfairness of allowing a wrongdoer to escape liability while the victim of injury continues to suffer the consequences (M. (K.), [46] Voilà pour le texte législatif et le régime qu'il établit. Je passe maintenant à l'examen du lien qui unit le délai de prescription à l'objet général de la Loi sur la concurrence, qui est de « préserver et de favoriser la concurrence au Canada dans le but de stimuler l'adaptabilité et l'efficience de l'économie canadienne [. . .] de même que [. . .] d'assurer aux consommateurs des prix compétitifs et un choix dans les produits » (Loi sur la concurrence, art. 1.1). Les ententes anticoncurrentielles — qui participent des « comportement[s] allant à l'encontre [. . .] de la partie VI » (al. 36(1)a)) — font invariablement appel au secret et à la tromperie (Fanshawe, par. 46; motifs de la C.A., par. 93), ce qui veut dire qu'elles sont, de par leur nature même, inconnues des demandeurs visés par l'al. 36(1)a). Le législateur devait le savoir lorsqu'il a établi le délai de prescription du sous-al. 36(4)a)(i). Il serait non seulement absurde d'affirmer qu'il n'était pas dans l'intention du législateur que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique, de sorte que le droit d'action du demandeur expirerait avant qu'il prenne connaissance du comportement anticoncurrentiel, mais affirmer cela reviendrait à dénuer pratiquement de son sens la cause d'action reconnue par l'al. 36(1)a). Je conviens avec la Cour d'appel [TRADUCTION] « [qu']il est impossible de dire que le législateur a voulu accorder si peu d'importance aux intérêts des demandeurs lésés, dans les cas d'allégation de complot, qu'il a écarté le recours à la règle de la possibilité de découvrir au par. 36(4) » (motifs de la C.A., par. 93).

[47] L'application de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir au délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) est également étayée par l'objet sous-tendant les délais de prescription légaux. Notre Cour a reconnu que les délais de prescription reposent sur trois justifications (M. (K.), p. 29-31), dont les tribunaux doivent tenir compte pour décider si la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique à un délai de prescription donné. La première est que les délais de prescription favorisent la certitude, en ce qu'« [i]l arrive un moment [. . .] où un éventuel défendeur devrait être raisonnablement certain qu'il ne sera plus redevable de ses anciennes obligations » (M. (K.), p. 29). Ce souci de certitude doit être soupesé en regard de l'iniquité qui consiste à permettre à at p. 29). The second rationale is evidentiary: limitation periods are intended to help prevent evidence from going stale, to the detriment of the plaintiff or the defendant (M. (K.), at p. 30). Finally, limitation periods serve to encourage diligence on the part of plaintiffs in pursuing their claims (M. (K.), at p. 30).

[48] Consideration of these rationales for limitation periods affirms discoverability's application here. Even recognizing that shorter limitation periods indicate that Parliament put a premium on the certainty that comes with a limitation statute's function of repose (Peixeiro, at para. 34), balancing all of the competing interests underlying s. 36(4)(a)(i) weighs in favour of applying discoverability. The ability of plaintiffs to advance claims for loss arising from conduct contrary to Part VI of the Competition Act outweighs defendants' interests in barring them, especially where such conduct is, as I have already noted, concealed from plaintiffs (Fanshawe, at para. 46) (such that the evidentiary rationale — that is, the concern about evidence going "stale" — has no place in the analysis). To hold otherwise would create perverse incentives, encouraging continued concealment of anti-competitive behaviour until the two-year limitation period has elapsed. It would therefore not only bar plaintiffs from pursuing their claims, but reward concealment that has been "particularly effective" (Fanshawe, at para. 49).

[49] In contrast, applying discoverability to s. 36(4)(a)(i) would not unduly affect the defendant's interests, as discoverability does not excuse the plaintiff from moving matters along, such that the rationale of encouraging diligence is still served (Peixeiro, at para. 39). Where plaintiffs sleep on their rights or otherwise do not diligently pursue their un contrevenant d'échapper à sa responsabilité alors que la victime du préjudice continue à en subir les conséquences (M. (K.), p. 29). La deuxième justification se rattache à la preuve : les délais de prescription visent à empêcher que des éléments de preuve deviennent périmés, au détriment du demandeur ou du défendeur (M. (K.), p. 30). Enfin, les délais de prescription servent à encourager les demandeurs à faire preuve de diligence dans la poursuite de leurs actions (M. (K.), p. 30).

[48] L'examen des justifications qui sous-tendent les délais de prescription confirme que le principe de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique en l'espèce. Même si je reconnais que la brièveté d'un délai de prescription tend à indiquer que le législateur attache une grande importance à la certitude qui découle de toute loi visant à assurer la tranquillité d'esprit (Peixeiro, par. 34), j'estime que la mise en balance de l'ensemble des intérêts divergents sur lesquels repose le sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) milite en faveur de l'application de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir. La capacité des demandeurs de poursuivre en justice pour les pertes découlant d'un comportement allant à l'encontre de la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence l'emporte sur l'intérêt des défendeurs à les en empêcher, surtout lorsqu'un tel comportement a lieu, comme je l'ai déjà mentionné, à l'insu des demandeurs (Fanshawe, par. 46) (de sorte que la justification rattachée à la preuve — la crainte que la preuve devienne « périmée » — n'a pas sa place dans l'analyse). Conclure autrement aurait pour effet indésirable d'inciter l'auteur du comportement anticoncurrentiel à continuer de garder le secret jusqu'à l'expiration du délai de prescription de deux ans. Non seulement les demandeurs ne pourraient pas intenter leurs recours, mais l'on se trouverait à récompenser l'auteur d'une tromperie qui a été [TRADUCTION] « particulièrement efficace » (Fanshawe, par. 49).

[49] Par contraste, l'application de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) ne nuirait pas indûment aux intérêts des défendeurs, car la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne dispense pas le demandeur de faire avancer sa cause, de sorte que l'objectif d'encourager la diligence demeure atteint (Peixeiro, par. 39). Le demandeur qui tarde claims, discoverability will not operate to extend the limitation period (Mew et al., at p. 83).

[50] For all of these reasons, I find that the discoverability rule applies to the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i), such that it begins to run only when the material facts on which Godfrey's claim is based were discovered by him or ought to have been discovered by him by the exercise of reasonable diligence.

(2) Fraudulent Concealment

[51] In light of my finding that discoverability applies to s. 36(4)(a)(i), it is, strictly speaking, unnecessary to consider the doctrine of fraudulent concealment. Given, however, the submissions and attention given to this issue at the courts below, I will comment briefly here on whether fraudulent concealment requires establishing a special relationship between the parties.

[52] Fraudulent concealment is an equitable doctrine that prevents limitation periods from being used "as an instrument of injustice" (M. (K.), at pp. 58-59). Where the defendant fraudulently conceals the existence of a cause of action, the limitation period is suspended until the plaintiff discovers the fraud or ought reasonably to have discovered the fraud (Guerin v. The Queen, [1984] 2 S.C.R. 335, at p. 390). It is a form of "equitable fraud" (Guerin, at p. 390; M. (K.), at pp. 56-57), which is not confined to the parameters of the common law action for fraud (M. (K.), at p. 57). As Lord Evershed, M.R. explained in Kitchen v. Royal Air Forces Association, [1958] 2 All E.R. 241 (C.A.), at p. 249, cited in M. (K.), at pp. 56-57:

It is now clear . . . that the word "fraud" in s. 26(b) of the Limitation Act, 1939, is by no means limited to common law fraud or deceit. Equally, it is clear, having regard to à exercer ses droits ou qui n'agit pas avec diligence dans la poursuite de son action ne pourra bénéficier de l'application de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir pour faire prolonger le délai de prescription (Mew et autres, p. 83).

[50] Pour toutes ces raisons, j'estime que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique au délai de prescription du sous-al. 36(4)a)(i), de sorte que ce délai n'a commencé à courir qu'à la date à laquelle M. Godfrey a découvert les faits importants sur lesquels repose sa demande ou encore à la date à laquelle il les aurait découverts s'il avait fait preuve de diligence raisonnable.

(2) Dissimulation frauduleuse

[51] Étant donné ma conclusion que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i), il est pour ainsi dire inutile d'examiner la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse. Toutefois, compte tenu de l'attention accordée à cette question devant les juridictions inférieures, ainsi que des observations qui ont été présentées à ce sujet, je me prononcerai brièvement sur la question de savoir si la dissimulation frauduleuse exige la preuve d'une relation spéciale entre les parties.

[52] La doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse est une doctrine d'equity qui vise à empêcher que les délais de prescription servent « à créer une injustice » (M. (K.), p. 58-59). Si le défendeur a dissimulé frauduleusement l'existence d'une cause d'action, le délai de prescription est suspendu jusqu'au moment où le demandeur découvre, ou aurait raisonnablement dû découvrir, la fraude (Guerin c. La Reine, [1984] 2 R.C.S. 335, p. 390). Il s'agit d'une forme de « fraude d'equity » (Guerin, p. 390; M. (K.), p. 56-57), qui n'est pas limitée par les paramètres de l'action pour fraude de la common law (M. (K.), p. 57). Comme l'a expliqué le maître des rôles lord Evershed dans l'arrêt Kitchen c. Royal Air Forces Association, [1958] 2 All E.R. 241 (C.A.), p. 249, cité dans l'arrêt M. (K.), p. 56-57 :

[TRADUCTION] Il est maintenant évident [. . .] que le terme « fraude » employé à l'al. 26b) de la Limitation Act, 1939, n'est aucunement limité à une tromperie ou à une fraude de

the decision in Beaman v. A.R.T.S., Ltd., [1949] 1 All E.R. 465, that no degree of moral turpitude is necessary to establish fraud within the section. What is covered by equitable fraud is a matter which LORD HARDWICKE did not attempt to define two hundred years ago, and I certainly shall not attempt to do so now, but it is, I think, clear that the phrase covers conduct which, having regard to some special relationship between the two parties concerned, is an unconscionable thing for the one to do towards the other. [Emphasis added in M. (K.).]

[53] While it is therefore clear that equitable fraud can be established in cases where a special relationship subsists between the parties, Lord Evershed, M.R. did not limit its establishment to such circumstances, nor did he purport to define exhaustively the circumstances in which it would or would not apply (see T.P. v. A.P., 1988 ABCA 352, 92 A.R. 122, at para. 10). Indeed, he expressly refused to do so: "What is covered by equitable fraud is a matter which LORD HARDWICKE did not attempt to define two hundred years ago, and I certainly shall not attempt to do so now" (Kitchen, at p. 249 (emphasis added)).

[54] When, then, does fraudulent concealment arise so as to delay the running of a limitation period? Recalling that it is a form of equitable fraud, it becomes readily apparent that what matters is not whether there is a special relationship between the parties, but whether it would be, for any reason, unconscionable for the defendant to rely on the advantage gained by having concealed the existence of a cause of action. This was the Court's point in Performance Industries Ltd. v. Sylvan Lake Golf & Tennis Club Ltd., 2002 SCC 19, [2002] 1 S.C.R. 678, at para. 39:

[Equitable fraud] ". . . refers to transactions falling short of deceit but where the Court is of the opinion that it is unconscientious for a person to avail himself of the advantage obtained" (p. 37). Fraud in the "wider sense" of a ground for equitable relief "is so infinite in its varieties that the Courts have not attempted to define it", but "all kinds of unfair dealing and unconscionable conduct in matters of contract come within its ken" . . . . [Emphasis added.]

common law. Il est également clair, compte tenu de l'arrêt Beaman c. A.R.T.S., Ltd., [1949] 1 All E.R. 465, qu'aucun degré de turpitude morale n'est nécessaire pour prouver qu'il y a fraude au sens de l'article. Ce que vise la fraude d'equity est une chose que LORD HARDWICKE n'a pas tenté de définir il y a deux cents ans et que je ne tenterai certainement pas de définir maintenant; toutefois, j'estime qu'il est clair que cette expression vise une conduite qui, compte tenu de la relation spéciale qui existe entre les parties concernées, est une iniquité de la part de l'une envers l'autre. [Souligné dans M. (K.).]

[53] S'il est donc évident que la fraude d'equity peut être établie dans les cas où il existe une relation spéciale entre les parties, le maître des rôles lord Evershed ne l'a pas limitée à ces cas, non plus qu'il n'a tenté de définir de façon exhaustive les cas où elle pourrait, ou non, s'appliquer (voir T.P. c. A.P., 1988 ABCA 352, 92 A.R. 122, par. 10). Il a d'ailleurs refusé expressément de le faire : [TRADUCTION] « Ce que vise la fraude d'equity est une chose que LORD HARDWICKE n'a pas tenté de définir il y a deux cents ans et que je ne tenterai certainement pas de définir maintenant » (Kitchen, p. 249 (je souligne)).

[54] Mais alors quand la présence d'une dissimulation frauduleuse permet-elle de retarder le point de départ d'un délai de prescription? Rappelons qu'il s'agit d'une forme de fraude d'equity. Partant, il devient évident que ce qui importe, ce *n'*est pas de savoir s'il existe une relation spéciale entre les parties, mais si, pour quelque raison que ce soit, il serait abusif pour le défendeur de profiter de l'avantage obtenu en dissimulant l'existence d'une cause d'action. C'est ce qu'a expliqué la Cour dans Performance Industries Ltd. c. Sylvan Lake Golf & Tennis Club Ltd., 2002 CSC 19, [2002] 1 R.C.S. 678, par. 39 :

[La fraude d'equity] « . . . s'entend également d'opérations qui ne sont pas dolosives, mais à l'égard desquelles le tribunal estime qu'il serait abusif de laisser une personne profiter de l'avantage obtenu » (p. 37). Au « sens plus large » de fraude donnant ouverture à une réparation en equity, la fraude se présente sous [TRADUCTION] « un nombre tellement infini de formes que les tribunaux n'ont pas tenté de la définir », mais « elle vise toutes sortes de manœuvres déloyales et de conduites abusives en matière contractuelle » . . . [Je souligne.]

It follows that the concern which drives the application of the doctrine of equitable fraud is not limited to the unconscionability of taking advantage of a special relationship with the plaintiff. Nor is the doctrine's application limited, as my colleague suggests, to cases where there is something "tantamount to or commensurate with" a special relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant (paras. 171 and 173-74). While a special relationship is a means by which a defendant might conceal the existence of a cause of action, equitable fraud may also be established by pointing to other forms of unconscionable behaviour, such as (for example) "some abuse of a confidential position, some intentional imposition, or some deliberate concealment of facts" (M. (K.), at p. 57, citing Halsbury's Laws of England (4th ed. 1979), vol. 28, at para. 919). In short, the inquiry is not into the relationship within which the conduct occurred, but into the unconscionability of the conduct itself.

Il s'ensuit que ce n'est pas seulement l'iniquité qui découle du fait de laisser une personne profiter de l'avantage d'une relation spéciale avec le demandeur qui justifie l'application de la doctrine de la fraude d'equity. L'application de la doctrine n'est pas non plus restreinte, comme le suggère ma collègue, aux cas où il y a quelque chose d'« équivalen[t] ou correspondant à » une relation spéciale entre le demandeur et le défendeur (par. 171 et 173-174). Bien qu'une relation spéciale soit pour le défendeur un moyen de dissimuler l'existence d'une cause d'action, la fraude d'equity peut aussi être établie en invoquant d'autres formes de conduite abusive, par exemple [TRADUCTION] « que l'on [a] abusé d'une situation de confiance, que l'on [a] délibérément abusé de la bonté de quelqu'un ou délibérément caché des faits » (M. (K.), p. 57, citant Halsbury's Laws of England (4e éd. 1979), vol. 28, par. 919). Bref, l'examen ne porte pas sur la relation dans le cadre de laquelle le comportement a eu lieu, mais sur le caractère abusif du comportement lui-même.

[55] The question of whether Pioneer's alleged conduct amounts to fraudulent concealment will, of course, fall to be decided by a trial judge. Nevertheless, I agree with the Court of Appeal and the certification judge that it is not "plain and obvious" that fraudulent concealment could not delay the running of the limitation period in this case (C.A. reasons, at para. 110).

[55] La question de savoir si le comportement reproché à Pioneer constitue de la dissimulation frauduleuse devra, bien sûr, être tranchée par le juge de première instance. Néanmoins, je conviens avec la Cour d'appel et le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation qu'il n'est pas « évident et manifeste » que la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse ne pouvait retarder le point de départ du délai de prescription en l'espèce (motifs de la C.A., par. 110).

B. Umbrella Purchasers' Cause of Action Under Section 36(1) of the Competition Act

B. La cause d'action que reconnaît le par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence aux acheteurs sous parapluie

[56] Toshiba argues that the certification judge erred by certifying the umbrella purchasers' claims brought under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act. For the following reasons, I disagree.

[56] Toshiba soutient que le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a commis une erreur en autorisant les réclamations présentées par les acheteurs sous parapluie sur le fondement de l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence. Pour les motifs qui suivent, je ne suis pas d'accord avec elle.

[57] Whether umbrella purchasers have a cause of action under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act is a question of law, reviewable on a standard of correctness. Since, as I explain below, I have concluded that umbrella purchasers do have a cause of action under s. 36(1)(a), it is not plain and obvious that their claim cannot succeed. Godfrey's pleadings disclose a cause of action for umbrella purchasers, thereby satisfying the conditions under s. 4(1)(a) of the Class Proceedings Act for certification.

[57] La question de savoir si les acheteurs sous parapluie ont une cause d'action fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence est une question de droit susceptible de contrôle selon la norme de la décision correcte. Puisque, comme je l'explique plus loin, j'ai

[58] The theory behind holding price-fixers liable to umbrella purchasers — who, it will be recalled are in this case persons who purchased ODDs or ODD products neither manufactured nor supplied by the defendants — is that the defendants' anti-competitive cartel activity creates an "umbrella" of supra-competitive prices, causing non-cartel manufacturers to raise their prices (Shah v. LG Chem, Ltd., 2015 ONSC 6148, 390 D.L.R. (4th) 87 ("Shah (Ont. S.C.J.)"), at para. 159). Additionally, the European Court of Justice in Kone AG and Others v. ÖBB-Infrastruktur AG, [2014] EUECJ C-557/12, explained umbrella pricing as:

> Where a cartel manages to maintain artificially high prices for particular goods and certain conditions are met, relating, in particular, to the nature of the goods or the size of the market covered by that cartel, it cannot be ruled out that a competing undertaking, outside the cartel in question, might choose to set the price of its offer at an amount higher than it would have chosen under normal conditions of competition, that is, in the absence of that cartel. In such a situation, even if the determination of an offer price is regarded as a purely autonomous decision, taken by the undertaking not party to a cartel, it must none the less be stated that such a decision has been able to be taken by reference to a market price distorted by that cartel and, as a result, contrary to the competition rules. [Emphasis added; para. 29.]

[59] In short, a rising tide lifts all boats; under the theory of umbrella pricing, the entire market for the subject product is affected:

> Umbrella effects typically arise when price increases lead to a diversion of demand to substitute products.

conclu que les acheteurs sous parapluie ont effectivement une cause d'action fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a), il *n'*est pas manifeste et évident que leur demande ne peut être accueillie. Les actes de procédure de M. Godfrey révèlent une cause d'action dont sont titulaires les acheteurs sous parapluie, répondant ainsi aux conditions d'autorisation prévues à l'al. 4(1)a) de la Class Proceedings Act.

[58] La logique qui sous-tend la recherche de la responsabilité des participants à un accord de fixation des prix envers les acheteurs sous parapluie — qui, rappelons-le, sont en l'espèce les personnes qui ont acheté des LDO ou des produits munis de LDO qui n'ont été ni fabriqués, ni fournis par les défenderesses — est que les activités anticoncurrentielles des défenderesses créent un « parapluie » ou une « ombrelle » de prix supraconcurrentiels qui provoque une hausse des prix chez les fabricants ne faisant pas partie du cartel (Shah c. LG Chem, Ltd., 2015 ONSC 6148, 390 D.L.R. (4th) 87 (« Shah (C.S.J. Ont.) »), par. 159). En outre, la Cour de justice de l'Union européenne a expliqué en ces termes dans Kone AG et autres c. ÖBB-Infrastruktur AG, [2014] EUECJ C-557/12, l'effet d'ombrelle (ou effet parapluie) sur les prix :

> Lorsqu'une entente parvient à maintenir un prix artificiellement élevé pour certains produits et que certaines conditions du marché sont réunies, tenant, notamment, à la nature du produit ou à la taille du marché couvert par cette entente, il ne peut être exclu que l'entreprise concurrente, extérieure à celle-ci, choisisse de fixer le prix de son offre à un montant supérieur à celui qu'elle aurait choisi dans des conditions normales de concurrence, c'est-à-dire en l'absence de ladite entente. Dans un tel contexte, même si la détermination d'un prix d'offre est considérée comme une décision purement autonome, adoptée par l'entreprise ne participant pas à une entente, il y a lieu cependant de constater que cette décision a pu être prise par référence à un prix du marché faussé par cette entente et, par conséquent, contraire aux règles de concurrence. [Je souligne; par. 29.]

[59] Bref, la marée monte également pour tous les bateaux; selon la théorie de l'effet parapluie sur les prix, c'est l'ensemble du marché du produit en cause qui est touché :

> [TRADUCTION] L'effet parapluie se produit habituellement lorsqu'une augmentation des prix donne lieu à

Because successful cartels typically reduce quantities and increase prices, this diversion leads to a substitution away from the cartels' products toward substitute products produced by cartel outsiders. . . . [T]he increased demand for substitutes typically leads to higher prices for the substitute products. Such price increases are called umbrella effects and may arise either in the same relevant market . . . or in neighboring markets.

(R. Inderst, F. Maier-Rigaud and U. Schwalbe, "Umbrella Effects" (2014), 10 J. Competition L. & Econ. 739, at p. 740)

[60] Several decisions of lower courts have certified umbrella purchaser actions brought under s. 36(1)(a) without expressly considering whether such purchasers had a cause of action (see: Fairhurst v. Anglo American PLC, 2014 BCSC 2270; Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd v. Infineon Technologies AG, 2009 BCCA 503, 98 B.C.L.R. (4th) 272; Irving Paper Ltd. v. Atofina Chemicals Inc. (2009), 99 O.R. (3d) 358 (S.C.J.); Crosslink Technology Inc. v. BASF Canada, 2014 ONSC 1682, 54 C.P.C. (7th) 111). Appellate decisions in British Columbia and Ontario have, however, expressly considered the issue and concluded that they do (see: C.A. reasons, at para. 247; Shah v. LG Chem, Ltd., 2018 ONCA 819, 142 O.R. (3d) 721 ("Shah (ONCA)"), at para. 52).

[61] Whether umbrella purchasers have a cause of action under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act is a question of statutory interpretation. The text of s. 36(1)(a) must therefore be read in its entire context and in its grammatical and ordinary sense, harmoniously with the scheme and objects of the Competition Act.

(1) Text of Section 36(1)

[62] As already noted, s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act creates a statutory cause of action which allows for the recovery of damages or loss that resulted from un détournement de la demande vers des produits de substitution. Comme les participants à un cartel prospère s'entendent en général pour réduire les quantités et augmenter les prix, ce détournement se traduit par un abandon des produits du cartel au profit des produits fabriqués par des non participants au cartel. [. . . ] [L]a demande accrue pour les produits de substitution entraîne habituellement une hausse des prix de ces produits. Cette hausse est appelée l'« effet parapluie » et cet effet peut se produire sur le même marché pertinent [. . .] ou sur des marchés voisins.

(R. Inderst, F. Maier-Rigaud et U. Schwalbe, « Umbrella Effects » (2014), 10 J. Competition L. & Econ. 739, p. 740)

[60] Dans plusieurs décisions, les juridictions inférieures ont autorisé des actions intentées par des acheteurs sous parapluie en vertu de l'al. 36(1)a) sans se demander explicitement si ces acheteurs avaient une cause d'action (voir : Fairhurst c. Anglo American PLC, 2014 BCSC 2270; Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd c. Infineon Technologies AG, 2009 BCCA 503, 98 B.C.L.R. (4th) 272; Irving Paper Ltd. c. Atofina Chemicals Inc. (2009), 99 O.R. (3d) 358 (C.S.J.); Crosslink Technology Inc. c. BASF Canada, 2014 ONSC 1682, 54 C.P.C. (7th) 111). Des tribunaux d'appel de la Colombie-Britannique et de l'Ontario ont toutefois expressément abordé la question et conclu qu'ils en avaient une (voir : motifs de la C.A., par. 247; Shah c. LG Chem, Ltd., 2018 ONCA 819, 142 O.R. (3d) 721 (« Shah (ONCA) »), par. 52).

[61] La question de savoir si les acheteurs sous parapluie ont une cause d'action fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence est une question d'interprétation législative. Le texte de l'al. 36(1)a) doit donc être lu dans son contexte global et en suivant le sens ordinaire et grammatical qui s'harmonise avec l'économie et les objets de la Loi sur la concurrence.

(1) Texte du par. 36(1)

[62] Comme je l'ai déjà expliqué, l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence crée une cause d'action qui permet l'indemnisation d'une perte ou des dommages conduct contrary to Part VI. The relevant portion states:

Recovery of damages

36 (1) Any person who has suffered loss or damage as a result of

(a) conduct that is contrary to any provision of Part VI . . .

. . .

may . . . sue for and recover from the person who engaged in the conduct . . . an amount equal to the loss or damage proved to have been suffered by him, together with any additional amount that the court may allow not exceeding the full cost to him of any investigation in connection with the matter and of proceedings under this section.

[63] Godfrey relies on "conduct that is contrary to . . . Part VI" ("Offences in Relation to Competition"), since he alleges that Toshiba acted contrary to s. 45(1)(b), (c), and (d) of the Competition Act. During the class period,[1] s. 45(1) stated:

Conspiracy

45. (1) Every one who conspires, combines, agrees or arranges with another person

. . .

(b) to prevent, limit or lessen, unduly, the manufacture or production of a product or to enhance unreasonably the price thereof,

(c) to prevent or lessen, unduly, competition in the production, manufacture, purchase, barter, sale, storage, rental, transportation or supply of a product, or in the price of insurance on persons or property, or qui découlent d'un comportement allant à l'encontre de la partie VI. Voici les passages pertinents :

Recouvrement de dommages-intérêts

36 (1) Toute personne qui a subi une perte ou des dommages par suite :

a) . . . d'un comportement allant à l'encontre d'une disposition de la partie VI;

. . .

peut [. . .] réclamer et recouvrer de la personne qui a eu un tel comportement [. . .] une somme égale au montant de la perte ou des dommages qu'elle est reconnue avoir subis, ainsi que toute somme supplémentaire que le tribunal peut fixer et qui n'excède pas le coût total, pour elle, de toute enquête relativement à l'affaire et des procédures engagées en vertu du présent article.

[63] M. Godfrey se fonde sur les termes « comportement allant à l'encontre [. . .] de la partie VI » (« Infractions relatives à la concurrence »), puisqu'il allègue que Toshiba a agi en contravention des al. 45(1)b), c), et d) de la Loi sur la concurrence. Durant la période visée par le recours collectif[1], le par. 45(1) était rédigé comme suit :

Complot

45. (1) Commet un acte criminel et encourt un emprisonnement maximal de cinq ans et une amende maximale d'un million de dollars, ou l'une de ces peines, quiconque complote, se coalise ou conclut un accord ou arrangement avec une autre personne :

. . .

b) soit pour empêcher, limiter ou réduire, indûment, la fabrication ou production d'un produit ou pour en élever déraisonnablement le prix;

c) soit pour empêcher ou réduire, indûment, la concurrence dans la production, la fabrication, l'achat, le troc, la vente, l'entreposage, la location, le transport ou la fourniture d'un produit, dans le prix d'assurances sur les personnes ou les biens;

[1] Section 45(1) was amended by the Budget Implementation Act, 2009, S.C. 2009, c. 2, s. 410. The amendments are not material to these reasons for judgment.

[1] Le paragraphe 45(1) a été modifié par la Loi d'exécution du budget de 2009, L.C. 2009, c. 2, art. 410. Les modifications ne sont pas importantes pour les présents motifs.

(d) to otherwise restrain or injure competition unduly,

is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine not exceeding one million dollars or to both.

[64] The text of s. 36(1)(a) supports the view that umbrella purchasers have a cause of action thereunder for conduct contrary to s. 45(1) of the Competition Act. Section 36(1)(a) provides a cause of action to any person who has suffered loss or damage as a result of conduct contrary to s. 45. Significantly, Parliament's use of "any person" does not narrow the realm of possible claimants. Rather, it empowers any claimant who can demonstrate that loss or damage was incurred as a result of the defendant's conduct to bring a claim. On this point, the following paragraph from the Court of Appeal for Ontario's decision in Shah (ONCA) (at para. 34) is apposite, and I adopt it as mine:

On a plain reading, if the umbrella purchasers can prove loss resulting from a proven conspiracy under s. 45, s. 36(1) grants those purchasers a statutory means by which to recover those losses. Taking the language at face value, the umbrella purchasers' right of recovery is limited only by their ability to demonstrate two things: (1) that the respondents conspired within the meaning of s. 45; and (2) that the losses or damages suffered by the appellants resulted from that conspiracy.

(2) Purpose of the Competition Act

[65] As I have already recounted, the purpose of the Competition Act is to "maintain and encourage competition in Canada" with a view to providing consumers with "competitive prices and product choices" (s. 1.1). A conspiracy to price-fix is the "very antithesis of the Competition Act's objective" (Shah (ONCA), at para. 38). Monetary sanctions for such anti-competitive conduct therefore further the Competition Act's purpose. This Court has also recognized two other objectives of the Competition

d) soit, de toute autre façon, pour restreindre, indûment, la concurrence ou lui causer un préjudice indu.

[64] Le texte de l'al. 36(1)a) étaye le point de vue selon lequel, sous son régime, les acheteurs sous parapluie ont une cause d'action pour tout comportement allant à l'encontre du par. 45(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence. L'alinéa 36(1)a) accorde un droit d'action à toute personne qui a subi une perte ou des dommages par suite d'un comportement allant à l'encontre de l'art. 45. Fait important, l'emploi, par le législateur, de l'expression « toute personne » n'a pas pour effet de restreindre les catégories de demandeurs éventuels. Cette expression a plutôt pour effet d'habiliter à intenter un recours tout demandeur capable de démontrer que la perte ou le dommage a été subi en raison du comportement du défendeur. Sur ce point, le paragraphe suivant tiré de l'arrêt Shah (ONCA) de la Cour d'appel de l'Ontario (par. 34) est pertinent et je le fais mien :

[TRADUCTION] Suivant le sens ordinaire des mots utilisés, si les acheteurs sous parapluie peuvent démontrer qu'ils ont subi une perte par suite d'un complot établi sur le fondement de l'art. 45, le par. 36(1) leur accorde un moyen de recouvrer cette perte. Interprété au pied de la lettre, le par. 36(1) confère aux acheteurs sous parapluie un droit de recouvrement qui n'est limité que par leur capacité à démontrer deux choses : (1) que les intimés ont comploté au sens de l'art. 45; et (2) que la perte ou les dommages subis par les appelants découlent de ce complot.

(2) Objet de la Loi sur la concurrence

[65] Comme je l'ai déjà mentionné, l'objet de la Loi sur la concurrence est de « préserver et de favoriser la concurrence au Canada » dans le but d'assurer aux consommateurs « des prix compétitifs et un choix dans les produits » (art. 1.1). Comploter en vue de fixer les prix va [TRADUCTION] « totalement à l'encontre de l'objet de la Loi sur la concurrence » (Shah (ONCA), par. 38). Les sanctions pécuniaires imposées dans de tels cas de conduite anticoncurrentielle favorisent ainsi l'atteinte de la fin visée par la Loi sur

Act of particular relevance here, being deterrence of anti-competitive behaviour, and compensation for the victims of such behaviour (Infineon Technologies AG v. Option Consommateurs, 2013 SCC 59, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 600 ("Infineon"), at para. 111; Sun-Rype Products Ltd. v. Archer Daniels Midland Company, 2013 SCC 58, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 545 ("Sun-Rype"), at paras. 24-27; Microsoft, at paras. 46-49). Interpreting s. 36(1)(a) so as to permit umbrella purchaser actions furthers both of these objectives.

[66] Allowing umbrella purchaser actions furthers deterrence because it increases the potential liability falling upon those who engage in anti-competitive behaviour (Shah (ONCA), at para. 38). Here, Godfrey alleges that four of the named defendants controlled 94 percent of the global ODD market (A.R., vol. II, at para. 70). While this means that Toshiba's potential liability to the umbrella purchasers would only marginally increase its existing liability to non-umbrella purchasers, I accept that any increase in potential liability will likely carry a correspondingly deterrent effect.

[67] The objective of compensation is also furthered by allowing umbrella purchaser actions, because doing so affords umbrella purchasers recourse to recover from loss arising from what, for the purposes of these appeals, is assumed to have been anti-competitive conduct. Barring a class of purchasers who were, on the theory pleaded, intended by the defendants to pay higher prices as a result of their price-fixing is inconsistent with the compensatory goal of the Competition Act.

[68] Relatedly, and while far from determinative, departmental and parliamentary statements fortify my view that Parliament intended that the cause of action in s. 36(1)(a) be broadly available, such that anyone who suffers a loss from anti-competitive behaviour could bring a private action. The briefing document accompanying the first stage of the la concurrence. Notre Cour a reconnu deux autres objectifs de la Loi sur la concurrence qui revêtent en l'espèce une importance particulière : la dissuasion des comportements anticoncurrentiels et l'indemnisation des victimes de ces comportements (Infineon Technologies AG c. Option consommateurs, 2013 CSC 59, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 600 (« Infineon »), par. 111; Sun-Rype Products Ltd. c. Archer Daniels Midland Company, 2013 CSC 58, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 545 (« Sun-Rype »), par. 24-27; Microsoft, par. 46-49). Interpréter l'al. 36(1)a) de façon à autoriser les actions des acheteurs sous parapluie favorise l'atteinte de ces deux objectifs.

[66] Autoriser les actions des acheteurs sous parapluie favorise la dissuasion, en ce que le risque de responsabilité auquel s'exposent ceux qui se livrent à des comportements anticoncurrentiels augmente (Shah (ONCA), par. 38). En l'espèce, M. Godfrey allègue que quatre des défenderesses désignées contrôlaient 94 p. 100 du marché global des LDO (d.a., vol. II, par. 70). Bien que cela signifie que la responsabilité potentielle à laquelle s'expose Toshiba à l'égard des acheteurs sous parapluie ne ferait qu'augmenter légèrement la responsabilité qu'elle a envers les autres acheteurs que ceux sous parapluie, je reconnais que toute augmentation de sa responsabilité éventuelle aura probablement un effet dissuasif correspondant.

[67] Autoriser les actions des acheteurs sous parapluie favorise également l'atteinte de l'objectif d'indemnisation, parce que ces acheteurs auraient ainsi la possibilité de recouvrer les pertes découlant de ce qui, pour les besoins des présents pourvois, est présumé être un comportement anticoncurrentiel. Exclure une catégorie d'acheteurs qui, selon la thèse avancée, devaient payer des prix plus élevés par suite du stratagème de fixation des prix établi par les défenderesses est incompatible avec l'objectif d'indemnisation de la Loi sur la concurrence.

[68] Dans le même ordre d'idées, bien que ce soit loin d'être concluant, certaines déclarations ministérielles et parlementaires me confortent dans mon opinion que le législateur entendait que la cause d'action prévue à l'al. 36(1)a) soit largement accessible, de sorte que quiconque subit une perte par suite d'un comportement anticoncurrentiel peut intenter modernization amendments (which introduced the original civil remedies provision) stated:

> Under the existing law there is no civil recourse under the Act for persons injured by reason of the fact that others have participated in violation of the Combines Investigation Act. The provision dealing with civil damages, although it is expected to be of particular value to small businessmen who have been hurt by conduct contrary to the Act, will be equally available to consumers and to any other members of the public who have been so damaged.
>
> The amendment provides that anyone who has suffered loss or damage because of such a violation . . . may . . . sue for and be awarded damages equal to the actual loss incurred . . . . [Emphasis added.]

(Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada, Proposals for a New Competition Policy for Canada (1973), at pp. 48-49)

This is further supported by parliamentary committee discussions on the introduction of a private cause of action. In committee, the responsible minister explicitly stated that there was no reason to limit consumers' recourse under the private cause of action to direct loss or damage (House of Commons, Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, Issue No. 45, 1st Sess., 30th Parl., May 8 1975, at p. 45:18).

(3) Indeterminate Liability

[69] Toshiba argues that recognizing the umbrella purchasers as having a cause of action would expose Toshiba to a "potentially limitless scope of liability" (A.F. (Toshiba), at para. 97). This raises the question, first of all, of whether indeterminate liability is relevant at all to deciding the scope of possible s. 36(1)(a) claimants for conduct contrary to s. 45(1) of the Competition Act. On this point, the Court of Appeal considered that it might be relevant une action privée. On peut lire ce qui suit dans le document d'information préparé à l'occasion de la première étape des modifications visant à moderniser la Loi (qui ont mené à l'adoption de la première disposition relative aux recours civils) :

> En vertu de la loi actuelle, il n'existe pas de recours possible en dommages-intérêts pour les personnes lésées du fait que d'autres ont participé à des infractions à la Loi relative aux enquêtes sur les coalitions. La disposition visant les dommages-intérêts sera d'une valeur particulière pour les petites entreprises lésées par des actions contraire (sic) à la Loi mais ladite disposition pourra également être invoquée par les consommateurs et par toutes personnes ayant été ainsi lésées.
>
> La modification stipule que toute personne qui a subi des pertes ou un préjudice à cause d'une telle infraction [. . .] peut intenter des poursuites et recevoir des dommages-intérêts équivalents à la perte réelle subie . . . [Je souligne.]

(Consommation et Corporations Canada, Propositions pour une nouvelle politique de concurrence pour le Canada (1973), p. 45)

Cette opinion est de plus étayée par les délibérations du comité parlementaire sur la création d'une cause d'action en droit privé. En comité, le ministre responsable a expressément déclaré qu'il n'y avait aucune raison de limiter le recours par les consommateurs à la cause d'action en droit privé pour recouvrer la perte ou les dommages directement subis (Chambre des communes, Comité permanent des finances, du commerce et des questions économiques, Procès-verbaux et témoignages, fasc. n° 45, 1re sess., 30e lég., 8 mai 1975, p. 45:18).

(3) Responsabilité indéterminée

[69] Toshiba soutient que la reconnaissance d'une cause d'action aux acheteurs sous parapluie aurait pour effet de l'exposer à une [TRADUCTION] « responsabilité potentiellement illimitée » (m.a. (Toshiba), par. 97). Ce qui nous amène, premièrement, à la question de savoir si la responsabilité indéterminée est un facteur d'une quelconque pertinence pour décider qui sont les demandeurs susceptibles de se prévaloir de l'al. 36(1)a) par suite d'un comportement allant à

(on the express assumption that concerns about indeterminate liability might properly be considered outside the context of a negligence action) (C.A. reasons, at para. 227). I note, parenthetically, that whether that assumption is valid — that is, whether indeterminate liability might properly be considered at all in the context of a claim under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act — I am content to leave for another day since, for the reasons that follow, I am of the view that indeterminate liability would not arise in this case in any event.

[70] Toshiba argues that indeterminate liability is a relevant consideration here because the umbrella purchasers seek to recover for pure economic loss. Toshiba relies upon this Court's statement in R. v. Imperial Tobacco Canada Ltd., 2011 SCC 42, [2011] 3 S.C.R. 45, that "[t]he risk of indeterminate liability is enhanced by the fact that the claims are for pure economic loss" (para. 100). In Imperial Tobacco, a class proceeding was brought against Imperial Tobacco by persons who purchased "light" or "mild" cigarettes. Imperial Tobacco issued third-party notices to the Government of Canada, alleging it was liable to tobacco companies for, inter alia, negligent misrepresentation. This Court held that "the prospect of indeterminate liability is fatal to the tobacco companies' claims of negligent misrepresentation", since "Canada had no control over the number of people who smoked light cigarettes" (para. 99). Similarly, Toshiba argues that it had no control over the quantity of ODDs sold to the umbrella purchasers by non-defendant manufacturers or the number of purchasers to whom it may be liable, such that the extent of its liability is indeterminate (A.F. (Toshiba), at para. 102).

[71] Several features of this case, however, lead me to the view that recognizing the umbrella purchasers'

l'encontre du par. 45(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence. Sur ce point, la Cour d'appel a jugé (en supposant expressément que les préoccupations au sujet de la responsabilité indéterminée pourraient valablement être examinées dans un contexte autre que celui d'une action pour négligence) qu'il pourrait s'agir d'un facteur pertinent (motifs de la C.A., par. 227). Je signale incidemment qu'il vaut mieux reporter à une autre occasion l'analyse de la question de savoir si cette hypothèse est valide — c'est-à-dire si la responsabilité indéterminée est susceptible d'être valablement examinée dans le contexte d'une demande fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence — puisque, pour les motifs qui suivent, j'estime que la question de la responsabilité indéterminée ne se poserait pas en l'espèce de toute façon.

[70] Toshiba soutient que la responsabilité illimitée est une considération pertinente en l'espèce, parce que les acheteurs sous parapluie cherchent à être indemnisés d'une perte purement économique. Toshiba se fonde à cet égard sur une affirmation de notre Cour dans l'arrêt R. c. Imperial Tobacco Canada Ltd., 2011 CSC 42, [2011] 3 R.C.S. 45 : « Le risque de responsabilité indéterminée est aggravé par le caractère purement financier de la perte alléguée » (par. 100). Dans Imperial Tobacco, un recours collectif avait été intenté contre Imperial Tobacco par des consommateurs de cigarettes « légères » ou « douces ». Imperial Tobacco avait mis en cause le gouvernement du Canada, alléguant qu'il était responsable envers les compagnies de tabac, entre autres, pour avoir fait des déclarations inexactes par négligence. La Cour a conclu que « la possibilité d'une responsabilité indéterminée porte un coup fatal aux allégations des compagnies de tabac relatives aux déclarations inexactes faites par négligence », puisque le « Canada n'exerçait aucun contrôle sur le nombre de fumeurs de cigarettes légères » (par. 99). De même, toujours selon Toshiba, elle n'exerçait aucun contrôle sur le nombre de LDO vendus aux acheteurs sous parapluie par des fabricants autres que les défenderesses ou sur le nombre d'acheteurs envers qui elle risque d'être tenue responsable, de sorte que l'étendue de sa responsabilité est indéterminée (m.a. (Toshiba), par. 102).

[71] Toutefois, plusieurs éléments de la présente affaire m'amènent à conclure que la reconnaissance cause of action under s. 36(1)(a) does not risk exposing Toshiba to indeterminate liability.

[72] First, Toshiba's liability is limited by the class period, and by the specific products whose prices are alleged to have been fixed. Whereas in Imperial Tobacco, Canada had no control over who smoked light cigarettes (para. 99), the theory of umbrella effects links the pricing decisions of the non-defendant manufacturers to Toshiba's anti-competitive behaviour (C.A. reasons, at para. 239). I have already noted that Godfrey's pleadings allege that, during the class period, four of the named defendants collectively controlled 94 percent of the global ODD market. Godfrey also alleges that Toshiba intended to raise prices across that market (A.R., vol. II, at pp. 21-22). This allegation is rooted in the theory that, in order for Toshiba to profit from the conspiracy, the entire market price for ODDs had to increase. Otherwise, Toshiba would have lost market share to non-defendant manufacturers (transcript, at pp. 56-57, A.R., vol. III, at p. 166).

[73] This supports the submission made before us by Godfrey's counsel that umbrella effects are "not just a known and foreseeable consequence of what the defendants are doing, it's an intended consequence" (transcript, at p. 61). The point is that the results of Toshiba's alleged anti-competitive behaviour are not indeterminate. Intended results are not indeterminate, but pre-determined. I therefore agree with the Court of Appeal that there is "no reason why defendants who intend to inflict damage on umbrella purchasers should be exonerated from liability on the basis that they exercised no control over their liability" (C.A. reasons, at para. 241).

[74] Secondly, and as I have already recounted, s. 36(1)(a) limits recovery to only those purchasers who can show that they suffered a loss or damage "as a result of" the defendants' conspiratorial conduct. In de la cause d'action des acheteurs sous parapluie fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a) ne risque pas d'exposer Toshiba à une responsabilité indéterminée.

[72] Premièrement, la responsabilité de Toshiba est limitée par la période visée par le recours collectif et par les produits dont les prix auraient été fixés. Alors que dans l'affaire Imperial Tobacco, le Canada n'exerçait aucun contrôle sur le nombre de fumeurs de cigarettes légères (par. 99), la théorie de l'effet parapluie établit un lien entre les décisions prises par les fabricants autres que les défenderesses quant à l'établissement des prix et le comportement anticoncurrentiel de Toshiba (motifs de la C.A., par. 239). J'ai déjà mentionné que M. Godfrey allègue dans ses actes de procédure que, durant la période visée par le recours collectif, quatre des défenderesses désignées contrôlaient à elles seules 94 p. 100 du marché global des LDO. M. Godfrey a aussi allégué que Toshiba entendait augmenter les prix dans l'ensemble de ce marché (d.a., vol. II, p. 21-22). Cette allégation tire son origine de la thèse voulant que, pour que Toshiba puisse tirer profit du complot, les prix du marché global des LDO devaient augmenter. Sinon, Toshiba aurait perdu une part de marché en faveur des fabricants autres que les défenderesses (transcription, p. 56-57, d.a., vol. III, p. 166).

[73] Cela étaye l'observation faite devant nous par l'avocat de M. Godfrey selon qui l'effet parapluie n'est [TRADUCTION] « pas juste une conséquence connue et prévisible des agissements des défenderesses, c'est une conséquence voulue » (transcription, p. 61). Le fait est que les résultats du comportement anticoncurrentiel de Toshiba ne sont pas indéterminés. Des résultats voulus ne sont pas indéterminés, mais déterminés à l'avance. Je suis donc d'accord avec la Cour d'appel pour dire qu'il n'existe [TRADUCTION] « aucune raison pour que les défenderesses, dont l'intention était de causer un préjudice aux acheteurs sous parapluie, soient dégagées de toute responsabilité parce qu'elles n'exerçaient aucun contrôle sur leur responsabilité » (motifs de la C.A., par. 241).

[74] Deuxièmement, comme je l'ai déjà mentionné, l'al. 36(1)a) limite le recours en indemnisation aux seuls acheteurs qui peuvent démontrer qu'ils ont subi une perte ou des dommages « par suite » du complot order to recover under s. 36(1)(a), then, the umbrella purchasers will have to demonstrate that Toshiba engaged in anti-competitive behaviour, that the umbrella purchasers suffered "loss or damage", and that such loss or damage was "as a result of" such behaviour. The statutory text "as a result of" imports both factual and legal causation into s. 36(1). Recovery under s. 36(1) is therefore limited to claimants with a loss that is not too remote from the conduct.

[75] Thirdly, the text of s. 45(1) in force during the class period is instructive. The elements of the wrongful conduct outlined therein were described by the British Columbia Court of Appeal in Watson (at paras. 73-74):

> [T]he actus reus elements of former s. 45 are:
>
> i) the defendant conspired, combined, agreed, or arranged with another person; and
>
> ii) the agreement was to enhance unreasonably the price of a product, to lessen unduly the supply of a product, or to otherwise restrain or injure competition unduly.
>
> The mens rea element of former s. 45 as defined in [R.] v. Nova Scotia Pharmaceutical Society, [1992] 2 S.C.R. 606 (S.C.C.) at 659-660, (1992), 93 D.L.R. (4th) 36 (S.C.C.), requires:
>
> i) the defendant had a subjective intention to agree and was aware of the agreement's terms; and > ii) the defendant had the required objective intention, that is, a reasonable business person would or should be aware that the likely effect of the agreement would be to lessen competition unduly.
>

(See also: Shah (ONCA), at para. 50; R. c. Proulx, 2016 QCCA 1425, at para. 20 (CanLII).)

While the subjective mens rea does not require that the defendants' conduct be directed specifically towards the claimant, s. 45(1) "limits the reach of des défenderesses. Pour être indemnisés en vertu de l'al. 36(1)a), les acheteurs sous parapluie devront démontrer que Toshiba a eu un comportement anticoncurrentiel, qu'ils ont subi une « perte ou des dommages » et que cette perte ou ces dommages ont été subis « par suite » du comportement en question. L'expression « par suite » intègre tant la causalité factuelle que la causalité juridique au par. 36(1). Seuls les demandeurs ayant subi une perte qui n'est pas trop éloignée du comportement peuvent donc être indemnisés en vertu du par. 36(1).

[75] Troisièmement, le libellé du par. 45(1) qui était en vigueur durant la période visée par le recours collectif est instructif. Les éléments constitutifs du comportement répréhensible sont décrits par la Cour d'appel de la Colombie-Britannique dans l'arrêt Watson (par. 73-74) :

> [TRADUCTION] [L]es éléments constitutifs de l'actus reus requis par l'ancien art. 45 sont :
>
> i) le défendeur a comploté, s'est coalisé ou a conclu un accord ou un arrangement avec une autre personne;
>
> ii) l'accord visait à élever déraisonnablement le prix d'un produit, ou à réduire indûment la fourniture d'un produit ou, de toute autre façon, à restreindre indûment la concurrence ou à lui nuire indûment.
>
> La mens rea de l'infraction prévue à l'ancien art. 45, telle que définie dans l'arrêt [R.] c. Nova Scotia Pharmaceutical Society, [1992] 2 R.C.S. 606 (C.S.C.), p. 659-660, (1992), 93 D.L.R. (4th) 36 (C.S.C.), exige ce qui suit :
>
> i) le défendeur avait une intention subjective de conclure un accord et il était au courant des modalités de l'accord;
>
> ii) le défendeur avait l'intention objective requise, c'est-à-dire qu'un homme ou une femme d'affaires raisonnable saurait ou devrait savoir que l'accord aura vraisemblablement pour effet de restreindre indûment la concurrence.

(Voir aussi : Shah (ONCA), par. 50; R. c. Proulx, 2016 QCCA 1425, par. 20 (CanLII).)

Bien que la mens rea subjective n'exige pas que le comportement des défendeurs soit dirigé directement contre le demandeur, le par. 45(1) [TRADUCTION] « limite liability to those who, at a minimum, specifically intend to agree upon anti-competitive conduct" (Shah (ONCA), at para. 51).

[76] Taken together, these features of ss. 36(1)(a) and 45(1) of the Competition Act limit the availability of this cause of action to those claimants who can demonstrate: (1) a causal link between the loss suffered and the conspiratorial conduct; and (2) that the defendants' conduct satisfies the actus reus and mens rea elements of s. 45(1) of the Competition Act.

[77] This is not to say that umbrella purchasers' actions will not be complex or otherwise difficult to pursue. Marshalling and presenting evidence to satisfy the conditions placed by Parliament on recovery under ss. 36(1)(a) and 45(1) — showing a causal link between loss and conspiratorial conduct, and proving the actus reus and mens rea of s. 45(1) — represents a significant burden. That said, this Court's statement in Microsoft (at paras. 44-45) regarding indirect purchaser claims is, in my view, equally applicable to claims brought by umbrella purchasers:

> Indirect purchaser actions, especially in the antitrust context, will often involve large amounts of evidence, complex economic theories and multiple parties in a chain of distribution, making the tracing of the overcharges to their ultimate end an unenviable task. However, . . . these same concerns can be raised in most antitrust cases, and should not stand in the way of allowing indirect purchasers an opportunity to make their case . . . .
>
> In bringing their action, the indirect purchasers willingly assume the burden of establishing that they have suffered loss. This task may well require expert testimony and complex economic evidence. Whether these tools will be sufficient to meet the burden of proof, in my view, is a factual question to be decided on a case-by-case basis. Indirect purchaser actions should not be barred altogether solely because of the likely complexity associated with proof of damages.

And, of course, in this case it will be for the trial judge to determine whether the umbrella purchaser l'étendue de la responsabilité à ceux qui, au minimum, ont eu l'intention expresse de convenir d'un comportement anticoncurrentiel » (Shah (ONCA), par. 51).

[76] Considérés ensemble, ces éléments de l'al. 36(1)a) et du par. 45(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence ont pour effet de limiter cette cause d'action aux demandeurs qui peuvent démontrer : (1) un lien de causalité entre la perte subie et le complot; et (2) que le comportement des défendeurs satisfait à l'actus reus et à la mens rea requis par le par. 45(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence.

[77] Cela ne veut pas dire qu'il ne sera pas compliqué ou autrement difficile pour les acheteurs sous parapluie de poursuivre leurs actions. Rassembler et présenter suffisamment d'éléments de preuve pour satisfaire aux conditions d'indemnisation imposées par le législateur à l'al. 36(1)a) et au par. 45(1) — établir un lien de causalité entre la perte et le complot, ainsi que l'actus reus et la mens rea de l'infraction prévue au par. 45(1) — représente un lourd fardeau. Cela dit, la déclaration de notre Cour dans l'arrêt Microsoft (par. 44-45) au sujet des recours des acheteurs indirects s'applique, à mon avis, tout autant aux actions intentées par les acheteurs sous parapluie :

> L'action intentée par un acheteur indirect, surtout sur le fondement des dispositions antitrust, comporte souvent une preuve volumineuse, la formulation de théories économiques complexes et l'existence de nombreuses parties le long de la chaîne de distribution, de sorte qu'il est d'autant plus ardu de retracer le parcours de la majoration d'un maillon à l'autre jusqu'à son aboutissement final. Toutefois, [. . .] il s'agit de caractéristiques communes à la plupart des affaires antitrust et elles ne devraient donc pas empêcher l'acheteur indirect de prouver ses allégations . . .
>
> L'acheteur indirect qui intente une action contracte volontairement l'obligation d'établir qu'il a subi une perte, ce qui peut fort bien nécessiter le témoignage d'experts et une preuve complexe de nature économique. À mon avis, la question de savoir si ces éléments lui permettront de s'acquitter de cette obligation tient aux faits de l'espèce. Il n'y a pas lieu de faire totalement obstacle à l'action de l'acheteur indirect pour la seule raison qu'il sera ardu d'établir le préjudice subi.

Bien entendu, il appartiendra au juge de première instance de décider en l'espèce si les acheteurs sous claimants have presented sufficient evidence to establish that, in the circumstances of the case and in the relevant market, Toshiba caused umbrella pricing.

[78] In view of the foregoing, it is not plain and obvious that the umbrella purchasers' cause of action under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act cannot succeed, and I would reject this ground of appeal.

C. Section 36(1) of the Competition Act Does Not Bar Common Law or Equitable Claims

[79] In addition to his statutory claims under the Competition Act, Godfrey advances claims in, inter alia, civil conspiracy.

[80] Toshiba argues that the courts below erred in two respects concerning the relationship between a statutory claim under the Competition Act and the tort of civil conspiracy. First, it says that the tort of civil conspiracy based on a breach of the predecessor statute to the Competition Act (the Combines Investigation Act, R.S.C. 1970, c. C-23) was never available to plaintiffs prior to the enactment in 1975 of the private right of action. Secondly, and in any event, the courts below failed to recognize that, by legislating ss. 36(1) and 45(1) of the Competition Act, Parliament intended to oust the common law tort of civil conspiracy (A.F. (Toshiba), at para. 119).

[81] These arguments raise questions of law, and are therefore reviewed on a standard of correctness. For the reasons below, I reject both arguments, and it is therefore not plain and obvious that Godfrey's common law and equitable claims cannot succeed, except as was otherwise held by the certification judge.[2]

[2] As recounted at para. 11, the certification judge held that the pleadings did not disclose a cause of action for unlawful means tort, or (in respect of the umbrella purchasers) for unjust enrichment and waiver of tort.

parapluie ont présenté suffisamment d'éléments de preuve pour établir que, dans les circonstances, Toshiba a entraîné un effet d'ombrelle sur les prix.

[78] Compte tenu de ce qui précède, il n'est pas évident et manifeste que la cause d'action des acheteurs sous parapluie fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence ne peut être accueillie et je rejetterais ce moyen d'appel.

C. Le paragraphe 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence ne fait pas obstacle aux recours de common law ou d'equity

[79] Outre le recours qu'il a intenté sous le régime de la Loi sur la concurrence, M. Godfrey a intenté, entre autres, une action pour complot civil.

[80] Toshiba soutient que les tribunaux d'instance inférieure ont commis deux erreurs en ce qui concerne le lien entre une action intentée sous le régime de la Loi sur la concurrence et le délit de complot civil. Premièrement, elle fait valoir qu'un demandeur, avant l'adoption, en 1975, du droit d'action privé, ne pouvait jamais avoir recours au délit de complot civil fondé sur une violation de la loi qu'a remplacée la Loi sur la concurrence (la Loi relative aux enquêtes sur les coalitions, S.R.C. 1970, c. C-23). Deuxièmement, en tout état de cause, les tribunaux d'instance inférieure ont eu tort de ne pas reconnaître que, par l'adoption des par. 36(1) et 45(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence, le législateur entendait écarter le délit de common law qu'est le complot civil (m.a. (Toshiba), par. 119).

[81] Ces arguments soulèvent des questions de droit, et ils sont donc contrôlés suivant la norme de la décision correcte. Pour les motifs qui suivent, je rejette les deux arguments, si bien qu'il n'est pas évident et manifeste que les recours de common law ou d'equity exercés par M. Godfrey ne peuvent être accueillis, sauf indication contraire dans les conclusions du juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation[2].

[2] Comme je l'ai mentionné au par. 11, le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a statué que les actes de procédure n'avaient pas révélé une cause d'action pour délit d'atteinte par un moyen illégal ou (à l'égard des acheteurs sous parapluie) pour enrichissement sans cause et renonciation au recours délictuel.

(1) The Tort of Civil Conspiracy Based on the Breach of a Statute Existed Prior to the Enactment of the Statutory Cause of Action

[82] To be clear, I do not dispute Toshiba's submission that the 1975 amendments were significant. The predecessor to the Competition Act (the Combines Investigation Act) was exclusively penal — indeed, its constitutionality as an exercise of Parliament's legislative authority over the criminal law was upheld in Proprietary Articles Trade Association v. Attorney General for Canada, [1931] A.C. 310 (P.C.). In 1975, Parliament supplemented this penal function with regulatory and civil enforcement provisions, including a civil remedy provision (now s. 36(1)) (Watson, at para. 36).

[83] All this said, our law had recognized the tort of civil conspiracy based on the breach of a statute long before Parliament legislated a civil right of action in 1975. In International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Therien, [1960] S.C.R. 265, and Gagnon v. Foundation Maritime Ltd., [1961] S.C.R. 435, this Court imposed liability on trade unions for unlawful means conspiracy for conduct prohibited by statute (Therien, at p. 280; Gagnon, at p. 446). And, in Cement LaFarge v. B.C. Lightweight Aggregate, [1983] 1 S.C.R. 452, which was decided on the basis of the Combines Investigation Act, this Court affirmed not only the existence of the tort of civil conspiracy, but also that a breach of the Combines Investigation Act could satisfy the "unlawful" element of unlawful means conspiracy (pp. 471-72). Any question on this point was settled when LaFarge was cited in A.I. Enterprises Ltd. v. Bram Enterprises Ltd., 2014 SCC 12, [2014] 1 S.C.R. 177, at para. 64, for the same proposition — that a breach of statute could satisfy the "unlawful means" component of the tort of unlawful means conspiracy.

[84] The law admits of no ambiguity on this point. Prior to the enactment of the cause of action contained in what is now s. 36(1) of the Competition Act,

(1) Le délit de complot civil fondé sur la violation d'une loi existait avant l'adoption de la disposition conférant une cause d'action

[82] Pour être clair, je ne conteste pas l'argument de Toshiba selon lequel les modifications de 1975 étaient importantes. La loi ayant précédé la Loi sur la concurrence (la Loi relative aux enquêtes sur les coalitions) était de nature exclusivement pénale — en effet, comme elle résultait de l'exercice du pouvoir législatif fédéral en matière de droit criminel, sa constitutionnalité a été confirmée dans l'arrêt Proprietary Articles Trade Association c. Attorney General for Canada, [1931] A.C. 310 (C.P.). En 1975, le législateur a suppléé à la fonction pénale de cette loi en adoptant des dispositions d'exécution de nature réglementaire et civile, dont une disposition prévoyant un recours civil (l'actuel par. 36(1)) (Watson, par. 36).

[83] Tout cela étant dit, notre droit avait reconnu le délit de complot civil fondé sur la violation d'une loi bien avant que le législateur ait adopté une disposition créant un droit d'action au civil en 1975. Dans les arrêts International Brotherhood of Teamsters c. Therien, [1960] R.C.S. 265, et Gagnon c. Foundation Maritime Ltd., [1961] R.C.S. 435, notre Cour a tenu les syndicats responsables de complot exécuté par des moyens illégaux car ils avaient agi en contravention de la loi (Therien, p. 280; Gagnon, p. 446). Et dans l'arrêt Cement LaFarge c. B.C. Lightweight Aggregate, [1983] 1 R.C.S. 452, qui repose sur la Loi relative aux enquêtes sur les coalitions, notre Cour a non seulement confirmé l'existence du délit de complot civil, mais elle a aussi reconnu qu'une violation de cette loi pouvait constituer l'élément d'« illégalité » du délit de complot exécuté par des moyens illégaux (p. 471-472). S'il subsistait le moindre doute sur ce point, il a été écarté lorsque, dans l'arrêt A.I. Enterprises Ltd. c. Bram Enterprises Ltd., 2014 CSC 12, [2014] 1 R.C.S. 177, par. 64, la Cour a cité l'arrêt LaFarge à l'appui de la même proposition — qu'une violation de la loi pouvait satisfaire à l'élément « moyens illégaux » du délit de complot exécuté par des moyens illégaux.

[84] Le droit ne laisse place à aucune ambiguïté sur ce point. Avant l'adoption de la disposition conférant une cause d'action qui se trouve dans ce qui est a breach of s. 45(1) of the Competition Act was, as it still is, able to satisfy the "unlawful means" element of the tort of civil conspiracy.

(2) The Enactment of the Statutory Cause of Action Did Not Oust Common Law and Equitable Actions

[85] Turning to Toshiba's other argument, the starting point in deciding whether a common law right of action has been legislatively ousted is the presumption that Parliament does not intend to abrogate common law rights (R. Sullivan, Sullivan on the Construction of Statutes (6th ed. 2014), at p. 538). While s. 36(1) does not by its express terms oust common law causes of action, legislation may rebut this presumption by ousting the common law either expressly or by necessary implication (Gendron v. Supply and Services Union of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, Local 50057, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 1298, at pp. 1315-16).

[86] In Gendron, this Court held, for three reasons, that the Canada Labour Code, R.S.C. 1970, c. L-1 (as amended by S.C. 1972, c. 18; S.C. 1977-78, c. 27) ousted the common law duty of fair representation by necessary implication. First, the content of the duty in the Canada Labour Code was co-extensive with the common law duty such that "[t]he common law duty is . . . not in any sense additive; it is merely duplicative" (p. 1316). Secondly, in enacting the Canada Labour Code, Parliament enacted a comprehensive and exclusive code, which indicated an intention for the Canada Labour Code to "occupy the whole field in terms of a determination of whether or not a union has acted fairly" (p. 1317). Finally, the Canada Labour Code provided a "new and superior method of remedying a breach" of the duty of fair representation (p. 1319).

[87] None of these considerations apply to s. 36(1) of the Competition Act, relative to the common law tort of civil conspiracy. Section 36(1) is neither duplicative of the tort of civil conspiracy nor does it provide a "new and superior" remedy. Claims under devenu le par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence, une infraction au par. 45(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence pouvait, et peut encore, satisfaire à l'élément « moyens illégaux » du délit de complot civil.

(2) L'adoption de la disposition conférant une cause d'action n'a pas écarté les recours de common law

[85] En ce qui concerne l'autre argument de Toshiba, le point de départ pour déterminer si un recours de common law a été écarté par une loi est la présomption que le législateur n'a pas l'intention d'abroger des droits reconnus par la common law (R. Sullivan, Sullivan on the Construction of Statutes (6e éd. 2014), p. 538). Si le par. 36(1) n'exclut pas expressément les causes d'action fondées sur la common law, il reste qu'une loi peut réfuter cette présomption en écartant la common law de façon expresse ou par déduction nécessaire (Gendron c. Syndicat des approvisionnements et services de l'Alliance de la Fonction publique du Canada, section locale 50057, [1990] 1 R.C.S. 1298, p. 1315-1316).

[86] Dans l'arrêt Gendron, notre Cour a conclu, pour trois motifs, que le Code canadien du travail, S.R.C. 1970, c. L-1 (modifié par S.C. 1972, c. 18; S.C. 1977-78, c. 27) avait écarté, par déduction nécessaire, le devoir de juste représentation reconnu par la common law. Premièrement, le contenu du devoir imposé par le Code canadien du travail correspond à celui de common law, de sorte que « ce devoir n'ajoute rien; il fait simplement double emploi » (p. 1316). Deuxièmement, en adoptant le Code canadien du travail, le législateur a adopté un code complet et exclusif, ce qui témoignait de son intention que le Code canadien du travail « occupe tout le champ lorsqu'il s'agit de déterminer si un syndicat a agi de façon juste » (p. 1317). Enfin, le Code canadien du travail prévoit « une nouvelle façon, [. . .] supérieure [au devoir de common law], de remédier à un manquement » au devoir de juste représentation (p. 1319).

[87] Aucune de ces considérations ne s'applique au par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence relativement au délit de complot civil en common law. Le paragraphe 36(1) ne fait pas double emploi avec le délit de complot civil et il ne prévoit pas non plus de

s. 36(1) are subject to the limitation period stated in s. 36(4), whereas the tort of civil conspiracy is subject to provincial limitations statutes. Additionally, the tort of civil conspiracy allows for a broader range of remedies than is available under s. 36(1), such as punitive damages (Watson, at para. 57).

[88] Nor does s. 36(1) represent a comprehensive and exclusive code regarding claims for anti-competitive conspiratorial conduct. That this is so is made plain by s. 62 of the Competition Act ("Civil rights not affected") which contemplates the subsistence of common law and equitable rights of action by providing that "nothing in this Part [which includes s. 45(1), in respect of which s. 36(1) creates a statutory right of action] shall be construed as depriving any person of any civil right of action". This is also consistent with this Court's conclusion in Infineon (at para. 95) that it was open for a plaintiff to proceed with its claim under art. 1457 of the Civil Code of Québec ("C.C.Q.") for the alleged violation of s. 45(1) of the Competition Act. Were s. 36(1) a complete and exclusive code, no such claim under the C.C.Q. would have been possible.

[89] I therefore would reject this ground of appeal. The courts below correctly decided that it is not plain and obvious that Godfrey is precluded from bringing common law and equitable causes of action alongside his s. 36(1)(a) claim. Additionally, a breach of s. 45(1) of the Competition Act can supply the "unlawful" element of the tort of civil conspiracy. I see nothing in my colleague's reasons (at paras. 193-203) that deviates in any respect from my own on this point.

D. Certifying Loss as a Common Issue

[90] Toshiba's final ground of appeal relates to the requirement in s. 4(1)(c) of the Class Proceedings Act that class members' claims raise common issues.

« nouvelle façon [. . .] supérieure » de remédier à un manquement. Les actions fondées sur le par. 36(1) sont visées par le délai de prescription du par. 36(4), alors que le délit de complot civil est assujetti aux lois provinciales en matière de prescription. De plus, le délit de complot civil offre un éventail plus large de réparations que le par. 36(1), telles que les dommages-intérêts punitifs (Watson, par. 57).

[88] Le paragraphe 36(1) n'est pas non plus un code complet et exclusif régissant les actions pour comportement ou complot anticoncurrentiel. C'est ce qui ressort clairement de l'art. 62 de la Loi sur la concurrence (« Droits civils non atteints »), qui prévoit le maintien des droits d'action en common law et en equity : « . . . la présente partie [dont le par. 45(1), à l'égard duquel le par. 36(1) crée un droit d'action] n'a pas pour effet de priver une personne d'un droit d'action au civil ». Cela s'accorde également avec la conclusion de notre Cour dans l'arrêt Infineon (par. 95) qu'un demandeur pouvait choisir de se fonder sur l'art. 1457 du Code civil du Québec (« C.c.Q. ») pour faire valoir ses droits par suite d'une violation du par. 45(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence. Si le par. 36(1) avait constitué un code complet et exclusif, aucun recours n'aurait été possible sous le régime du C.c.Q.

[89] Je rejetterais donc ce moyen d'appel. Les tribunaux d'instance inférieure ont à juste titre décidé qu'il n'est pas évident et manifeste que M. Godfrey ne peut exercer des recours de common law et d'equity en même temps qu'une action fondée sur l'al. 36(1)a). J'ajouterai qu'une violation du par. 45(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence peut fournir l'élément d'« illégalité » du délit de complot civil. Je ne vois rien dans les motifs de ma collègue (par. 193-203) qui s'écarte d'une façon ou d'une autre de mon opinion sur ce point.

D. Autorisation de la question de la perte en tant que question commune

[90] Le dernier moyen d'appel avancé par Toshiba se rapporte à l'exigence imposée par l'al. 4(1)c) de la Class Proceedings Act que les demandes des membres du groupe soulèvent des questions communes.

[91] Godfrey sought to certify several loss-related questions as common issues, principally whether the class members suffered economic loss (Sup. Ct. reasons, at para. 143). These questions were stated broadly enough that they could be taken as asking whether all class members suffered economic loss or whether any class members suffered economic loss. And, because they could be taken in two different ways they might, following the common issues trial, be answered in different ways.

[92] The certification judge certified the common issues relating to loss on the basis that the standard outlined in Microsoft requires that a plaintiff's expert methodology need only establish loss at the indirect-purchaser level (Sup. Ct. reasons, at paras. 167 and 179). The questions, therefore, of whether any class members suffered loss and of whether all class members suffered loss, fulfill the requirements of a common question. Toshiba says that he erred, and argues that Microsoft requires, for loss to be certified as a common issue, that a plaintiff's expert's methodology be capable either of showing loss to each and every class member, or of distinguishing between those class members who suffered loss from those who did not (A.F. (Toshiba), at para. 63). Dr. Reutter's methodology, Toshiba says, does not meet this standard (A.F. (Toshiba), at para. 76).

[93] Godfrey responds that the courts below correctly held that Microsoft requires, as a condition of certifying loss as a common issue, only a methodology capable of establishing that overcharges were passed on to the indirect-purchaser level (R.F. (Toshiba Appeal), at para. 93). This standard is consistent with the principles underlying the commonality requirement, since a single answer to whether loss reached the indirect-purchaser level significantly advances the litigation. Dr. Reutter's methodology meets this standard (R.F. (Toshiba Appeal), at para. 94).

[91] M. Godfrey a demandé qu'un certain nombre de questions relatives à la perte soient autorisées en tant que questions communes, principalement celle de savoir si les membres du groupe avaient subi une perte économique (motifs de la C.S., par. 143). Ces questions sont formulées de façon suffisamment large pour qu'elles puissent être interprétées comme demandant si tous les membres du groupe ont subi une perte économique ou si l'un d'entre eux a subi une perte économique. Parce que ces questions peuvent être interprétées de deux façons différentes, elles pourraient donc, à la suite de l'audition des questions communes, appeler des réponses différentes.

[92] Le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a autorisé les questions communes liées à la perte au motif que, selon le critère établi dans l'arrêt Microsoft, la méthode proposée par l'expert d'un demandeur doit seulement permettre d'établir la perte subie par l'acheteur indirect (motifs de la C.S., par. 167 et 179). Les questions de savoir si un des membres du groupe a subi une perte et si tous les membres du groupe en ont subi une remplissent les conditions d'une question commune. Toshiba affirme qu'il s'agit là d'une erreur et que selon l'arrêt Microsoft, pour que la question de la perte puisse être autorisée en tant que question commune, la méthode proposée par l'expert d'un demandeur doit permettre soit d'établir la perte subie par chacun des membres du groupe, soit de faire la distinction entre les membres du groupe qui ont subi une perte et ceux qui n'en ont pas subi (m.a. (Toshiba), par. 63). La méthode proposée par M. Reutter, affirme Toshiba, ne respecte pas ce critère (m.a. (Toshiba), par. 76).

[93] M. Godfrey répond que les juridictions inférieures ont conclu à bon droit que l'arrêt Microsoft assujettit l'autorisation d'une question de perte en tant que question commune à la condition que la méthode proposée permette d'établir que la majoration a été refilée à l'acheteur indirect (m.i. (pourvoi de Toshiba), par. 93). Ce critère respecte les principes qui sous-tendent l'exigence du caractère commun, puisque la moindre réponse à la question de savoir si la perte a été refilée à l'acheteur indirect fait avancer substantiellement l'instance. La méthode proposée par M. Reutter satisfait à ce critère (m.i. (pourvoi de Toshiba), par. 94).

[94] The appropriate standard for certifying loss as a common issue at the certification stage is a question of law, to be reviewed on appeal for correctness. If I conclude that the certification judge identified the correct standard, then the certification judge's decision to certify the issues as common may not be disturbed absent a palpable and overriding error.

(1) Dr. Reutter's Methodology

[95] Application of the Microsoft standard here requires some review of Dr. Reutter's report. In that report, he drew two conclusions:

(1) . . . all members of the proposed Class would have been impacted by the actions of defendants as alleged in the Amended Notice of Civil Claim, and

(2) . . . there are accepted methods available to estimate any overcharge and aggregate damages that resulted from the alleged wrongdoing using evidence common to the proposed Class.

(A.R., vol. III, at p. 119)

[96] These conclusions were based on the presence of four economic factors during the period of the alleged conspiracy that suggest that the ODD industry was vulnerable to collusive conduct (A.R., vol. III, at pp. 122-23 and 136). These factors are:

(1) [ODDs] are commodity-like and manufactured to conform to industry standards,

(2) during the proposed Class period [the] defendants accounted for a majority of all [ODDs] manufactured worldwide,

(3) there are no economic substitutes for [ODDs], and;

(4) the manufacture of [ODDs] exhibits barriers to entry.

(A.R., vol. III, at pp. 119-20)

[94] La norme qu'il convient d'appliquer pour autoriser la question de la perte en tant que question commune au stade de l'autorisation est une question de droit qui doit être contrôlée en appel suivant la norme de la décision correcte. Si je conclus que le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a identifié la bonne norme, la décision du juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation ne peut être modifiée en l'absence d'une erreur manifeste et dominante.

(1) Méthode proposée par M. Reutter

[95] L'application du critère de l'arrêt Microsoft à la présente affaire nous impose d'examiner le rapport de M. Reutter. Dans ce rapport, M. Reutter tire deux conclusions :

[TRADUCTION]

(1) . . . tous les membres du groupe projeté auraient été touchés par les actes des défenderesses, ainsi qu'il est allégué dans l'Avis de poursuite civile modifié.

(2) . . . des méthodes acceptables permettent d'estimer la valeur de toute majoration et de tout préjudice global qui ont découlé des actes fautifs reprochés, et ce, au moyen de la preuve commune du groupe projeté.

(d.a., vol. III, p. 119)

[96] Ces conclusions reposaient sur la présence, durant la période du complot allégué, de quatre facteurs économiques tendant à indiquer que l'industrie des LDO était vulnérable aux comportements collusoires (d.a., vol. III, p. 122-123 et 136). Voici ces facteurs :

[TRADUCTION]

(1) Les [LDO] s'apparentent à des produits de base et sont fabriqués selon les normes de l'industrie,

(2) durant la période visée par le recours collectif projeté, les défenderesses fabriquaient la majorité des [LDO] à l'échelle mondiale,

(3) il n'existe aucun substitut économique aux LDO, et

(4) la fabrication de LDO se heurte à des barrières à l'entrée.

(d.a., vol. III, p. 119-120)

Because of the presence of these four factors, and the laws of supply and demand, Dr. Reutter concluded that "any conspiratorial overcharge would have been absorbed in part and passed-through in part at each level of the distribution chain, thus impacting all members of the proposed Class" (A.R., vol. III, at pp. 120 and 148).

[97] In order to estimate overcharges and aggregate damages arising from the alleged price-fixing, Dr. Reutter developed a methodology to estimate the "but-for" price of the products subject to the anticompetitive conduct (A.R., vol. III, at p. 150). This involves use of mainstream and accepted economic methodologies based on multiple regression (Sup. Ct. reasons, at para. 158). In particular, it entails three steps:

> First, for the matter at hand, an economic model describing the interaction of the supply of and demand for [ODDs] must be developed. Second, based on the economic model, data will need to be collected from various sources, including defendants (when available), as well as public and third party vendors. Third, standard statistical and econometric techniques are used to determine the extent to which the alleged conspiracy resulted in supra-competitive prices for [ODDs].
>
> (A.R., vol. III, at p. 150)

[98] In order to quantify the aggregate damages suffered by the proposed class, Dr. Reutter proposes to quantify the damages suffered by direct and indirect purchasers in the proposed class, which quantification can occur on a class-wide basis, using accepted economic and statistical methods (Sup. Ct. reasons, at para. 159). Overcharge, once estimated, can then be allocated among the class members (A.R., vol. III, at p. 167). Both aggregate damages and overcharge can be estimated using defendant transaction data, supplemented with data collected from public and private sources (A.R., vol. III, at p. 120).

À cause de la présence de ces quatre facteurs, ainsi que des lois de l'offre et de la demande, M. Reutter a conclu que [TRADUCTION] « toute majoration découlant d'une collusion aurait été absorbée en partie et refilée en partie à chacun des niveaux de la chaîne de distribution, de sorte que tous les membres du groupe projeté ont été touchés » (d.a., vol. III, p. 120 et 148).

[97] Afin d'estimer la valeur de la majoration et du préjudice global ayant découlé de la fixation des prix alléguée, M. Reutter a conçu une méthode permettant d'évaluer le prix des produits en cause en l'absence de tout comportement anticoncurrentiel (d.a., vol. III, p. 150). Il faut pour cela recourir aux méthodes économiques courantes et reconnues fondées sur la régression multiple (motifs de la C.S., par. 158). La méthode comporte, plus précisément, trois étapes :

> [TRADUCTION] Premièrement, s'agissant de l'affaire qui nous occupe, il faut élaborer un modèle économique qui décrit l'interaction entre l'offre et la demande de [LDO]. Deuxièmement, à partir de ce modèle économique, des données devront être recueillies auprès de diverses sources, notamment des défenderesses (si de telles données sont disponibles), ainsi que du public et des vendeurs autres que les défenderesses. Troisièmement, grâce à des techniques normalisées d'analyse statistique et économétrique, il faudra déterminer la mesure dans laquelle le complot allégué a mené à des prix supraconcurrentiels pour les [LDO].
>
> (d.a., vol. III, p. 150)

[98] Afin de quantifier le préjudice global subi par le groupe proposé, M. Reutter propose de quantifier les dommages subis par les acheteurs directs et les acheteurs indirects du groupe proposé, ce qui peut se faire à l'échelle du groupe au moyen de méthodes reconnues d'analyse économique et statistique (motifs de la C.S., par. 159). Une fois estimée, la majoration peut être répartie entre les membres du groupe (d.a., vol. III, p. 167). Le préjudice global et la majoration peuvent être estimés à l'aide des données relatives aux opérations commerciales des défenderesses, ainsi que de renseignements recueillis auprès du public et de sources privées (d.a., vol. III, p. 120).

[99] The question of whether a plaintiff's methodology must show loss at the indirect purchaser level or loss to each and every class member appears to be moot, since Dr. Reutter opines that all class members were impacted by Toshiba's anti-competitive behaviour; his methodology therefore satisfies either standard. Toshiba, however, points to its cross-examination of Dr. Reutter at the certification hearing as obtaining the concession that his methodology cannot demonstrate that all class members suffered a loss (A.F. (Toshiba), at paras. 86-87). At the hearing before this Court, counsel for Godfrey argued that Toshiba's counsel mischaracterized what emerged from that cross-examination (transcript, at p. 59). Because of this dispute, it is important to examine what actually occurred.

[100] After confirming that Dr. Reutter would use an average selling price across the ODD market to estimate overcharge, the following exchange took place:

399 Q. And implicit in the average is the fact that some class members may not have suffered any loss, but they would be compensated by the amount of the average overcharge in relation to the purchase that they made?

A. It's an empirical question and I don't want to sound flippant, but it depends. There may be some -- there may be some small subset or subset, I don't want to put an adjective in front of it. There may be some subset that were not impacted. I don't, from an economic standpoint, understand how that would be if there was, in fact, a conspiracy that fixed the price at the upstream and then that was, in fact, passed through.

. . .

403 Q. . . . But if you conclude that some members were not impacted once you do the analysis, then they would be compensated even though they suffered no loss?

[99] La question de savoir si la méthode proposée par un demandeur doit démontrer que l'acheteur indirect a subi une perte ou bien que chaque membre du groupe a subi une perte semble être devenue théorique, puisque M. Reutter s'est également dit d'avis que tous les membres du groupe ont été touchés par le comportement anticoncurrentiel de Toshiba; la méthode qu'il propose satisfait donc aux deux critères. Toshiba signale toutefois que, lorsqu'elle a contre-interrogé M. Reutter lors de l'audition de la requête en autorisation, celui-ci aurait admis que sa méthode ne permet pas d'établir que tous les membres du groupe ont subi une perte (m.a. (Toshiba), par. 86-87). Devant nous, l'avocat de M. Godfrey a fait valoir que l'avocat de Toshiba s'était mépris sur ce qui s'est dégagé de ce contre-interrogatoire (transcription, p. 59). Vu ce différend, il importe d'examiner ce qui s'est vraiment produit.

[100] Après que M. Reutter eut confirmé qu'il utiliserait le prix de vente moyen des LDO dans l'ensemble du marché afin d'estimer la valeur de la majoration, l'échange suivant a eu lieu :

[TRADUCTION]

399 Q. Et il ressort implicitement de la moyenne que certains membres du groupe pourraient n'avoir subi aucune perte, mais qu'ils seraient indemnisés du montant de la majoration moyenne par rapport à l'achat qu'ils ont fait?

R. C'est là une question empirique et, sans vouloir paraître facétieux, je dirais que ça dépend. Il se pourrait que -- il se pourrait que quelques petits sous-groupes ou des sous-groupes, je ne veux pas les qualifier. Il se pourrait que certains sous-groupes n'aient pas été touchés. D'un point de vue économique, je ne comprends pas comment cela pourrait arriver si, dans les faits, il y a eu complot pour fixer le prix en amont et puis si ce prix a été transféré en aval.

. . .

403 Q. . . . Mais si, après analyse, vous concluez que certains membres n'ont pas été touchés, ils seraient alors indemnisés même s'ils n'ont subi aucune perte?

A. Again, it depends on how finely or where we want to draw the line of what we're analyzing or what we're measuring.

. . .

A. Someone could -- the average is an average and if you want to throw a zero in there, as Dr. Levinsohn does, and say that there could be zero damages, I can't deny that, you know, if you average zero with some other numbers you get something other than zero by the definition of mathematics.

. . .

407 Q. . . . Does the methodology which produces an average, is that average overcharge then applied to all class members irrespective of whether the average reflects the overage that they, in fact, incurred?

A. Yes.

408 Q. All right. And is there anything in the methodology that you are proposing that allows one to determine who those people are that suffered more or less? They're simply compensated on average?

. . .

410 . . .

A. In identifying him, no. [Emphasis added.]

(A.R., vol. V, at pp. 216-19)

Dr. Reutter went on to explain that his methodology is capable of creating subgroups within the class. For example, if the evidence after discovery suggests that Toshiba stopped price-fixing for a few months and then resumed again, the class members who purchased ODDs during that time would be excluded from the model (A.R., vol. V, at pp. 220-21).

[101] It is not at all apparent that this exchange shows Dr. Reutter resiling from his opinion that all

R. Encore là, ça dépend du soin avec lequel nous voulons tracer la ligne ou encore de l'endroit où nous voulons la tracer pour ce qui est de ce que nous analysons ou de ce que nous mesurons.

. . .

R. Quelqu'un pourrait -- la moyenne est une moyenne et si vous voulez y mettre un zéro, comme le fait M. Levinsohn, et dire qu'il se pourrait qu'il n'y ait aucun préjudice, je ne peux pas nier que, vous savez, si vous faites la moyenne entre zéro et certains autres chiffres, vous obtenez autre chose que zéro, c'est ce que sont les mathématiques.

. . .

407 Q. . . . Selon la méthode utilisée pour faire une moyenne, est-ce que la majoration moyenne s'applique à tous les membres du groupe peu importe si cette moyenne reflète l'excédent qu'on leur a, en fait, refilé?

R. Oui.

408 Q. Très bien. Et y a-t-il quelque chose dans la méthode que vous proposez qui permet de savoir qui sont ceux pour qui le préjudice est plus grand ou moins grand? Ils sont simplement indemnisés selon la moyenne?

. . .

410 . . .

R. De les identifier, non. [Je souligne.]

(d.a., vol. V, p. 216-219)

M. Reutter a ensuite expliqué que sa méthode permettait de créer des sous-groupes au sein du groupe. Par exemple, si après l'interrogatoire, la preuve démontre que Toshiba a cessé de fixer les prix pour ensuite recommencer à le faire quelques mois plus tard, les membres du groupe qui auraient acheté un LDO au cours de cette période seraient exclus du modèle (d.a., vol. V, p. 220-221).

[101] Il n'est absolument pas évident que cet échange démontre que M. Reutter est revenu sur class members would be impacted. On the contrary, he stated that he did not understand, from an economic standpoint, how it would be possible for some members of the class not to have suffered a loss if there was a conspiracy and the fixed price was passed through. Dr. Reutter's methodology therefore satisfies both the standards argued for by Toshiba and Godfrey.

[102] In any event, even were Dr. Reutter's methodology incapable of showing loss to every class member, as I explain below, it is not necessary, in order to support certifying loss as a common question, that a plaintiff's expert's methodology establish that each and every class member suffered a loss. Nor is it necessary that Dr. Reutter's methodology be able to identify those class members who suffered no loss so as to distinguish them from those who did. Rather, in order for loss-related questions to be certified as common issues, a plaintiff's expert's methodology need only be sufficiently credible or plausible to establish loss reached the requisite purchaser level. This leaves the only question being whether the courts below were correct in finding that Dr. Reutter's proposed methodology satisfies that required standard of commonality (C.A. reasons, at paras. 125 and 149). I see no reason to interfere with the certification judge's determination that Dr. Reutter's methodology satisfies this standard.

(2) What Is the Standard Required to Certify Loss as a Common Issue?

[103] The Class Proceedings Act provides that in order for an issue to be common, the issue need not "predominate over issues affecting only individual members" (s. 4(1)(c)). Section 1 of the Class Proceedings Act defines "common issues" as meaning:

(a) common but not necessarily identical issues of fact, or son opinion que tous les membres du groupe avaient été touchés. Au contraire, il a dit qu'il ne comprenait pas, d'un point de vue économique, comment il serait possible que certains membres du groupe n'aient subi aucune perte alors qu'il y avait eu complot et que le prix établi leur avait été transféré. La méthode de M. Reutter satisfait donc aux normes proposées par Toshiba et par M. Godfrey.

[102] Quoi qu'il en soit, même si la méthode de M. Reutter ne permettait de démontrer que chaque membre du groupe a subi une perte, comme je l'expliquerai plus loin, il n'est pas nécessaire, pour justifier l'autorisation de la question de la perte en tant que question commune, que la méthode proposée par un expert du demandeur établisse que chaque membre du groupe a subi une perte. Il n'est pas non plus nécessaire que la méthode de M. Reutter permette d'identifier les membres du groupe qui n'ont subi aucune perte de manière à les distinguer de ceux qui en ont subi une. Pour que les questions relatives à la perte soient autorisées en tant que questions communes, la méthode de l'expert du demandeur n'a qu'à être suffisamment fiable ou acceptable pour établir que l'acheteur du niveau requis a subi une perte. Il reste seulement à déterminer si les juridictions inférieures ont eu raison de conclure que la méthode proposée par M. Reutter satisfait à la norme de communauté requise (motifs de la C.A., par. 125 et 149). Je ne vois aucune raison de modifier la décision du juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation portant que la méthode de M. Reutter satisfait à cette norme.

(2) Quelle est la norme applicable à l'autorisation d'une question liée à la perte en tant que question commune?

[103] La Class Proceedings Act dispose que, pour qu'une question soit commune, elle n'a pas à [TRADUCTION] « l'emporter sur les questions qui touchent uniquement les membres individuels » (al. 4(1)(c)). Selon l'art. 1 de la Class Proceedings Act, « question commune » (« common issues ») s'entend, selon le cas :

[TRADUCTION]

(a) d'une question de fait commune, mais pas nécessairement identique;

(b) common but not necessarily identical issues of law that arise from common but not necessarily identical facts

[104] In Microsoft, at para. 108, this Court reaffirmed the principles of "common issues" for the purpose of certification, as they were explained in Western Canadian Shopping Centres Inc. v. Dutton, 2001 SCC 46, [2001] 2 S.C.R. 534:

In [Dutton] this Court addressed the commonality question, stating that "[t]he underlying question is whether allowing the suit to proceed as a [class proceeding] will avoid duplication of fact-finding or legal analysis" (para. 39). I list the balance of McLachlin C.J.'s instructions, found at paras. 39-40 of that decision:

(1) The commonality question should be approached purposively.

(2) An issue will be "common" only where its resolution is necessary to the resolution of each class member's claim.

(3) It is not essential that the class members be identically situated vis-à-vis the opposing party.

(4) It [is] not necessary that common issues predominate over non-common issues. However, the class members' claims must share a substantial common ingredient to justify a class [proceeding]. The court will examine the significance of the common issues in relation to individual issues.

(5) Success for one class member must mean success for all. All members of the class must benefit from the successful prosecution of the action, although not necessarily to the same extent.

[105] In Vivendi Canada Inc. v. Dell'Aniello, 2014 SCC 1, [2014] 1 S.C.R. 3, this Court clarified that the "common success" requirement in Dutton should be applied flexibly. "Common success" denotes not that success for one class member must mean success for all, but rather that success for one class member must not mean failure for another (para. 45). A question is

(b) d'une question de droit commune, mais pas nécessairement identique, qui découle de faits qui sont communs, mais pas nécessairement identiques;

[104] Au paragraphe 108 de l'arrêt Microsoft, la Cour a rappelé les principes relatifs à la « question commune » aux fins d'autorisation qu'elle avait expliqués dans Western Canadian Shopping Centres Inc. c. Dutton, 2001 CSC 46, [2001] 2 R.C.S. 534 :

Dans l'arrêt [Dutton] notre Cour aborde la notion de communauté et conclut que « [l]a question sous-jacente est de savoir si le fait d'autoriser le recours collectif permettra d'éviter la répétition dans l'appréciation des faits ou l'analyse juridique » (par. 39). J'énumère les autres paramètres établis par la juge en chef McLachlin et qui figurent aux par. 39-40 de l'arrêt :

(1) Il faut aborder le sujet de la communauté en fonction de l'objet.

(2) Une question n'est « commune » que lorsque son règlement est nécessaire au règlement des demandes de chacun des membres du groupe.

(3) Il n'est pas essentiel que les membres du groupe soient tous dans la même situation par rapport à la partie adverse.

(4) Il n'est pas nécessaire que les questions communes l'emportent sur les questions non communes. Les demandes des membres du groupe doivent toutefois partager un élément commun important afin de justifier le recours collectif. Le tribunal évalue l'importance des questions communes par rapport aux questions individuelles.

(5) Le succès d'un membre du groupe emporte nécessairement celui de tous. Tous les membres du groupe doivent profiter du dénouement favorable de l'action, mais pas nécessairement dans la même proportion.

[105] Dans l'arrêt Vivendi Canada Inc. c. Dell'Aniello, 2014 CSC 1, [2014] 1 R.C.S. 3, la Cour a précisé que le critère du « succès commun » dégagé dans Dutton devait être appliqué avec flexibilité. Le « succès commun » suppose non pas que le succès d'un membre du groupe entraîne celui de tous les membres du groupe, mais plutôt que le succès d'un membre du groupe considered "common", then, "if it can serve to advance the resolution of every class member's claim", even if the answer to the question, while positive, will vary among those members (para. 46).

[106] In Microsoft, the representative plaintiff sought to certify a class proceeding wherein the proposed class members consisted of the end consumers of products whose prices were allegedly fixed ("indirect purchasers"). After concluding that indirect purchasers have a cause of action for price-fixing, the Court considered the standard of expert methodology required to certify loss-related questions as common issues for indirect purchaser class proceedings. The key passage from the Court's reasons states:

> One area in which difficulty is encountered in indirect purchaser actions is in assessing the commonality of the harm or loss-related issues. In order to determine if the loss-related issues meet the "some basis in fact" standard, some assurance is required that the questions are capable of resolution on a common basis. In indirect purchaser actions, plaintiffs generally seek to satisfy this requirement through the use of expert evidence in the form of economic models and methodologies.
>
> The role of the expert methodology is to establish that the overcharge was passed on to the indirect purchasers, making the issue common to the class as a whole (see Chadha [v. Bayer Inc. (2003), 63 O.R. (3d) 22], at para. 31). The requirement at the certification stage is not that the methodology quantify the damages in question; rather, the critical element that the methodology must establish is the ability to prove "common impact", as described in the U.S. antitrust case of In Re: Linerboard Antitrust Litigation, 305 F.3d 145 (3rd Cir. 2002). That is, plaintiffs must demonstrate that "sufficient proof [is] available, for use at trial, to prove antitrust impact common to all the members of the class" (ibid., at p. 155). It is not necessary at the certification stage that the methodology establish the actual loss to the class, as long as the plaintiff has demonstrated that there is a methodology capable of doing so. In indirect purchaser actions, this means that the methodology must be able to establish that the overcharges ne doit pas provoquer l'échec d'un autre membre (par. 45). Une question sera considérée comme « commune », donc, « si elle permet de faire progresser le règlement de la réclamation de chacun des membres du groupe », même si la réponse qu'on lui donne, bien que favorable, peut différer d'un membre à l'autre du groupe (par. 46).

[106] Dans l'arrêt Microsoft, le représentant des demandeurs a demandé l'autorisation d'un recours collectif pour lequel le groupe proposé était composé des consommateurs finaux des produits dont le prix aurait été fixé (« acheteurs indirects »). Après avoir conclu que les acheteurs indirects avaient une cause d'action en raison de la fixation des prix, la Cour s'est penchée sur la norme applicable pour déterminer si la méthode d'expert permet d'autoriser les questions liées à la perte en tant que questions communes aux acheteurs indirects d'un recours collectif. Voici le passage clé des motifs de la Cour :

> L'une des difficultés que pose le recours d'acheteurs indirects a trait à l'appréciation du caractère commun des questions liées au préjudice ou à la perte. Pour que ces questions puissent satisfaire à la norme d'« un certain fondement factuel », il doit être assez certain qu'elles peuvent faire l'objet d'un règlement commun. Dans le cadre d'actions intentées par des acheteurs indirects, les demandeurs tentent généralement de satisfaire à cette exigence en offrant une preuve d'expert qui revêt la forme de modèles et de méthodes économiques.
>
> La méthode proposée par l'expert vise à établir que la majoration a été transférée aux acheteurs indirects, ce qui rend la question commune au groupe dans son ensemble (voir Chadha [c. Bayer Inc. (2003), 63 O.R. (3d) 22], par. 31). À l'étape de [l'autorisation], la méthode n'a pas à déterminer le montant des dommages-intérêts, mais doit plutôt — et c'est là l'élément crucial — être susceptible de prouver « les conséquences communes », comme le conclut un tribunal américain dans une affaire antitrust, In Re : Linerboard Antitrust Litigation, 305 F.3d 145 (3rd Cir. 2002). Les demandeurs doivent démontrer qu'une [TRADUCTION] « preuve permettra d'établir, lors du procès, les conséquences antitrust qui sont communes à tous les membres du groupe » (ibid., p. 155). À l'étape de [l'autorisation], point n'est besoin que la méthode établisse la perte réellement subie par le groupe dans la mesure où le demandeur démontre qu'une méthode permet de le faire. Dans le cadre d'actions d'acheteurs indirects, have been passed on to the indirect-purchaser level in the distribution chain.

The most contentious question involving the use of expert evidence is how strong the evidence must be at the certification stage to satisfy the court that there is a method by which impact can be proved on a class-wide basis. The B.C.C.A. in Infineon [Technologies AG v. Option Consommateurs, 2013 SCC 29, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 600] called for the plaintiff to show "only a credible or plausible methodology" and held that "[i]t was common ground that statistical regression analysis is in theory capable of providing reasonable estimates of gain or aggregate harm and the extent of pass-through in price-fixing cases" (para. 68). . . .

. . .

In my view, the expert methodology must be sufficiently credible or plausible to establish some basis in fact for the commonality requirement. This means that the methodology must offer a realistic prospect of establishing loss on a class-wide basis so that, if the overcharge is eventually established at the trial of the common issues, there is a means by which to demonstrate that it is common to the class (i.e. that passing on has occurred). The methodology cannot be purely theoretical or hypothetical, but must be grounded in the facts of the particular case in question. There must be some evidence of the availability of the data to which the methodology is to be applied. [Emphasis added; paras. 114-18.]

[107] While there may be some room for debate arising from the references to "class-wide basis" in the above passages, in my view, the Court was employing the term "class-wide basis" synonymously with "indirect-purchaser level". Microsoft, therefore, directs that, for a court to certify loss-related questions as common issues in a price-fixing class proceeding, it must be satisfied that the plaintiff has shown a plausible methodology to establish that loss reached one or more purchasers — that is, claimants at the "purchaser level". For indirect purchasers, this would involve demonstrating that the direct purchasers passed on the overcharge.

la méthode doit donc pouvoir établir que la majoration a été transférée à l'acheteur indirect situé en aval dans la chaîne de distribution.

La question la plus vivement débattue au chapitre de l'utilisation de la preuve d'expert est celle de savoir à quel point la preuve doit être concluante à l'étape de [l'autorisation] pour convaincre le tribunal qu'une méthode permet d'établir les conséquences communes à l'échelle du groupe. Dans l'affaire Infineon [Technologies AG c. Option Consommateurs, 2013 CSC 29, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 600], la C.A.C.-B. a invité la demanderesse à ne présenter [TRADUCTION] « qu'une méthode valable ou acceptable » pour ensuite conclure qu'« [i]l est bien établi que l'analyse de régression statistique offre en principe une estimation raisonnable du bénéfice ou du préjudice global et de l'étendue du transfert de la perte lorsqu'il y a eu fixation des prix » (par. 68). . .

. . .

À mon avis, la méthode d'expert doit être suffisamment valable ou acceptable pour établir un certain fondement factuel aux fins du respect de l'exigence d'une question commune. Elle doit donc offrir une possibilité réaliste d'établir la perte à l'échelle du groupe, de sorte que, si la majoration est établie à l'issue de l'examen des questions communes au procès, un moyen permette de démontrer qu'elle est commune aux membres du groupe (c.-à-d. que le transfert a eu lieu). Or, il ne peut s'agir d'une méthode purement théorique ou hypothétique; elle doit reposer sur les faits de l'affaire. L'existence des données auxquelles la méthode est censée s'appliquer doit être étayée par quelque preuve. [Je souligne; par. 114-118.]

[107] Bien que la mention de la « perte à l'échelle du groupe » dans les passages précités puisse prêter à controverse, j'estime que la Cour a utilisé cette expression dans le même sens que « [niveau des] acheteurs indirects ». En conséquence, l'arrêt Microsoft prescrit que, pour autoriser les questions liées à la perte en tant que questions communes dans un recours collectif pour fixation du prix, le tribunal doit être convaincu que le demandeur a présenté une méthode valable pour établir que la perte a été transférée à un ou à plusieurs acheteurs, c'est-à-dire des demandeurs du « [niveau de] l'acheteur ». Dans le cas des acheteurs indirects, cela implique de démontrer que les acheteurs directs ont refilé la majoration.

[108] Additionally, showing that loss reached the indirect purchaser level satisfies the criteria for certifying a common issue, since it will significantly advance the litigation, is a prerequisite to imposing liability upon Toshiba and will result in "common success" as explained in Vivendi, given that success for one class member will not result in failure for another. Showing loss reached the requisite purchaser level will advance the claims of all the purchasers at that level.

[109] When thinking about whether a proposed common question would "advance the litigation", it is the perspective of the litigation, not the plaintiff, that matters. A common issues trial has the potential to either determine liability or terminate the litigation (W. K. Winkler et al., The Law of Class Actions in Canada (2014), at p. 108). Either scenario "advances" the litigation toward resolution. Here, if it cannot be shown that loss was suffered by any purchasers at the indirect purchaser level, then none of the indirect purchasers have a cause of action and the action with respect to all the indirect purchasers would fail. I endorse, in this regard, this statement of the Ontario Superior Court in Shah (Ont. S.C.J.) (at para. 69):

> Thus, for the purposes of certification, the methodology about the existence of loss need only be shown to be a plausible one that the passing-on reached the indirect purchaser level of the distribution channel and that there might be individual issues about whether any particular class member experienced illegal price-fixing. If the plaintiff's expert's methodology failed in proof at trial, then the class members' claim would fail across the indirect class members' class because each and every one of them would have failed to prove a constituent element of their cause of action; i.e., that the price-fixing penetrated their place or "level" of the distribution channel, and the Defendants would secure a discharge of liability against all the class members. Conversely, if the methodology proved sound to show that overcharges reached the indirect purchaser place in the distribution channel, then there might have to be individual issues trials to determine each class member's entitlement.

[108] Qui plus est, démontrer que la perte a été transférée aux acheteurs indirects satisfait au critère d'autorisation d'une question commune, puisqu'une telle démonstration permettra de faire progresser substantiellement l'instance, qu'elle est essentielle pour imposer une responsabilité à Toshiba et qu'elle débouche sur un « succès commun » tel que l'explique l'arrêt Vivendi, car le succès d'un membre du groupe ne se traduira pas par l'échec d'un autre membre. Démontrer que la perte a été transférée aux acheteurs du niveau requis fera progresser les réclamations de tous les acheteurs de ce niveau.

[109] Lorsqu'on pense à la question de savoir si une question commune proposée ferait « avancer l'instance », c'est le point de vue de l'instance et non celui du demandeur qui compte. L'audition des questions communes peut soit déterminer la responsabilité soit mettre fin au litige (W. K. Winkler et autres, The Law of Class Actions in Canada (2014), p. 108). Les deux scénarios « contribuent » au règlement du litige. En l'espèce, si l'on ne peut démontrer que la perte a été subie par quelque acheteur indirect que ce soit, aucun acheteur indirect n'a une cause d'action et l'action à l'égard de tous les acheteurs indirects échouerait. Je souscris à cet égard à l'affirmation qui suit de la Cour supérieure de l'Ontario dans Shah (C.S.J. Ont.) (par. 69) :

> [TRADUCTION] Ainsi, aux fins d'autorisation, il faut seulement démontrer que la méthode permettant d'établir l'existence d'une perte est une méthode acceptable, que la perte a été transférée à l'acheteur indirect situé en aval dans la chaîne de distribution et que des questions individuelles quant à savoir si certains membres ont été touchés par la fixation illégale des prix peuvent être soulevées. Si la méthode d'expert du demandeur ne permet pas d'en faire la preuve au procès, alors la demande du groupe sera rejetée à l'égard de la catégorie des membres indirects parce que chacun d'eux aura échoué à prouver un élément constitutif de sa cause d'action; c.-à-d. que la fixation des prix s'est rendue à eux ou à leur « niveau » dans la chaîne de distribution, et les défenderesses seront déchargées de toute responsabilité à l'égard de l'ensemble des membres du groupe. À l'inverse, si la méthode se révèle valable pour démontrer que la majoration a été transférée à l'acheteur indirect situé en aval de la chaîne de distribution, il pourrait alors être nécessaire de tenir des audiences individuelles pour statuer sur le droit de chaque membre de faire partie du groupe.

(3) Does Dr. Reutter's Methodology Meet the Standard?

[110] The certification judge identified the correct standard to certify commonality of loss as a common issue. As Toshiba acknowledges, the issue of whether the certification judge erred in applying that standard to Dr. Reutter's evidence is "subject to . . . deference from an appellate court" (A.F. (Toshiba), at para. 42). The certification judge's analysis of Dr. Reutter's methodology as supporting certification should not be overturned absent a palpable and overriding error.

[111] I agree with the Court of Appeal that the reasoning of the certification judge reveals no basis for interfering with his common issues determination (C.A. reasons, at para. 163). There is no palpable and overriding error in the certification judge's conclusion that Godfrey showed some basis in fact for finding the loss issues to be common (Sup. Ct. reasons, at para. 180). I would therefore reject this ground of appeal.

(4) Availability of Aggregate Damages

[112] I turn, finally, to Toshiba's final argument, which goes to the availability of the aggregate damages provisions found in Division 2 of the Class Proceedings Act, s. 29(1)(b), which states:

Aggregate awards of monetary relief

29 (1) The court may make an order for an aggregate monetary award in respect of all or any part of a defendant's liability to class members and may give judgment accordingly if

. . .

(3) La méthode proposée par M. Reutter satisfait-elle à la norme?

[110] Le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a arrêté la norme applicable à l'autorisation, en tant que question commune, de la question de la communauté de la perte. Toshiba le reconnaît : la question de savoir si le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation s'est trompé en appliquant cette norme au témoignage de M. Reutter [TRADUCTION] « oblige la cour d'appel à faire preuve de déférence » (m.a. (Toshiba), par. 42). L'analyse de la méthode proposée par M. Reutter sur laquelle repose la décision du juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation ne devrait pas être annulée en l'absence d'erreur manifeste et déterminante.

[111] Je conviens avec la Cour d'appel que le raisonnement du juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation ne révèle aucune raison de modifier la décision qu'il a rendue au sujet des questions communes (motifs de la C.A., par. 163). Il n'y a aucune erreur manifeste et déterminante dans sa conclusion que M. Godfrey a établi un certain fondement factuel permettant de qualifier de communes les questions liées à la perte (motifs de la C.S., par. 180). Je rejetterais donc ce moyen d'appel.

(4) Possibilité d'obtenir des dommages-intérêts globaux

[112] Je passe finalement au dernier argument de Toshiba, qui intéresse la possibilité d'invoquer les dispositions sur les dommages-intérêts globaux qui figurent à l'al. 29(1)(b) de la Class Proceedings Act, lequel prévoit :

[TRADUCTION]

Octroi global d'une réparation pécuniaire

29 (1) Le tribunal peut accorder une réparation pécuniaire pour tout ou partie de la responsabilité du défendeur à l'endroit des membres du groupe et rendre jugement en conséquence si

. . .

(b) no questions of fact or law other than those relating to the assessment of monetary relief remain to be determined in order to establish the amount of the defendant's monetary liability . . .

[113] Because all other issues of fact and law must be decided before the aggregate damages provisions could apply, it is plain that aggregate damages under s. 29(1)(b) are purely remedial, available only after all other common issues have been determined, including liability (see Microsoft, at para. 134). Irrespective, then, of whether aggregate damages are certified as a common issue, it is for the trial judge to determine, following the common issues trial, whether the statutory criteria are met such that the aggregate damages provisions can be applied to award damages (Microsoft, at para. 134; Winkler et al., at p. 121).

[114] Here, the certification judge certified the following common issues related to aggregate damages for the non-umbrella purchasers (para. 143):

(k) Can the amount of damages be determined on an aggregate basis and if so, in what amount?

. . .

(w) Can the amount of restitution be determined on an aggregate basis and if so, in what amount?

As I will explain below, I would not disturb the certification judge's decision to certify these issues as common issues. Again, it is important to remember that the certification of these issues in relation to the non-umbrella purchasers and the lack of certification in relation to the umbrella purchasers neither mandates nor forecloses the possibility of the trial judge awarding aggregate damages following the common issues trial. As this Court said in Microsoft

(b) il ne reste à trancher que des questions de fait ou de droit touchant à la détermination de la réparation pécuniaire afin de quantifier la responsabilité pécuniaire du défendeur . . .

[113] Comme il faut trancher toutes les questions de fait et questions de droit avant que les dispositions sur les dommages-intérêts globaux puissent s'appliquer, il est clair que les dommages-intérêts globaux au sens de l'al. 29(1)(b) ont un objectif purement réparateur et ne peuvent être octroyés qu'après le règlement de toutes les autres questions communes, y compris la responsabilité (voir Microsoft, par. 134). Peu importe, donc, si les dommages-intérêts globaux sont autorisés en tant que question commune, il revient au juge du procès de décider, au terme de l'audition des questions communes, si les critères établis par la loi sont respectés de sorte que les dispositions sur les dommages-intérêts globaux peuvent s'appliquer pour octroyer ceux-ci (Microsoft, par. 134; Winkler et autres, p. 121).

[114] En l'espèce, le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a autorisé les questions communes suivantes liées à l'octroi de dommages-intérêt globaux aux acheteurs qui ne sont pas sous parapluie (par. 143) :

[TRADUCTION]

(k) Le montant des dommages-intérêts peut-il être arrêté globalement et, dans l'affirmative, quel est ce montant?

. . .

(w) Le montant de la restitution peut-il être arrêté globalement et, dans l'affirmative, quel est ce montant?

Comme je vais l'expliquer plus loin, je ne suis pas d'avis de modifier la décision du juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation d'autoriser ces questions en tant que questions communes. Là encore, il importe de se rappeler que l'autorisation de ces questions à l'égard des acheteurs qui ne sont pas sous parapluie et l'absence d'autorisation à l'endroit des acheteurs sous parapluie ne commande ni n'exclut la possibilité que le juge du procès accorde des dommages-intérêts (para. 134): ". . . the failure to propose or certify aggregate damages, or another remedy, as a common issue does not preclude a trial judge from invoking the provisions if considered appropriate once liability is found".

[115] Toshiba has not appealed the certification of these issues as common issues. Rather, it takes issue with the certification judge's statement when discussing certification of the loss-related common issues that "the aggregate damage provisions [. . .] allow for an aggregate award even where some class members have suffered no financial loss" (Sup. Ct. reasons, at para. 169). Toshiba argues that this statement contradicts this Court's direction in Microsoft regarding the purely procedural quality of rights conferred by the Class Proceedings Act (A.F. (Toshiba), at para. 54). More particularly, Toshiba says that, by not confining its liability to class members who are able to show actual loss, the certification judge used the Class Proceedings Act to confer substantive (and not merely procedural) rights so as to grant a remedy to persons who cannot prove a loss. In this way, Toshiba argues that the certification judge treated the indirect and umbrella purchasers as "juridical entities" and eliminated the distinction between proof of harm and aggregate damages (A.F. (Toshiba), at para. 7).

[116] On this point, I agree with Toshiba that the certification judge's statement that the aggregate damages provisions allow for an award of damages for class members that suffered no loss is inconsistent with this Court's jurisprudence. This Court has repeatedly affirmed that the advantages conferred by class proceeding legislation are purely procedural, and that they do not confer substantive rights (see: Hollick, at para. 14; Bisaillon v. Concordia University, 2006 SCC 19, [2006] 1 S.C.R. 666, at para. 17; Microsoft, at para. 131-32; Sun-Rype, at globaux au terme de l'audition des questions communes. Comme l'a mentionné notre Cour au par. 134 de l'arrêt Microsoft : « . . . l'omission de proposer ou d'autoriser à titre de question commune l'opportunité d'accorder des dommages-intérêts globaux ou une autre réparation n'empêche pas le juge de se fonder sur les dispositions s'il l'estime indiqué ».

[115] Toshiba n'a pas porté en appel l'autorisation des questions précitées en tant que questions communes. Elle s'inscrit plutôt en faux contre ce que le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a dit au moment d'analyser l'autorisation des questions communes liées à la perte : [TRADUCTION] « . . . les dispositions relatives aux dommages-intérêts globaux [. . .] permettent d'adjuger ceux-ci même si certains membres du groupe n'ont subi aucune perte financière » (motifs de la C.S., par. 169). Selon Toshiba, cette affirmation contredit l'orientation qu'a donnée notre Cour dans l'arrêt Microsoft au sujet du caractère purement procédural des droits conférés par la Class Proceedings Act (m.a. (Toshiba), par. 54). Plus particulièrement, Toshiba affirme que, en ne restreignant pas la responsabilité aux membres du groupe capables d'établir qu'ils ont subi une véritable perte, le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a utilisé la Class Proceedings Act pour conférer des droits substantifs (et pas simplement procéduraux) de manière à accorder réparation aux personnes qui ne sont pas en mesure de prouver qu'elles ont subi une perte. Toshiba plaide ainsi que le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a traité les acheteurs indirects et sous parapluie comme des [TRADUCTION] « entités juridiques » et a éliminé la distinction entre la preuve du préjudice et les dommages-intérêts globaux (m.a. (Toshiba), par. 7).

[116] Sur ce point, je partage l'avis de Toshiba que l'affirmation du juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation — selon laquelle les dispositions sur les dommages-intérêts globaux permettent d'en adjuger aux membres du groupe qui n'ont subi aucune perte — est incompatible avec la jurisprudence de notre Cour. Cette dernière a maintes fois répété que les avantages offerts par les lois en matière de recours collectifs sont purement procédurales et ne confèrent pas de droit substantiels (voir : Hollick, par. 14; Bisaillon c. Université Concordia, 2006 CSC para. 75). In Microsoft, this Court could not have been clearer that the aggregate damages provisions cannot be used to establish liability:

> With respect, I do not agree with this reasoning. The aggregate damages provisions of the CPA relate to remedy and are procedural. They cannot be used to establish liability (2038724 Ontario Ltd. v. Quizno's Canada Restaurant Corp., 2010 ONCA 466, 100 O.R. (3d) 721, at para. 55). The language of s. 29(1)(b) specifies that no question of fact or law, other than the assessment of damages, should remain to be determined in order for an aggregate monetary award to be made. As I read it, this means that an antecedent finding of liability is required before resorting to the aggregate damages provision of the CPA. This includes, where required by the cause of action such as in a claim under s. 36 of the Competition Act, a finding of proof of loss. I do not see how a statutory provision designed to award damages on an aggregate basis can be said to be used to establish any aspect of liability.

> I agree with Feldman J.A.'s holding in Chadha that aggregate damages provisions are "applicable only once liability has been established, and provid[e] a method to assess the quantum of damages on a global basis, but not the fact of damage" (para. 49). I also agree with Masuhara J. of the B.C.S.C. in Infineon that "liability requires that a pass-through reached the Class Members", and that "[t]hat question requires an answer before the aggregation provisions, which are only a tool to assist in the distribution of damages, can be invoked" (2008 BCSC 575 (CanLII), at para. 176). Furthermore, I agree with the Ontario Court of Appeal in Quizno's, that "[t]he majority clearly recognized that s. 24 [of the Ontario Class Proceedings Act, 1992, S.O. 1992, c. 6] is procedural and cannot be used in proving liability" (para. 55). [Emphasis added; paras. 131-32.]

[117] The foregoing signifies that, where (as here) loss is an element of the cause of action, using the aggregate damages provisions to distribute damages to class members who did not suffer a loss would be

19, [2006] 1 R.C.S. 666, par. 17; Microsoft, par. 131-132; Sun-Rype, par. 75). Dans l'arrêt Microsoft, notre Cour n'aurait pas pu dire plus clairement que les dispositions sur les dommages-intérêts globaux ne peuvent servir à établir la responsabilité :

> Soit dit en tout respect, je n'adhère pas à ce raisonnement. Les dispositions de la CPA sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux ont trait à la réparation, sont de nature procédurale et ne peuvent permettre d'établir la responsabilité (2038724 Ontario Ltd. c. Quizno's Canada Restaurant Corp., 2010 ONCA 466, 100 O.R. (3d) 721, par. 55). Le libellé de l'al. 29(1)(b) veut qu'il ne reste à trancher que des questions de fait ou de droit touchant à la détermination de la réparation pécuniaire pour qu'une réparation pécuniaire globale puisse être accordée. À mon sens, il faut une conclusion préalable de responsabilité avant d'appliquer les dispositions de la CPA sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux, ce qui comprend, lorsque l'exige une cause d'action comme celles prévues à l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence, une conclusion sur la preuve de la perte. Je ne vois pas comment une disposition visant à accorder des dommages-intérêts de manière globale pourrait être le fondement d'une conclusion sur quelque volet de la responsabilité.

> Je souscris à la conclusion de la juge Feldman dans Chadha, à savoir que les dispositions sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux [TRADUCTION] « s'appliquent seulement une fois la responsabilité établie et offrent une méthode d'évaluation globale des dommages-intérêts, mais ne permettent pas d'établir le préjudice » (par. 49). Je conviens également avec le juge Masuhara de la Cour suprême de la Colombie-Britannique qu'[TRADUCTION] « établir la responsabilité exige de prouver que le transfert de la perte a atteint les membres du groupe. Il faut statuer sur ce point avant d'appliquer les dispositions sur l'évaluation globale des dommages-intérêts, lesquelles n'offrent qu'un moyen d'attribuer l'indemnité » (voir Infineon, 2008 BCSC 575 (CanLII), par. 176). Aussi, je partage l'avis de la Cour d'appel de l'Ontario dans Quizno's selon lequel [TRADUCTION] « [l]es juges majoritaires reconnaissent clairement que l'art. 24 [de la Loi de 1992 sur les recours collectifs de l'Ontario, L.O. 1992, ch. 6] est de nature procédurale et ne peut servir d'assise à l'établissement de la responsabilité » (par. 55). [Je souligne; par. 131-132.]

[117] Les passages précités signifient que lorsque la perte est un élément de la cause d'action (comme c'est le cas en l'espèce), le fait de recourir aux dispositions sur les dommages-intérêts globaux pour inconsistent with the purely procedural quality of the advantages conferred by the Class Proceedings Act. It follows that the reliance by the courts below (Sup. Ct. reasons, at para. 169; C.A. reasons, at para. 161) on s. 31(1)(a)(i) of the Class Proceedings Act (which provides that the court may order an aggregate damages award where it would be impractical or inefficient to identify the class members entitled to share in the award) as indicating that the plaintiff need not establish loss to each and every class member was, in my respectful view, mistaken. Section 31(1)(a)(i) is applicable only once liability has been established; otherwise, it would effectively confer substantive rights.

[118] To be clear, I agree that the Class Proceedings Act permits individual members of the class to obtain a remedy where it may be difficult to demonstrate the extent of individual loss. What the jurisprudence of this Court maintains, however, is that, in order for individual class members to participate in the award of damages, the trial judge must be satisfied that each has actually suffered a loss where proof of loss is essential to a finding of liability (as it is for liability under s. 36 of the Competition Act). Therefore, ultimately, to use the aggregate damages provisions, the trial judge must be satisfied, following the common issues trial, either that all class members suffered loss, or that he or she can distinguish those who have not suffered loss from those who have.

[119] At this stage, it therefore remains possible that issues will arise, once it is determined that loss reached the indirect purchaser level, that affect individual class members' claims (Microsoft, at para. 140). In other words, while it was sufficient for the purposes of certifying loss as a common issue for Dr. Reutter's methodology to show merely that loss reached the indirect purchaser level, whether this methodology is sufficient for the purposes of establishing Toshiba's liability to all class members will depend on the findings of accorder ceux-ci aux membres du groupe qui n'ont subi aucune perte serait incompatible avec le caractère purement procédural des avantages conférés par la Class Proceedings Act. Soit dit en tout respect, il s'ensuit que les juridictions inférieures (motifs de la C.S., par. 169; motifs de la C.A., par. 161) ont eu tort de s'appuyer sur le sous-al. 31(1)(a)(i) de la Class Proceedings Act (lequel prévoit que le tribunal peut ordonner l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux lorsqu'il serait irréaliste ou inefficace d'identifier les membres du groupe qui ont droit à une part du montant global des dommages-intérêts adjugés) pour conclure que le demandeur n'a pas à établir que chacun des membres du groupe a subi une perte. Le sous-al. 31(1)(a)(i) ne s'applique qu'une fois la responsabilité établie; autrement, il se trouverait à conférer des droits substantiels.

[118] Pour dissiper toute équivoque, je conviens que la Class Proceedings Act permet aux membres du groupe d'obtenir une réparation dans les cas où il peut être difficile d'établir l'ampleur de la perte individuelle. Toutefois, il ressort de la jurisprudence de la Cour que, pour que les membres du groupe participent à l'octroi des dommages-intérêts, le juge du procès doit être convaincu que chacun d'eux a réellement subi une perte lorsque la preuve de la perte est essentielle à une conclusion de responsabilité (comme c'est le cas de la responsabilité fondée sur l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence). Par conséquent, au bout du compte, pour se prévaloir des dispositions relatives aux dommages-intérêts globaux, le juge du procès doit être convaincu, à l'issue de l'audition des questions communes, que tous les membres du groupe ont subi une perte, ou qu'il peut distinguer ceux qui n'ont pas subi de perte de ceux qui en ont subi une.

[119] À ce stade, il se peut donc toujours que des questions touchant les demandes de membres du groupe se posent, une fois qu'il est établi que la perte a été refilée à l'acheteur indirect (Microsoft, par. 140). Autrement dit, bien qu'il ait été suffisant, aux fins de l'autorisation de la perte en tant que question commune, que la méthode de M. Reutter établisse simplement que la perte a été refilée aux acheteurs indirects, la réponse à la question de savoir si cette méthode suffit pour établir la responsabilité

the trial judge. In this case, Godfrey intends to use Dr. Reutter's methodology to prove that all class members suffered loss. It follows from the foregoing that, if he is successful in doing so, the same methodology can be used to establish both that Toshiba is liable to all class members and that aggregate damages are available to be awarded.

[120] It should be borne in mind that the trial judge, following the common issues trial, might reach any one of numerous possible conclusions on the question of whether the class members suffered loss. For example, the trial judge might accept Dr. Reutter's evidence that all class members suffered a loss, in which case it would be open to the trial judge to use the aggregate damages provisions to award damages to all class members. Alternatively, the trial judge might conclude that no purchasers suffered a loss — for example, if the trial judge does not accept that Dr. Reutter's methodology demonstrates that loss reached the direct and indirect purchaser levels. Were that the case, the action would fail. Or, it might be that the trial judge finds that an identifiable subset of class members did not suffer a loss, in which case the trial judge could exclude those members from participating in the award of damages, and then use the aggregate damages provision in respect of the remaining class members' claims. Finally, the trial judge could accept Toshiba's argument that some class members suffered a loss and some did not, but that it is impossible to determine on the expert's methodology which class members suffered a loss. In such a case, individual issues trials would be required to determine the purchasers to whom Toshiba is liable and who are therefore entitled to share in the award of damages. At the certification stage, no comment can or should be made about the potential conclusions that the trial judge may reach. I outline these possibilities and the availability of aggregate damages merely to provide guidance.

de Toshiba envers tous les membres du groupe dépend des conclusions du juge du procès. En l'espèce, M. Godfrey compte employer la méthode de M. Reutter pour prouver que tous les membres du groupe ont subi une perte. Il s'ensuit de ce qui précède que, s'il parvient à faire cette démonstration, on peut employer la même méthode pour établir à la fois que Toshiba est responsable envers tous les membres du groupe et qu'il est possible d'accorder des dommages-intérêts globaux.

[120] Il convient de garder à l'esprit qu'après l'audition des questions communes, le juge du procès peut tirer l'une ou l'autre de nombreuses conclusions sur la question de savoir si les membres du groupe ont subi une perte. Par exemple, le juge du procès pourrait retenir le témoignage de M. Reutter selon lequel tous les membres du groupe ont subi une perte, auquel cas il serait loisible au juge du procès de recourir aux dispositions sur les dommages-intérêts globaux pour adjuger les dommages-intérêts à tous les membres du groupe. Le juge du procès pourrait aussi conclure qu'aucun acheteur n'a subi de perte — par exemple, s'il n'accepte pas que la méthode de M. Reutter démontre que la perte a été transférée aux acheteurs directs et indirects. Dans un tel cas, l'action échouerait. Peut-être encore que le juge du procès conclura qu'une sous-catégorie identifiable de membres du groupe n'a pas subi de perte, auquel cas il exclura ces membres de l'octroi des dommages-intérêts et recourra ensuite à la disposition sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux à l'égard des demandes de membres restants du groupe. Enfin, le juge du procès pourrait retenir l'argument de Toshiba selon lequel certains membres du groupe ont subi une perte tandis que d'autres n'en ont pas subie, mais conclure qu'il est impossible d'établir avec la méthode de l'expert quels membres du groupe ont subi une perte. Dans un tel cas, des procès portant sur des questions individuelles seraient nécessaires pour identifier les acheteurs envers qui Toshiba est responsable et qui ont donc le droit de prendre part à l'octroi des dommages-intérêts. Au stade de l'autorisation, il n'est pas possible ou indiqué de se prononcer sur les conclusions éventuelles du juge du procès. Je signale ces possibilités et l'ouverture à des dommages-intérêts globaux uniquement en vue de fournir des directives.

[121] But again, to be clear — neither the range of possible findings of the trial judge following the common issues trial, nor the unavailability of aggregate damages for class members that suffered no loss, is relevant to the decision to certify aggregate damages as a common issue. As was the case in Microsoft, "[t]he aggregate damages questions [the certification judge] certified relate solely to whether damages can be determined on an aggregate basis and if so in what amount" (para. 135). The certification judge's decision to certify the questions related to aggregate damages for the non-umbrella purchasers should therefore not be disturbed.

VI. Conclusion

[122] I would dismiss the appeals.

[123] Section 37(1) of the Class Proceedings Act provides that "neither the [British Columbia] Supreme Court nor the Court of Appeal may award costs to any party to an application for certification". The parties appear to take this as precluding this Court from awarding costs at those courts, and seek only their costs at this Court. I would therefore award Godfrey costs in this Court only.

The following are the reasons delivered by [124] CÔTÉ J. (dissenting in part) — These appeals raise a fundamental question: are courts at a stage where the balance struck by Parliament in Canada's competition law should be upset by applying new principles of liability for price-fixing cases, resulting in near-automatic certification of class actions? In doing so, are courts going a bridge too far?

I. Overview

[125] These appeals concern the certification of a proposed class action brought in British Columbia by [121] Mais là encore, soyons clairs : ni l'éventail des conclusions que pourra tirer le juge du procès à l'issue de l'audition des questions communes, ni la possibilité d'accorder des dommages-intérêts globaux aux membres du groupe qui n'ont subi aucune perte, ne sont pertinents pour la décision d'autoriser les dommages-intérêts globaux en tant que question commune. Tout comme dans Microsoft, « [l]es questions [liées aux dommages-intérêts globaux que le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation] certifie consistent seulement à savoir si le montant des dommages-intérêts peut être arrêté globalement et, dans l'affirmative, quel est ce montant » (par. 135). Il ne convient donc pas de modifier la décision du juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation d'autoriser les questions concernant l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux aux acheteurs qui ne sont pas sous parapluie.

VI. Conclusion

[122] Je rejetterais les pourvois.

[123] Le paragraphe 37(1) de la Class Proceedings Act dispose que [TRADUCTION] « ni la Cour suprême [de la Colombie-Britannique] ni la Cour d'appel ne peuvent accorder des dépens à une partie à une demande d'autorisation ». Les parties semblent en avoir conclu que notre Cour ne peut octroyer des dépens devant ces cours et elles n'ont sollicité que leurs dépens devant notre Cour. J'accorderais donc à M. Godfrey ses dépens devant notre Cour seulement.

Version française des motifs rendus par

[124] LA JUGE CÔTÉ (dissidente en partie) — Les présents pourvois soulèvent une question fondamentale : le moment est-il venu pour les tribunaux de rompre l'équilibre établi par le législateur dans les lois canadiennes sur la concurrence en appliquant de nouveaux principes de responsabilité dans des affaires de fixation des prix, de sorte que les recours collectifs seraient presque automatiquement autorisés? Ce faisant, les tribunaux iraient-ils trop loin?

I. Aperçu

[125] Les présents pourvois concernent l'autorisation d'un recours collectif projeté intenté en representative plaintiff Neil Godfrey (the "Plaintiff", respondent in these appeals) against a number of defendants (the "Defendants", appellants in these appeals) that manufacture or supply devices known as optical disc drives ("ODDs"). The Plaintiff alleges that the Defendants conspired to fix the prices of ODDs between January 1, 2004 and January 1, 2010 (the "Class Period"). He relies on five causes of action against the Defendants: a contravention of s. 45 of the Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34 (which is actionable pursuant to s. 36(1) of that statute), the tort of unlawful means conspiracy, the tort of predominant purpose conspiracy, unjust enrichment, and waiver of tort.

[126] The proposed class is essentially comprised of three groups. Direct purchasers are the class members who purchased an ODD or an ODD product manufactured or supplied by a Defendant from that Defendant. Indirect purchasers are the class members who purchased an ODD or an ODD product manufactured or supplied by a Defendant from a non-Defendant. Neil Godfrey is one of those indirect purchasers. Finally, class members who purchased from a non-Defendant an ODD or an ODD product that was not manufactured or supplied by a Defendant are known as "Umbrella Purchasers". The Plaintiff alleges that all of the class members in these three groups have claims against the Defendants in respect of the alleged price-fixing conspiracy.

[127] The Plaintiff's action against most of the Defendants was commenced on September 27, 2010. He brought a separate action against certain additional Defendants — Pioneer Corporation, Pioneer North America, Inc., Pioneer Electronics (USA) Inc., Pioneer High Fidelity Taiwan Co., Ltd. and Pioneer Electronics of Canada Inc. (the "Pioneer Defendants") — on August 16, 2013, roughly three and a half years following the end of the Class Period.

Colombie-Britannique par le représentant des demandeurs, Neil Godfrey (le « demandeur », l'intimé dans les présents pourvois), contre plusieurs défenderesses (les « défenderesses », les appelantes dans les présents pourvois) qui fabriquent ou fournissent des dispositifs appelés lecteurs de disques optiques (« LDO »). Le demandeur allègue que les défenderesses ont comploté dans le but de fixer les prix des LDO entre le 1er janvier 2004 et le 1er janvier 2010 (la « période visée par le recours collectif »). Il s'appuie sur cinq causes d'action contre les défenderesses : contravention à l'art. 45 de la Loi sur la concurrence, L.R.C. 1985, c. C-34 (qui ouvre droit à une action fondée sur le par. 36(1) de cette même loi), délit civil de complot exercé par des moyens illégaux, délit civil de complot visant principalement à causer un préjudice, enrichissement sans cause et renonciation au recours délictuel.

[126] Le groupe projeté est constitué essentiellement de trois catégories d'acheteurs. Les acheteurs directs sont les membres du groupe qui ont acheté un LDO ou un produit muni de LDO fabriqué ou fourni par une défenderesse de cette défenderesse. Les acheteurs indirects sont les membres du groupe qui ont acheté un LDO ou un produit muni de LDO fabriqué ou fourni par une défenderesse d'une personne qui n'est pas une défenderesse. Neil Godfrey est l'un de ces acheteurs indirects. Enfin, les membres du groupe qui ont acheté, d'une personne qui n'est pas une défenderesse, un LDO ou un produit muni de LDO qui n'a pas été fabriqué ou fourni par une défenderesse sont appelés les « acheteurs sous parapluie ». Le demandeur allègue que tous les membres du groupe faisant partie de ces catégories disposent de recours contre les défenderesses relativement au complot allégué de fixation des prix.

[127] Le recours du demandeur contre la plupart des défenderesses a été intenté le 27 septembre 2010. Le 16 août 2013, soit environ trois ans et demi après la fin de la période visée par le recours collectif, le demandeur a intenté une action distincte contre certaines autres défenderesses : Pioneer Corporation, Pioneer North America, Inc., Pioneer Electronics (USA) Inc., Pioneer High Fidelity Taiwan Co., Ltd. et Pioneer Électronique du Canada, Inc. (appelées collectivement les « défenderesses Pioneer »).

[128] At the certification stage, Masuhara J. (the "Certification Judge") consolidated the two actions and conditionally certified them as class proceedings, in accordance with the criteria set out in s. 4(1) of British Columbia's Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 50 (2016 BCSC 844). The Defendants' appeals to the British Columbia Court of Appeal were unanimously dismissed (2017 BCCA 302, 1 B.C.L.R. (6th) 319).

[129] The Defendants that challenge the Court of Appeal's order before this Court in file no. 37810 (the "Toshiba Appeal") contend that both the Certification Judge and the Court of Appeal erred in three respects: (a) by permitting the Umbrella Purchasers to claim under the statutory cause of action in s. 36(1) of the Competition Act; (b) by allowing common law and equitable relief based on a breach of the anti-competitive prohibitions in Part VI of the Competition Act; and (c) by finding that loss-related issues were common among the indirect purchasers based on the expert methodology proposed by the Plaintiff.

[130] The appeal brought by the Pioneer Defendants in file no. 37809 (the "Pioneer Appeal") raises those same issues, as well as two unique issues pertaining to the treatment of the limitation defence by the courts below. The Pioneer Defendants argue that the Certification Judge erred in holding that the action against them can proceed — notwithstanding that it was commenced more than two years following the end of the Class Period — based on the application of the discoverability rule and the doctrine of fraudulent concealment. In this Court, the Pioneer Defendants submit (a) that the discoverability rule does not apply to postpone the commencement of the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) of the Competition Act, and (b) that the doctrine of fraudulent concealment cannot toll that limitation period unless the Plaintiff can establish that he and the other class members stand in a "special relationship" with the Pioneer Defendants. It follows, in their submission, that the Plaintiff's pleadings do not disclose a cause of action against them in accordance with s. 4(1)(a) of the Class Proceedings Act.

[128] À l'étape de l'autorisation, le juge Masuhara (le « juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation ») a réuni les deux actions et les a conditionnellement autorisées à titre de recours collectif conformément aux critères énoncés au par. 4(1) de la Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 50 (2016 BCSC 844). Les pourvois interjetés par les défenderesses devant la Cour d'appel de la Colombie-Britannique ont été rejetés à l'unanimité (2017 BCCA 302, 1 B.C.L.R. (6th) 319).

[129] Les défenderesses qui contestent l'ordonnance de la Cour d'appel devant notre Cour dans le dossier nº 37810 (le « pourvoi de Toshiba ») soutiennent que le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation et la Cour d'appel ont commis trois erreurs : a) en autorisant les acheteurs sous parapluie à se prévaloir de la cause d'action prévue au par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence, b) en autorisant les recours de common law et d'equity fondés sur une violation des prohibitions de comportement anticoncurrentiel prévues à la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence, et c) en concluant, d'après la méthode proposée par l'expert du demandeur, que les questions liées à la perte étaient communes aux acheteurs indirects.

[130] Le pourvoi interjeté par les défenderesses Pioneer dans le dossier nº 37809 (le « pourvoi de Pioneer ») soulève les mêmes questions, de même que deux questions uniques liées au traitement par les tribunaux d'instance inférieure de leur défense fondée sur la prescription. Les défenderesses Pioneer soutiennent que le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a commis une erreur en concluant que l'action intentée contre elles pouvait procéder — malgré le fait qu'elle avait été intentée plus de deux ans après la fin de la période visée par le recours collectif — compte tenu de l'application de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir et de la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse. Devant notre Cour, les défenderesses Pioneer font valoir : a) que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique pas de façon à retarder le début du délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) de la Loi sur la concurrence, et b) que la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse ne permet pas de repousser le point de départ du délai de prescription à moins que le demandeur puisse

[131] I would allow both appeals in part. With respect to the limitations issues raised in the Pioneer Appeal, my view is that the discoverability rule does not apply to the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) because the event that triggers the commencement of the limitation period occurs without regard to the state of a plaintiff's knowledge. As for the doctrine of fraudulent concealment, my view is that it is not plain and obvious that it will toll the operation of the limitation period in this case only if the Plaintiff is capable of demonstrating a special relationship existed. It may be that something tantamount to or commensurate with the existence of a special relationship would be sufficient to toll the limitation period. However, simply establishing the existence of the conspiracy will not suffice.

[132] With respect to the issues raised in the Toshiba Appeal, which are common to both appeals, I agree with my colleague Brown J. — although for different reasons — that the Competition Act does not prevent a plaintiff from advancing a claim at common law or in equity together with, or instead of, a claim pursuant to the statutory cause of action in s. 36(1) in respect of the same anti-competitive prohibitions. I disagree with my colleague on the other two issues raised in that appeal, however. In my view, the Umbrella Purchasers cannot succeed in their claims against the Defendants under s. 36(1) of the Competition Act. Likewise, I cannot accept that a methodology capable of proving only that loss reached the indirect purchaser level in the distribution chain (and incapable of establishing loss in any individualized manner) is sufficient for the purpose of certifying the loss-related questions proposed by the Plaintiff as "common issues", pursuant to s. 4(1)(c) of the Class Proceedings Act.

établir que lui et les autres membres du groupe entretiennent une « relation spéciale » avec les défenderesses Pioneer. Par conséquent, selon elles, les actes de procédure du demandeur ne révèlent aucune cause d'action contre elles en conformité avec l'al. 4(1)(a) de la Class Proceedings Act.

[131] Je suis d'avis d'accueillir les deux pourvois en partie. En ce qui concerne les questions relatives aux délais de prescription soulevées dans le pourvoi de Pioneer, j'estime que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique pas au délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i), puisque l'événement qui marque le point de départ du délai de prescription se produit peu importe si un demandeur a connaissance du préjudice. En ce qui a trait à la dissimulation frauduleuse, il ne me semble pas évident et manifeste que cette doctrine repoussera le point de départ du délai de prescription en l'espèce seulement si le demandeur arrive à démontrer qu'il existait une relation spéciale. Il se peut que quelque chose d'équivalent ou correspondant à une relation spéciale suffise à reporter le point de départ du délai de prescription. Cependant, le simple fait d'établir l'existence du complot ne suffira pas.

[132] Pour ce qui est des questions soulevées dans le pourvoi de Toshiba, lesquelles sont communes aux deux pourvois, je conviens avec mon collègue le juge Brown — quoique pour des motifs différents — que la Loi sur la concurrence n'empêche pas le demandeur d'intenter un recours en common law ou en equity en même temps, ou au lieu, d'un recours fondé sur la cause d'action prévue au par. 36(1) à l'égard des mêmes pratiques anticoncurrentielles. Toutefois, je ne souscris pas à l'opinion de mon collègue quant aux deux autres questions soulevées dans ce pourvoi. À mon sens, les acheteurs sous parapluie ne peuvent avoir gain de cause contre les défenderesses dans leurs réclamations fondées sur le par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence. De même, je ne puis accepter qu'une méthode permettant uniquement de prouver que la perte a atteint le niveau des acheteurs indirects dans la chaîne de distribution (et qui ne permet pas d'établir la perte de manière individuelle) suffit à l'autorisation des questions liées à la perte proposées par le demandeur en tant que « questions communes » au titre de l'al. 4(1)(c) de la Class Proceedings Act.

II. The Pioneer Appeal

[133] The two unique issues raised in the Pioneer Appeal are as follows:

(a) Does the discoverability rule apply to the limitation period established by s. 36(4)(a)(i) of the Competition Act?

(b) Must there be a special relationship between the parties to an action in order for the doctrine of fraudulent concealment to toll the limitation period?

[134] The statutory cause of action under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act, which allows a claimant to recover for loss or damage resulting from conduct contrary to any provision of Part VI of that Act, is subject to the limitation period established by s. 36(4). These two provisions read as follows:

36 (1) Any person who has suffered loss or damage as a result of

(a) conduct that is contrary to any provision of Part VI, or

(b) the failure of any person to comply with an order of the Tribunal or another court under this Act, may, in any court of competent jurisdiction, sue for and recover from the person who engaged in the conduct or failed to comply with the order an amount equal to the loss or damage proved to have been suffered by him, together with any additional amount that the court may allow not exceeding the full cost to him of any investigation in connection with the matter and of proceedings under this section.

. . .

(4) No action may be brought under subsection (1),

(a) in the case of an action based on conduct that is contrary to any provision of Part VI, after two years from

(i) a day on which the conduct was engaged in, or

II. Le pourvoi de Pioneer

[133] Les deux questions uniques soulevées dans le pourvoi de Pioneer sont les suivantes :

a) La règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique-t-elle au délai de prescription établi au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) de la Loi sur la concurrence?

b) Pour que la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse repousse le point de départ du délai de prescription, doit-il y avoir une relation spéciale entre les parties à une action?

[134] La cause d'action prévue à l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence, qui permet à une personne ayant subi une perte ou des dommages par suite d'un comportement allant à l'encontre d'une disposition de la partie VI de cette loi de se faire indemniser, est assujettie au délai de prescription établi au par. 36(4). Ces deux dispositions sont ainsi libellées :

36 (1) Toute personne qui a subi une perte ou des dommages par suite :

a) soit d'un comportement allant à l'encontre d'une disposition de la partie VI;

b) soit du défaut d'une personne d'obtempérer à une ordonnance rendue par le Tribunal ou un autre tribunal en vertu de la présente loi, peut, devant tout tribunal compétent, réclamer et recouvrer de la personne qui a eu un tel comportement ou n'a pas obtempéré à l'ordonnance une somme égale au montant de la perte ou des dommages qu'elle est reconnue avoir subis, ainsi que toute somme supplémentaire que le tribunal peut fixer et qui n'excède pas le coût total, pour elle, de toute enquête relativement à l'affaire et des procédures engagées en vertu du présent article.

. . .

(4) Les actions visées au paragraphe (1) se prescrivent :

a) dans le cas de celles qui sont fondées sur un comportement qui va à l'encontre d'une disposition de la partie VI, dans les deux ans qui suivent la dernière des dates suivantes :

(i) soit la date du comportement en question,

(ii) the day on which any criminal proceedings relating thereto were finally disposed of,

whichever is the later . . .

. . .

[135] The Plaintiff's action against the Pioneer Defendants, which is based in part on s. 36(1) of the Competition Act, was commenced on August 16, 2013 — more than two years following the end of the Class Period, which is the period during which the alleged price-fixing conspiracy took place. The Pioneer Defendants take the position that the Plaintiff's claim for recovery under s. 36(1) of the Competition Act is time-barred by the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i). The Plaintiff, for his part, says that both the discoverability rule and the doctrine of fraudulent concealment apply to toll that limitation period. If either applies, then the limitation clock will have begun ticking on the date that he discovered, or ought to have discovered, the existence of the alleged conspiracy.

[136] In order to succeed, therefore, the Pioneer Defendants must persuade this Court that neither the discoverability rule nor the doctrine of fraudulent concealment has any application in this case.

A. Does the Discoverability Rule Apply to the Limitation Period Contained in the Statutory Cause of Action in Section 36 of the Competition Act?

[137] On this first limitations issue raised in the Pioneer Appeal, my colleague takes the view that the discoverability rule postpones the commencement of the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) until the time at which the potential claimant discovers, or is reasonably capable of discovering, the existence of the impugned conduct that forms the basis of a claim under s. 36(1). I respectfully disagree, for the reasons that follow.

(ii) soit la date où il est statué de façon définitive sur la poursuite;

. . .

[135] Fondée en partie sur le par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence, l'action du demandeur contre les défenderesses Pioneer a été intentée le 16 août 2013, plus de deux ans après la fin de la période visée par le recours collectif, soit la période durant laquelle le complot allégué de fixation des prix a eu lieu. Les défenderesses Pioneer sont d'avis que le recours en indemnisation intenté par le demandeur au titre du par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence est prescrit en raison du délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i). Le demandeur, quant à lui, affirme que tant la règle de la possibilité de découvrir que la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse s'appliquent de manière à repousser le point de départ de ce délai de prescription. Si l'une ou l'autre s'applique, alors le délai de prescription aura commencé à courir à la date à laquelle le demandeur a découvert, ou aurait dû découvrir, l'existence du complot allégué.

[136] Donc, pour obtenir gain de cause, les défenderesses Pioneer doivent convaincre notre Cour que ni la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ni la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse ne s'appliquent en l'espèce.

A. La règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique-t-elle au délai de prescription applicable à la cause d'action prévue à l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence?

[137] En ce qui concerne la première question relative aux délais de prescription soulevée dans le pourvoi de Pioneer, mon collègue se dit d'avis que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir reporte le début du délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) jusqu'au moment où le demandeur éventuel découvre, ou est raisonnablement capable de découvrir, l'existence du comportement reproché qui constitue le fondement de l'action intentée au titre du par. 36(1). Avec égards, je ne partage pas cet avis pour les motifs qui suivent.

(1) The Discoverability Rule

[138] Limitation clauses are statutory provisions that place temporal limits on a claimant's ability to institute legal proceedings. The expiry of a limitation period has the effect of "extinguish[ing] a party's legal remedies and also, in some cases, a party's legal rights" (G. Mew, D. Rolph and D. Zacks, The Law of Limitations (3rd ed. 2016) ("Mew et al."), at p. 3). As this Court explained in M. (K.) v. M. (H.), [1992] 3 S.C.R. 6, statutory limitation clauses reflect the balance struck by the legislature between three distinct policy rationales: granting repose to defendants, avoiding evidentiary issues relating to the passage of time, and encouraging diligence on the part of plaintiffs.

[139] As statutory provisions, limitation clauses give rise to a number of interpretative issues. One important issue is the point at which the limitation period begins running — and in particular, whether the legislature intended that it commence only when the plaintiff has knowledge that the event which sets the clock ticking (sometimes referred to as the "triggering event") has in fact occurred. This is key, because a determination of when a limitation period expires depends on both its duration and its commencement (Mew et al., at pp. 69-70).

[140] Discoverability is a judge-made rule of statutory interpretation that assists in determining whether the event triggering the commencement of a limitation period depends upon the state of the plaintiff's knowledge. In Central Trust Co. v. Rafuse, [1986] 2 S.C.R. 147, this Court recognized a "general rule that a cause of action arises for the purposes of a limitation period when the material facts on which it is based have been discovered or ought to have been discovered by the plaintiff by the exercise of reasonable diligence" (p. 224). What this means is that a limitation period that commences upon "the accrual of the [plaintiff's] cause of action", or wording to that effect, will begin running only when the plaintiff discovers, or is reasonably capable of discovering,

(1) La règle de la possibilité de découvrir

[138] Les dispositions de prescription sont des dispositions statutaires qui visent à fixer des limites temporelles à la faculté du demandeur de se pourvoir devant les tribunaux. L'expiration d'un délai de prescription a pour effet [TRADUCTION] « d'éteindre les recours en justice d'une partie et, dans certains cas, d'éteindre ses droits » (G. Mew, D. Rolph et D. Zacks, The Law of Limitations (3e éd. 2016) (« Mew et autres »), p. 3). Comme l'a expliqué la Cour dans M. (K.) c. M. (H.), [1992] 3 R.C.S. 6, les dispositions législatives en matière de prescription reflètent l'équilibre établi par le législateur entre trois justifications d'ordre public distinctes : procurer la tranquillité d'esprit aux défendeurs, éviter les problèmes de preuve liés à l'écoulement du temps, et encourager les demandeurs à être diligents.

[139] À titre de dispositions statutaires, les dispositions de prescription soulèvent plusieurs questions d'interprétation. Une question importante concerne le moment où le délai de prescription commence à courir; plus particulièrement, il s'agit de savoir si le législateur voulait que le délai commence à courir uniquement au moment où le demandeur sait que l'événement qui marque le point de départ du délai (parfois appelé le « fait déclencheur ») s'est effectivement produit. Il est crucial de répondre à cette question puisque, pour déterminer quand un délai de prescription expire, il faut d'abord établir sa durée et la date de son début (Mew et autres, p. 69-70).

[140] La règle de la possibilité de découvrir est une règle prétorienne d'interprétation statutaire qui aide à déterminer si l'événement qui marque le point de départ du délai de prescription dépend de la connaissance qu'en avait le demandeur. Dans Central Trust Co. c. Rafuse, [1986] 2 R.C.S. 147, la Cour a reconnu une « règle générale selon laquelle une cause d'action prend naissance, aux fins de la prescription, lorsque les faits importants sur lesquels repose cette cause d'action ont été découverts par le demandeur ou auraient dû l'être s'il avait fait preuve de diligence raisonnable » (p. 224). Cette règle signifie qu'un délai de prescription qui commence quand [TRADUCTION] « la cause d'action [du demandeur] prend naissance », ou toute autre formulation allant dans le même sens,

the facts giving rise to the cause of action (Mew et al., at p. 69). That is the point at which that plaintiff's ability to sue the defendant crystalizes.

[141] This Court expanded upon the principles applicable to the discoverability rule in Peixeiro v. Haberman, [1997] 3 S.C.R. 549. In that case, Major J. clarified that discoverability is not a general rule that applies despite the wording of a legislative enactment, but rather an "interpretive tool for the construing of limitations statutes which ought to be considered each time a limitations provision is in issue" (para. 37). In so doing, he endorsed the approach to this rule that had been taken by the Manitoba Court of Appeal in Fehr v. Jacob (1993), 14 C.C.L.T. (2d) 200:

> In my opinion, the judge-made discoverability rule is nothing more than a rule of construction. Whenever a statute requires an action to be commenced within a specified time from the happening of a specific event, the statutory language must be construed. When time runs from "the accrual of the cause of action" or from some other event which can be construed as occurring only when the injured party has knowledge of the injury sustained, the judge-made discoverability rule applies. But, when time runs from an event which clearly occurs without regard to the injured party's knowledge, the judge-made discoverability rule may not extend the period the legislature has prescribed. [para. 22]

[142] The limitation period in Peixeiro ran for two years from the time when "damages were sustained" by the plaintiff (para. 2). Applying the test in Fehr, Major J. found it "unlikely that by using the words 'damages were sustained', the legislature intended that the determination of the starting point of the limitation period should take place without regard to the injured party's knowledge" (para. 38). In his view, "[t]he use of the phrase 'damages were sustained' rather than 'cause of action arose' . . . is a distinction without a difference" (ibid.). He therefore concluded ne commencera à courir qu'à partir du moment où le demandeur découvre, ou peut raisonnablement découvrir, les faits à l'origine de la cause d'action (Mew et autres, p. 69). Il s'agit du moment où la capacité du demandeur d'intenter une action contre le défendeur se concrétise.

[141] La Cour a expliqué plus en détail les principes applicables à la règle de la possibilité de découvrir dans Peixeiro c. Haberman, [1997] 3 R.C.S. 549. Dans cet arrêt, le juge Major a précisé que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne constitue pas une règle générale qui s'applique malgré le libellé d'un texte de loi, mais constitue plutôt un « outil qui sert à interpréter les textes de loi établissant des délais de prescription et qui doit être pris en considération chaque fois qu'une telle disposition est en litige » (par. 37). Ce faisant, il a souscrit à la conception de cette règle qui avait été adoptée par la Cour d'appel du Manitoba dans l'arrêt Fehr c. Jacob (1993), 14 C.C.L.T. (2d) 200 :

> [TRADUCTION] À mon avis, la règle prétorienne de la possibilité de découvrir le dommage n'est rien de plus qu'une règle d'interprétation. Dans tous les cas où une loi indique que l'action en justice doit être intentée dans un délai précis après un événement donné, il faut interpréter les termes de cette loi. Lorsque le délai court à partir du « moment où naît la cause d'action » ou de tout autre événement qui peut être interprété comme ne survenant qu'au moment où la [partie lésée] prend connaissance du dommage, c'est la règle prétorienne de la possibilité de découvrir le préjudice qui s'applique. Toutefois, si le délai court à compter de la date d'un événement qui survient clairement, et sans égard à la connaissance qu'en a la [partie lésée], cette règle ne peut prolonger le délai fixé par le législateur. [par. 22] that the discoverability rule applied to the limitation period at issue in that case.

[142] Dans l'arrêt Peixeiro, le délai de prescription a couru durant deux ans à compter de la date où les « dommages ont été subis » par le demandeur (par. 2). Après avoir appliqué le critère établi dans l'arrêt Fehr, le juge Major a conclu qu'il était « peu probable qu'en utilisant les mots "où les dommages ont été subis" le législateur entendait que l'on détermine le point de départ du délai de prescription sans égard au moment où la personne blessée prend connaissance du préjudice » (par. 38). À son avis, « [l]'utilisation des mots "date où les dommages ont

[143] A different conclusion was reached by this Court on the facts in Ryan v. Moore, 2005 SCC 38, [2005] 2 S.C.R. 53. That dispute turned, in part, on the interpretation of a limitation period that "prohibits an action brought six months after letters of probate or administration of the estate of the deceased have been granted, and after the expiration of one year from the date of death" (para. 18, referring to s. 5 of the Survival of Actions Act, R.S.N.L. 1990, c. S-32). Bastarache J., writing for a unanimous Court, once again affirmed the test set out in Fehr and reiterated that discoverability is not a general rule but rather an "interpretative tool for construing limitation statutes" (para. 23). Applying the Fehr test to the limitation provision at issue in that case, Bastarache J. concluded as follows:

> Pursuant to the Survival of Actions Act, the limitation period is triggered by the death of the defendant or the granting by a court of the letters of administration or probate. The section is clear and explicit: time begins to run from one of these two specific events. The Act does not establish a relationship between these events and the injured party's knowledge. I agree with the appellants that knowledge is not a factor: the death or granting of the letters occurs regardless of the state of mind of the plaintiff. We face here a situation in respect of which, as recognized by this Court in Peixeiro, the judge-made discoverability rule does not apply to extend the period the legislature has prescribed. Thus, I agree with the Court of Appeal that by using a specific event as the starting point of the "limitation clock", the legislature was displacing the discoverability rule in all the situations to which the Survival of Actions Act applies. [Emphasis added; para. 27.]

[144] The Plaintiff in the instant case agrees that Fehr sets out the test for whether a limitation period

été subis" au lieu des mots "date où la cause d'action a pris naissance" [. . .] est une distinction sans importance » (ibid.). Il a donc conclu que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'appliquait au délai de prescription en cause dans cette affaire.

[143] Notre Cour a tiré une conclusion différente au vu des faits dans l'arrêt Ryan c. Moore, 2005 CSC 38, [2005] 2 R.C.S. 53. Le litige portait en partie sur l'interprétation d'un délai de prescription selon lequel « aucune action ne peut être intentée après les six mois qui suivent la délivrance de lettres d'homologation ou d'administration de la succession de la personne décédée et après l'expiration d'un délai d'un an suivant la date du décès » (par. 18, renvoyant à l'art. 5 de la Survival of Actions Act, R.S.N.L. 1990, c. S-32). S'exprimant au nom d'une Cour unanime, le juge Bastarache a de nouveau confirmé le critère établi dans l'arrêt Fehr et a réaffirmé que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir n'est pas une règle générale, mais plutôt un « outil d'interprétation des lois qui établissent des délais de prescription » (par. 23). Après avoir appliqué le critère établi dans l'arrêt Fehr au délai de prescription en cause dans cette affaire, le juge Bastarache a conclu ce qui suit :

> Aux termes de la Survival of Actions Act, le délai de prescription court à compter du décès du défendeur ou de la délivrance, par un tribunal, de lettres d'administration ou d'homologation. L'article est clair et explicite : le délai commence à courir au moment où survient l'un de ces deux faits particuliers. La Loi n'établit aucun lien entre ces faits et le moment où la partie lésée en prend connaissance. Je conviens avec les appelants que la connaissance n'est pas un facteur à considérer : le décès ou la délivrance des lettres survient indépendamment de l'état d'esprit du demandeur. En l'espèce, nous nous trouvons devant une situation où, comme notre Cour l'a reconnu dans l'arrêt Peixeiro, la règle prétorienne de la possibilité de découvrir le dommage ne s'applique pas pour prolonger le délai fixé par le législateur. Je suis donc d'accord avec la Cour d'appel pour dire qu'en désignant un fait particulier comme élément déclencheur du « compte à rebours de la prescription », le législateur se trouvait à écarter la règle de la possibilité de découvrir le dommage dans tous les cas où la Survival of Actions Act s'applique. [Je souligne; par. 27.]

[144] Le demandeur en l'espèce convient que l'arrêt Fehr établit le critère à appliquer pour décider si

is subject to the discoverability rule (R.F. (Pioneer Appeal), at para. 29), and my colleague affirms this approach at paras. 31-35 of his reasons. However, he goes on to opine that "where the event triggering the limitation period is an element of the cause of action, the legislature has shown its intention that the limitation period be linked to the cause of action's accrual, such that discoverability will apply" (Brown J.'s reasons, at para. 38 (emphasis added)). In other words, he equates language referring to the accrual or arising of the cause of action in its entirety with language referring to the occurrence of an element of the cause of action; in his view, both evidence a legislative intent that the discoverability rule apply.

[145] Although this approach accords with the view expressed by the British Columbia Court of Appeal in this case (paras. 89-90), as well as by the Ontario Court of Appeal in Fanshawe College of Applied Arts and Technology v. AU Optronics Corp., 2016 ONCA 621, 132 O.R. (3d) 81, at paras. 40, 43 and 45, my respectful view is that it expands the scope of the discoverability rule in a manner that is neither consistent with precedent nor justifiable in principle.

[146] First, the suggestion that discoverability applies in all cases where the triggering event is "the occurrence of an element of the underlying cause of action" (Brown J.'s reasons, at para. 44) broadens the test set out by the Manitoba Court of Appeal in Fehr — a test which my colleague purports to endorse at paras. 33-35 of his reasons. In that case, Twaddle J.A. was very clear in explaining that the discoverability rule applies "[w]hen time runs from 'the accrual of the cause of action' or from some other event which can be construed as occurring only when the injured party has knowledge of the injury sustained" (para. 22). Only these two situations were identified; there was no indication whatsoever that the discoverability rule ought to apply automatically in circumstances where the triggering event is merely the occurrence of a component element of the cause of action (and not the accrual of the cause of action in its entirety).

un délai de prescription est assujetti à la règle de la possibilité de découvrir (m.i. (pourvoi de Pioneer), par. 29), et mon collègue confirme cette approche aux par. 31-35 de ses motifs. Il ajoute cependant que « lorsque l'événement marquant le point de départ du délai de prescription est un élément de la cause d'action, la législature a manifesté son intention que le délai de prescription soit lié à la naissance de la cause d'action, déclenchant du même coup l'application de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir » (motifs du juge Brown, par. 38 (je souligne)). Autrement dit, il assimile les mots désignant la naissance de la cause d'action dans son ensemble à ceux qui désignent la survenance d'un élément de la cause d'action; selon lui, les deux témoignent de l'intention du législateur que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique.

[145] Bien que cette approche concorde avec l'avis exprimé par la Cour d'appel de la Colombie-Britannique en l'espèce (par. 89-90), ainsi qu'avec celui de la Cour d'appel de l'Ontario dans l'arrêt Fanshawe College of Applied Arts and Technology c. AU Optronics Corp., 2016 ONCA 621, 132 O.R. (3d) 81, par. 40, 43 et 45, à mon humble avis, cette approche étend la portée de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir d'une manière qui n'est ni conforme à la jurisprudence ni justifiable en principe.

[146] D'abord, l'idée selon laquelle la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique dans tous les cas où le fait déclencheur est « la survenance d'un élément de la cause d'action » (motifs du juge Brown, par. 44) étend la portée du critère établi par la Cour d'appel du Manitoba dans l'arrêt Fehr — un critère auquel mon collègue semble souscrire aux par. 33-35 de ses motifs. Dans cette affaire, le juge Twaddle a expliqué très clairement que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique [TRADUCTION] « [l]orsque le délai court à partir du "moment où naît la cause d'action" ou de tout autre événement qui peut être interprété comme ne survenant qu'au moment où la partie lésée prend connaissance du préjudice qu'elle a subi » (par. 22). Seules ces deux situations ont été mentionnées; rien n'indiquait que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir doit s'appliquer automatiquement dans les cas où le fait déclencheur n'est que la survenance d'un élément de la cause d'action (et non la naissance de la cause d'action dans son ensemble).

[147] Not only did this Court endorse Fehr in both Peixeiro and Ryan, but both appeals were resolved on a fairly straightforward application of this approach to discoverability. In Peixeiro, this Court reasoned that the limitation period — which commenced when "damages were sustained" — fell within the first category outlined in Fehr (to which the discoverability rule applies), given that this triggering event did not occur without regard to the plaintiff's knowledge. Likewise, Ryan was decided on the basis that the events triggering the commencement of the limitation period at issue — the death of the defendant or the granting of letters of administration or probate — occurred regardless of the plaintiff's state of mind and therefore fell within the second category in Fehr, to which the discoverability rule has no application (para. 27). Put simply, neither case was resolved by determining whether the triggering event was "related to", "linked to the basis of" or "an element of" the plaintiff's cause of action.

[147] Non seulement notre Cour a souscrit à l'arrêt Fehr dans Peixeiro et Ryan, mais les deux pourvois ont été tranchés en appliquant, de façon relativement simple, la règle de la possibilité de découvrir. Dans l'arrêt Peixeiro, la Cour a jugé que le délai de prescription — qui avait commencé à courir au moment où les « dommages ont été subis » — appartenait à la première catégorie énoncée dans l'arrêt Fehr (à laquelle s'applique la règle de la possibilité de découvrir), puisque ce fait déclencheur n'était pas survenu indépendamment de la connaissance qu'en avait le demandeur. De même, dans l'arrêt Ryan, le pourvoi a été tranché à partir du principe que les événements qui ont marqué le point de départ du délai de prescription en question — soit le décès du défendeur ou la délivrance de lettres d'homologation ou d'administration — étaient survenus indépendamment de l'état d'esprit du demandeur et appartenaient donc à la deuxième catégorie énoncée dans l'arrêt Fehr, à laquelle la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique pas (par. 27). Autrement dit, aucun des deux pourvois n'a été tranché en décidant si le fait déclencheur avait « un rapport avec » la cause d'action du demandeur, était « lié au fondement » de cette cause d'action ou « en constitu[ait] un élément ».

[148] It is true that this Court in Ryan stated that the discoverability rule does not apply where the limitation period "is explicitly linked by the governing legislation to a fixed event unrelated to the injured party's knowledge or the basis of the cause of action" (para. 24 (emphasis added)). The Court of Appeal in the present case characterized this as an "unequivocal statement . . . that the rule can apply where the limitation period is linked to 'the basis of the cause of action'" (para. 89). With respect, the Court of Appeal's narrow focus on this specific statement ignores the broader context in which it was made. In the immediately preceding paragraph in Ryan (i.e. para. 23), Bastarache J. reaffirmed — and reproduced in full — the approach to discoverability set out in Fehr, and the statement in question appears to be nothing more than a paraphrased summary of this well-accepted approach. Moreover, in the same paragraph (i.e. para. 24), Bastarache J. explained that the discoverability rule does apply where the commencement of the limitation period is "related by the legislation to the arising or accrual of the cause of action". From my reading of Ryan, I see no intent on the part of this Court to broaden the traditional approach to discoverability, and for this reason, my view is that the words "basis of the cause of action" in para. 24 of Ryan should be understood as essentially synonymous with the "arising or accrual of the cause of action".

[148] Il est vrai que dans l'arrêt Ryan, notre Cour a déclaré que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique pas dans les cas où « la loi applicable lie expressément le délai de prescription à un événement déterminé qui n'a rien à voir avec le moment où la partie lésée en prend connaissance ou avec le fondement de la cause d'action » (par. 24 (je souligne)). En l'espèce, la Cour d'appel a estimé que ces propos équivalaient à une [TRADUCTION] « déclaration sans équivoque [. . .] que la règle peut s'appliquer lorsqu'un délai de prescription est lié au "fondement de la cause d'action" » (par. 89). Avec égards, par son interprétation étroite de cette phrase précise, la Cour d'appel ne tient pas compte du contexte plus large dans lequel elle a été formulée. Au paragraphe précédent dans l'arrêt Ryan (soit le par. 23), le juge Bastarache a réitéré — et reproduit en entier — la conception de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir établie dans l'arrêt Fehr, et l'énoncé en question semble n'être rien de plus qu'un résumé paraphrasé de cette approche bien acceptée. En outre, dans le même paragraphe (soit le par. 24), le juge Bastarache

[149] In any event, principle also commands that the discoverability rule apply only where the limitation period runs from the "accrual of the cause of action" (or wording to that effect) or from the occurrence of some event that is related to the state of the plaintiff's knowledge. This is because discoverability is nothing more than a tool of statutory interpretation. Where a legislature provides that a limitation period is triggered by an event whose occurrence depends on the plaintiff's knowledge, courts give effect to this legislative direction by calculating the running of the limitation period from the point at which the plaintiff acquired or was capable of acquiring such knowledge. Conversely, where the legislature provides that a limitation period is triggered by an event that occurs without regard to the plaintiff's state of mind, the courts do not — and indeed, cannot — apply the discoverability rule to postpone the commencement of the limitation period until such time as the plaintiff discovered, or ought to have discovered, that the event had taken place. Courts are bound to interpret and apply statutory law; they cannot rewrite it (Reference re Pan-Canadian Securities Regulation, 2018 SCC 48, [2018] 3 S.C.R. 189, at paras. 54-55 and 58).

[150] Limitation periods that begin running upon the accrual of the plaintiff's cause of action evidently fall within the first category outlined in the preceding paragraph. Mew et al. note that a cause a expliqué que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique lorsque « la loi lie le point de départ du délai de prescription à la naissance de la cause d'action ». À la lecture de l'arrêt Ryan, je ne puis discerner, de la part de la Cour, une quelconque intention d'étendre la conception traditionnelle de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir et, pour cette raison, je suis d'avis que l'expression « fondement de la cause d'action » figurant au par. 24 de l'arrêt Ryan devrait être considérée comme étant essentiellement synonyme de l'expression « naissance de la cause d'action ».

[149] Quoi qu'il en soit, le principe commande également que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique uniquement dans les affaires où le délai de prescription commence à courir au moment où « la cause d'action prend naissance » (ou toute autre formulation allant dans le même sens) ou au moment où survient un événement qui a un rapport avec la connaissance du demandeur. Il en est ainsi parce que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir n'est rien d'autre qu'un outil d'interprétation statutaire. Lorsque le législateur précise que le point de départ d'un délai de prescription est marqué par un événement dont la survenance dépend de la connaissance qu'en a le demandeur, les tribunaux donnent effet à cette intention législative en calculant la durée du délai de prescription à partir du moment où le demandeur a pris connaissance, ou pouvait prendre connaissance, de l'événement. À l'inverse, lorsque le législateur prévoit que le point de départ d'un délai de prescription est marqué par un événement qui survient indépendamment de l'état d'esprit du demandeur, les tribunaux n'appliquent pas — et, en fait, ne peuvent appliquer — la règle de la possibilité de découvrir pour reporter le point de départ du délai de prescription jusqu'à ce que le demandeur découvre, ou aurait dû découvrir, la survenance de l'événement. Les tribunaux sont tenus d'interpréter et d'appliquer la loi; ils ne peuvent pas la réécrire (Renvoi relatif à la réglementation pancanadienne des valeurs mobilières, 2018 CSC 48, [2018] 3 R.C.S. 189, par. 54-55 et 58).

[150] Les délais de prescription qui commencent à courir lorsque prend naissance la cause d'action du demandeur appartiennent évidemment à la première catégorie énoncée au paragraphe précédent. Selon of action arises only "when all of the elements of a wrong existed, such that an action could be brought" (p. 69), and conversely, that "no cause of action can be said to have accrued unless there is a plaintiff available who is capable of commencing an action and a defendant in existence who is capable of being sued" (p. 70 (footnotes omitted)). Because a cause of action cannot accrue before the plaintiff discovers that they have the right to commence proceedings against the defendant, a legislature which provides for a limitation period that begins running at that point in time necessarily intends the discoverability rule to apply. This explains the reasoning behind the "general rule" set out by this Court in Central Trust (see para. 140 above) and affirmed in M. (K.). It is essential to recognize that the limitation period in each case was triggered by the accrual or arising of the plaintiff's cause of action.

Mew et autres, une cause d'action prend naissance uniquement [TRADUCTION] « lorsque sont survenus tous les éléments constitutifs d'une faute, de sorte qu'une action pourrait être intentée » (p. 69) et, inversement, « aucune cause d'action n'est réputée avoir pris naissance à moins qu'il existe un demandeur disponible et capable d'intenter une action et un défendeur qui puisse être poursuivi » (p. 70 (notes en bas de page omises)). Puisque la cause d'action d'un demandeur ne peut prendre naissance tant que celui-ci n'a pas découvert qu'il est en droit d'intenter une action contre le défendeur, le législateur qui prévoit qu'un délai de prescription commence à courir à ce moment précis entend nécessairement que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique. Cela explique le raisonnement qui sous-tend la « règle générale » établie par la Cour dans l'arrêt Central Trust (voir le par. 140 précité) et confirmée dans M. (K.). Il est essentiel de reconnaître que la naissance de la cause d'action du demandeur a marqué le point du délai de prescription dans tous les cas.

[151] Conversely, "the occurrence of an element of the underlying cause of action" (Brown J.'s reasons, at para. 44) will not always fit within either category outlined above at para. 149. It may be that the occurrence of such an event does in fact depend on the state of the plaintiff's knowledge, but unlike the accrual of a cause of action, this does not invariably follow as a matter of logical necessity. In Peixeiro, for example, this Court held that the point at which damages are sustained — a constituent element of (among other things) the tort of negligence — depends on when the plaintiff actually has knowledge of his or her injury. Knowledge will not form part of every element of the cause of action in negligence, however. A breach of a standard of care, for example, may occur years or even decades before the plaintiff first learns about it. Although such a breach is a prerequisite to a successful claim in negligence, it is also something that takes place without any regard to the plaintiff's state of mind.

[151] Par contre, « la survenance d'un élément de la cause d'action » (motifs du juge Brown, par. 44) ne cadrera pas toujours avec l'une ou l'autre des catégories énoncées ci-dessus au par. 149. Il se peut que la survenance d'un tel élément dépende de la connaissance du demandeur, mais contrairement à la naissance de la cause d'action, cela ne constituera pas invariablement une nécessité logique. Dans l'arrêt Peixeiro, par exemple, la Cour a déclaré que le moment où les dommages sont subis — un élément constitutif du délit de négligence (entre autres) — dépend du moment où le demandeur a connaissance de son préjudice. Toutefois, la connaissance ne fera pas partie intégrante de chaque élément de la cause d'action dans un cas de négligence. Un manquement à la norme de diligence, par exemple, peut avoir eu lieu des années, voire des décennies, avant que le demandeur n'en ait pris connaissance. Bien que ce manquement constitue une condition préalable à remplir pour qu'une action pour négligence soit accueillie, il s'agit également d'un événement qui survient indépendamment de l'état d'esprit du demandeur.

[152] It is for this reason that I disagree in principle with the proposition that the discoverability rule must always apply where the triggering event "is related to", "is linked to the basis of" or "constitutes an element of" the plaintiff's cause of action. My position is instead consistent with that stated by Marshall J.A. of the Newfoundland Court of Appeal in Snow v. Kashyap (1995), 125 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 182:

[152] C'est pour cette raison que je suis en désaccord, en principe, avec la proposition selon laquelle

Where the limitation period is set by the terms of the statute to run from the time when an action arises or accrues, as in Kamloops [v. Nielsen, [1984] 2 S.C.R. 2,] and Central Trust, there is room to imply that the legislation does not intend the period to commence until the injured party has, or ought to have, an awareness of the claim's existence. The criteria under such legislation provisions, therefore, imports a mental element. However, when the limitation statute explicitly ties the prescription period to a specific occurrence, such as the termination of professional services, knowledge of the claimant cannot be construed as a factor. In such instances it is the happening of the factual event which is explicitly relevant and any interpretation implying the period to be related to the claimant's consciousness of the circumstances is precluded. No scope exists to imply the discoverability rule into the legislative intent. [Emphasis added; para. 38.]

[153] With this in mind, I am respectfully of the view that my colleague's approach is undermined by the well-settled principle that the discoverability rule is fundamentally a rule of statutory interpretation. The fact that a limitation period begins running upon the occurrence of an element (and not upon the accrual or arising) of the plaintiff's cause of action is not, on its own, indicative of any legislative intent regarding the applicability of the discoverability rule. As I have already indicated, my colleague's conclusion is the same as the one reached by the Court of Appeal in this case and by the Ontario Court of Appeal in Fanshawe: in such circumstances, according to him, discoverability applies automatically. This, however, creates an arbitrary distinction between triggering events that are related to the cause of action and those that are not, despite the fact that both may occur independently of the plaintiff's state of mind. How can it fairly be said that the legislature la règle de la possibilité de découvrir doit toujours s'appliquer lorsque le fait déclencheur « a un rapport avec », « est lié au fondement de » ou « constitue un élément de » la cause d'action du demandeur. Ma position concorde plutôt avec celle exprimée par le juge Marshall, de la Cour d'appel de Terre-Neuve, dans l'arrêt Snow c. Kashyap (1995), 125 Nfld. & P.E.I.R. 182 :

[TRADUCTION] Lorsque le libellé de la loi prévoit que le délai de prescription doit commencer à courir au moment où la cause d'action prend naissance, comme dans les arrêts Kamloops [(Ville de) c. Nielsen, [1984] 2 R.C.S. 2,] et Central Trust, il y a lieu de présumer que le législateur ne souhaitait pas que le délai de prescription ne commence à courir qu'une fois que la partie lésée a découvert, ou aurait dû découvrir, l'existence de la faute. Par conséquent, le critère prévu par ces dispositions législatives suppose un élément mental. Cependant, lorsque la loi en matière de prescription lie expressément le délai de prescription à un événement précis, comme la résiliation de services professionnels, la connaissance du demandeur ne peut être considérée comme un facteur. Dans de tels cas, c'est la survenance de l'événement qui importe expressément, et toute interprétation donnant à penser que le délai de prescription est lié à la connaissance qu'a le demandeur des circonstances est exclue. La règle de la possibilité de découvrir le dommage ne doit en aucun cas être interprétée comme une intention du législateur. [Je souligne; par. 38.]

[153] Compte tenu de ce qui précède, je suis respectueusement d'avis que l'approche de mon collègue est sapée par le principe bien établi selon lequel la règle de la possibilité de découvrir constitue fondamentalement une règle d'interprétation statutaire. Le fait qu'un délai de prescription commence à courir au moment où survient un élément de la cause d'action du demandeur (et non au moment où celle-ci prend naissance) n'indique pas, à lui seul, que le législateur avait une quelconque intention quant à l'applicabilité de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir. Comme je l'ai déjà mentionné, la conclusion de mon collègue est la même que celle tirée par la Cour d'appel en l'espèce, et la même que celle tirée par la Cour d'appel de l'Ontario dans l'arrêt Fanshawe : en pareilles circonstances, selon lui, la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique automatiquement. Cela crée toutefois une distinction arbitraire entre les faits déclencheurs ayant un rapport avec la cause

intended the discoverability rule to apply to one and not the other? Although knowledge is necessary for a cause of action to fully accrue to the plaintiff, it does not follow that an element of the cause of action also occurs only when the plaintiff has knowledge thereof.

[154] A preferable approach is instead one that considers each statutory limitation clause on its own terms, recognizing that a triggering event that relates to a cause of action can, but need not, be dependent upon the plaintiff's state of mind. This approach is faithful to this Court's jurisprudence, and respectful of the notion of discoverability as an interpretative tool and not a general rule that allows clear statutory wording to be disregarded. For my part, I would reaffirm the approach laid out in Fehr without any modification.

(2) Application of the Discoverability Rule to the Limitation Period in Section 36(4)(a)(i)

[155] Given the foregoing, it is no surprise that I disagree with my colleague that the discoverability rule applies to the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) of the Competition Act on the basis that "the event triggering this particular limitation period is an element of the underlying cause of action" (Brown J.'s reasons, at para. 44). Rather, the conclusion that results from applying the law as I explained it in the preceding section is that this limitation period commences on the day on which the conduct contrary to Part VI actually takes place, and not the day on which a potential claimant discovers, or is reasonably capable of discovering, that it took place.

[156] Section 36 of the Competition Act was "carefully constructed" to create a limited cause of action in respect of serious criminal offences under Part VI

d'action et ceux qui n'en ont pas, même si les deux peuvent se produire indépendamment de l'état d'esprit du demandeur. Comment peut-on dire en toute équité que la législature souhaitait que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique à l'un et non à l'autre? Bien que la connaissance soit nécessaire pour qu'une cause d'action soit pleinement dévolue au demandeur, il ne s'ensuit pas qu'un élément de la cause d'action survient uniquement lorsque le demandeur en a connaissance.

[154] Il vaut mieux plutôt examiner chaque disposition statutaire de prescription selon ses propres termes, en tenant compte du fait qu'un fait déclencheur ayant un rapport avec une cause d'action peut, mais ne doit pas nécessairement, dépendre de la connaissance du demandeur. Cette approche est fidèle à la jurisprudence de la Cour et respecte l'idée selon laquelle la règle de la possibilité de découvrir constitue un outil d'interprétation et non une règle générale qui permet de passer outre au texte clair de la loi. Pour ma part, je suis d'avis de réitérer l'approche adoptée dans l'arrêt Fehr sans aucune modification.

(2) Application de la règle de la possibilité de découvrir au délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i)

[155] Compte tenu de ce qui précède, il n'est guère étonnant que je sois en désaccord avec mon collègue que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique au délai de prescription prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) de la Loi sur la concurrence au motif que « le fait déclencheur de ce délai de prescription est un élément de la cause d'action sous-jacente » (motifs du juge Brown, par. 44). En fait, comme je l'ai expliqué dans la section précédente, l'application du droit mène à la conclusion que le délai de prescription commence à courir à la date à laquelle le comportement allant à l'encontre de la partie VI se produit, et non à la date où le demandeur éventuel découvre ou est raisonnablement capable de découvrir que le comportement en question s'est produit.

[156] L'article 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence a été « soigneusement défini », de manière à créer une cause d'action limitée à l'égard de certaines of the Competition Act (General Motors of Canada Ltd. v. City National Leasing, [1989] 1 S.C.R. 641, at p. 689). For example, Parliament limited recovery to an amount "equal to the loss or damage proved to have been suffered" by the plaintiff as a result of the prohibited conduct, thereby foreclosing the availability of other types of damages, such as aggravated or punitive damages. Section 36(2) provides plaintiffs with a shortcut to proving conspiracy where the defendant was convicted of the underlying offence. And of significance for our purposes is the fact that this cause of action is circumscribed by a complex twofold limitation period at s. 36(4) that reflects the balance struck by Parliament among the certainty, evidentiary and diligence rationales that underlie this area of the law.

[157] The wording of the limitation period set out in s. 36(4)(a)(i) provides ample support for the proposition that the two-year period commences independently of when the plaintiff first learns of the wrongdoing. Rather than having the limitation period commence upon the accrual of the cause of action (as was the case in Central Trust and M. (K.)), Parliament decided that it would instead commence on "a day on which the conduct was engaged in" — which, contrary to the position taken by my colleague, is not "wording to [the same] effect" as "accrual of the cause of action" (paras. 37 and 41). There is simply no link between this triggering event and the plaintiff's state of mind; it is, in short, an "event which clearly occurs without regard to the injured party's knowledge". The Certification Judge's reading of this provision led him to the same conclusion (para. 54 (CanLII)). It was the existence of conflicting jurisprudence on this point that caused him "not [to be] satisfied that it is plain and obvious that the discoverability principle can never apply to the limitation period in s. 36(4)" (para. 58).

[158] I acknowledge that the "discoverability rule has been applied by this Court even to statutes of infractions criminelles graves visées par la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence (General Motors of Canada Ltd. c. City National Leasing, [1989] 1 R.C.S. 641, p. 689). Par exemple, le Parlement a restreint le recouvrement des dommages-intérêts à une somme « égale au montant de la perte ou des dommages [que le demandeur est reconnu] avoir subis » par suite du comportement reproché, écartant ainsi la possibilité d'obtenir d'autres types de dommages-intérêts, comme des dommages-intérêts majorés ou punitifs. Le paragraphe 36(2) prévoit un raccourci qui permet au demandeur de prouver l'existence d'un complot lorsque le défendeur est déclaré coupable de l'infraction sous-jacente. Je tiens également à souligner que la présente cause d'action est circonscrite par un délai de prescription complexe à deux volets au par. 36(4) qui illustre l'équilibre établi par le Parlement entre les justifications propres à ce domaine de droit, soit la certitude, la preuve et la diligence.

[157] Le libellé du sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) justifie amplement d'affirmer que le délai de prescription de deux ans commence à courir sans égard au moment où le demandeur apprend l'existence de l'acte fautif. Au lieu de prévoir que le délai de prescription commence à courir à la date où la cause d'action prend naissance (comme dans les affaires Central Trust et M. (K.)), le Parlement a décidé qu'il commençait plutôt à courir à la « date du comportement en question » — ce qui, contrairement à la position de mon collègue, ne sont pas des « mots [utilisés dans le] sens » de « naissance de la cause d'action » (par. 37 et 41). Il n'existe tout simplement aucun lien entre ce fait déclencheur et l'état d'esprit du demandeur. Il s'agit, en bref, d'un « événement qui survient clairement, et sans égard à la connaissance qu'en a la [partie lésée] ». L'interprétation que le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation donne à cette disposition l'a amené à tirer la même conclusion (par. 54 (CanLII)). La jurisprudence contradictoire sur ce point a fait en sorte que le juge [TRADUCTION] « n'était pas convaincu qu'il est évident et manifeste que le principe de la possibilité de découvrir ne peut jamais s'appliquer au délai de prescription prévu au par. 36(4) » (par. 58).

[158] Je conviens que la « règle de la possibilité de découvrir le dommage a été appliquée par la Cour limitation in which plain construction of the language used would appear to exclude the operation of the rule" (Peixeiro, at para. 38). However, a consideration of the context surrounding s. 36(4)(a)(i) lends further support to the conclusion that the discoverability rule does not apply.

[159] First, the cause of action in s. 36(1)(a) is based on two essential elements: (i) the defendant engaging in conduct contrary to any provision of Part VI, and (ii) the plaintiff suffering loss or damage as a result of such conduct. It is only upon the occurrence of both events that the plaintiff can commence proceedings on the basis of this statutory cause of action. Cognizant of this, and of the fact that conspiracies of this nature take place in secret, Parliament decided that the limitation period would not begin when the plaintiff actually sustained loss or damage, but rather when the defendant engaged in the prohibited conduct. It is important to keep in mind that the point at which the conduct is engaged in necessarily precedes the point at which a claimant will suffer loss or damage as a result of such conduct. I would also note that the offence under s. 45 is complete as soon as an unlawful agreement is made, meaning that the "conduct" is "engaged in" even if the agreement is not actually implemented or prices do not actually increase. It follows as a direct consequence of this legislative choice that the limitation period can in fact expire before the plaintiff is in a position to commence proceedings under s. 36(1)(a).

[160] Second, s. 36(4)(a)(ii) provides a mechanism for the plaintiff to advance a claim that may be barred by s. 36(4)(a)(i): even if two years have expired from the day on which the prohibited conduct was engaged in, the limitation period will restart on the day on which criminal proceedings relating to the impugned conduct are finally disposed of. While s. 36(4)(a)(ii) applies only where the alleged conduct contrary to Part VI is the subject of criminal prosecution, it nevertheless provides an indication that Parliament was aware of the strictness of même à l'égard de textes de loi établissant des délais de prescription dont le libellé, interprété littéralement, semblait exclure l'application de la règle » (Peixeiro, par. 38). Toutefois, l'examen du contexte entourant le sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) étaye davantage la conclusion que cette règle ne s'applique pas.

[159] Premièrement, la cause d'action prévue à l'al. 36(1)a) est fondée sur deux éléments essentiels : (i) le défendeur dont le comportement va à l'encontre d'une disposition de la partie VI, et (ii) le demandeur qui subit une perte ou des dommages par suite d'un tel comportement. Ce n'est que lorsque ces deux événements se produisent que le demandeur peut engager des poursuites sur le fondement de cette cause d'action prévue par la loi. Ainsi, et compte tenu de la nature secrète des complots de ce genre, le Parlement a décidé que le délai de prescription ne commencerait pas à courir à la date à laquelle le demandeur subit réellement une perte ou des dommages, mais plutôt à la date à laquelle le défendeur adopte le comportement reproché. Il est important de se rappeler que le moment où se produit le comportement en question précède forcément le moment où le demandeur subit une perte ou des dommages par suite d'un tel comportement. Je tiens également à faire remarquer que l'infraction prévue à l'art. 45 est commise dès la conclusion de l'accord illégal, ce qui signifie que le « comportement » a eu lieu même si l'accord n'est pas mis en œuvre ou il n'y a pas véritablement de majoration des prix. Le choix du législateur entraîne comme conséquence directe la possibilité que le délai de prescription expire avant que le demandeur soit en mesure d'intenter une action sur le fondement de l'al. 36(1)a).

[160] Deuxièmement, le sous-al. 36(4)a)(ii) prévoit un mécanisme permettant au demandeur d'intenter une action prescrite par le sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) : même s'il s'est écoulé deux ans depuis la date où le comportement prohibé a eu lieu, le délai de prescription recommence à courir à la date où il est statué de façon définitive sur la poursuite criminelle visant le comportement reproché. Bien que le sous-al. 36(4)a)(ii) s'applique seulement dans les cas où le comportement reproché contraire à la partie VI fait l'objet d'une poursuite criminelle, ce sous-alinéa révèle

s. 36(4)(a)(i) and chose to enact this provision as the only means of relieving against it.

[161] Third, and unlike claims subject to the general limitation period in British Columbia's Limitation Act, S.B.C. 2012, c. 13, s. 21, Parliament has not subjected claims under s. 36(1)(a) to any ultimate limitation period. Interpreting s. 36(4)(a)(i) as commencing only when the underlying conduct becomes discoverable will therefore have the effect of leaving defendants at risk of lawsuit indefinitely. As Paul-Erik Veel helpfully observes, the result would be that "[c]ompanies could face claims decades later, well after the employees involved in the alleged conspiracy may have left and documents lost, without any ability to defend themselves" (Waiting forever for the axe to drop? Discoverability and the limitation period for Competition Act claims, Lenczner Slaght, August 12, 2016 (online)). This runs contrary to the certainty and evidentiary rationales that underlie the law of limitations.

[162] Fourth, the two-year limitation period was enacted by Parliament at a time when limitation periods were comparatively much longer. For example, the provincial limitations statutes that were in force at the time in Ontario and British Columbia set out a general limitation period of six years (The Limitations Act, R.S.O. 1970, c. 246, s. 45(1); Statute of Limitations, R.S.B.C. 1960, c. 370, s. 3). The relatively short limitation period at issue here, which commences even before the cause of action fully crystalizes, provides a further indication of the premium that Parliament placed on granting repose to defendants and encouraging diligence by potential plaintiffs.

[163] The statutory provision at issue here is therefore akin to s. 138.14 of Ontario's Securities Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. S.5, which this Court recently néanmoins que le Parlement était conscient de la rigueur du sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) et a choisi de l'édicter parce qu'il s'agissait du seul moyen d'établir une exception à la règle.

[161] Troisièmement, contrairement aux demandes assujetties au délai de prescription général prévu par la Limitation Act, S.B.C. 2012, c. 13, art. 21, de la Colombie-Britannique, le Parlement n'a aucunement assorti le recours fondé sur l'al. 36(1)a) d'un délai de prescription ultime. Si l'on tient pour acquis que le délai prévu au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) ne commence à courir que lorsque le comportement visé peut être découvert, il va sans dire que les défendeurs risquent de se faire poursuivre indéfiniment. Comme Paul-Erik Veel le fait observer à juste titre, il s'ensuivrait que [TRADUCTION] « [l]es entreprises risqueraient de se faire poursuivre des décennies plus tard, longtemps après que les employés ayant participé au complot allégué aient quitté leur poste et que les documents aient été égarés, et sans que les employés ne puissent se défendre » (Waiting forever for the axe to drop? Discoverability and the limitation period for Competition Act claims, Lenczner Slaght, 12 août 2016 (en ligne)). Cela va à l'encontre des justifications en matière de certitude et de preuve qui constituent le fondement du droit en matière de prescription.

[162] Quatrièmement, le Parlement a fixé le délai de prescription à deux ans à une époque où les délais étaient comparativement beaucoup plus longs. Par exemple, les lois provinciales sur la prescription en vigueur à l'époque en Ontario et en Colombie-Britannique prévoyaient un délai de prescription général de six ans (The Limitations Act, R.S.O. 1970, c. 246, par. 45(1); Statute of Limitations, R.S.B.C. 1960, c. 370, art. 3). Le délai relativement court en cause dans la présente affaire, qui commence à courir avant même que la cause d'action ne prenne entièrement forme, révèle là encore la grande importance que le Parlement a attachée aux objectifs d'assurer la tranquillité d'esprit des défendeurs et d'encourager les demandeurs potentiels à faire preuve de diligence.

[163] La disposition statutaire en cause dans l'affaire qui nous occupe s'apparente donc à l'art. 138.14 de la Loi sur les valeurs mobilières, L.R.O. 1990, considered in Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce v. Green, 2015 SCC 60, [2015] 3 S.C.R. 801; because there is no suspension mechanism built into that statutory limitation clause, "the limitation period begins to run regardless of knowledge on the plaintiff's part, be it on when a document containing a misrepresentation is released, when an oral statement containing a misrepresentation is made, or when there is a failure to make timely disclosure" (para. 79). Under both provisions, the limitation period is triggered by an event that is unrelated to the state of the plaintiff's knowledge. This is consistent with a number of judicial decisions that considered this issue as it pertains to s. 36 of the Competition Act (see: CCS Corp. v. Secure Energy Services Inc., 2014 ABCA 96, 575 A.R. 1, at para. 4; Laboratoires Servier v. Apotex Inc., 2008 FC 825, 67 C.P.R. (4th) 241, at para. 488; Garford Pty Ltd. v. Dywidag Systems International, Canada, Ltd., 2010 FC 996, 88 C.P.R. (4th) 7, at paras. 28-33; Eli Lilly and Co. v. Apotex Inc., 2009 FC 991, 80 C.P.R. (4th) 1, at para. 729; Fairview Donut Inc. v. The TDL Group Corp., 2012 ONSC 1252, at paras. 643-46 (CanLII)).

[164] On a different note, I am not persuaded that a short limitation period, to which the discoverability rule does not apply, will defeat the purpose for which Parliament enacted s. 36 and the rest of the Competition Act. Civil liability under s. 36 is not the exclusive means by which persons are held to account for anti-competitive conduct: the statute also provides for a variety of penal and administrative consequences for activities that reduce competition in the marketplace. Moreover, as I will explain later in these reasons, alleged wrongdoers may also be liable at common law or in equity for conduct that constitutes an offence under Part VI. A short limitation period for the cause of action under s. 36(1) therefore does not defeat Parliament's objective of "maintain[ing] and encourag[ing] competition in Canada . . . in order to provide consumers with competitive prices and product choices" (Competition Act, s. 1.1).

c. S.5, de l'Ontario, sur lequel s'est penché récemment notre Cour dans Banque Canadienne Impériale de Commerce c. Green, 2015 CSC 60, [2015] 3 R.C.S. 801. Faute de mécanisme interne de suspension prévu par la loi, « le délai de prescription commenc[e] à courir sans égard à la connaissance du demandeur, que ce soit lors de la publication d'un document contenant une déclaration inexacte de faits, lors d'une déclaration orale contenant une déclaration inexacte de faits, ou en cas de défaut de divulgation en temps utile » (par. 79). Selon les deux dispositions, le point de départ du délai de prescription est déclenché par un événement étranger à la connaissance du demandeur. Ce principe est conforme à plusieurs décisions judiciaires portant sur cette question, qui concerne l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence (voir : CCS Corp. c. Secure Energy Services Inc., 2014 ABCA 96, 575 A.R. 1, par. 4; Laboratoires Servier c. Apotex Inc., 2008 CF 825, 67 C.P.R. (4th) 241, par. 488; Garford Pty Ltd. c. Dywidag Systems International, Canada, Ltd., 2010 CF 996, 88 C.P.R. (4th) 7, par. 28-33; Eli Lilly and Co. c. Apotex inc., 2009 CF 991, 80 C.P.R. (4th) 1, par. 729; Fairview Donut Inc. c. The TDL Group Corp., 2012 ONSC 1252, par. 643-646 (CanLII)).

[164] Dans un autre ordre d'idée, je ne suis pas convaincue qu'un court délai de prescription, auquel la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique pas, viendra contrecarrer l'objectif que visait le Parlement par l'adoption de l'art. 36 et du reste de la Loi sur la concurrence. La responsabilité civile prévue à l'art. 36 n'est pas le seul moyen de tenir une personne responsable d'un comportement anticoncurrentiel : la loi prévoit également un éventail de conséquences pénales et administratives pour des activités qui diminuent la concurrence sur le marché. En outre, comme je l'expliquerai plus loin, l'auteur allégué d'une faute risque d'être tenu responsable en common law ou en equity d'un comportement qui constitue une infraction visée à la partie VI. Par conséquent, le court délai de prescription applicable à la cause d'action prévue au par. 36(1) ne vient pas contrecarrer l'objectif du Parlement de « préserver et de favoriser la concurrence au Canada [. . .] dans le but d'assurer aux consommateurs des prix compétitifs et un choix dans les produits » (Loi sur la concurrence, art. 1.1).

[165] As a result, I disagree with my colleague that the limitation period in s. 36(4)(a)(i) begins to run on the date that the conduct contrary to Part VI is either discovered or discoverable by the plaintiff. Properly interpreted, the triggering event in this statutory provision "clearly occurs without regard to the injured party's knowledge", and the provision does not contain "wording to [the same] effect" as "accrual" of the s. 36 cause of action. A proper application of the Fehr test therefore leads to the conclusion that the discoverability rule does not apply. Applying discoverability would make the limitation period chosen by Parliament virtually meaningless and create uncertainty around the likelihood and timing of significant litigation.

[165] Par conséquent, je suis en désaccord avec la conclusion de mon collègue selon laquelle le délai de prescription établi au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i) commence à courir à la date à laquelle le demandeur a découvert ou aurait pu découvrir le comportement allant à l'encontre de la partie VI. Si l'on interprète cette disposition correctement, le fait déclencheur dont il est question « survient clairement, et sans égard à la connaissance qu'en a la [partie lésée] » et la disposition en cause ne contient pas des « mots [dans le] sens » de « naissance » de la cause d'action fondée sur l'art. 36. L'application correcte du critère de l'arrêt Fehr mène à la conclusion que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique pas. Si cette règle s'appliquait, le délai de prescription choisi par le Parlement perdrait pratiquement tout son sens et laisserait planer l'incertitude quant à la probabilité d'engager de nombreuses poursuites et au moment de les engager.

B. Must There Be a Special Relationship Between the Parties to an Action in Order for the Doctrine of Fraudulent Concealment to Toll the Limitation Period?

B. Pour que la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse reporte le point de départ du délai de prescription, doit-il y avoir une relation spéciale entre les parties à une action?

[166] The fraudulent concealment doctrine is a doctrine that operates to prevent a limitation clause from being used as an instrument of injustice in circumstances where a defendant conceals the facts giving rise to a potential cause of action from a plaintiff. Because it would be unconscionable for that defendant to then rely on the limitation clause as a defence to the claim, equity "suspend[s] the running of the limitation clock until such time as the injured party can reasonably discover the cause of action" (Giroux Estate v. Trillium Health Centre (2005), 74 O.R. (3d) 341 (C.A.), at para. 28). The Canadian approach to this doctrine has its origin in the England and Wales Court of Appeal's decision in Kitchen v. Royal Air Forces Association, [1958] 2 All E.R. 241 (C.A.), in which Lord Evershed, M.R., wrote as follows:

[166] La doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse vise à empêcher que le délai de prescription serve à créer une injustice lorsque le défendeur cache au demandeur les faits à l'origine d'une cause d'action potentielle. Puisqu'il serait abusif pour le défendeur d'invoquer la prescription comme défense, l'equity [TRADUCTION] « permet de suspendre l'écoulement du délai de prescription jusqu'à ce que la partie lésée puisse raisonnablement découvrir l'existence de la cause d'action » (Giroux Estate c. Trillium Health Centre (2005), 74 O.R. (3d) 341 (C.A.), par. 28). La conception canadienne de cette doctrine tire son origine de la décision de la Cour d'appel d'Angleterre et du Pays de Galles, Kitchen c. Royal Air Forces Association, [1958] 2 All E.R. 241 (C.A.), où le maître des rôles lord Evershed s'est exprimé ainsi :

It is now clear . . . that the word "fraud" in s. 26(b) of the Limitation Act, 1939, is by no means limited to common law fraud or deceit. Equally, it is clear . . . that no degree of moral turpitude is necessary to establish fraud within the section. What is covered by equitable fraud is a matter which LORD HARDWICKE did not attempt to define two hundred years ago, and I certainly shall not attempt to do so now, but it is, I think, clear that the phrase covers conduct which, having regard to some special relationship between the two parties concerned, is an unconscionable thing for the one to do towards the other. [Emphasis added; p. 249.]

[TRADUCTION] Il est maintenant clair [. . .] que le mot « fraude » employé à l'al. 26b) de la Limitation Act, 1939, ne désigne pas uniquement une tromperie ou une fraude en common law. Il est également clair [. . .] qu'aucun degré de turpitude morale n'est nécessaire pour prouver qu'il y a fraude au sens de la disposition. Ce que vise la fraude en equity est une chose que le LORD HARDWICKE

[167] The Pioneer Defendants, relying on Kitchen and the jurisprudence that followed, argue that the existence of a "special relationship" between the plaintiff and the defendant is a necessary precondition to the application of the doctrine of fraudulent concealment. Because such a relationship was not pleaded by the Plaintiff, they say that this doctrine cannot operate to toll the limitation period and that the claim against them must fail accordingly.

[168] I would note that this Court has only ever considered the operation of fraudulent concealment in the context of a special relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant. This Court applied that doctrine in Guerin v. The Queen, [1984] 2 S.C.R. 335, after Dickson J. (as he then was) found that the conduct of the Indian Affairs Branch of the federal government was "unconscionable, having regard to the fiduciary relationship between the Branch and the [Musqueam Indian] Band" (p. 390). Likewise, this Court recognized the existence of a special relationship between a parent and a child in M. (K.), a case concerning incest. There, La Forest J. explained that such cases necessarily involve "a grievous abuse of a position of confidence", since "incest is really a double wrong — the act of incest itself is followed by an abuse of the child's innocence to prevent recognition or revelation of the abuse" (p. 58). Canadian courts have also found special relationships to exist between lawyers and clients, physicians and patients, employers and terminated employees, and trustees and beneficiaries (Mew et al., at p. 234).

[169] That said, I am not prepared to go so far as to say that a special relationship — which I understand to be one that is based on trust and confidence — is n'a pas tenté de définir il y a deux cents ans et que je ne tenterai certainement pas de définir maintenant; toutefois, il m'apparaît clair que cette expression vise une conduite qui, compte tenu de l'existence d'une relation spéciale entre les parties concernées, est un abus de la part de l'une envers l'autre. [Je souligne; p. 249.]

[167] S'appuyant sur l'arrêt Kitchen et la jurisprudence subséquente, les défenderesses Pioneer font valoir que l'existence d'une « relation spéciale » entre le demandeur et le défendeur est une condition préalable nécessaire à l'application de la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse. Vu que le demandeur en l'espèce n'a pas allégué l'existence d'une telle relation, elles affirment que cette doctrine ne permet pas de repousser le point de départ du délai de prescription et que la demande déposées contre elles est donc vouée à l'échec.

[168] Je ferais observer que notre Cour n'a toujours examiné l'application de la dissimulation frauduleuse que dans le contexte d'une relation spéciale entre le demandeur et le défendeur. Notre Cour a appliqué cette doctrine dans Guerin c. La Reine, [1984] 2 R.C.S. 335, à la suite de la conclusion du juge Dickson (plus tard juge en chef) qui qualifiait la conduite de la direction des Affaires indiennes du gouvernement fédéral, de « peu scrupuleuse, compte tenu du rapport fiduciaire qui exist[ait] entre la Direction et la bande [indienne Musqueam] » (p. 390). De même, notre Cour a reconnu l'existence d'une relation spéciale entre un parent et son enfant dans M. (K.), une affaire d'inceste. Le juge La Forest y a expliqué que, forcément, dans de tels cas, « on abuse gravement d'une situation de confiance », puisque « l'inceste est réellement un double méfait — l'acte d'inceste est lui-même suivi d'un abus de l'innocence de l'enfant visant à l'empêcher de se rendre compte de l'agression ou d'en révéler l'existence » (p. 58). Les tribunaux canadiens ont également conclu à l'existence d'une relation spéciale entre les avocats et leurs clients, les médecins et leurs patients, les employeurs et les employés congédiés, ainsi que les fiduciaires et les bénéficiaires de la fiducie (Mew et autres, p. 234).

[169] Cela dit, je ne suis pas disposée à aller jusqu'à affirmer que l'existence d'une relation spéciale — fondée, selon moi, sur la confiance — constitue toujours always a prerequisite or a necessary element for the operation of the fraudulent concealment doctrine. In Performance Industries Ltd. v. Sylvan Lake Golf & Tennis Club Ltd., 2002 SCC 19, [2002] 1 S.C.R. 678, Binnie J. explained that fraud in equity is broader than it is at common law, as it captures "transactions falling short of deceit but where the Court is of the opinion that it is unconscientious for a person to avail himself of the advantage obtained" (para. 39 (emphasis added), citing First City Capital Ltd. v. B.C. Building Corp. (1989), 43 B.L.R. 29 (B.C.S.C.), at p. 37). He further noted that this ground for equitable relief "is so infinite in its varieties that the Courts have not attempted to define it", adding that "all kinds of unfair dealing and unconscionable conduct in matters of contract come within its ken" (ibid. (emphasis added), citing McMaster University v. Wilchar Construction Ltd. (1971), 22 D.L.R. (3d) 9 (Ont. H.C.), at p. 19). What constitutes "unconscionable conduct" for the purposes of the doctrine of equitable fraud will vary from case to case and will depend in part on the connection between the parties. This is helpfully explained by Ian Spry in his leading textbook, The Principles of Equitable Remedies: Specific Performance, Injunctions, Rectification and Equitable Damages (9th ed. 2014):

> Fraud in this sense includes, not only fraud in the sense of active dishonesty that gave rise to an action of deceit at law, but also the taking of active steps with the intention of concealing the existence of the material cause of action. The better view is that it includes also, in cases where the defendant is under a special duty to the plaintiff, a failure to disclose the events which have taken place and which give rise to the cause of action in question. So it was said by Lord Evershed that in this context fraud includes "conduct which, having regard to some special relationship between the two parties concerned, is an unconscionable thing for the one to do towards the other". [p. 440]

[170] In effect, in the commercial context, limiting the application of the fraudulent concealment doctrine to only those situations where there is a special relationship between the parties presupposes that, in that context, there can be no injustice resulting une condition préalable ou un élément nécessaire à l'application de la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse. Dans Performance Industries Ltd. c. Sylvan Lake Golf & Tennis Club Ltd., 2002 CSC 19, [2002] 1 R.C.S. 678, le juge Binnie a expliqué que le terme « fraude » comporte un sens plus large en equity qu'en common law, car il s'entend également [TRADUCTION] « d'opérations qui ne sont pas dolosives, mais à l'égard desquelles le tribunal estime qu'il serait abusif de laisser une personne profiter de l'avantage obtenu » (par. 39 (je souligne), citant First City Capital Ltd. c. B.C. Building Corp. (1989), 43 B.L.R. 29 (C.S. C.-B.), p. 37). Le juge Binnie a également fait remarquer que la fraude donnant ouverture à une réparation en equity se présente sous « un nombre tellement infini de formes que les tribunaux n'ont pas tenté de la définir », et ajouté [TRADUCTION] « [qu']elle vise toutes sortes de manœuvres déloyales et de conduites abusives en matière contractuelle » (ibid. (je souligne), citant McMaster University c. Wilchar Construction Ltd. (1971), 22 D.L.R. (3d) 9 (H.C. Ont.), p. 19). Déterminer en quoi consiste « une conduite abusive » pour l'application de la doctrine de la fraude en equity varie d'une affaire à l'autre et dépend en partie du lien qui unit les parties. C'est ce qu'explique de manière utile Ian Spry dans son ouvrage qui fait autorité, The Principles of Equitable Remedies : Specific Performance, Injunctions, Rectification and Equitable Damages (9e éd. 2014) :

> [TRADUCTION] Dans ce sens, la fraude ne s'entend pas uniquement d'une activité malhonnête qui ouvre droit à une action pour dol, mais aussi de la prise de mesures concrètes dans le but de dissimuler l'existence de la cause d'action réelle. De fait, la fraude s'entend également, dans les cas où le défendeur assume un devoir particulier envers le demandeur, du défaut de révéler les faits qui se sont produits et qui donnent naissance à la cause d'action en question. Comme l'expliquait lord Evershed, dans ce contexte, le mot « fraude » vise « une conduite qui, compte tenu de la relation spéciale qui existe entre les parties concernées, est un abus de la part de l'une envers l'autre ». [p. 440]

[170] En fait, dans le contexte commercial, appliquer la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse uniquement dans les cas où il existe une relation spéciale entre les parties suppose que, dans ce contexte, il ne peut y avoir d'injustice découlant de l'application

from the application of a limitation period unless a special relationship exists. Put differently, insofar as there may be situations in which the fraudulent concealment doctrine would rectify an injustice caused to a plaintiff by the application of a limitation period, even though there exists no special relationship between the parties, then limiting the doctrine by requiring such a relationship could be seen as contradicting the very spirit of a doctrine that aims to protect against unconscionable conduct.

[171] Based on this understanding of fraudulent concealment, my view is that it is not plain and obvious that equity can intervene to toll the applicable limitation period only in cases where there exists a special relationship; it may be that it can also intervene in cases — at least in the commercial context, as here — where the plaintiff can demonstrate something commensurate with or tantamount to a special relationship.

[172] To be sure, the mere allegation of a price-fixing agreement among defendants is not sufficient on its own for the fraudulent concealment doctrine to toll the applicable limitation period. If it were, the limitation period for which Parliament specifically provided in s. 36(4) of the Competition Act would be meaningless in these circumstances, given the fact that price-fixing agreements are, in practice, carried out in secret.

[173] In the case at hand, the Plaintiff did not plead that there was a special relationship between the class members and the Pioneer Defendants. However, as I explained above, it is not plain and obvious that this is fatal to the Plaintiff's fraudulent concealment claim, since a special relationship may not be a necessary precondition to the application of the fraudulent concealment doctrine. While the mere allegation of a price-fixing agreement among the Pioneer Defendants is not sufficient on its own for this doctrine to toll the applicable limitation period, in the commercial context, a showing of fraud in equity tantamount to or commensurate with the existence of a special relationship could be enough.

d'un délai de prescription sauf en présence d'une relation spéciale. Autrement dit, dans la mesure où il peut exister une situation dans laquelle cette doctrine corrigerait une injustice que fait subir à un demandeur l'application d'un délai de prescription, malgré l'absence de relation spéciale entre les parties, l'on pourrait considérer que restreindre l'application de la doctrine en exigeant la présence d'une telle relation contredit l'esprit même d'une doctrine qui vise à prévenir les comportements abusifs.

[171] Vu cette conception de la dissimulation frauduleuse, il ne me semble pas évident et manifeste que l'equity peut intervenir pour repousser le point de départ du délai de prescription uniquement dans les cas où il existe une relation spéciale; il se peut qu'elle puisse aussi intervenir dans les cas — du moins en matière commerciale, comme dans le cas présent — où le demandeur peut démontrer quelque chose correspondant ou d'équivalent à une relation spéciale.

[172] À n'en pas douter, la simple allégation que des défendeurs se sont entendus pour fixer les prix ne suffit pas en soi pour que la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse repousse le point de départ du délai de prescription applicable. Si cette allégation était suffisante, le délai de prescription que le Parlement a expressément prévu au par. 36(4) de la Loi sur la concurrence serait dénué de sens dans les circonstances, vu que les ententes de fixation des prix sont, en pratique, mises en œuvre en secret.

[173] En l'espèce, le demandeur n'a pas invoqué l'existence d'une relation spéciale entre les membres du groupe et les défenderesses Pioneer. Toutefois, comme je l'ai expliqué précédemment, il n'est pas évident et manifeste que cette omission porte un coup fatal à l'allégation de dissimulation frauduleuse faite par le demandeur, car une relation spéciale ne saurait être une condition préalable à l'application de la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse. Bien que la simple allégation qu'un accord de fixation des prix a été conclu entre les défenderesses Pioneer ne suffise pas, à elle seule, pour que cette doctrine repousse le point de départ du délai de prescription applicable, dans un contexte commercial, la démonstration qu'il y a eu fraude au sens de l'equity équivalente ou correspondant à l'existence d'une relation spéciale pourrait suffire.

[174] The Plaintiff pleaded that the Pioneer Defendants "took active steps to, and did, conceal the unlawful conspiracy from their customers" (R.F. (Pioneer Appeal, at para. 11)). Given that we are at the certification stage, I am prepared to conclude that it is not "plain and obvious" that the fraudulent concealment doctrine has no application in this case. Whether or not the Plaintiff will be successful in relying on this doctrine to toll the applicable limitation period in these circumstances, however, will depend on what he can prove at trial — that is, whether he can establish a special relationship, or maybe something tantamount to or commensurate with one could suffice.

[175] On the basis of the foregoing, while the discoverability rule does not apply to toll the limitation period, it may be that the fraudulent concealment doctrine does, and, accordingly, I would dismiss the Pioneer Appeal regarding that question. However, there remain three more issues, common to all Defendants, and because the Pioneer Defendants have adopted the submissions of the Toshiba Appeal with regards to these common issues, I will consider them together in the subsequent section. For the aforementioned reasons and for the reasons that follow, I would allow the Pioneer Appeal in part.

III. The Toshiba Appeal

[176] The issues in the Toshiba Appeal, which are common to both appeals, are threefold:

(a) Is it plain and obvious that the Umbrella Purchasers' claims under s. 36(1)(a) of the Competition Act cannot succeed?

(b) Is it plain and obvious that s. 36(1) bars a plaintiff from alleging common law and equitable causes of action in respect of conduct that breaches the prohibitions in Part VI of the Competition Act?

[174] Le demandeur a fait valoir que les défenderesses Pioneer [TRADUCTION] « ont pris des mesures concrètes pour dissimuler, et ont effectivement dissimulé, le complot illégal à leurs clients » (m.i. (pourvoi de Pioneer), par. 11). Comme l'affaire se trouve à l'étape de l'autorisation, je suis disposée à conclure qu'il n'est pas « évident et manifeste » que la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse ne trouve pas application en l'espèce. Toutefois, le point de savoir si le demandeur réussira à faire reporter le point de départ du délai de prescription applicable dans ces circonstances dépendra de ce qu'il peut prouver au procès; autrement dit, sera-t-il en mesure d'établir une relation spéciale, ou peut-être que quelque chose d'équivalent ou de correspondant à cette relation suffira.

[175] Compte tenu de ce qui précède, même si la règle de la possibilité de découvrir ne s'applique pas de manière à reporter le point de départ du délai de prescription, il se peut que la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse s'applique et, par conséquent, je suis d'avis de rejeter le pourvoi de Pioneer quant à cette question. Il reste cependant à trancher trois autres questions, communes à toutes les défenderesses, et, comme les défenderesses Pioneer ont fait leurs les arguments du pourvoi de Toshiba sur ces questions communes, je les examinerai ensemble dans la prochaine section. Pour les motifs qui précèdent et ceux qui suivent, j'accueillerais le pourvoi de Pioneer en partie.

III. Le pourvoi de Toshiba

[176] Le pourvoi de Toshiba soulève trois questions communes aux deux pourvois :

a) Est-il évident et manifeste que les réclamations présentées par les acheteurs sous parapluie sur le fondement de l'al. 36(1)a) de la Loi sur la concurrence ne peuvent être accueillies?

b) Est-il évident et manifeste que le par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence empêche le demandeur d'exercer des recours de common law et d'equity à l'égard d'un comportement qui enfreint les prohibitions prévues à la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence?

(c) What standard must a representative plaintiff meet in order to have loss-related questions certified as "common issues" among indirect purchasers, and has the Plaintiff met this standard in the present case?

[177] I write separately because my views diverge from those of my colleague on all three of these issues. I will address each in turn.

A. Is it Plain and Obvious That the Umbrella Purchasers' Claims Under Section 36(1) of the Competition Act Cannot Succeed?

[178] The first issue in the Toshiba Appeal is whether the Certification Judge erred in holding that the Umbrella Purchasers can advance claims under s. 36(1) of the Competition Act against the Defendants. The Defendants submit that the Certification Judge did so err, and that upholding his conclusion on this point will have the effect of opening up "a potentially limitless scope of liability that could not have been contemplated by Parliament and is contrary to the scheme of the Competition Act" (A.F. (Toshiba Appeal), at para. 97).

[179] I agree with my colleague that resolving this issue requires an exercise in statutory interpretation, under which the words of the Competition Act are to "be read in their entire context and in their grammatical and ordinary sense harmoniously with the scheme of the Act, the object of the Act, and the intention of Parliament" (Bell ExpressVu Limited Partnership v. Rex, 2002 SCC 42, [2002] 2 S.C.R. 559, at para. 26, citing E. Driedger, Construction of Statutes (2nd ed. 1983), at p. 87). However, we must not lose sight of the fact that our contextual approach to statutory interpretation also draws on the relevant legal principles and norms (see R. v. Alex, 2017 SCC 37, [2017] 1 S.C.R. 967, at para. 31; McLean v. British Columbia (Securities Commission), 2013 SCC 67, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 895, at para. 43; ATCO Gas and Pipelines Ltd. v. Alberta (Energy and Utilities Board), 2006 SCC 4, [2006] 1 S.C.R. 140, at para. 48).

c) Quelle est la norme à laquelle doit satisfaire le représentant des demandeurs pour que les questions liées à la perte soient autorisées en tant que « questions communes » aux acheteurs indirects? Le demandeur satisfait-il à cette norme en l'espèce?

[177] Je rédige ces motifs distincts parce que mon opinion et celle de mon collègue divergent sur toutes ces trois questions. Je les examinerai à tour de rôle.

A. Est-il évident et manifeste que les réclamations présentées par les acheteurs sous parapluie sur le fondement du par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence ne peuvent être accueillies?

[178] La première question soulevée dans le pourvoi de Toshiba est de savoir si le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation a commis une erreur en concluant que les acheteurs sous parapluie peuvent poursuivre les défenderesses en justice sur le fondement du par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence. Les défenderesses font valoir que le juge a commis une telle erreur et que la confirmation de sa conclusion sur ce point aura pour effet d'établir une [TRADUCTION] « responsabilité potentiellement illimitée qui ne saurait figurer parmi les objectifs du Parlement et qui va à l'encontre du régime établi par la Loi sur la concurrence » (m.a. (pourvoi de Toshiba), par. 97).

[179] À l'instar de mon collègue, j'estime que pour trancher cette question, il faut se livrer à un exercice d'interprétation statutaire consistant à lire les termes de la Loi sur la concurrence [TRADUCTION] « dans leur contexte global en suivant le sens ordinaire et grammatical qui s'harmonise avec l'[économie] de la loi, l'objet de la loi et l'intention du législateur » (Bell ExpressVu Limited Partnership c. Rex, 2002 CSC 42, [2002] 2 R.C.S. 559, par. 26, citant E. Driedger, Construction of Statutes (2e éd. 1983), p. 87). Cependant, nous ne devons pas perdre de vue le fait que notre méthode contextuelle d'interprétation des lois s'appuie également sur les normes et principes juridiques pertinents (voir R. c. Alex, 2017 CSC 37, [2017] 1 R.C.S. 967, par. 31; McLean c. Colombie-Britannique (Securities Commission), 2013 CSC 67, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 895, par. 43; ATCO Gas and Pipelines Ltd. c. Alberta (Energy & Utilities Board), 2006 CSC 4, [2006] 1 R.C.S. 140, par. 48).

[180] On its face, s. 36(1) appears to be worded broadly enough to capture claims by umbrella purchasers, so long as they can prove that they "suffered loss or damage as a result of" the conduct specified in para. (a) or (b). According to the Defendants, however, this statutory provision must be interpreted in a manner that is consistent with the principles that limit the extent of liability at common law (A.F. (Toshiba Appeal), at paras. 97-99). They point specifically to two legal principles that are relevant for the purposes of liability to umbrella purchasers: indeterminacy and remoteness. At its core, therefore, the issue under this heading raises the question of whether those principles can inform our interpretation of s. 36(1) of the Competition Act — and in particular, the extent of a defendant's liability thereunder in the context of a price-fixing claim brought by persons whose ODD or ODD product was manufactured or supplied by a non-Defendant.

[181] Indeterminacy is a policy consideration that negates the imposition of a duty of care in negligence where it would expose the defendant to "liability in an indeterminate amount for an indeterminate time to an indeterminate class" (Ultramares Corp. v. Touche, 174 N.E. 441 (N.Y.C.A. 1931), at p. 444, per Cardozo C.J.). This concern arises where finding a duty of care between a plaintiff and a defendant would open the floodgates, resulting in "massive, uncontrolled liability" (A. M. Linden et al., Canadian Tort Law (11th ed. 2018), at p. 278). Remoteness is a related principle that limits the scope of liability in negligence where "the harm [is] too unrelated to the wrongful conduct to hold the defendant fairly liable" (Mustapha v. Culligan of Canada Ltd., 2008 SCC 27, [2008] 2 S.C.R. 114, at para. 12, citing A. M. Linden and B. Feldthusen, Canadian Tort Law (8th ed. 2006), at p. 360). According to the authors of the 11th edition of that text:

> The losses or injuries incurred by plaintiffs must not be "too remote" a consequence of the defendants' negligent

[180] À première vue, le libellé du par. 36(1) semble suffisamment général pour englober les réclamations des acheteurs sous parapluie, pourvu qu'ils puissent établir qu'ils ont « subi une perte ou des dommages par suite » des comportements énumérés aux al. a) et b). Les défenderesses affirment cependant qu'il faut interpréter cette disposition conformément aux principes qui limitent l'étendue de la responsabilité en common law (m.a. (pourvoi de Toshiba), par. 97-99). Elles invoquent précisément deux principes de droit pertinents pour la responsabilité envers les acheteurs sous parapluie : l'indétermination et le caractère éloigné. Essentiellement, la question à trancher sous cette rubrique consiste donc à savoir si ces principes peuvent guider notre interprétation du par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence — en particulier l'étendue de la responsabilité des défenderesses dans le contexte d'une action pour fixation des prix intentée par des acheteurs de LDO et de produits munis de LDO fabriqués ou fournis par une personne qui n'est pas une défenderesse.

[181] L'indétermination correspond à une considération de politique générale qui vient écarter l'imposition d'une obligation de diligence en droit de la négligence lorsque le défendeur serait exposé à [TRADUCTION] « une responsabilité pour un montant indéterminé, pour un temps indéterminé et envers une catégorie indéterminée » (Ultramares Corp. c. Touche, 174 N.E. 441 (C.A. N.Y. 1931), p. 444, le juge en chef Cardozo). Ce risque existe dans le cas où la reconnaissance d'une obligation de diligence entre le demandeur et le défendeur favoriserait la multiplication des actions en justice et entraînerait une [TRADUCTION] « responsabilité massive, échappant à tout contrôle » (A. M. Linden et autres, Canadian Tort Law (11e éd. 2018), p. 278). Le caractère éloigné est un principe connexe qui a pour effet de limiter l'étendue de la responsabilité pour négligence si [TRADUCTION] « le préjudice a trop peu de lien avec l'acte fautif pour que le défendeur puisse raisonnablement être tenu responsable » (Mustapha c. Culligan du Canada Ltée, 2008 CSC 27, [2008] 2 R.C.S. 114, par. 12, citant A. M. Linden et B. Feldthusen, Canadian Tort Law (8e éd. 2006), p. 360). Selon les auteurs de la 11e édition de cet ouvrage :

> [TRADUCTION] Les pertes ou les préjudices que subissent les demandeurs ne doivent pas constituer une conséquence

act, in order for compensation to ensue. In other words, to use the older language, negligent defendants who owe a general duty of care are not liable unless their conduct is the "proximate cause" of the plaintiff's losses. Causation alone is not enough; it must be demonstrated that the conduct was the proximate cause of the damage. This issue is better described as the scope or extent of liability issue. [Emphasis in original; p. 307.]

[182] Although both indeterminacy and remoteness relate primarily to liability in negligence, I agree with the Defendants that the same underlying concerns can inform our analysis of the issue at hand, which involves claims under s. 36 of the Competition Act for pure economic losses. In Taylor v. 1103919 Alberta Ltd., 2015 ABCA 201, 602 A.R. 105, at para. 50, for example, the Alberta Court of Appeal discerned "no principled reason why [the principle of remoteness] ought not to apply" to the statutory cause of action in Alberta's Land Titles Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. L-4. In Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. v. Microsoft Corporation, 2013 SCC 57, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 477, Rothstein J. considered the principle of remoteness, among other legal norms, in his analysis of whether indirect purchasers have a cause of action under s. 36 of the Competition Act (paras. 42-45).

[183] Similarly, in Associated General Contractors v. Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519 (1983), the United States Supreme Court held that common law principles — including foreseeability and proximate cause, directness of injury, certainty of damages and privity of contract — can operate to limit the scope of a defendant's liability under the statutory cause of action for anti-competitive conduct in § 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15.[3] In that case, the

[3] That provision read as follows: "Any person who shall be injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws may sue therefor in any district court of the United States in the district in which the defendant resides or is found or has an agent, without respect to the amount in controversy, and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee."

« trop éloignée » de la négligence des défendeurs pour qu'il puisse y avoir indemnisation. Autrement dit, pour reprendre l'ancien libellé, les défendeurs négligents qui ont une obligation générale de diligence n'engagent leur responsabilité que si leur conduite est la « cause immédiate » des pertes subies par les demandeurs. La causalité à elle seule ne suffit pas; il faut établir que la conduite était la cause immédiate du préjudice. Cette question concerne davantage l'étendue ou la portée de la responsabilité. [En italique dans l'original; p. 307.]

[182] Bien que l'indétermination et le caractère éloigné se rapportent principalement à la responsabilité pour négligence, je suis d'accord avec les défenderesses pour dire que les mêmes préoccupations sous-jacentes peuvent guider notre analyse de la question à trancher, qui concerne les réclamations fondées sur l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence pour des pertes purement économiques. Dans l'arrêt Taylor c. 1103919 Alberta Ltd., 2015 ABCA 201, 602 A.R. 105, par. 50, par exemple, la Cour d'appel de l'Alberta n'a relevé [TRADUCTION] « aucune raison logique de ne pas appliquer [le principe du caractère éloigné] » à la cause d'action prévue par la Land Titles Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. L-4, de l'Alberta. Dans Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. c. Microsoft Corporation, 2013 CSC 57, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 477, le juge Rothstein a examiné le principe du caractère éloigné, parmi d'autres normes juridiques, dans son analyse de la question de savoir si l'acheteur indirect avait une cause d'action au titre de l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence (par. 42-45).

[183] De même, dans Associated General Contractors c. Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519 (1983), la Cour suprême des États-Unis a statué que les principes de common law — dont la prévisibilité et la cause immédiate du préjudice, son caractère direct, la certitude du dommage et le lien contractuel — peuvent avoir pour effet de limiter l'étendue de la responsabilité du défendeur au regard du droit d'action prévu à l'art. 4 de la Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15[3] pour

[3] Cette disposition était ainsi rédigée : [TRADUCTION] « Toute personne qui a subi un préjudice dans ses activités commerciales ou relativement à ses biens par suite d'un comportement allant à l'encontre des lois antitrust peut engager des poursuites devant tout tribunal de district des États-Unis dans le district où le défendeur réside, se trouve ou dispose d'un mandataire, sans égard au montant en litige, et elle peut recouvrer le triple des dommages subis, ainsi que les dépens relatifs à l'instance, y compris les honoraires d'avocats raisonnables. »

majority held that a plaintiff could not recover under that provision for harm allegedly suffered by reason of the defendants' coercion of third parties. Although Stevens J. recognized that "[a] literal reading of the statute is broad enough to encompass every harm that can be attributed directly or indirectly to the consequences of an antitrust violation" (p. 529), he nevertheless held that > the question whether the [plaintiff] may recover for the injury it allegedly suffered by reason of the defendants' coercion against certain third parties cannot be answered simply by reference to the broad language of [the applicable statutory provision]. Instead . . . the question requires us to evaluate the plaintiff's harm, the alleged wrongdoing by the defendants, and the relationship between them. [p. 535]

[184] The issue in the instant case turns on whether the Defendants can be held liable for loss or damage of an economic nature suffered by the Umbrella Purchasers, a group of claimants who bought from non-Defendants ODDs that were manufactured or supplied by non-Defendants. Can the Umbrella Purchasers recover as against the Defendants — companies with which they have no commercial relationship whatsoever? In my view, the answer is no. Any overcharges that those claimants may have incurred were ultimately the direct result of pricing choices made by those non-Defendant manufacturers and suppliers, regardless of whether or not those choices were influenced by broader trends in the market. In short, the Defendants have control over their own business decisions, but not over those of non-Defendant manufacturers and suppliers. For this reason, and bearing in mind the principles underlying indeterminacy and remoteness, I am of the view that it would be unfair to hold the Defendants liable to the Umbrella Purchasers where they had no control over such liability. Indeed, interpreting s. 36(1) in the manner suggested by the Plaintiff might well expose the Defendants to unbounded liability — capable of encompassing not only the losses of those Umbrella Purchasers themselves, but also the losses of "[a]nyone who comportement anticoncurrentiel. Dans cette affaire, les juges majoritaires ont conclu que le demandeur ne pouvait obtenir réparation en vertu de cette disposition pour un préjudice qu'il aurait subi par suite de la coercition exercée par le défendeur à l'endroit de tiers. Bien que le juge Stevens ait reconnu [TRADUCTION] « [qu'une] interprétation littérale de la loi est suffisamment large pour englober tout préjudice attribuable directement ou indirectement aux conséquences d'une violation des lois antitrust » (p. 529), il a néanmoins conclu ce qui suit :

> [TRADUCTION] . . . pour trancher la question de savoir si le [demandeur] peut obtenir réparation pour le préjudice qu'il aurait subi par suite de la coercition exercée par les défendeurs à l'endroit de certains tiers, il ne suffit pas de faire uniquement mention du libellé général [de la disposition statutaire applicable]. En fait, [. . .] nous sommes appelés à évaluer le préjudice subi par le demandeur, la faute reprochée aux défendeurs, ainsi que la relation entre eux. [p. 535]

[184] La question en litige dans le cas présent consiste à savoir si les défenderesses peuvent être tenues responsables de la perte ou des dommages de nature économique subis par les acheteurs sous parapluie, un groupe de demandeurs qui ont acheté d'autres personnes que les défenderesses des LDO fabriqués ou fournis par des personnes qui ne sont pas les défenderesses. Ces acheteurs peuvent-ils se faire indemniser par les défenderesses — des entreprises avec lesquelles les acheteurs sous parapluie n'ont aucune relation commerciale? À mon avis, il faut répondre à cette question par la négative. Toute majoration que ces demandeurs auraient pu absorber était en fin de compte la conséquence directe des choix en matière de prix effectués par ces fabricants et fournisseurs autres que les défenderesses, que ces choix aient ou non été influencés par des tendances générales du marché. Bref, les défenderesses exercent un contrôle sur leur propres décisions d'affaires, mais non sur celles des autres fabricants et fournisseurs. Pour ce motif, et gardant à l'esprit les principes qui sous-tendent l'indétermination et le caractère éloigné, je suis d'avis qu'il serait injuste de tenir les défenderesses responsables envers les acheteurs sous parapluie alors qu'elles n'avaient aucun contrôle sur cette responsabilité. En effet, interpréter was affected by the economic ripples downstream of umbrella purchasers" (A.F. (Toshiba Appeal), at para. 105). In my opinion, this provision must be construed in a manner that prevents such a cascade of liability.

[185] This is consistent with the views expressed by Perell J. of the Ontario Superior Court of Justice in Shah v. LG Chem, Ltd., 2015 ONSC 6148, 390 D.L.R. (4th) 87, and by a unanimous Divisional Court in Shah v. LG Chem, Ltd., 2017 ONSC 2586, 413 D.L.R. (4th) 546. Shah involved the certification of a price-fixing class action brought by direct, indirect and umbrella purchasers of lithium ion batteries ("LIBs") manufactured by various defendants. On the question of whether the umbrella purchasers in that case could succeed in their claim under s. 36(1) of the Competition Act, Perell J. held as follows:

> . . . the Umbrella Purchasers' claim would impose indeterminate liability on the Defendants and the claim would be unfair because the law, generally speaking, does not impose liability on one person for the conduct of others, and in the instance of the Umbrella Purchasers, the Plaintiffs seek to make the Defendants liable for the advertent, inadvertent, voluntary or involuntary conduct of the non-Defendants in taking advantage of the price-fixing. [para. 175]

The Divisional Court unanimously upheld Perell J.'s conclusion on this point. As Nordheimer J. (as he then was) explained:

> What is alleged here is that the non-defendant [LIB] manufacturers took advantage of the higher market prices being set by the [defendants] through their conspiracy, to similarly increase the prices of their LIBs or LIB products. Assuming that that occurred, the [defendants] had no le par. 36(1) de la manière suggérée par le demandeur pourrait fort bien exposer les défenderesses à une responsabilité illimitée — susceptible de viser non seulement les pertes subies par les acheteurs sous parapluie, mais aussi les pertes de [TRADUCTION] « [t]oute personne qui a subi les conséquences de nature économique en aval des acheteurs sous parapluie » (m.a. (pourvoi de Toshiba), par. 105). À mon sens, il y a lieu d'interpréter cette disposition de manière à prévenir une telle responsabilité en cascade.

[185] Cette conclusion cadre avec le point de vue exprimé par le juge Perell, de la Cour supérieure de justice de l'Ontario, dans Shah c. LG Chem, Ltd., 2015 ONSC 6148, 390 D.L.R. (4th) 87, et par la Cour divisionnaire à l'unanimité dans Shah c. LG Chem, Ltd., 2017 ONSC 2586, 413 D.L.R. (4th) 546. Cette affaire concernait l'autorisation d'un recours collectif en matière de fixation des prix, intenté par les acheteurs directs, indirects et sous parapluie de piles au lithium-ion (« Pli ») fabriquées par diverses défenderesses. S'agissant de la question de savoir si les acheteurs sous parapluie pouvaient obtenir gain de cause dans leur recours fondé sur le par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence, le juge Perell a conclu ce qui suit :

> [TRADUCTION] . . . le recours des acheteurs sous parapluie imposerait aux défenderesses une responsabilité indéterminée et entraînerait une iniquité, car, de manière générale, le droit ne tient pas une personne responsable de la conduite d'autrui. Dans le cas des acheteurs sous parapluie, les demandeurs cherchent à tenir les défenderesses responsables de la conduite adoptée délibérément ou non en tirant un avantage volontairement ou non, par des personnes qui ne sont pas les défenderesses, car elles ont tiré parti de la fixation des prix. [par. 175]

La Cour divisionnaire a confirmé à l'unanimité la conclusion du juge Perell sur ce point. Comme l'expliquait le juge Nordheimer (maintenant juge à la Cour d'appel de l'Ontario) :

> [TRADUCTION] Il est allégué en l'espèce que les fabricants de [Pli] autres que les défenderesses ont tiré avantage de la hausse des prix sur le marché fixés par les [défenderesses] à la suite du complot qu'elles ont formé pour faire ainsi augmenter le prix de leurs Pli et de leurs produits munis control over the actions of the non-defendant manufacturers. First and foremost, they had no control over whether the non-defendant manufacturers chose to match prices. Second, they had no control over the volume of LIBs or LIB products, that the non-defendant manufacturers chose to produce and sell. [para. 34]

[186] Both Perell J. and Nordheimer J. analogized the issue of liability to umbrella purchasers in Shah to the issue of indeterminacy that had arisen in R. v. Imperial Tobacco Canada Ltd., 2011 SCC 42, [2011] 3 S.C.R. 45. In that case, a number of tobacco companies were facing lawsuits relating to the sale of "light" or "mild" cigarettes. Those companies, in turn, brought third-party claims against the Government of Canada, alleging that if they were found liable to the plaintiffs, they would be entitled to compensation from Canada for (among other things) negligent misrepresentation. The argument was that Canada had negligently misrepresented the health attributes of low-tar cigarettes to consumers and to those tobacco companies. Canada countered that allowing the tobacco companies' claims in negligent misrepresentation "would result in indeterminate liability", as "Canada had no control over the number of cigarettes being sold" (para. 97). This Court accepted Canada's argument; McLachlin C.J., writing for a unanimous Court, explained as follows:

I agree with Canada that the prospect of indeterminate liability is fatal to the tobacco companies' claims of negligent misrepresentation. Insofar as the claims are based on representations to consumers, Canada had no control over the number of people who smoked light cigarettes. . . .

The risk of indeterminate liability is enhanced by the fact that the claims are for pure economic loss. In Design Services Ltd. v. Canada, 2008 SCC 22, [2008] 1 S.C.R. 737, the Court, per Rothstein J., held that "in cases of de Pli. Si l'on tient cela pour avéré, les [défenderesses] n'exerçaient aucun contrôle sur les actes des autres fabricants. D'abord et avant tout, les défenderesses n'avaient aucun contrôle sur le choix des autres fabricants de fixer des prix identiques. Ensuite, les défenderesses n'avaient aucun contrôle sur la quantité de Pli et de produits munis de Pli que les autres fabricants avaient choisi de fabriquer et de vendre. [par. 34]

[186] Les juges Perell et Nordheimer ont fait une analogie entre la question de la responsabilité envers les acheteurs sous parapluie soulevée dans l'arrêt Shah et la question de l'indétermination soulevée dans l'arrêt R. c. Imperial Tobacco Canada Ltée, 2011 CSC 42, [2011] 3 R.C.S. 45. Dans cette affaire, des compagnies de tabac ont fait l'objet de poursuites pour avoir vendu des cigarettes « légères » ou « douces ». À leur tour, ces compagnies ont mis en cause le gouvernement du Canada, alléguant que, si elles étaient tenues responsables envers les demandeurs, elles auraient le droit d'être indemnisées par le Canada, entre autres, pour déclarations inexactes faites par négligence. Elles ont fait valoir que le Canada avait fait preuve de négligence en déclarant faussement aux fumeurs et aux compagnies de tabac que la cigarette à teneur réduite en goudron serait moins nocive pour la santé. Le Canada s'est opposé à cet argument en soutenant que, si l'on acceptait les allégations des compagnies de tabac en matière de déclaration inexacte faite par négligence, « cela entraînerait une responsabilité indéterminée de sa part » puisque « le nombre de cigarettes vendues était indépendant de sa volonté » (par. 97). Notre Cour a accepté l'argument du Canada, et la juge en chef McLachlin, rédigeant les motifs unanimes, a expliqué ce qui suit :

Je suis d'accord avec le Canada pour dire que la possibilité d'une responsabilité indéterminée porte un coup fatal aux allégations des compagnies de tabac relatives aux déclarations inexactes faites par négligence. Dans la mesure où les allégations reposent sur des déclarations faites aux consommateurs, le Canada n'exerçait aucun contrôle sur le nombre de fumeurs de cigarettes légères. . .

Le risque de responsabilité indéterminée est aggravé par le caractère purement financier de la perte alléguée. Dans Design Services Ltd. c. Canada, 2008 CSC 22, [2008] 1 R.C.S. 737, sous la plume du juge Rothstein, la Cour a pure economic loss, to paraphrase Cardozo C.J., care must be taken to find that a duty is recognized only in cases where the class of plaintiffs, the time and the amounts are determinate" (para. 62). If Canada owed a duty of care to consumers of light cigarettes, the potential class of plaintiffs and the amount of liability would be indeterminate. [Emphasis added; paras. 99-100.]

[187] Although that case concerned indeterminacy in relation to the imposition of a duty of care in negligence, I agree with Nordheimer J. that "the fundamental principle is the same" (para. 32): s. 36(1) should not be interpreted in a manner that makes the Defendants liable to an indeterminate class of people for losses of an indeterminate nature that occurred as a result of business decisions over which they had no control. This accords with the approach taken by the United States Supreme Court in respect of a similar statutory cause of action for anti-competitive conduct: "An antitrust violation may be expected to cause ripples of harm to flow through the Nation's economy; but 'despite the broad wording of § 4 [of the Clayton Act] there is a point beyond which the wrongdoer should not be held liable'" (Associated General Contractors, at pp. 534-35, citing Blue Shield of Virginia v. McCready, 457 U.S. 465 (1982), at pp. 476-77, citing Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720 (1977), at p. 760, per Brennan J. dissenting). In my view, a preferable reading of the statutory cause of action in s. 36(1) of the Competition Act is one that, consistent with the principles underlying indeterminacy and remoteness which operate at common law, limits the potential scope of liability faced by defendants of price-fixing claims to losses flowing from their own pricing decisions, not those of third parties. This promotes the value of certainty so that commercial enterprises "have some appreciation of what risk is to be borne by whom" (Canadian National Railway Co. v. Norsk Pacific Steamship Co., [1992] 1 S.C.R. 1021, at p. 1139).

[188] The Ontario Divisional Court's decision in Shah was subsequently overturned by the Court of

mentionné que « dans les cas de perte purement financière, il faut, pour paraphraser le juge en chef Cardozo, prendre soin de ne reconnaître une obligation que dans la mesure où l'on peut déterminer la catégorie des demandeurs, la période et les montants en cause » (par. 62). Si le Canada avait une obligation de diligence envers les fumeurs de cigarettes légères, le nombre potentiel de demandeurs et l'ampleur de la responsabilité seraient indéterminés. [Je souligne; par. 99-100.]

[187] Même si cet arrêt concernait l'indétermination en lien avec l'imposition d'une obligation de diligence en négligence, je suis d'accord avec le juge Nordheimer pour dire que [TRADUCTION] « le principe fondamental est le même » (par. 32) : le par. 36(1) ne devrait pas être interprété de manière à ce que les défenderesses soient tenues responsables envers une catégorie indéterminée de personnes pour des pertes de nature indéterminée découlant de décisions d'affaires qui étaient indépendantes de leur volonté. Cette approche concorde avec celle adoptée par la Cour suprême des États-Unis à propos d'une cause d'action similaire conférée par la loi pour comportement anticoncurrentiel : [TRADUCTION] « On peut s'attendre à ce qu'une violation des lois antitrust ait des répercussions en chaîne sur l'économie de la nation; toutefois, "en dépit du libellé général de l'art. 4 [de la Clayton Act], le contrevenant ne peut être tenu responsable au-delà d'un certain point" » (Associated General Contractors, p. 534-535, citant Blue Shield of Virginia c. McCready, 457 U.S. 465 (1982), p. 476-477, citant Illinois Brick Co. c. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720 (1977), p. 760, le juge Brennan, dissident). À mon avis, il est préférable d'interpréter la cause d'action prévue au par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence conformément aux principes sous-tendant l'indétermination et le caractère éloigné qui s'appliquent en common law, de manière à limiter l'étendue de la responsabilité des défendeurs dans des recours en matière de fixation des prix aux pertes découlant de leurs propres décisions, et non de celles prises par des tiers. Cette interprétation promeut la notion de certitude, de sorte que les entreprises commerciales ont « une idée du risque qui doit être assumé et par qui » (Cie des chemins de fer nationaux du Canada c. Norsk Pacific Streamship Co., [1992] 1 R.C.S. 1021, p. 1139).

[188] La décision Shah de la Cour divisionnaire de l'Ontario a été infirmée subséquemment par la Cour Appeal, for reasons substantially similar to those set out by my colleague (Shah v. LG Chem, Ltd., 2018 ONCA 819, 142 O.R. (3d) 721). The unanimous panel in that case took the position that "normative concerns about indeterminate liability" in negligence do not apply in the context of the statutory claim under ss. 36 and 45 of the Competition Act, since those concerns "have already been taken care of by Parliament" (para. 47). Like my colleague, the panel stated that, first, the scope of s. 36(1) limits recovery to persons who can prove that they suffered loss or damage "as a result of" the alleged conspiratorial conduct and that, second, the subjective mens rea in s. 45 "limits the reach of liability to those who, at a minimum, specifically intend to agree upon anti-competitive conduct" (ibid., at para. 51, cited in Brown J.'s reasons, at para. 75).

[189] In my respectful view, neither of those considerations actually protects against the risk of limitless liability that would flow from recognizing the availability of umbrella purchaser claims under s. 36(1). On the first point, the fact that the text of this provision reads as permitting recovery for any person capable of proving that their loss was sustained "as a result of" an alleged price-fixing conspiracy does not end the interpretative exercise. As I explained above, the dispute here concerns whether those words should be taken as allowing recovery for any and all losses that can conceivably be linked to the alleged wrongdoing, or whether relevant legal norms and principles can assist in construing the provision so as to circumscribe what might otherwise be potentially indeterminate liability. And on the second point, while I accept that the mens rea in s. 45 limits liability to defendants who intend to agree upon anti-competitive conduct, this still tells us nothing about the scope of their liability under s. 36(1) — in other words, it tells us who is liable but not for what they are actually liable.

d'appel, pour des motifs en substance semblables à ceux exposés par mon collègue (Shah c. LG Chem, Ltd., 2018 ONCA 819, 142 O.R. (3d) 721). Dans cet arrêt, la formation unanime était d'avis que les [TRADUCTION] « préoccupations normatives quant à la responsabilité indéterminée » dans les causes de négligence ne s'appliquent pas dans le contexte des actions fondées sur les art. 36 et 45 de la Loi sur la concurrence, car « le législateur a déjà répondu à ces préoccupations » (par. 47). À l'instar de mon collègue, la formation unanime a affirmé, d'une part, que la portée du par. 36(1) limite l'indemnisation aux personnes qui peuvent démontrer avoir subi une perte ou des dommages « par suite » du complot allégué et, d'autre part, que la mens rea subjective requise à l'art. 45 [TRADUCTION] « limite l'étendue de la responsabilité à ceux qui, au minimum, ont eu l'intention expresse de convenir d'un comportement anticoncurrentiel » (ibid., par. 51, cité dans les motifs du juge Brown, par. 75).

[189] Avec égards, aucune de ces considérations ne protège réellement les fabricants contre le risque de responsabilité illimitée qui découlerait du fait de reconnaître que les acheteurs sous parapluie peuvent déposer des réclamations sur le fondement du par. 36(1). En ce qui concerne le premier point, le fait que le libellé de cette disposition soit interprété comme permettant à toute personne pouvant démontrer qu'elle a subi une perte « par suite » du complot allégué de fixation des prix d'être indemnisée ne met pas fin à l'exercice d'interprétation. Comme je l'ai déjà expliqué, le litige en l'espèce porte sur la question de savoir s'il faut interpréter cette disposition comme autorisant l'indemnisation pour toute perte qui peut vraisemblablement être associée aux fautes reprochées ou si les normes et principes juridiques applicables peuvent aider à interpréter cette disposition de manière à circonscrire ce qui pourrait autrement être une responsabilité indéterminée. En ce qui concerne le deuxième point, bien que j'admette que la mens rea prévue à l'art. 45 limite la responsabilité aux défendeurs qui ont l'intention de s'entendre sur un comportement anticoncurrentiel, ceci ne nous apprend rien à propos de l'étendue de leur responsabilité prévue au par. 36(1). Autrement dit, il indique qui doit être tenu responsable, mais pas de quoi ces défendeurs sont réellement responsables.

[190] Before concluding, I will add one final thought. Permitting umbrella purchaser claims under s. 36(1) opens up the possibility of recovery for overcharges that result from "conscious parallelism" — a phenomenon which occurs when parties not involved in a price-fixing conspiracy deliberately choose to adjust their prices in order to match those of their competitors, in the absence of any actual collusion between them. As recently observed by the Quebec Court of Appeal in R. v. Proulx, 2016 QCCA 1425, at para. 32 (CanLII), "[a]dopting a comparable or identical pricing policy without an agreement — which by definition requires a meeting of minds — does not fall within the scope of s. 45 of the Competition Act".[4] An interpretation of s. 36(1) that allows umbrella purchaser claims for these kinds of independent pricing decisions would effectively grant a right to recover (a) in circumstances where those decisions — to which the umbrella purchasers' alleged overcharges are directly attributable — are neither criminally prohibited nor actionable in and of themselves, and (b) from parties who neither made nor benefitted from those decisions.

[191] All of this leads me to conclude that s. 36(1) of the Competition Act should not be interpreted in a manner that would permit claimants to recover from defendants for any losses that in some way flowed from the alleged conspiracy. Doing so would have the undesirable effect of exposing defendants to liability that is potentially limitless in scope for loss and damage that are too remote from any price-fixing that occurred. I do not think that this could have been

[190] Avant de conclure, j'ajouterai une dernière réflexion. Laisser libre cours aux réclamations fondées sur le par. 36(1) des acheteurs sous parapluie ouvre la possibilité d'un recouvrement des hausses de prix découlant d'un « parallélisme conscient » — un phénomène qui se produit lorsque les parties ne participant pas à un complot de fixation des prix choisissent délibérément d'ajuster leurs prix à ceux de leurs concurrents, sans qu'on puisse parler de collusion. Comme l'a récemment fait remarquer la Cour d'appel du Québec dans l'arrêt R. c. Proulx, 2016 QCCA 1425, par. 32 (CanLII), « [l]'adoption d'une politique de prix comparables ou identiques, sans l'existence d'une entente qui par définition nécessite l'accord de deux volontés, ne tombe donc pas sous le coup de l'article 45 de la Loi sur la concurrence »[4]. Interpréter le par. 36(1) de façon à permettre aux acheteurs sous parapluie d'intenter une action pour ce type de décision indépendante quant à l'établissement des prix conférerait un droit de recouvrement a) dans les cas où ces décisions — auxquelles la majoration alléguée qui aurait été refilée à ces acheteurs est directement attribuable — ne sont ni interdites par le droit criminel ni susceptibles de poursuites en soi, et b) auprès de parties qui n'ont pas pris ces décisions et n'en ont pas tiré profit.

[191] Tout cela m'amène à conclure que le par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence ne devrait pas recevoir une interprétation qui permettrait aux demandeurs de se faire indemniser par des défendeurs pour toute perte découlant d'une façon ou d'une autre du complot allégué. Cela aurait pour effet indésirable d'exposer des défendeurs à une responsabilité potentiellement illimitée, ainsi qu'à une responsabilité à l'égard de pertes et de dommages qui sont trop éloignés de toute

[4] In its Competitor Collaboration Guidelines (December 2009), the Competition Bureau of Canada explains that it > does not consider that the mere act of independently adopting a common course of conduct with awareness of the likely response of competitors or in response to the conduct of competitors, commonly referred to as "conscious parallelism", is sufficient to establish an agreement for the purpose of subsection 45(1). However, parallel conduct coupled with facilitating practices, such as sharing competitively sensitive information or activities that assist competitors in monitoring one another's prices, may be sufficient to prove that an agreement was concluded between the parties. [p. 7]

[4] Dans ses Lignes directrices sur la collaboration entre concurrents (décembre 2009), le Bureau de la concurrence du Canada explique qu'il

> ne considère pas que le simple fait d'adopter indépendamment un comportement commun en connaissant la réaction probable des concurrents ou en réponse au comportement des concurrents, qu'on appelle communément « parallélisme conscient », suffit à établir qu'il y a eu entente au sens du paragraphe 45(1). Cependant, lorsqu'il est combiné à des pratiques facilitantes comme la mise en commun de renseignements délicats sur le plan de la concurrence ou des activités qui aident les concurrents à surveiller réciproquement leurs prix, le comportement parallèle peut suffire à prouver qu'une entente a été conclue entre les parties. [p. 7]

Parliament's intention when it enacted this statutory right of action.

[192] In light of the principles to which I have referred above, my view is that the line should be drawn at loss and damage that flowed from the pricing decisions of the Defendants themselves (that is, the loss claimed by the direct and indirect purchasers), and not those that are attributable to third parties who did not participate in — but who nevertheless would have benefitted from — the alleged price-fixing conspiracy. Because the Umbrella Purchasers' losses are indeed attributable to the pricing decisions of non-Defendant ODD manufacturers and suppliers, I find it plain and obvious that their claims in this action under s. 36(1) of the Competition Act cannot succeed.

B. Is It Plain and Obvious That Section 36(1) Bars a Plaintiff From Alleging Common Law and Equitable Causes of Action in Respect of Conduct That Breaches the Prohibitions in Part VI of the Competition Act?

[193] The second issue raised in the Toshiba Appeal turns on whether the cause of action in s. 36(1) of the Competition Act is the exclusive civil remedy for conduct that breaches the criminal offence provisions in Part VI of that statute. The Defendants argue that it is, and that allowing claims in respect of such conduct under common law and equitable causes of action undermines the principle of parliamentary sovereignty. The Plaintiff, by contrast, says that Parliament did not intend to preclude private law remedies for such conduct when it enacted s. 36(1) of the Competition Act.

[194] At its core, the issue under this heading is whether a claimant can rely on the common law and equity as a supplement to the right of action under s. 36(1) of the Competition Act — or put differently, whether a claimant can advance a common law or fixation des prix. Je ne crois pas que cela ait pu être l'intention du Parlement lorsqu'il a édicté la disposition de la Loi qui confère ce droit d'action.

[192] Compte tenu des principes susmentionnés, je suis d'avis qu'une ligne de démarcation doit être tracée entre les pertes et dommages qui découlent des décisions des défenderesses elles-mêmes quant à la fixation des prix (c'est-à-dire les pertes déplorées par les acheteurs directs et indirects) et les pertes et dommages qui sont attribuables aux tiers qui n'ont pas participé au complot allégué de fixation des prix, mais qui en auraient néanmoins bénéficié. Comme les pertes des acheteurs sous parapluie sont attribuables aux décisions relatives à la fixation des prix prises par des fabricants et fournisseurs de LDO autres que les défenderesses, je suis d'avis qu'il est évident et manifeste que leurs réclamations fondées en l'espèce sur le par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence ne peuvent être accueillies.

B. Est-il évident et manifeste que le par. 36(1) empêche le demandeur d'exercer des recours de common law et d'equity à l'égard d'un comportement qui enfreint les prohibitions prévues à la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence?

[193] La deuxième question soulevée dans le pourvoi de Toshiba consiste à savoir si la cause d'action fondée sur le par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence est le seul recours civil possible contre un comportement allant à l'encontre des dispositions de la partie VI de cette loi relativement aux infractions criminelles. Les défenderesses répondent par l'affirmative et soutiennent qu'autoriser les réclamations liées à un tel comportement sur le fondement de la common law et de l'equity mine le principe de la souveraineté parlementaire. Le demandeur soutient plutôt que le Parlement n'avait pas l'intention d'écarter la possibilité d'exercer des recours en droit privé à l'encontre d'un tel comportement lorsqu'il a édicté le par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence.

[194] La question à trancher sous cette rubrique consiste essentiellement à savoir si un demandeur peut se prévaloir de la common law et de l'equity en sus du droit d'action reconnu par le par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence. Autrement dit, il s'agit de equitable cause of action instead of, or together with, the statutory cause of action in respect of the same allegation of anti-competitive conduct.

[195] In her leading textbook, Sullivan on the Construction of Statutes (6th ed. 2014), Professor Ruth Sullivan explains that "[t]he issue of supplementation arises when there is overlap between legislation and the common law such that both may apply to a particular set of facts and also when legislation is incomplete in that it says nothing of, or does not fully address, a matter relating to the subject of the legislation" (p. 549). On this point, she adds the following:

> When the issue of supplementing legislation arises, the focus may be on the application of common law rules, entitlement to common law remedies or access to common law courts. Although rules, remedies and jurisdiction raise distinct concerns, in each case the fundamental question is the same: is it permissible in the circumstances to supplement the legislation by resorting to the common law? If there is a conflict, the answer is clearly no. In the absence of conflict, the answer to the question depends first of all on legislative intent, which is discovered using the usual methods of interpretation. However, the courts pay particular attention to whether the legislation in question constitutes a complete or exhaustive code. The adequacy of the legislation and the continuing usefulness of the common law rule, remedy or jurisdiction are important considerations. [Emphasis added; p. 549.]

[196] As with the Umbrella Purchasers issue, resolving this issue requires an exercise in statutory interpretation: it must be determined, based on a proper reading of the Competition Act, whether Parliament intended s. 36(1) to provide the exclusive civil remedy for persons claiming to have suffered loss or damage as a result of conduct contrary to Part VI.

[197] Like my colleague, I begin my analysis with the presumption against interpreting legislation in a déterminer si un demandeur peut invoquer une cause d'action fondée sur la common law ou l'equity au lieu d'une cause d'action prévue par la loi, ou les deux, à l'égard d'une même allégation de comportement anticoncurrentiel.

[195] Dans son ouvrage de premier plan intitulé Sullivan on the Construction of Statutes (6e éd. 2014), la professeure Ruth Sullivan explique que [TRADUCTION] « [l]a question de la complémentarité se pose lorsqu'il existe un chevauchement tel entre la loi et la common law que les deux peuvent s'appliquer à un ensemble de faits donné et également lorsque la loi est incomplète parce qu'elle ne fait aucune mention, ou ne traite pas entièrement, d'une question relative à l'objet du texte législatif » (p. 549). À cet égard, la professeure Sullivan ajoute ce qui suit :

> [TRADUCTION] Lorsque la question de la complémentarité de la loi se pose, l'accent peut être mis sur l'application des règles de common law, sur le droit aux recours de common law ou sur l'accès aux tribunaux de common law. Bien que les règles, les recours et la compétence soulèvent des préoccupations distinctes, dans chaque cas, la question fondamentale est la même : est-il permis dans les circonstances de compléter la loi en ayant recours à la common law? S'il y a conflit, la réponse est manifestement non. En l'absence de conflit, la réponse à cette question dépend d'abord de l'intention du législateur, que l'on discerne par les méthodes habituelles d'interprétation. Toutefois, les tribunaux accordent une attention particulière à la question de savoir si la loi en question constitue un code complet ou exhaustif. Le caractère suffisant de la loi et l'utilité continue de la règle, du recours ou de la compétence de common law sont des considérations importantes. [Je souligne; p. 549.]

[196] Tout comme pour la question des acheteurs sous parapluie, un exercice d'interprétation législative s'impose pour trancher la question en cause : il faut déterminer, suivant une juste interprétation de la Loi sur la concurrence, si le Parlement voulait que le par. 36(1) réserve exclusivement le recours civil possible aux personnes qui prétendent avoir subi une perte ou un préjudice par suite d'un comportement allant à l'encontre de la partie VI.

[197] À l'instar de mon collègue, je me pencherai d'abord sur la présomption selon laquelle il ne faut manner that would interfere with common law rights. According to Professor Sullivan, such a presumption allows "the courts to insist on precise and explicit direction from the legislature before accepting any change", so as to shield the law "from inadvertent legislative encroachment" (p. 539). Such an intention can be found either in the express wording of the statute or by necessary implication (Gendron v. Supply and Services Union of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, Local 50057, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 1298, at pp. 1315-16).

[198] I agree with my colleague that the Competition Act does not expressly preclude claimants from supplementing the right of action in s. 36(1) with claims based on causes of action at common law or in equity. However, I am not convinced that the reasoning in Gendron applies to the case at hand; while that case dealt with a statutory provision that codified a common law right, s. 36 of the Competition Act is distinguishable in that it created a new right that did not exist before. Instead, I would resolve this issue simply on the basis that the coexistence of statutory and common law or equitable claims arising from conduct contrary to Part VI of the Competition Act is in fact contemplated by s. 62 of that statute, which reads as follows:

62 Except as otherwise provided in [Part VI], nothing in [Part VI] shall be construed as depriving any person of any civil right of action.

[199] In my view, this provision evinces a legislative intention that the provisions of Part VI (which is titled "Offences in Relation to Competition") not abrogate any right of action a claimant has — which might include a right of action founded on the tort of unlawful means conspiracy or in unjust enrichment — that is predicated upon a breach of the offence provisions of the Competition Act. As the Manitoba Court of Appeal recognized in Westfair Foods Ltd. v. Lippens Inc. (1989), 64 D.L.R. (4th) 335, the inclusion of this provision in the statutory framework suggests pas interpréter une loi d'une manière qui porte atteinte aux droits reconnus par la common law. Selon la professeure Sullivan, une telle présomption permet aux [TRADUCTION] « tribunaux de mettre l'accent sur des directives précises et explicites formulées par le législateur avant d'accepter tout changement » afin d'éviter tout « empiétement législatif involontaire » sur la loi (p. 539). Pareille intention peut être dégagée du libellé explicite de la loi ou par inférence nécessaire (Gendron c. Syndicat des approvisionnements et services de l'Alliance de la Fonction publique du Canada, section locale 50057, [1990] 1 R.C.S. 1298, p. 1315-1316).

[198] Je suis d'accord avec mon collègue pour dire que la Loi sur la concurrence n'empêche pas expressément les demandeurs de présenter, en sus du droit d'action prévu au par. 36(1), des réclamations fondées sur des causes d'action reconnues en common law ou en equity. Je ne suis toutefois pas convaincue de l'applicabilité en l'espèce du raisonnement adopté dans Gendron; si cette affaire portait sur une disposition statutaire qui codifiait un droit issu de la common law, on peut distinguer l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence en ce qu'il a créé un nouveau droit qui n'existait pas auparavant. Je suis plutôt d'avis de régler cette question en affirmant simplement que la coexistence des recours fondés sur la loi et des recours fondés sur la common law ou l'equity découlant d'un comportement allant à l'encontre de la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence est en fait prévue à l'art. 62 de la Loi, qui est ainsi rédigé :

62 Sauf disposition contraire de la [partie VI], celle-ci n'a pas pour effet de priver une personne d'un droit d'action au civil.

[199] À mon avis, cette disposition illustre une intention du législateur de prévoir que les dispositions de la partie VI (intitulée « Infractions relatives à la concurrence ») n'abrogent pas les droits d'action dont jouit un demandeur — y compris les droits fondés sur le délit de complot exercé par des moyens illégaux ou sur l'enrichissement sans cause — qui reposent sur une violation des dispositions de la Loi sur la concurrence en matière d'infractions. Comme l'a reconnu la Cour d'appel du Manitoba dans l'arrêt Westfair Foods Ltd. c. Lippens Inc. (1989), 64 D.L.R. (4th) 335, that Parliament did not intend the provisions of the Competition Act to intrude upon the provinces' jurisdiction over civil rights and liberties.

[200] The fact that s. 62 applies only to Part VI of the Competition Act — and therefore is not directly applicable to s. 36(1), which is instead located in Part IV — is not, in my view, consequential. The cause of action created by s. 36(1)(a) is expressly tied to conduct that would constitute an offence under Part VI of the statute. This Court recognized in General Motors, at p. 673, that the purpose of this remedial provision is to "help enforce the substantive aspects of the Act", such as the prohibitions against anti-competitive conduct.

[201] It is also essential to note that s. 62 uses the phrase "any civil right of action", which suggests that Parliament contemplated the preservation of the various civil rights of action that may exist in respect of conduct prohibited under Part VI, beyond the one provided for in s. 36(1). Indeed, the former provision would be redundant and pointless if it merely affirmed what the latter already states: that perpetrators of conduct prohibited by Part VI are subject both to criminal prosecution and to civil proceedings under s. 36(1)(a). This is especially the case given that s. 36(2) and s. 36(4)(a)(ii) indicate that statutory claims can be brought against defendants even after any criminal proceedings against them were finally disposed of.

[202] Therefore, when I read the words of s. 62 "in their entire context and in their grammatical and ordinary sense harmoniously with the scheme of the Act, the object of the Act and the intention of Parliament" (Driedger, at p. 87; Bell ExpressVu, at para. 26), I am led to the conclusion that this provision has the effect of preserving all civil rights of action that a claimant may have — over and above the right of action available under s. 36(1) of the Competition Act — in respect of anti-competitive conduct that would constitute an offence under Part VI of that Act. Indeed, s. 62 would be meaningless if s. 36(1) l'inclusion de cette disposition dans le cadre législatif donne à penser que le Parlement ne voulait pas que les dispositions de la Loi sur la concurrence portent atteinte à la compétence des provinces sur les droits et libertés civils.

[200] Le fait que l'art. 62 s'applique seulement à la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence — et qu'il ne s'applique donc pas directement au par. 36(1), qui se trouve plutôt à la partie IV — me paraît sans conséquence. La cause d'action créée par l'al. 36(1)a) est expressément liée au comportement qui constituerait une infraction sous le régime de la partie VI de la Loi. Dans l'arrêt General Motors, p. 673, notre Cour a reconnu que l'objet de cette disposition réparatrice est de « faciliter l'exécution des aspects fondamentaux de la Loi », comme les prohibitions visant le comportement anticoncurrentiel.

[201] Il est également essentiel de souligner que l'art. 62 contient l'expression « un droit d'action au civil », ce qui donne à penser que le Parlement a envisagé de préserver les différents droits d'action au civil qui peuvent être exercés par suite d'un comportement interdit par la partie VI en plus de celui prévu au par. 36(1). En effet, l'art. 62 serait redondant et inutile s'il confirmait simplement ce que dit déjà le par. 36(1), à savoir que les auteurs d'un comportement prohibé par la partie VI peuvent faire l'objet à la fois de poursuites criminelles et de poursuites civiles en vertu de l'al. 36(1)a). Cela est d'autant plus vrai puisque le par. 36(2) et le sous-al. 36(4)a)(ii) prévoient qu'une action peut être intentée contre un défendeur même après qu'il eut été statué de façon définitive sur la poursuite au criminel.

[202] Par conséquent, lorsque je lis les termes de l'art. 62 [TRADUCTION] « dans leur contexte global en suivant le sens ordinaire et grammatical qui s'harmonise avec l'[économie] de la loi, l'objet de la loi et l'intention du [Parlement] » (Driedger, p. 87; Bell ExpressVu, par. 26), j'en arrive à la conclusion que cette disposition a pour effet de préserver tous les droits d'action au civil que peut exercer le demandeur — en sus du droit d'action prévu au par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence — relativement à un comportement anticoncurrentiel qui constituerait une infraction sous le régime de la partie VI de cette loi.

were to be interpreted as exhaustive in respect of civil claims for such conduct.

[203] On the basis of this reasoning, I agree with the result reached by my colleague: the courts below did not err in permitting the Plaintiff to advance the pleaded common law and equitable causes of action together with the statutory cause of action under s. 36(1) in this case.

C. What Standard Must a Representative Plaintiff Meet in Order to Have Loss-Related Questions Certified as "Common Issues" Among Indirect Purchasers, and Has the Plaintiff Met This Standard in the Present Case?

[204] The final issue on appeal relates to the requirement of common issues in s. 4(1)(c) of the Class Proceedings Act. What is it that the Plaintiff must be capable of establishing at the certification stage in order to provide the necessary assurance that his loss-related questions are capable of resolution on a common basis, and does his proposed methodology for establishing loss satisfy this requirement?

(1) Background

[205] The existence of common issues among the individual class members lies at the very heart of a class proceeding. The procedural ability to aggregate these issues and to consider them at once, and for all class members, during a common issues trial is what alleviates the need for each class member to seek redress via separate actions (M. A. Eizenga et al., Class Actions Law and Practice (2nd ed. (loose-leaf)), at p. 3-101). The authors of The Law of Class Actions in Canada explain the importance of commonality in the following terms:

The presence of significant common issues provides the access to justice and judicial economies that ultimately

En effet, l'art. 62 serait vide de sens si le par. 36(1) était interprété comme une disposition exhaustive en ce qui concerne les recours civils relatifs à ce type de comportement.

[203] Sur le fondement de ce raisonnement, je souscris au résultat auquel arrive mon collègue : les tribunaux d'instance inférieure n'ont pas commis d'erreur en permettant au demandeur de faire valoir les causes d'action en common law et en equity ainsi que la cause d'action fondée sur le par. 36(1) en l'espèce.

C. Quelle est la norme à laquelle doit satisfaire le représentant des demandeurs pour que les questions liées à la perte soient autorisées comme des « questions communes » aux acheteurs indirects? Le demandeur satisfait-il à cette norme en l'espèce?

[204] La dernière question à trancher dans le pourvoi concerne l'exigence des questions communes énoncée à l'al. 4(1)(c) de la Class Proceedings Act. À l'étape de l'autorisation, que doit être en mesure d'établir le demandeur pour convaincre le tribunal que ses questions liées à la perte peuvent être résolues sur une base commune, et est-ce que la méthode qu'il propose pour prouver la perte respecte cette exigence?

(1) Contexte

[205] L'existence de questions communes aux membres individuels du groupe est au cœur même d'un recours collectif. La capacité, sur le plan procédural, de regrouper ces questions communes et de les étudier une seule fois, et ce pour l'ensemble des membres du groupe, lors de l'audition des questions communes élimine la nécessité que chacun des membres du groupe demande réparation en intentant des actions distinctes (M. A. Eizenga et autres, Class Actions Law and Practice (2e éd. (feuilles mobiles)), p. 3-101). Les auteurs de The Law of Class Actions in Canada expliquent l'importance de la notion de caractère commun en ces termes :

[TRADUCTION] L'existence de questions communes importantes favorise l'accès à la justice et l'économie des justify certifying a class proceeding. Common issues are what actually unite and define the class. The mere fact that a group of people suffers a wrong does not justify certifying a class proceeding unless there are common issues to be decided for the defendant and the members of the group.

(W. K. Winkler et al. (2014), at p. 107)

For this reason, the determination of what constitute the common issues in any proposed class action is a key aspect of a certification motion.

[206] In his Proposed Litigation Plan, the Plaintiff submitted a number of questions for resolution on a common basis at trial (A.R., vol. II, at pp. 125-27), including questions that essentially relate to whether the class members suffered a loss in connection with the alleged price-fixing conspiracy.

[207] In order to satisfy the Certification Judge that these loss-related questions were capable of resolution on a common basis, the Plaintiff adduced evidence from an expert economist named Dr. Keith Reutter. In his expert report, Dr. Reutter took the position that "all members of the proposed Class would have been impacted" by the alleged price-fixing conspiracy and that "there are accepted methods available to estimate any overcharge and aggregate damages that resulted from the alleged wrongdoing using evidence common to the proposed Class" (A.R., vol. III, at p. 119). His methods would involve constructing an economic model to estimate the "but-for" price of the ODDs, that is, their price if the alleged anti-competitive conduct had not occurred (Certification Judge's reasons, at para. 156), and would include "econometric methods based on multiple regression to determine the overcharge and pass-through rates" (ibid., at para. 158).

[208] The suggestion that Dr. Reutter's methodology could establish that all class members would have been impacted by the alleged price-fixing conspiracy was called into question during his cross-examination, ressources judiciaires, ce qui, au bout du compte, justifie l'autorisation d'un recours collectif. En fait, les questions communes unifient et définissent le groupe. Le simple fait qu'un groupe de personnes subisse un tort ne justifie pas l'autorisation d'un recours collectif, à moins qu'il faille se prononcer sur des questions communes au défendeur et aux membres du groupe.

(W. K. Winkler et autres (2014), p. 107)

Pour ce motif, dans le contexte d'une requête en autorisation d'un recours collectif projeté, il est essentiel d'identifier les questions communes.

[206] Dans le plan de déroulement de l'instance qu'il a proposé, le demandeur a énoncé plusieurs questions qui peuvent faire l'objet d'une résolution commune (d.a., vol. II, p. 125-127). Certaines de ces questions visaient essentiellement à savoir si les membres du groupe ont subi une perte liée au complot allégué de fixation des prix.

[207] Dans le but de convaincre le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation que ces questions liées à la perte pouvaient faire l'objet d'une résolution commune, le demandeur a produit le rapport d'un économiste expert, M. Keith Reutter. Dans son rapport d'expert, M. Reutter soutient que [TRADUCTION] « tous les membres du groupe projeté auraient été touchés » par le complot allégué de fixation des prix et que « certaines méthodes permettraient d'estimer la valeur de toute hausse et de tout préjudice global ayant découlé des actes fautifs reprochés au moyen de la preuve commune au groupe projeté » (d.a., vol. III, p. 119). Ses méthodes supposeraient l'élaboration d'un modèle économique servant à évaluer le prix hypothétique des LDO s'il n'y avait pas eu comportement anticoncurrentiel (motifs du juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation, par. 156), de même que l'utilisation de [TRADUCTION] « méthodes économétriques fondées sur la régression multiple pour calculer la majoration et le montant de la perte transférée » (ibid., par. 158).

[208] Toutefois, la suggestion selon laquelle la méthode de M. Reutter permettrait de prouver que tous les membres du groupe ont été touchés par le complot allégué de fixation des prix a été mise en question however (see A.R., vol. V, at pp. 210-25). The Defendants therefore resisted certification of the loss-related questions, arguing that the Plaintiff's methodology could not address the issue of loss on a class-wide basis because it would not make it possible to answer the Plaintiff's proposed questions at trial in respect of every class member — either by establishing that all of them were overcharged for their ODDs, or by identifying those who were, and distinguishing them from those who were not. In the Defendants' submission, unless it could be determined at the common issues trial that a loss had actually been incurred by at least some specific indirect purchasers, then those loss-related questions could not be decided on a common basis at trial and should therefore not be certified as common issues.

[209] For his part, the Plaintiff argued that, from a factual standpoint, his expert's methodology would be capable of establishing that all class members (including the indirect purchasers) had suffered a loss. As an alternative legal argument, he submitted that he was not required to demonstrate to the Certification Judge that, using his expert's methodology, he would be able to prove at trial that all class members were harmed or to distinguish those who were from those who were not in an individualized fashion (R.F. (Toshiba Appeal), at para. 96). Instead, his position was that it would be sufficient, at the certification stage, if the methodology were simply capable of proving that loss had reached the indirect purchaser level in the distribution chain — that is, that some overcharges were passed on to some indirect purchasers, without having to identify which ones.

[210] What is key, for the purposes of the commonality issue, is the difference between demonstrating that loss reached the indirect purchaser level — that is, that some overcharges were passed on to some unidentified indirect purchasers — and proving that loss reached all or an identified group of indirect purchasers.

pendant son contre-interrogatoire (d.a., vol. V, p. 210-225). Les défenderesses se sont donc opposées à l'autorisation des questions liées à la perte. Elles ont fait valoir que la méthode du demandeur ne pouvait aborder la question de la perte subie à l'échelle du groupe, car elle ne permettra pas de répondre aux questions proposées par le demandeur au procès à l'égard de chacun des membres du groupe — que ce soit en prouvant que tous les membres du groupe ont payé un prix trop élevé pour leurs LDO ou en identifiant les membres qui ont payé un prix trop élevé et en les distinguant de ceux qui ont payé un juste prix. Selon les arguments des défenderesses, à moins qu'il ne soit déterminé lors de l'audition des questions communes qu'une perte a effectivement été subie par au moins quelques acheteurs indirects précis, ces questions liées à la perte ne peuvent être tranchées sur une base commune au procès et ne devraient donc pas être autorisées en tant que questions communes.

[209] Pour sa part, le demandeur a fait valoir que, du point de vue factuel, la méthode proposée par son expert permettrait de prouver que tous les membres du groupe (y compris les acheteurs indirects) ont subi une perte. À titre d'argument juridique subsidiaire, il a affirmé qu'il n'était pas tenu de démontrer au juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation que la méthode proposée par son expert lui permettrait de prouver au procès que tous les membres du groupe ont subi un préjudice ou d'établir de manière individuelle une distinction entre ceux qui ont subi un préjudice et ceux qui n'en ont pas subi (m.i. (pourvoi de Toshiba), par. 96). Le demandeur était plutôt d'avis qu'il lui suffirait de démontrer, à l'étape de l'autorisation, que sa méthode permet d'établir que la perte a atteint le niveau de l'acheteur indirect situé en aval dans la chaîne de distribution. Autrement dit, il lui suffirait d'établir qu'une certaine majoration atteint certains acheteurs indirects, sans avoir à les identifier individuellement.

[210] En ce qui concerne la question du caractère commun, l'élément clé est la différence entre la démonstration que la perte a atteint le niveau de l'acheteur indirect — c'est-à-dire qu'une certaine majoration a atteint quelques acheteurs indirects non identifiés — et la preuve que la perte a atteint la totalité des acheteurs indirects ou un groupe précis d'acheteurs indirects.

[211] My colleague seems to accept that there is some basis in fact for finding that Dr. Reutter's methodology will have a reasonable prospect of establishing, at the common issues trial, that all of the indirect purchasers suffered a loss. In his view, however, nothing turns on this given his conclusion as to the law:

> . . . it is not necessary, in order to support certifying loss as a common question, that a plaintiff's expert's methodology establish that each and every class member suffered a loss. Nor is it necessary that Dr. Reutter's methodology be able to identify those class members who suffered no loss so as to distinguish them from those who did. Rather, in order for loss-related questions to be certified as common issues, a plaintiff's expert's methodology need only be sufficiently credible or plausible to establish loss reached the requisite purchaser level. [Emphasis added; para. 102.]

[212] For the purposes of my analysis, I am prepared to accept that there is some basis in fact on which the Certification Judge could have found that the proposed methodology would be capable of proving at trial that loss had reached the indirect purchaser level. My disagreement with my colleague lies elsewhere. In my view, a methodology that is incapable of establishing at trial that at least some identifiable indirect purchasers actually suffered a loss, but that can instead show only that loss occurred somewhere at the indirect purchaser level in the distribution chain, does not allow any of the loss-related questions proposed by the Plaintiff in this case to be answered on a "common" or "class-wide" basis.

(2) Analysis

[213] In Microsoft, this Court affirmed that, in order to have a question certified as a common issue, the representative plaintiff must show that there is some basis in fact for the commonality requirement in s. 4(1)(c) of the Class Proceedings Act — that is, that the question be capable of resolution on a class-wide basis (see paras. 99-114). What the "some basis in fact" standard requires in any given case depends on what it is that the proposed question asks;

[211] Mon collègue semble accepter qu'il existe un certain fondement factuel pour conclure que la méthode de M. Reutter permettra raisonnablement d'établir, lors de l'audition des questions communes, que tous les acheteurs indirects ont subi une perte. Il estime cependant que cela n'est pas pertinent compte tenu de sa conclusion à l'égard du droit :

> . . . il n'est pas nécessaire, pour justifier l'autorisation de la question de la perte en tant que question commune, que la méthode proposée par un expert du demandeur établisse que chaque membre du groupe a subi une perte. Il n'est pas non plus nécessaire que la méthode de M. Reutter permette d'identifier les membres du groupe qui n'ont subi aucune perte de manière à les distinguer de ceux qui en ont subi une. Pour que les questions relatives à la perte soient certifiées en tant que questions communes, la méthode de l'expert du demandeur n'a qu'à être suffisamment valable ou acceptable pour établir que l'acheteur du niveau requis a subi une perte. [Je souligne; par. 102.]

[212] Aux fins de mon analyse, je suis disposée à accepter qu'il existe un certain fondement factuel permettant au juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation de conclure que la méthode proposée permettrait d'établir au procès que la perte a atteint le niveau des acheteurs indirects. Mon désaccord avec mon collègue porte sur un autre point. À mon sens, une méthode qui ne permet pas d'établir au procès qu'au moins un certain nombre d'acheteurs indirects identifiables ont effectivement subi une perte et qui permet seulement de démontrer que la perte a atteint le niveau de l'acheteur indirect situé en aval dans la chaîne de distribution ne peut être utilisée pour résoudre l'une ou l'autre des questions relatives à la perte proposées par le demandeur en l'espèce de façon commune ou à l'échelle du groupe.

(2) Analyse

[213] Dans l'arrêt Microsoft, notre Cour a affirmé que pour qu'une question soit autorisée en tant que question commune, le représentant des demandeurs doit établir l'existence d'un certain fondement factuel pour respecter l'exigence de la question commune énoncée à l'al. 4(1)(c) de la Class Proceedings Act, c'est-à-dire que la question doit pouvoir faire l'objet d'une résolution à l'échelle du groupe (voir par. 99-114). Dans un cas donné, la norme fondée different questions will impose different requirements upon the representative plaintiff.

[214] In the case at hand, the loss-related questions proposed by the Plaintiff include the following: What damages, if any, are payable to the Class Members pursuant to s. 36 of the Competition Act? Did the Class Members suffer economic loss? Have the Class Members suffered a corresponding deprivation in the amount of the overcharges on the sale of ODDs?

[215] The term "Class Member" or "Class Members" is defined in the Plaintiff's Proposed Litigation Plan as "one or more members of the proposed class", which is comprised of:

All persons resident in British Columbia who, during the period commencing at least as early as January 1, 2004 and continuing through January 1, 2010 (the "Class Period"), purchased optical disc drives ("ODD") or products that contained ODD. [A.R., vol. II, at p. 114]

[216] The broad definition of the term "Class Members", and the use of that term in stating the proposed loss-related questions, reflects the possibility that the Plaintiff might not be able to prove at trial that everyone who purchased an ODD or an ODD product actually suffered a loss in connection with the alleged price-fixing conspiracy. Rather, the evidence might be such that loss is provable only in respect of some class members. My colleague says that these questions are stated in such a way that they "could be taken as asking whether all class members suffered economic loss or whether any class members suffered economic loss", and adds that "because they could be taken in two different ways they might, following the common issues trial, be answered in different ways" (para. 91 (emphasis in original)).

[217] Regardless of how flexible these questions might be, however, they cannot be answered on a "class-wide" or "common" basis at trial if the sur l'existence d'« un certain fondement factuel » dépend de la teneur de la question proposée; des exigences différentes seront imposées au représentant des demandeurs selon les questions soulevées.

[214] En l'espèce, les questions liées à la perte proposées par le demandeur sont notamment les suivantes : Quel est le montant des dommages-intérêts, s'il en est, payables aux membres du groupe conformément à l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence? Les membres du groupe ont-ils subi une perte financière? Les membres du groupe se sont-ils appauvris d'un montant égal à celui de la majoration du prix de vente des LDO?

[215] Les termes [TRADUCTION] « membre du groupe » et « membres du groupe » sont définis dans le plan de déroulement de l'instance proposé par le demandeur comme « un ou plusieurs membres du groupe projeté », qui est composé de :

[TRADUCTION] Tous les résidents de la Colombie-Britannique qui, pendant la période allant au moins du 1er janvier 2004 au 1er janvier 2010 (la « période visée par le recours collectif ») ont acheté des lecteurs de disques optiques (« LDO ») ou des produits munis de LDO. [d.a., vol. II, p. 114]

[216] La définition large du terme « membres du groupe », et l'utilisation de ce terme pour formuler les questions proposées liées à la perte, démontrent la possibilité que le demandeur ne soit pas en mesure de prouver au procès que toutes les personnes ayant acheté un LDO ou un produit muni d'un LDO ont effectivement subi une perte à cause du complot allégué de fixation des prix. En fait, la preuve pourrait être telle que seule la perte qu'auraient subie certains membres du groupe est susceptible d'être prouvée. Mon collègue affirme que ces questions sont formulées de manière à ce qu'elles « puissent être interprétées comme demandant si tous les membres du groupe ont subi une perte économique ou si l'un d'entre eux a subi une perte économique » et il ajoute que, « [p]arce que ces questions peuvent recevoir deux interprétations différentes, elles pourraient donc, à la suite de l'audition des questions communes, appeler des réponses différentes » (par. 91 (en italique dans l'original)).

[217] Aussi souples ces questions soient-elles, cependant, elles ne peuvent faire l'objet d'une résolution commune ou d'une résolution à l'échelle du Plaintiff's methodology is incapable of establishing loss in any identifiable manner. This is because mere proof that some loss reached the indirect purchaser level in the distribution chain does not dispose of any element of liability for any indirect purchaser, nor does it otherwise advance the litigation in any meaningful way.

(a) Proof at trial that loss reached the indirect purchaser level, without anything more, does not dispose of any element of liability for any indirect purchaser

[218] As my colleague seems to implicitly acknowledge in his reasons, proof that loss reached the indirect purchaser level is insufficient for any finding of liability to be made at the common issues trial. This is because loss or deprivation suffered by the claimant is an essential element of the causes of action under s. 36 of the Competition Act, under the common law tort of civil conspiracy, and in unjust enrichment. This is key: the Defendants can be held liable under these causes of action only to those class members who (among other things) are found to have suffered a loss in connection with the price fixing.[5] For this reason, the common issues trial judge cannot impose any liability on the Defendants if the Plaintiff cannot show which class members actually suffered a loss. Individual trials will then be necessary (see Brown J.'s reasons, at para. 120; C.A. reasons, at para. 158; Shah (Ont. S.C.J.), at para. 69). Indeed, the Plaintiff acknowledges as much in his Proposed Litigation Plan, when he states the following:

The common issues trial will determine the existence and scope of the alleged conspiracy. The common issues trial groupe au procès si la méthode du demandeur ne permet pas d'établir la perte d'une manière identifiable. Il en est ainsi parce que la simple preuve qu'une partie de la perte a atteint le niveau de l'acheteur indirect situé en aval dans la chaîne de distribution ne permet pas de démontrer l'existence d'une responsabilité quelconque envers les acheteurs indirects ou de faire progresser l'instance d'une manière utile.

a) La simple démonstration au procès que la perte a atteint le niveau de l'acheteur indirect ne prouve pas l'existence d'une responsabilité quelconque envers les acheteurs indirects

[218] Comme semble le reconnaître implicitement mon collègue dans ses motifs, la preuve que la perte a atteint le niveau d'acheteurs indirects est insuffisante pour tirer une conclusion de responsabilité lors de l'audition des questions communes. Cela tient au fait que la perte ou l'appauvrissement subi par le demandeur est un élément essentiel des causes d'actions fondées sur l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence, fondées sur le délit de complot civil reconnu en common law et en matière d'enrichissement sans cause. Ceci est un élément clé : les défenderesses peuvent être tenues responsables relativement à ces causes d'action seulement envers les membres du groupe à l'égard desquels (notamment) il est conclu qu'ils ont subi une perte liée à la fixation des prix[5]. Pour cette raison, le juge saisi des questions communes ne peut imputer une quelconque responsabilité aux défenderesses si le demandeur n'est pas en mesure d'identifier les membres du groupe qui ont effectivement subi une perte. Des procès individuels seraient donc nécessaires (voir les motifs du juge Brown, par. 120; motifs de la C.A., par. 158; Shah (C.S.J. Ont.), par. 69). En effet, le demandeur le reconnaît dans son plan de déroulement de l'instance proposé, où il affirme ce qui suit :

[TRADUCTION] L'audition des questions communes permettra de déterminer l'existence et l'ampleur du complot

[5] The degree of "connection" varies among the different causes of action. For example, the cause of action under s. 36 of the Competition Act is for loss or damage that has occurred "as a result of" anti-competitive conduct. Recovery in unjust enrichment is available to a claimant who suffered a deprivation that "corresponds" to the defendant's enrichment in circumstances where there is no juristic reason for either the enrichment or the deprivation.

[5] Le degré d'un « lien » varie parmi les différentes causes d'action. Par exemple, la cause d'action fondée sur l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence concerne la perte ou les dommages subis « par suite » d'un comportement anticoncurrentiel. Un demandeur ayant subi un appauvrissement qui « correspond » à l'enrichissement du défendeur peut demander un recouvrement pour enrichissement sans cause lorsqu'aucun motif juridique ne justifie l'enrichissement ou l'appauvrissement.

may also determine on a class-wide basis whether Class Members were injured, leading to a finding of liability and a determination of aggregate damages. If the common issues trial does not determine injury on a class-wide basis, liability and damages will be determined on an individual basis in a manageable process. [Emphasis added; A.R., vol. II, at p. 118.]

[219] This, of course, makes sense when we consider the fact that a class action is essentially an aggregation of individual actions that share common issues of fact and law (Western Canadian Shopping Centres Inc. v. Dutton, 2001 SCC 46, [2001] 2 S.C.R. 534, at para. 27). In Bou Malhab v. Diffusion Métromédia CMR Inc., 2011 SCC 9, [2011] 1 S.C.R. 214, this Court reiterated that the class proceeding is merely a procedural vehicle which "cannot be used to make up for the absence of one of the constituent elements of the cause of action", adding that such a proceeding "can succeed only if each claim it covers, taken individually, could serve as a basis for court proceedings" (para. 52 (emphasis added)). By way of illustration, a claimant in an individual trial would not be entitled to a remedy under s. 36(1) of the Competition Act merely upon establishing that loss had reached some unidentified persons at his or her level in the distribution chain; that claimant would likewise have no such entitlement in a class proceeding (see Sun-Rype Products Ltd. v. Archer Daniels Midland Company, 2013 SCC 58, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 545, at para. 75).

[220] Moreover, and again as my colleague's reasons make clear, the aggregate damages provisions of the Class Proceedings Act (ss. 29 to 34) cannot be of any assistance to the Plaintiff in establishing liability to all of the class members in a case like this, where proof of loss is a constituent element of the cause(s) of action. As Rothstein J. explained in Microsoft:

The aggregate damages provisions of the CPA relate to remedy and are procedural. They cannot be used to establish liability (2038724 Ontario Ltd. v. Quizno's Canada allégué. Elle permettra également de déterminer à l'échelle du groupe si les membres du groupe ont subi un préjudice, ce qui mènera à une conclusion de responsabilité et à la fixation des dommages-intérêts globaux. Si l'audition des questions communes ne permet pas de déterminer qu'un préjudice a été subi à l'échelle du groupe, la responsabilité et les dommages-intérêts seront établis individuellement au moyen d'un processus fonctionnel. [Je souligne; d.a., vol. II, p. 118.]

[219] Bien sûr, cela est logique lorsque nous tenons compte du fait qu'un recours collectif est essentiellement un regroupement d'actions individuelles qui partagent des questions communes de fait et de droit (Western Canadian Shopping Centres Inc. c. Dutton, 2001 CSC 46, [2001] 2 R.C.S. 534, par. 27). Dans l'arrêt Bou Malhab c. Diffusion Métromédia CMR inc., 2011 CSC 9, [2011] 1 R.C.S. 214, notre Cour a réaffirmé que le recours collectif ne constitue qu'un mécanisme procédural dont « on ne peut s'autoriser [. . .] pour suppléer à l'absence d'un des éléments constitutifs du droit d'action », ajoutant qu'une telle procédure « ne pourra réussir que si chacune des réclamations prises individuellement justifiait le recours aux tribunaux » (par. 52 (je souligne)). À titre d'exemple, le demandeur qui intente une action à titre individuel n'aurait pas droit à une réparation au titre du par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence simplement en établissant qu'une perte a été subie par des personnes non identifiées situées à son niveau de la chaîne de distribution; ce demandeur n'aurait pas non plus droit à une telle réparation dans un recours collectif (voir Sun-Rype Products Ltd. c. Archer Daniels Midland Company, 2013 CSC 58, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 545, par. 75).

[220] De plus, et comme mon collègue l'indique clairement dans ses motifs, les dispositions de la Class Proceedings Act relatives aux dommages-intérêts globaux (art. 29 à 34) ne peuvent être d'aucune utilité au demandeur pour établir la responsabilité envers tous les membres du groupe dans une affaire comme celle qui nous occupe, où la preuve de la perte est un élément constitutif de la ou des causes d'action. Comme l'a expliqué le juge Rothstein dans Microsoft :

Les dispositions de la CPA sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux ont trait à la réparation, sont de nature procédurale et ne peuvent permettre d'établir la responsabilité

Restaurant Corp., 2010 ONCA 466, 100 O.R. (3d) 721, at para. 55). The language of s. 29(1)(b) specifies that no question of fact or law, other than the assessment of damages, should remain to be determined in order for an aggregate monetary award to be made. As I read it, this means that an antecedent finding of liability is required before resorting to the aggregate damages provision of the CPA. This includes, where required by the cause of action such as in a claim under s. 36 of the Competition Act, a finding of proof of loss. I do not see how a statutory provision designed to award damages on an aggregate basis can be said to be used to establish any aspect of liability. [Emphasis added; para. 131.]

(2038724 Ontario Ltd. c. Quizno's Canada Restaurant Corp., 2010 ONCA 466, 100 O.R. (3d) 721, par. 55). Le libellé de l'al. 29(1)(b) veut qu'il ne reste à trancher que des questions de fait ou de droit touchant à la détermination de la réparation pécuniaire pour qu'une réparation pécuniaire globale puisse être accordée. À mon sens, il faut une conclusion préalable de responsabilité avant d'appliquer les dispositions de la CPA sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux, ce qui comprend, lorsque l'exige une cause d'action comme celles prévues à l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence, une conclusion sur la preuve de la perte. Je ne vois pas comment une disposition visant à accorder des dommages-intérêts de manière globale pourrait être le fondement d'une conclusion sur quelque volet de la responsabilité. [Je souligne; par. 131.]

[221] The aggregate damages provisions of the Class Proceedings Act therefore cannot be interpreted and applied in such a way as to give a remedy to class members who could not obtain a remedy in an individual trial due to their inability to show that they suffered a loss in connection with the alleged conspiracy. It is important not to conflate the assessment of aggregate damages with the rationale for awarding them.

[221] Les dispositions de la Class Proceedings Act relatives aux dommages-intérêts globaux ne peuvent donc être interprétées et appliquées de manière à accorder une réparation aux membres du groupe qui ne pouvaient en obtenir une dans un procès individuel en raison de leur incapacité à démontrer qu'ils ont subi une perte par suite du complot allégué. Il est important de ne pas confondre l'évaluation des dommages-intérêts globaux avec la justification de leur octroi.

[222] What all of this means is that a determination at a common issues trial of whether loss reached the indirect purchaser level in the distribution chain is of no assistance in resolving the question of whether the Defendants are actually liable to any or all of the indirect purchasers under the causes of action listed above. From the Plaintiff's perspective, the best case scenario is that there is a need for individual trials on the question of which indirect purchasers actually suffered a loss. His worst case scenario is that it cannot be proved that any indirect purchasers suffered a loss at all, which would terminate the litigation altogether as it pertains to those class members. Contrary to what the Certification Judge stated in his reasons (at para. 168), establishing at trial that "the defendants took part in a conspiracy, that they sometimes or always overcharged direct purchasers, and that at least some direct purchasers passed on these overcharges" to the indirect purchasers will not be "sufficient to establish the fact of the defendants' liability". It follows, therefore, that the Certification Judge did not identify the correct

[222] Compte tenu de tout ce qui précède, lors de l'audition des questions communes, déterminer si la perte a atteint le niveau d'acheteurs indirects situés en aval dans la chaîne de distribution ne permet pas d'établir si les défenderesses sont responsables envers l'ensemble ou une partie des acheteurs indirects relativement aux causes d'action énumérées ci-dessus. Du point de vue du demandeur, dans le meilleur des cas, il faudrait tenir des procès individuels afin de déterminer qui, parmi les acheteurs indirects, a réellement subi une perte. Le pire des cas serait de ne pas pouvoir démontrer que l'un ou l'autre des acheteurs indirects a subi une perte, ce qui mettrait carrément fin au litige visant ces membres du groupe. Contrairement à ce qu'a indiqué le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation dans ses motifs (par. 168), démontrer au procès que [TRADUCTION] « les défenderesses ont participé à un complot, qu'elles ont parfois ou toujours imposé une majoration aux acheteurs directs et qu'au moins certains de ces acheteurs directs ont refilé ces majorations » aux acheteurs indirects « [ne] suffira [pas] à établir la responsabilité des défenderesses ». Par

standard for certifying loss as a common issue (see Brown J.'s reasons, at para. 110).

(b) Proof at trial that loss reached the indirect purchaser level, without anything more, does not allow for any loss-related determination that would advance the litigation in a manner that satisfies the commonality requirement

[223] My colleague states that the loss-related questions proposed by the Plaintiff in this case satisfy the commonality requirement in s. 4(1)(c) of the Class Proceedings Act, based on a methodology that is capable of proving that overcharges were passed on somewhere at the indirect purchaser level, even though such a methodology cannot allow any finding of liability to be made at trial (see paras. 109 and 120). Similarly, the Plaintiff takes the position that a "single analysis of whether there was an overcharge and whether that overcharge was passed on to the indirect purchaser level would significantly advance the claim for all class members by avoiding repetition of the collection and analysis of large quantities of economic data" (R.F. (Toshiba Appeal), at para. 106).

[224] In light of the legal principles set out by my colleague at paras. 103-5 of his reasons, however, I cannot agree. To begin with, the fact that losses might have occurred somewhere at the indirect purchaser level in the distribution chain does not assist us in determining which specific indirect purchasers suffered losses in order to identify the class members to whom the Defendants might be liable. If the common issues trial judge finds that overcharges were passed on to at least one unidentifiable indirect purchaser, there would still be a need for individual trials; therefore, duplication of fact-finding would not be eliminated (Dutton, at para. 39). And if such individual trials are indeed required, then proof that loss occurred somewhere at the indirect purchaser level is not truly "necessary to the resolution of each class member's claim", is not a "substantial common ingredient" of their causes of action, and cannot in fact result in conséquent, le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation n'a pas appliqué la bonne norme pour autoriser la question de la perte en tant que question commune (voir les motifs du juge Brown, par. 110).

b) La simple démonstration au procès que la perte a atteint le niveau de l'acheteur indirect ne permet pas de rendre une décision sur la perte qui ferait progresser l'instance d'une manière qui respecte l'exigence d'une question commune

[223] Mon collègue affirme que les questions de perte proposées par le demandeur en l'espèce répondent à l'exigence d'une question commune prévue à l'al. 4(1)(c) de la Class Proceedings Act, sur le fondement d'une méthode qui permet de prouver qu'une majoration a été refilée au niveau de l'acheteur indirect, même si cette méthode ne permet pas de tirer une conclusion de responsabilité au procès (voir par. 109 et 120). De même, le demandeur soutient que [TRADUCTION] « une seule analyse visant à déterminer s'il y a eu majoration et si celle-ci est passée au niveau de l'acheteur indirect ferait considérablement progresser la demande pour tous les membres du groupe, car elle aurait pour effet d'éviter de répéter la collecte et l'analyse de grandes quantités de données économiques » (m.i. (pourvoi de Toshiba), par. 106).

[224] Compte tenu des principes de droit énoncés par mon collègue aux par. 103-105 de ses motifs, cependant, je ne puis être d'accord. Premièrement, le fait que des acheteurs indirects situés en aval dans la chaîne de distribution pourraient avoir subi une perte ne nous aide pas à déterminer précisément de quels acheteurs indirects il s'agit, d'une manière qui nous permettrait d'identifier les membres du groupe envers lesquels les défenderesses pourraient être responsables. Si le juge appelé à statuer sur les questions communes conclut qu'une majoration a atteint le niveau d'au moins un acheteur indirect non identifiable, il serait tout de même nécessaire de tenir des procès individuels; la répétition de l'appréciation des faits ne serait donc pas éliminée (Dutton, par. 39). Et si de tels procès individuels sont vraiment nécessaires, la preuve qu'une perte a été subie quelque part au niveau des acheteurs indirects n'est

"success" for any of those indirect purchasers (ibid., at paras. 39-40 (emphasis added)).

[225] My colleague nevertheless opines that the requisite commonality derives from the fact that failure to show that loss was suffered by any indirect purchasers would mean that none of them could succeed against the Defendants (para. 108). With respect, however, the function of the common issues trial is not to screen out unmeritorious claims; it is to allow issues of fact and law that are common among many claimants to be determined at once, so as to avoid the need for individual determinations for each and every class member. Furthermore, it is unclear why any representative plaintiff would seek the certification of a question that can meaningfully "advance the litigation" only if it results in failure for all indirect purchasers (see Brown J.'s reasons, at para. 109). In any event, I agree that "it would be a gross waste of private and public resources to litigate if the only prospective 'benefit' was to show that there was no point bringing the case in the first place" (K. Wright, T. Shikaze and E. Snow, "On the 'Level' After Godfrey: Proving Liability in Canadian Price Fixing Class Actions" (2017), 12 C.A.D.Q. 13, at p. 18).[6]

[226] All of this leads me to the conclusion that proof that loss reached the indirect purchaser level in the distribution chain would not, without more, allow the common issues trial judge to make any loss-related determinations on a class-wide basis so as to permit the proposed questions to be certified as common issues for trial.

[6] One of the authors of this article served as counsel for certain defendants in this litigation (although not before this Court) and in Shah.

pas réellement « nécessaire pour la résolution des demandes de chaque membre du groupe », n'est pas un « élément commun important » de leurs causes d'action et ne peut en fait entraîner le « succès » d'aucun de ces acheteurs indirects (ibid., par. 39-40 (je souligne)).

[225] Mon collègue estime néanmoins que l'exigence d'une question commune découle du fait que si l'on ne peut démontrer que la perte a été subie par quelque acheteur indirect que ce soit, aucun d'entre eux ne peut obtenir gain de cause contre les défenderesses (par. 108). Avec égards, cependant, l'audition des questions communes n'a pas pour fonction d'écarter les demandes non fondées; elle sert plutôt à permettre de trancher simultanément des questions de fait et de droit qui sont communes à un grand nombre de demandeurs, de manière à éviter de devoir juger individuellement de ces questions pour chacun des membres du groupe. Qui plus est, on ne sait pas avec certitude pourquoi le représentant des demandeurs solliciterait l'autorisation d'une question qui peut uniquement « faire avancer l'instance » de façon utile si elle entraîne un échec pour tous les acheteurs indirects (voir les motifs du juge Brown, par. 109). Quoi qu'il en soit, je conviens que [TRADUCTION] « ce serait un énorme gaspillage de ressources privées et publiques d'intenter une poursuite si le seul "avantage" éventuel était de démontrer que, dès le départ, il n'y avait pas lieu de porter l'affaire devant les tribunaux » (K. Wright, T. Shikaze et E. Snow, « On the "Level" After Godfrey : Proving Liability in Canadian Price Fixing Class Actions » (2017), 12 C.A.D.Q. 13, p. 18)[6].

[226] Tout ce qui précède m'amène à conclure que la preuve selon laquelle la perte a atteint le niveau de l'acheteur indirect situé en aval dans la chaîne de distribution, à elle seule, ne permettrait pas au juge appelé à statuer sur les questions communes de tirer une conclusion sur la perte à l'échelle du groupe, de manière à permettre l'autorisation des questions proposées en tant que questions communes pour audition.

[6] L'un des auteurs de cet article était l'avocat de certaines défenderesses en l'espèce (mais non devant notre Cour) et dans Shah.

(c) Microsoft does not indicate that loss-related questions are certifiable in indirect purchaser class actions so long as the representative plaintiff has a plausible methodology for proving solely that some overcharges were passed on to the indirect purchaser level

[227] Like the courts below, my colleague relies on this Court's decision in Microsoft to support his conclusion that loss-related questions in indirect purchaser class actions are certifiable even if the representative plaintiff's methodology can show only that loss reached the indirect purchaser level (but cannot establish loss on any individualized basis). Because that case raised a number of issues that are similar to those in the case at hand, it is worth analyzing it in some depth.

[228] As in this case, the class action in Microsoft was based on an allegation of price manipulation by the defendants, Microsoft Corporation and Microsoft Canada Co./Microsoft Canada CIE (collectively, "Microsoft"). The representative plaintiffs — Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. and Neil Godfrey (collectively, "Pro-Sys") — specifically alleged, on behalf of all class members, that Microsoft had engaged in unlawful conduct by overcharging for its operating systems. The class was made up of indirect purchasers who had acquired Microsoft products from resellers that had themselves purchased the products from Microsoft or another reseller higher up in the distribution chain. Pro-Sys pleaded causes of action under the common law torts of intentional interference with economic interests and conspiracy, sought damages pursuant to ss. 36, 45 and 52 of the Competition Act, and claimed in unjust enrichment and waiver of tort.

[229] Although the loss-related questions in that case are very similar to those proposed in the case at hand, they explicitly asked whether losses or overcharges had been passed on to all of the indirect

c) Microsoft n'indique pas que les questions de perte peuvent être autorisées dans des recours collectifs formés par des acheteurs indirects dès que le représentant des demandeurs emploie une méthode acceptable pour prouver uniquement qu'une majoration a atteint le niveau de l'acheteur indirect

[227] À l'instar des tribunaux d'instance inférieure, mon collègue se fonde sur l'arrêt Microsoft de notre Cour à l'appui de sa conclusion que les questions de perte dans des recours collectifs formés par des acheteurs indirects peuvent être autorisées même si la méthode proposée par le représentant des demandeurs permet seulement de démontrer que la perte a été refilée à l'acheteur indirect (sans prouver la perte de façon individuelle). Comme cette affaire a soulevé plusieurs questions semblables à celles en l'espèce, elle vaut la peine d'être examinée en profondeur.

[228] Comme dans le cas présent, le recours collectif dans Microsoft reposait sur une allégation de manipulation des prix de la part des défenderesses, Microsoft Corporation et Microsoft Canada Co./Microsoft Canada CIE (appelées collectivement « Microsoft »). Les représentants des demandeurs, Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. et Neil Godfrey (appelées collectivement « Pro-Sys »), avaient précisément allégué, au nom de tous les membres du groupe, que Microsoft avait agi illégalement en majorant le prix de ses systèmes d'exploitation. Le groupe était composé d'acheteurs indirects qui avaient acheté des produits de Microsoft de revendeurs qui les avaient eux-mêmes achetés de Microsoft ou d'autres revendeurs situés en amont dans la chaîne de distribution. Pro-Sys invoquait des causes d'action pour délits d'atteinte intentionnelle aux intérêts financiers et de complot reconnus en common law, sollicitait des dommages-intérêts sur le fondement des art. 36, 45 et 52 de la Loi sur la concurrence et demandait restitution pour enrichissement sans cause et renonciation au recours délictuel.

[229] Bien que les questions de perte dans cette affaire ressemblaient beaucoup à celles proposées en l'espèce, elles visaient expressément à savoir si la perte ou la majoration avait été transférée à tous

purchaser class members.[7] Among the issues at the certification stage was "whether Pro-Sys' proposed methodology will be able to show the initial overcharges and the pass-through to the proposed class members" (Pro-Sys v. Microsoft, 2010 BCSC 285 ("Microsoft (BCSC)"), at para. 8 (CanLII) (emphasis added)).

[230] Rothstein J., writing for a unanimous Court, clarified that the onus on the representative plaintiff at the certification stage is to establish that there is some basis in fact for the commonality requirement. In the context of loss-related questions, he observed that this requires the proposed methodology to "offer a realistic prospect of establishing loss on a class-wide basis" (para. 118 (emphasis added)). Importantly, Rothstein J. also expanded on how commonality can be established in indirect purchaser class actions where expert evidence is adduced to show that the issue of loss is resolvable on a class-wide basis:

> The role of the expert methodology is to establish that the overcharge was passed on to the indirect purchasers, making the issue common to the class as a whole (see Chadha, at para. 31). The requirement at the certification stage is not that the methodology quantify the damages in question; rather, the critical element that the methodology must establish is the ability to prove "common impact", as described in the U.S. antitrust case of In Re: Linerboard Antitrust Litigation, 305 F.3d 145 (3rd Cir. 2002). That is, plaintiffs must demonstrate that "sufficient proof [is] available, for use at trial, to prove antitrust impact common

[7] The loss-related questions proposed by Pro-Sys included the following: Are the Class Members entitled to losses or damages pursuant to s. 36 of the Competition Act, and, if so, in what amount? Did the Class Members suffer economic loss? Did the Class Members suffer economic loss as a result of the Defendants' interference? Have the Class Members suffered a corresponding deprivation in the amount of the Overcharge? (See Microsoft, Appendix.) The term "Class Members" was defined in Pro-Sys's proposed litigation plan to mean "all persons resident in British Columbia who, on or after January 1, 1994, indirectly acquired a license for Microsoft Operating Systems and/or Microsoft Applications Software for their own use, and not for purposes of further selling or leasing" (Pro-Sys A.R., vol. III, at p. 196 (emphasis added)).

les acheteurs indirects du groupe[7]. Au nombre des questions soulevées à l'étape de l'autorisation, il y avait celle de savoir [TRADUCTION] « si la méthode proposée par Pro-Sys permettra d'établir la majoration initiale ainsi que son transfert aux membres du groupe projeté » (Pro-Sys c. Microsoft, 2010 BCSC 285 (« Microsoft (BCSC) »), par. 8 (CanLII) (je souligne)).

[230] Rédigeant l'arrêt unanime de la Cour, le juge Rothstein a précisé qu'à l'étape de l'autorisation, il incombe au représentant des demandeurs d'établir un certain fondement factuel aux fins du respect de l'exigence d'une question commune. Dans le cas des questions de perte, il a fait remarquer que la méthode proposée doit « offrir une possibilité réaliste d'établir la perte à l'échelle du groupe » (par. 118 (je souligne)). Fait important, le juge Rothstein a également donné des précisions sur la manière dont le caractère commun de la perte peut être établi dans le cadre de recours collectifs formés par des acheteurs indirects où une preuve d'expert est présentée pour démontrer que la question de la perte peut être résolue à l'échelle du groupe :

> La méthode proposée par l'expert vise à établir que la majoration a été transférée aux acheteurs indirects, ce qui rend la question commune au groupe dans son ensemble (voir Chadha, par. 31). À l'étape de la certification, la méthode n'a pas à déterminer le montant des dommages-intérêts, mais doit plutôt — et c'est là l'élément crucial — être susceptible de prouver « les conséquences communes », comme le conclut un tribunal américain dans une affaire antitrust, In Re : Linerboard Antitrust Litigation, 305 F.3d 145 (3rd Cir. 2002). Les demandeurs doivent démontrer qu'une [TRADUCTION] « preuve

[7] Les questions de perte proposées par Pro-Sys étaient notamment les suivantes : Les membres du groupe ont-ils droit, suivant l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence, au recouvrement des pertes ou des dommages subis et, dans l'affirmative, à raison de quel montant? Les membres du groupe ont-ils subi une perte financière? Les membres du groupe ont-ils subi une perte financière par suite de cette atteinte? Les membres du groupe se sont-ils appauvris d'un montant égal à celui de la majoration? (Voir Microsoft, annexe.) Selon le plan de déroulement de l'instance proposé par Pro-Sys, le terme « membres du groupe » signifie [TRADUCTION] « toutes les personnes résidant en Colombie-Britannique qui, depuis le 1er janvier 1994, ont acquis indirectement une licence pour un système d'exploitation ou un logiciel d'application de Microsoft à leur usage personnel, et non aux fins de revente ou de location » (d.a. Pro-Sys, vol. III, p. 196 (je souligne)).

to all the members of the class" (ibid., at p. 155). It is not necessary at the certification stage that the methodology establish the actual loss to the class, as long as the plaintiff has demonstrated that there is a methodology capable of doing so. In indirect purchaser actions, this means that the methodology must be able to establish that the overcharges have been passed on to the indirect-purchaser level in the distribution chain. [Emphasis added; para. 115.]

[231] In the case at hand, the courts below interpreted this passage as meaning that loss-related questions will always be certifiable as common issues in the context of indirect purchaser class actions so long as the representative plaintiff's methodology is capable of showing loss at the indirect purchaser level of the distribution chain. Respectfully, this reading of Microsoft — which focuses almost exclusively on the final sentence in the above-reproduced passage — is not consistent with the reasons as a whole, when read alongside those of the motion judge in that case.

[232] For our purposes, it is significant that the loss-related questions in Microsoft concerned whether all of the indirect purchasers had suffered a loss. Rothstein J. agreed that the class members' claims raised common issues because the resolution of those issues "would appear to advance the claims of the entire class and to answer them commonly will avoid duplication in legal and factual analysis" (para. 111). He also declined to interfere with the motion judge's finding that Pro-Sys "has a credible or plausible methodology to show that all class members were harmed by Microsoft's alleged illegal activities" (Microsoft (BCSC), at para. 122 (emphasis in original); see also Microsoft, at para. 126). This led Rothstein J. to conclude as follows:

Unlike Hollick, here the loss-related issues can be said to be common because there is an expert methodology that has been found to have a realistic prospect of establishing permettra d'établir, lors du procès, les conséquences antitrust qui sont communes à tous les membres du groupe » (ibid., p. 155). À l'étape de la certification, point n'est besoin que la méthode établisse la perte réellement subie par le groupe dans la mesure où le demandeur démontre qu'une méthode permet de le faire. Dans le cadre d'actions d'acheteurs indirects, la méthode doit donc pouvoir établir que la majoration a été transférée à l'acheteur indirect situé en aval dans la chaîne de distribution. [Je souligne; par. 115.]

[231] Dans le cas présent, les tribunaux d'instance inférieure ont interprété cet extrait comme signifiant que les questions de perte pourront toujours être autorisées en tant que questions communes dans le contexte de recours collectifs formés par des acheteurs indirects dans la mesure où la méthode proposée par le représentant des demandeurs permet de démontrer que la perte a atteint le niveau de l'acheteur indirect situé en aval dans la chaîne de distribution. Avec égards, cette interprétation de Microsoft — axée presque exclusivement sur la dernière phrase de l'extrait reproduit ci-dessus — ne cadre pas avec les motifs dans leur ensemble, lorsqu'ils sont lus conjointement avec ceux du juge saisi de la requête dans cette affaire.

[232] Pour les besoins du présent dossier, il est révélateur que les questions de perte dans Microsoft visaient à établir si tous les acheteurs indirects avaient subi une perte. Le juge Rothstein a convenu que les réclamations des membres du groupe soulevaient des questions communes, car la résolution de ces questions « permettrait de faire progresser l'examen des allégations du groupe dans son ensemble et d'éviter la répétition dans l'analyse du droit et des faits » (par. 111). Il a également refusé de modifier la conclusion du juge saisi de la requête selon laquelle Pro-Sys [TRADUCTION] « [a] adopt[é] une méthode valable ou acceptable pour démontrer que tous les membres du groupe ont été lésés par les activités illégales reprochées à Microsoft » (Microsoft (BCSC), par. 122 (souligné dans l'original); voir également Microsoft, par. 126). Le juge Rothstein a donc conclu ce qui suit :

Contrairement à l'affaire Hollick, on peut dire en l'espèce que la perte constitue une question commune car il a été déterminé qu'une méthode proposée par un expert

loss on a class-wide basis. If the common issues were to be resolved, they would be determinative of Microsoft's liability and of whether passing on of the overcharge to the indirect purchasers has occurred. Because such determinations will be essential in order for the class members to recover, it can be said, in this case, that a resolution of the common issues would significantly advance the action. While it is possible that individual issues may arise at the trial of the common issues, it is implicit in the reasons of [the motion judge] that, at the certification stage, he found the common issues to predominate over issues affecting only individual class members. [Emphasis added; para. 140.]

[233] A careful reading of Microsoft therefore makes it clear that Pro-Sys's loss-related questions were found to be resolvable on a "class-wide" basis because there was a credible and plausible methodology capable of answering them in respect of all of the class members at the common issues trial. Rothstein J. most likely referred to a methodology that is "able to establish that the overcharges have been passed on to the indirect purchaser level in the distribution chain" (para. 115) because of the motion judge's observation that, in order to succeed, Pro-Sys "must show that the alleged increased charges to the direct customers were not absorbed by any subsequent level in the distribution channel" before reaching the indirect purchasers who formed part of the class (Microsoft (BCSC), at para. 6). Indeed, Rothstein J. went so far as to say that "[t]he role of the expert methodology is to establish that the overcharge was passed on to the indirect purchasers, making the issue common to the class as a whole", and that what the plaintiff "must demonstrate [is] that 'sufficient proof [is] available, for use at trial, to prove antitrust impact common to all the members of the class' ([In Re: Linerboard Antitrust Litigation, 305 F.3d 145 (3rd Cir. 2002)], at p. 155)" (para. 115 (emphasis added)).

[234] Microsoft is therefore a case in which the representative plaintiffs obtained the certification of questions asking whether all indirect purchasers had suffered a loss, by providing the motion judge with permettrait assez certainement d'établir la perte à l'échelle du groupe. Le règlement des questions communes devrait permettre de statuer sur la responsabilité de Microsoft et sur le transfert de la majoration aux acheteurs indirects. Puisqu'il est essentiel de statuer sur ces points afin que les membres du groupe puissent recouvrer le montant de la perte, on peut soutenir en l'espèce que le règlement des questions communes fera progresser substantiellement l'instance. Bien qu'il soit possible que des questions individuelles soient soulevées à l'audition des questions communes, le juge Myers indique implicitement dans ses motifs que, à l'étape de la certification, les questions communes l'emportent sur les questions qui ne touchent que des membres individuels. [Je souligne; par. 140.]

[233] Il ressort donc d'une lecture attentive de l'arrêt Microsoft que notre Cour a conclu que les questions de perte soulevées par Pro-Sys pouvaient être réglées à « l'échelle du groupe », car il existait une méthode valable et acceptable permettant d'y répondre pour tous les membres du groupe lors de l'audition des questions communes. La mention, dans les motifs du juge Rothstein, d'une méthode pouvant « établir que la majoration a été transférée à l'acheteur indirect situé en aval dans la chaîne de distribution » (par. 115) reprend fort probablement la remarque du juge saisi de la requête selon laquelle, pour avoir gain de cause, Pro-Sys [TRADUCTION] « doit démontrer que la majoration alléguée transférée aux clients directs n'a pas été absorbée par un niveau subséquent de la chaîne de distribution » avant d'être refilée aux acheteurs indirects qui faisaient partie du groupe (Microsoft (BCSC), par. 6). En effet, le juge Rothstein est allé jusqu'à dire que « [l]a méthode proposée par l'expert vise à établir que la majoration a été transférée aux acheteurs indirects, ce qui rend la question commune au groupe dans son ensemble », et que le demandeur « [doit] démontrer qu'une [TRADUCTION] "preuve permettra d'établir, lors du procès, les conséquences antitrust qui sont communes à tous les membres du groupe" ([In Re : Linerboard Antitrust Litigation, 305 F.3d 145 (3rd Cir. 2002)], p. 155) » (par. 115 (je souligne)).

[234] Ainsi, Microsoft est une affaire où les représentants des demandeurs ont obtenu l'autorisation de questions visant à déterminer si tous les acheteurs indirects ont subi une perte, en fournissant au juge

some basis in fact on which to find that the representative plaintiffs would be capable of proving at trial that they all had. Because the methodology made it possible for the common issues trial judge to resolve a necessary component of everyone's claim at once, without the need for individual trials, the commonality requirement was clearly met. As I have explained, however, Microsoft does not support the proposition that loss-related questions concerning indirect purchasers are certifiable, as a matter of course, so long as the plaintiff's methodology can show that some loss reached their level in the distribution chain. My colleague provides no reason for reading Microsoft in any other way (see Brown J.'s reasons, at para. 107).

saisi de la requête un certain fondement factuel sur lequel s'appuyer pour conclure que les représentants des demandeurs seraient en mesure de prouver au procès qu'ils avaient tous subi une perte. Comme la méthode a permis au juge appelé à statuer sur les questions communes de régler en même temps un élément nécessaire des demandes de tous, sans la tenue de procès individuels, l'exigence d'une question commune a manifestement été respectée. Cependant, comme je l'ai expliqué, Microsoft ne permet pas d'affirmer que les questions de perte subie par les acheteurs indirects peuvent être automatiquement autorisées, dès que la méthode proposée par le demandeur permet de démontrer qu'une perte a été refilée à leur niveau dans la chaîne de distribution. Mon collègue n'indique pas pourquoi il y a lieu d'interpréter autrement cet arrêt (voir les motifs du juge Brown, par. 107).

(3) Conclusion on the Commonality Issue

[235] The legal dispute between the parties turns on whether loss-related questions that pertain to indirect purchasers in a price-fixing class action can be certified as common issues even if the representative plaintiff's methodology is capable only of establishing at trial that loss was occasioned somewhere at the indirect purchaser level of the distribution chain. I would respectfully answer this question in the negative. If the methodology is such that the common issues trial judge will be unable to make any findings as to which class members actually suffered a loss (for the purpose of making determinations as to liability), then those loss-related questions proposed by the plaintiff will not be capable of resolution on a "class-wide" or "common" basis. Indeed, this Court explained in Sun-Rype that "where the proposed certified causes of action require proof of loss as a component of proving liability, the certification judge must be satisfied that there is some basis in fact that at least two persons can prove they incurred a loss" (para. 76 (emphasis added)). No two persons can prove that they are the ones who incurred a loss if a representative plaintiff's methodology can demonstrate only that loss reached some unidentified persons at their level in the distribution chain; by itself, such a methodology does not establish an

(3) Conclusion sur la question du caractère commun

[235] Le litige juridique opposant les parties porte sur la question de savoir si les questions de perte visant les acheteurs indirects dans un recours collectif en matière de fixation des prix peuvent être autorisées en tant que questions communes même si la méthode proposée par le représentant des demandeurs permet seulement d'établir au procès qu'une perte a été subie quelque part au niveau de l'acheteur indirect dans la chaîne de distribution. Avec égards, je réponds à cette question par la négative. Si la méthode proposée est telle que le juge appelé à statuer sur les questions communes sera incapable de tirer des conclusions quant à l'identité des membres du groupe ayant réellement subi une perte (afin de trancher la question de la responsabilité), ces questions de perte proposées par le demandeur ne pourront donc pas être résolues « à l'échelle du groupe » ou en « commun ». En effet, dans Sun-Rype, notre Cour a expliqué que « dans les cas où les causes d'action proposées assujettissent la preuve de la responsabilité notamment à celle de la perte, le juge saisi de la demande d'autorisation doit être convaincu qu'il existe un certain fondement factuel pour dire qu'au moins deux personnes sont en mesure de démontrer avoir essuyé une perte » (par. 76 (je souligne)). Deux personnes ne peuvent prouver qu'elles sont celles qui essential element of liability for anyone. The need for individual trials in those circumstances is indicative of the absence of commonality.

[236] That being said, what is required of the Plaintiff in this case is a methodology capable of answering the loss-related questions on an individualized basis, either by showing that all of the indirect purchasers suffered a loss or at least by identifying those who did and separating them from those who did not or those about whom we cannot be sure (and for whom individual hearings will therefore be necessary). In light of "Dr. Reutter's admissions on cross-examination that there may be some subset of class members who were not impacted, and that it would not be possible, using his methodology, to determine which class members were actually harmed" (C.A. reasons, at para. 125), the loss-related questions should not have been certified as common issues under s. 4(1)(c) of the Class Proceedings Act.

IV. Conclusion

[237] Regarding the limitations issues raised in the Pioneer Appeal, I respectfully disagree that the discoverability rule has any application to s. 36(4)(a)(i). As for the doctrine of fraudulent concealment, the Plaintiff did not plead that there is any special relationship between the Pioneer Defendants and the class members, but did plead that the Pioneer Defendants took active steps to conceal the existence of the alleged conspiracy. While these pleadings are sufficient for the purposes of s. 4(1)(a) of the Class Proceedings Act, whether any such steps are sufficient to trigger the operation of this equitable doctrine will depend on what the Plaintiff actually proves at trial. As I explained earlier, what is necessary in the commercial context, such as here, could be the demonstration of the existence of either a ont subi une perte si une méthode du représentant des demandeurs permet seulement de démontrer qu'une perte a été transférée à des personnes non identifiées situées à leur niveau dans la chaîne de distribution; à elle seule, cette méthode ne permet pas d'établir un élément essentiel de la responsabilité pour qui que ce soit. La nécessité de tenir des procès individuels dans ces circonstances témoigne de l'absence de caractère commun.

[236] Cela dit, il incombe au demandeur en l'espèce de proposer une méthode permettant de répondre aux questions liées à la perte de façon individuelle : en démontrant que tous les acheteurs indirects ont subi une perte ou, à tout le moins, en identifiant ceux qui ont subi une perte et en les distinguant de ceux qui n'en ont pas subi, ou de ceux à l'égard de qui il est impossible d'affirmer avec certitude qu'ils en ont subi une (et pour qui il sera donc nécessaire de tenir des audiences individuelles). À la lumière des [TRADUCTION] « admissions faites par M. Reutter en contre-interrogatoire voulant qu'il existe peut-être un certain sous-groupe au sein du groupe qui n'a pas été touché et qu'il soit impossible, à l'aide de sa méthode, d'identifier les membres du groupe qui ont réellement été lésés » (motifs de la C.A., par. 125), ces questions de perte n'auraient pas dû être autorisées en tant que questions communes en application de l'al. 4(1)(c) de la Class Proceedings Act.

IV. Conclusion

[237] En ce qui a trait aux questions de prescription soulevées dans le pourvoi de Pioneer, avec égards, je ne suis pas d'accord que la règle de la possibilité de découvrir s'applique au sous-al. 36(4)a)(i). Pour ce qui est de la doctrine de la dissimulation frauduleuse, le demandeur n'a pas invoqué l'existence d'une relation spéciale entre les défenderesses Pioneer et les membres du groupe, mais il a plaidé que ces défenderesses ont pris des mesures concrètes pour dissimuler l'existence du complot allégué. Bien que ces arguments soient suffisants pour l'application de l'al. 4(1)(a) de la Class Proceedings Act, la question de savoir si de telles mesures suffisent à déclencher l'application de cette doctrine d'equity dépendra de ce que le demandeur réussira à prouver au procès. Comme je l'ai déjà expliqué, ce qu'il faut peut-être special relationship, or something tantamount to or commensurate with one.

[238] Regarding the issues in the Toshiba Appeal, which are common to both appeals, I agree with my colleague — though for different reasons — that the existence of the statutory cause of action in s. 36(1) of the Competition Act does not preclude claimants from also advancing claims at common law or in equity based on the same conduct prohibited by Part VI. However, I part ways with my colleague in two important respects. First, I do not agree that the Umbrella Purchasers have a claim against the Defendants under s. 36(1) of the Competition Act. Second, I cannot accept that the questions proposed by the Plaintiff that pertain to the commonality of loss among indirect purchasers can be certified where his proposed methodology will be capable of showing nothing more than the fact that some overcharges reached the indirect purchaser level of the distribution chain. In class actions where loss is an essential element of liability (as here), my view is that loss-related questions can be certified as common issues only if the representative plaintiff will be able to actually identify which class members suffered a loss at trial — either by proving that they all did or by distinguishing those who did from those who did not. Because Dr. Reutter admitted on cross-examination that his methodology would be incapable of allowing the Plaintiff to make such an identification at trial, it follows that the loss-related questions proposed by the Plaintiff in this case should not have been certified.

[239] I would therefore allow the appeals in part.

Appeals dismissed with costs, CÔTÉ J. dissenting in part.

Solicitors for the appellants Pioneer Corporation, Pioneer North America, Inc., Pioneer Electronics

accomplir en matière commerciale, comme en l'espèce, c'est de démontrer l'existence d'une relation spéciale ou de quelque chose d'équivalent ou de correspondant à une telle relation.

[238] En ce qui concerne les questions soulevées dans le pourvoi Toshiba qui sont communes aux deux pourvois, je conviens avec mon collègue — bien que pour des motifs différents — que l'existence de la cause d'action prévue au par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence n'empêche pas les demandeurs d'intenter des recours en common law ou en equity qui visent le même comportement interdit par la partie VI. Cependant, je ne suis pas d'accord avec mon collègue sur deux aspects importants. Premièrement, je ne suis pas d'avis que les acheteurs sous parapluie ont un recours contre les défenderesses en vertu du par. 36(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence. Deuxièmement, je ne saurais accepter que les questions proposées par le demandeur quant au caractère commun de la perte entre les acheteurs indirects peuvent être autorisées si la méthode qu'il propose permettra seulement de démontrer qu'une majoration a atteint le niveau des acheteurs indirects de la chaîne de distribution. Dans des recours collectifs où la perte constitue un élément essentiel pour établir la responsabilité (comme en l'espèce), je suis d'avis que les questions de perte ne peuvent être autorisées en tant que questions communes que si le représentant des demandeurs est capable d'identifier les membres du groupe qui ont subi une perte — soit en prouvant qu'ils ont tous subi une perte ou en distinguant ceux qui ont subi une perte de ceux qui n'en ont pas subi. Comme M. Reutter a admis en contre-interrogatoire que sa méthode ne permettrait pas au demandeur de procéder à une telle identification au procès, il s'ensuit que les questions de perte proposées par le demandeur en l'espèce n'auraient pas dû être autorisées.

[239] Je suis donc d'avis d'accueillir les pourvois en partie.

Pourvois rejetés avec dépens, la juge CÔTÉ est dissidente en partie.

Procureurs des appelantes Pioneer Corporation, Pioneer North America, Inc., Pioneer Electronics

(USA) Inc., Pioneer High Fidelity Taiwan Co., Ltd. and Pioneer Electronics of Canada Inc.: Cassels Brock & Blackwell, Toronto.

Solicitors for the appellants Toshiba Corporation, Toshiba Samsung Storage Technology Corp., Toshiba Samsung Storage Technology Corp. Korea, Toshiba of Canada Ltd. and Toshiba America Information Systems, Inc.: Fasken Martineau DuMoulin, Toronto.

Solicitors for the appellants Samsung Electronics Co., Ltd., Samsung Electronics Canada Inc. and Samsung Electronics America, Inc.: Blake, Cassels & Graydon, Toronto.

Solicitors for the appellants Koninklijke Philips Electronics N.V., Lite-On IT Corporation of Taiwan, Philips & Lite-On Digital Solutions Corporation, Philips & Lite-On Digital Solutions USA, Inc. and Philips Electronics Ltd.: McMillan, Toronto.

Solicitors for the appellants Panasonic Corporation, Panasonic Corporation of North America and Panasonic Canada Inc.: Bennett Jones, Toronto.

Solicitors for the appellants BENQ Corporation, BENQ America Corporation and BENQ Canada Corp.: Shapray Cramer Fitterman Lamer, Vancouver.

Solicitors for the respondent: Camp Fiorante Matthews Mogerman, Vancouver; Siskinds, London.

Solicitors for the intervener Option consommateurs: Belleau Lapointe, Montréal.

Solicitors for the intervener the Consumers Council of Canada: Harrison Pensa, London.

Solicitors for the intervener the Canadian Chamber of Commerce: Davies Ward Phillips & Vineberg, Toronto.

Solicitors for the intervener the Consumers' Association of Canada: Sotos, Toronto.

(USA) Inc., Pioneer High Fidelity Taiwan Co., Ltd. et Pioneer Électronique du Canada, inc. : Cassels Brock & Blackwell, Toronto.

Procureurs des appelantes Toshiba Corporation, Toshiba Samsung Storage Technology Corp., Toshiba Samsung Storage Technology Corp. Korea, Toshiba du Canada Limitée et Toshiba America Information Systems, Inc. : Fasken Martineau DuMoulin, Toronto.

Procureurs des appelantes Samsung Electronics Co., Ltd., Samsung Electronics Canada Inc. et Samsung Electronics America, Inc. : Blake, Cassels & Graydon, Toronto.

Procureurs des appelantes Koninklijke Philips Electronics N.V., Lite-On IT Corporation of Taiwan, Philips & Lite-On Digital Solutions Corporation, Philips & Lite-On Digital Solutions USA, Inc. et Philips Electronics Ltd. : McMillan, Toronto.

Procureurs des appelantes Panasonic Corporation, Panasonic Corporation of North America et Panasonic Canada Inc. : Bennett Jones, Toronto.

Procureurs des appelantes BENQ Corporation, BENQ America Corporation et BENQ Canada Corp. : Shapray Cramer Fitterman Lamer, Vancouver.

Procureurs de l'intimé : Camp Fiorante Matthews Mogerman, Vancouver; Siskinds, London.

Procureurs de l'intervenante Option consommateurs : Belleau Lapointe, Montréal.

Procureurs de l'intervenant Consumers Council of Canada : Harrison Pensa, London.

Procureurs de l'intervenante la Chambre de commerce du Canada : Davies Ward Phillips & Vineberg, Toronto.

Procureurs de l'intervenante l'Association des consommateurs du Canada : Sotos, Toronto.

21

Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. and Neil Godfrey Appellants

v.

Microsoft Corporation and Microsoft Canada Co./Microsoft Canada CIE Respondents

and

Attorney General of Canada Intervener

Indexed as: Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. v. Microsoft Corporation

2013 SCC 57

File No.: 34282.

2012: October 17; 2013: October 31.

Present: McLachlin C.J. and LeBel, Fish, Abella, Rothstein, Cromwell, Moldaver, Karakatsanis and Wagner JJ.

ON APPEAL FROM THE COURT OF APPEAL FOR BRITISH COLUMBIA

Civil procedure — Class actions — Certification — Indirect purchasers — Plaintiffs suing defendants for unlawful conduct in overcharging for its PC operating systems and PC applications software — Plaintiffs seeking certification of action as class proceeding under provincial class action legislation — Whether indirect purchaser actions are available as a matter of law in Canada — Whether certification requirements are met — Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 50, s. 4(1).

P brought a class action against M, alleging that beginning in 1988, M engaged in unlawful conduct by overcharging for its Intel-compatible PC operating systems and Intel-compatible PC applications software. P sought certification of the action as a class proceeding under the Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 50 ("CPA"). The proposed class is made up of ultimate consumers, known as "indirect purchasers", who acquired M's products from re-sellers.

Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. et Neil Godfrey Appelants

c.

Microsoft Corporation et Microsoft Canada Co./Microsoft Canada CIE Intimées

et

Procureur général du Canada Intervenant

Répertorié : Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. c. Microsoft Corporation

2013 CSC 57

N° du greffe : 34282.

2012 : 17 octobre; 2013 : 31 octobre.

Présents : La juge en chef McLachlin et les juges LeBel, Fish, Abella, Rothstein, Cromwell, Moldaver, Karakatsanis et Wagner.

EN APPEL DE LA COUR D'APPEL DE LA COLOMBIE-BRITANNIQUE

Procédure civile — Recours collectifs — Certification — Acheteurs indirects — Action intentée contre les défenderesses au motif qu'elles auraient agi illégalement en majorant le prix de leurs systèmes d'exploitation et de leurs logiciels d'application pour ordinateur personnel — Demande de certification d'une action à titre de recours collectif en application des dispositions provinciales sur les recours collectifs — L'acheteur indirect dispose-t-il d'un recours en droit canadien? — Respect des conditions de certification — Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, ch. 50, art. 4(1).

P a intenté contre M un recours collectif dans lequel elle allègue que, à compter de 1988, M a agi illégalement en majorant le prix de ses systèmes d'exploitation et de ses logiciels d'application pour ordinateur personnel compatibles avec le processeur Intel. P a demandé la certification de son action à titre de recours collectif en application de la Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, ch. 50 (« CPA »). Le groupe proposé se compose des consommateurs finaux, appelés « acheteurs indirects », qui ont acheté des produits de M à des revendeurs.

The British Columbia Supreme Court found that the certification requirements set out in s. 4(1) of the CPA were met and certified the action. The majority of the Court of Appeal allowed M's appeal, set aside the certification order and dismissed the action, determining that indirect purchaser actions were not available as a matter of law in Canada and therefore that the class members had no cause of action under s. 4(1)(a) of the CPA.

Held: The appeal should be allowed.

Indirect purchasers have a cause of action against the party who has effectuated the overcharge at the top of the distribution chain that has allegedly injured the indirect purchasers as a result of the overcharge being "passed on" to them through the chain of distribution. The argument that indirect purchasers should have no cause of action because passing on has been rejected as a defence in Canada should fail.

The passing-on defence, which was typically advanced by an overcharger at the top of a distribution chain, was invoked under the proposition that if the direct purchaser who sustained the original overcharge then passed that overcharge on to its own customers, the gain conferred on the overcharger was not at the expense of the direct purchaser because the direct purchaser suffered no loss. As such, the fact that the overcharge was "passed on" was argued to be a defence to actions brought by the direct purchaser against the party responsible for the overcharge. This defence has been rejected by this Court in Kingstreet Investments Ltd. v. New Brunswick (Finance), 2007 SCC 1, [2007] 1 S.C.R. 3, and that rejection is not limited to the context of the imposition of ultra vires taxes; the passing-on defence is rejected throughout the whole of restitutionary law.

However, the rejection of the passing-on defence does not lead to a corresponding rejection of the offensive use of passing on. Therefore, indirect purchasers should not be foreclosed from claiming losses passed on to them. The risk of double or multiple recovery where actions by direct and indirect purchasers are pending at the same time or where parallel suits are pending in other jurisdictions can be managed by the court. Furthermore, indirect purchaser actions should not be barred altogether solely because of the likely complexity associated with proof of damages. In bringing their action, the indirect purchasers willingly assume the burden of establishing that they have suffered loss, and whether they have met their burden of La Cour suprême de la Colombie-Britannique a conclu que les conditions de certification prévues au par. 4(1) de la CPA étaient réunies et elle a certifié l'action. Les juges majoritaires de la Cour d'appel ont accueilli l'appel de M, annulé l'ordonnance de certification et rejeté l'action après avoir statué que l'acheteur indirect n'a pas de recours en droit canadien et que les membres du groupe n'avaient donc pas de cause d'action comme l'exige l'al. 4(1)(a) de la CPA.

Arrêt : Le pourvoi est accueilli.

L'acheteur indirect a une cause d'action contre l'auteur de la majoration qui se situe au sommet de la chaîne de distribution et qui l'aurait indirectement lésé du fait que la majoration lui a été « transférée » en aval dans la chaîne de distribution. On ne peut retenir l'argument selon lequel l'acheteur indirect ne doit se voir reconnaître aucune cause d'action en raison du rejet du transfert de la perte comme moyen de défense au Canada.

Le moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte, généralement invoqué par l'auteur de la majoration situé au sommet de la chaîne de distribution, voulait que si l'acheteur direct absorbait la majoration puis la transférait à ses propres clients, l'auteur de la majoration ne réalisait pas le bénéfice au détriment de l'acheteur direct, celui-ci ne subissant aucune perte. Ce « transfert » de la majoration était donc invoqué en défense à l'action intentée par l'acheteur direct contre l'auteur de la majoration. La Cour a rejeté ce moyen de défense dans Kingstreet Investments Ltd. c. Nouveau-Brunswick (Finances), 2007 CSC 1, [2007] 1 R.C.S. 3, et ce rejet ne vaut pas que pour l'imposition d'une taxe ultra vires; le moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte est toujours exclu aux fins du droit de la restitution.

Cependant, le rejet du transfert de la perte comme moyen de défense n'entraîne pas son exclusion comme cause d'action. En conséquence, l'acheteur indirect ne doit pas se voir empêcher de recouvrer le montant de la perte qui lui a été transférée. Le tribunal peut gérer le risque de recouvrement double ou multiple lorsque l'action de l'acheteur direct et celle de l'acheteur indirect sont en instance simultanément ou lorsque des poursuites sont intentées parallèlement dans d'autres ressorts. Par ailleurs, il n'y a pas lieu de faire totalement obstacle à l'action de l'acheteur indirect pour la seule raison qu'il sera ardu d'établir le préjudice subi. L'acheteur indirect qui intente une action contracte volontairement l'obligation d'établir qu'il a subi une perte, et la question proof is a factual question to be decided on a case-by-case basis. In addition, allowing the offensive use of passing on will not frustrate the deterrence objectives of Canadian competition laws. Indirect purchaser actions may, in some circumstances, be the only means by which overcharges are claimed and deterrence is promoted. Finally, allowing indirect purchaser actions is consistent with the remediation objective of restitution law because it allows for compensating the parties who have actually suffered the harm rather than reserving these actions for direct purchasers who may have in fact passed on the overcharge.

The first requirement for certification at s. 4(1) of the CPA requires that the pleadings disclose a cause of action. A plaintiff satisfies this requirement unless, assuming all facts pleaded to be true, it is plain and obvious that the plaintiff's claim cannot succeed. In the case at bar, the pleadings disclose causes of action that should not be struck out at this stage of the proceedings.

First, it cannot be said that the pleadings do not disclose a cause of action under s. 36 of the Competition Act. The contention that the s. 36 cause of action is not properly pleaded because it was not included in the statement of claim and that any attempt to add it now would be barred by the two-year limitation period contained in s. 36(4) of the Act is purely technical and should be rejected. The argument that the Competition Tribunal should have jurisdiction over the enforcement of the competition law should also be rejected, since s. 36 expressly confers jurisdiction on the court to entertain the claims of any person who suffered loss by virtue of a breach of Part VI of the Act.

Next, it is not plain and obvious that the claim in tort for predominant purpose conspiracy cannot succeed. The contention that the tort of predominant purpose conspiracy is not made out because the statement of claim fails to identify one true predominant purpose and instead lists overlapping purposes should fail at this stage of the proceedings. Similarly, the argument that the predominant purpose conspiracy claim should be struck as it applies to an alleged conspiracy between a parent corporation and its subsidiaries should fail because it is not plain and obvious that the law considers parent and wholly-owned subsidiary corporations to always act in combination.

Similarly, at this point, it is not plain and obvious that there is no cause of action in tort for unlawful means conspiracy or intentional interference with economic de savoir s'il s'est acquitté ou non de son fardeau de preuve tient aux faits de l'espèce. En outre, permettre d'alléguer en demande le transfert de la perte ne nuira pas aux objectifs de dissuasion des dispositions canadiennes sur la concurrence. Dans certaines circonstances, l'action de l'acheteur indirect peut offrir le seul moyen de recouvrer la majoration et d'assurer la dissuasion. Enfin, permettre à l'acheteur indirect d'intenter une action en justice s'accorde avec l'objectif de réparation du droit de la restitution, car la personne qui a effectivement subi un préjudice, et non seulement l'acheteur direct qui a pu en fait transférer la majoration, peut ainsi être indemnisée.

La première condition de certification prévue au par. 4(1) de la CPA veut que les actes de procédure révèlent une cause d'action. Le demandeur ne satisfait pas à la condition lorsque, à supposer que les faits invoqués soient vrais, la demande ne pourrait manifestement pas être accueillie. En l'espèce, les actes de procédure révèlent des causes d'action qu'on ne saurait radier à ce stade de l'instance.

Premièrement, on ne peut affirmer que les actes de procédure ne révèlent pas une cause d'action fondée sur l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence. La prétention que la cause d'action fondée sur l'art. 36 est irrégulièrement plaidée parce qu'elle ne figure pas dans la déclaration et que le délai de prescription de deux ans imparti au par. 36(4) de la Loi fait obstacle à l'ajout de cette cause d'action est purement technique et doit être rejetée. Celle voulant que c'est au Tribunal de la concurrence qu'il appartient de faire respecter le droit de la concurrence doit également être rejetée puisque l'art. 36 confère expressément compétence à une cour de justice pour statuer sur toute réclamation d'une personne à qui une violation de la partie VI a infligé une perte.

Ensuite, on ne saurait dire qu'il ne peut manifestement pas être fait droit à l'allégation relative au délit civil de complot visant principalement à causer un préjudice. La thèse voulant que l'allégation ne soit pas étayée parce que la déclaration ne révèle pas un véritable objet principal, mais en énumère en fait plusieurs qui se chevauchent, doit être rejetée à ce stade de l'instance. Il convient également de rejeter la demande de radiation de l'allégation de complot entre une société mère et une filiale visant principalement à causer un préjudice car il n'est pas manifeste que, sur le plan juridique, une société mère et une filiale à 100 p. 100 agissent toujours de concert.

Aussi, l'inexistence d'une cause d'action en responsabilité délictuelle pour complot en vue de recourir à des moyens illégaux ou pour atteinte intentionnelle interests. These alleged causes of action must be dealt with summarily as the proper approach to the unlawful means requirement common to both torts is presently under reserve in this Court in Bram Enterprises Ltd. v. A.I. Enterprises Ltd., 2012 NBCA 33, 387 N.B.R. (2d) 215, leave to appeal granted, [2012] 3 S.C.R. v. Depending on the decision of this Court in Bram, it will be open to M to raise the matter at trial should it consider it advisable to do so.

With respect to the restitutionary claim in unjust enrichment, it is not plain and obvious that it cannot succeed. With respect to the argument that any enrichment received by M came from the direct purchasers and not from the class members, and that this lack of a direct connection between it and the class members forecloses the claim of unjust enrichment, it is not plain and obvious that a claim in unjust enrichment will be made out only where the relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant is direct. The question of whether the contracts between M and the direct purchasers and the contracts between the direct purchasers and the indirect purchasers, which could constitute a juristic reason for the enrichment, are illegal and void should not be resolved at this stage of the proceedings and must be left to the trial judge.

The pleadings based on constructive trust must be struck. In order to find that a constructive trust is made out, the plaintiff must be able to point to a link or causal connection between his or her contribution and the acquisition of specific property. In the present case, there is no referential property. P makes a purely monetary claim. As the claim neither explains why a monetary award is inappropriate or insufficient nor shows a link to specific property, the claim does not satisfy the conditions necessary to ground a constructive trust. On the pleadings, it is plain and obvious that this claim cannot succeed.

Finally, it is not plain and obvious that a cause of action in waiver of tort would not succeed. There is contradictory law as to the question of whether the underlying tort needs to be established in order to sustain an action in waiver of tort. This appeal is not the proper place to resolve the details of the law of waiver of tort, nor the particular circumstances in which it can be pleaded.

aux intérêts financiers n'est pas manifeste à ce stade. Ces causes d'action alléguées doivent être examinées sommairement car, dans le dossier Bram Enterprises Ltd. c. A.I. Enterprises Ltd., 2012 NBCA 33, 387 R.N.-B. (2e) 215, autorisation d'appel accordée, [2012] 3 R.C.S. v., actuellement en délibéré, notre Cour ne s'est pas encore prononcée sur l'approche qui s'impose à l'égard de l'exigence, commune aux deux délits civils, du recours à des moyens illégaux. Selon l'issue du pourvoi dans Bram, M pourra demander à la juridiction de première instance de statuer sur ce point si elle le juge opportun.

S'agissant de la demande de restitution fondée sur l'enrichissement sans cause, il n'est pas manifeste qu'il ne peut y être fait droit. En ce qui concerne la thèse voulant que l'enrichissement de M provienne des acheteurs directs, et non des membres du groupe, et que son absence de lien direct avec ces derniers scelle le sort de l'allégation d'enrichissement sans cause, il n'est pas manifeste que l'enrichissement sans cause ne sera établi que si le lien entre la demanderesse et la défenderesse est direct. Il n'y a pas lieu, à ce stade de l'instance, de statuer sur la question de savoir si les contrats entre M et les acheteurs directs et entre les acheteurs directs et les acheteurs indirects, lesquels pourraient constituer la cause juridique de l'enrichissement, sont illégaux et nuls; il appartient au juge du procès de le faire.

Les allégations relatives à l'existence d'une fiducie par interprétation doivent être radiées. Pour faire la preuve d'une fiducie par interprétation, le demandeur doit pouvoir établir un lien ou un rapport de causalité entre sa contribution et l'acquisition d'un bien. Nul bien n'est en cause en l'espèce. P réclame seulement une réparation pécuniaire. Étant donné qu'elle n'indique pas en quoi une réparation pécuniaire serait inappropriée ou insuffisante, et qu'elle n'établit pas de lien avec un bien en particulier, l'allégation ne satisfait pas aux conditions d'imposition d'une fiducie par interprétation. Au vu des actes de procédure, il est manifeste qu'on ne saurait faire droit à cette allégation.

Enfin, il n'est pas manifeste que le demandeur qui fonde son action sur la renonciation au recours délictuel sera débouté. Le droit est contradictoire quant à savoir si le délit civil sous-jacent doit être prouvé ou non pour les besoins d'une action fondée sur la renonciation au recours délictuel. Il ne convient pas de statuer plus avant, dans le cadre du pourvoi, sur le droit applicable en matière de renonciation au recours délictuel, ni sur le contexte particulier dans lequel on peut invoquer celle-ci.

The starting point in determining the standard of proof to be applied to the remaining certification requirements is the standard articulated in this Court's decision in Hollick v. Toronto (City), 2001 SCC 68, [2001] 3 S.C.R. 158: the class representative must show some basis in fact for each of the certification requirements set out in the provincial class action legislation, other than the requirement that the pleadings disclose a cause of action. The certification stage is not meant to be a test of the merits of the action, rather, this stage is concerned with form and with whether the action can properly proceed as a class action. The standard of proof asks not whether there is some basis in fact for the claim itself, but rather whether there is some basis in fact which establishes each of the individual certification requirements. Although evidence has a role to play in the certification process, the standard of proof does not require evidence on a balance of probabilities. The certification stage does not involve an assessment of the merits of the claim and is not intended to be a pronouncement on the viability or strength of the action, rather, it focuses on the form of the action in order to determine whether the action can appropriately go forward as a class proceeding. Each case must be decided on its own facts. There must be sufficient facts to satisfy the applications judge that the conditions for certification have been met to a degree that should allow the matter to proceed on a class basis without foundering at the merits stage by reason of the requirements not having been met.

In the case at bar, the applications judge's finding that the claims raised common issues is entitled to deference. In order to establish commonality, evidence that the acts alleged actually occurred is not required, rather, the factual evidence required at this stage goes only to establishing whether these questions are common to all the class members. With respect to the common issues that ask whether loss to the class members can be established on a class-wide basis, they require the use of expert evidence in order for commonality to be established. The expert methodology must be sufficiently credible or plausible to establish some basis in fact for the commonality requirement — it must offer a realistic prospect of establishing loss on a class-wide basis so that, if the overcharge is eventually established at the trial of the common issues, there is a means by which to demonstrate that it is common to the class. The methodology cannot be purely theoretical or hypothetical, but must be grounded in the facts of the particular case in question, and there must be some evidence of the availability of the data to which the methodology

Le point de départ pour déterminer la norme de preuve applicable aux autres conditions de certification réside dans l'arrêt Hollick c. Toronto (Ville), 2001 CSC 68, [2001] 3 R.C.S. 158 : le représentant du groupe doit établir un certain fondement factuel pour chacune des conditions que prévoient les dispositions provinciales sur les recours collectifs, sauf celle voulant que les actes de procédure révèlent une cause d'action. L'examen au fond est écarté à l'étape de la certification, laquelle intéresse plutôt la forme et le caractère approprié de la poursuite par voie de recours collectif. Suivant la norme de preuve applicable, la question n'est pas celle de savoir si la demande a un certain fondement factuel, mais bien si un certain fondement factuel établit chacune des conditions de certification. Bien que la preuve importe aux fins de la certification, la norme de preuve n'exige pas une preuve selon la prépondérance des probabilités. La procédure de certification ne comporte pas d'examen au fond de la demande et elle ne vise pas à déterminer le bien-fondé des allégations; elle intéresse plutôt la forme que revêt l'action pour déterminer s'il convient de procéder par recours collectif. L'issue d'une affaire dépend des faits qui lui sont propres. Suffisamment de faits doivent permettre de convaincre le tribunal que les conditions de certification sont réunies de telle sorte que l'instance puisse suivre son cours sous forme de recours collectif sans s'écrouler à l'étape de l'examen au fond à cause du non-respect des conditions applicables.

En l'espèce, la conclusion du juge selon laquelle les demandes soulèvent des questions communes commande la déférence. Établir la communauté des questions n'exige pas la preuve que les actes allégués ont effectivement eu lieu; à ce stade, il faut plutôt établir que les questions soulevées sont communes à tous les membres du groupe. Démontrer le caractère commun des questions — la perte subie par les membres peut-elle être circonscrite à l'échelle du groupe? — commande le recours à une preuve d'expert. La méthode d'expert doit être suffisamment valable ou acceptable pour établir un certain fondement factuel aux fins du respect de l'exigence d'une question commune; elle doit offrir une possibilité réaliste d'établir la perte à l'échelle du groupe, de sorte que, si la majoration est établie à l'issue de l'examen des questions communes au procès, un moyen permette de démontrer qu'elle est commune aux membres du groupe. Il ne peut s'agir d'une méthode purement théorique ou hypothétique; elle doit reposer sur les faits de l'affaire, et l'existence des données auxquelles la méthode est censée s'appliquer is to be applied. Resolving conflicts between the experts is an issue for the trial judge and not one that should be engaged in at certification.

The applications judge's decision to certify as common issues whether damages can be determined on an aggregate basis and if so, in what amount, should not be disturbed. The question of whether damages assessed in the aggregate are an appropriate remedy can be certified as a common issue. However, this common issue should only be determined at the common issues trial after a finding of liability has been made. The ultimate decision as to whether the aggregate damages provisions of the CPA should be available is one that should be left to the common issues trial judge. The failure to propose or certify aggregate damages, or another remedy, as a common issue does not preclude a trial judge from invoking the provisions if considered appropriate.

The applications judge's finding that the class action is the preferable procedure should not be interfered with. In the present case, there are common issues related to the existence of the causes of action and there are also common issues related to loss to the class members. The loss-related issues can be said to be common because there is an expert methodology that has been found to have a realistic prospect of establishing loss on a class-wide basis. If the common issues were to be resolved, they would be determinative of M's liability and of whether passing on of the overcharge to the indirect purchasers has occurred. Because such determinations will be essential in order for the class members to recover in this case, a resolution of the common issues would significantly advance the action.

Cases Cited

Referred to: Sun-Rype Products Ltd. v. Archer Daniels Midland Co., 2011 BCCA 187, 305 B.C.A.C. 55, aff'd 2013 SCC 58, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 545; Infineon Technologies AG v. Option consommateurs, 2013 SCC 59, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 600; Hanover Shoe, Inc. v. United Shoe Machinery Corp., 392 U.S. 481 (1968); Kingstreet Investments Ltd. v. New Brunswick (Finance), 2007 SCC 1, [2007] 1 S.C.R. 3; Commissioner of State Revenue (Victoria) v. Royal Insurance Australia Ltd. (1994), 182 C.L.R. 51; British Columbia v. Canadian Forest Products Ltd., 2004 SCC 38, [2004] 2 S.C.R. 74; Southern Pacific Co. v. Darnell-Taenzer Lumber Co., 245 U.S. 531 (1918); Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720 (1977); Multiple Access Ltd. v. McCutcheon, [1982] 2 S.C.R. 161; doit être étayée par quelque preuve. Trancher entre des preuves d'expert contradictoires relève du juge du procès et ne doit pas intervenir à l'étape de la certification.

La décision de certifier à titre de questions communes l'opportunité d'établir les dommages-intérêts de manière globale et, dans l'affirmative, la détermination du montant de ces dommages-intérêts, ne doit pas être réformée. La question de savoir si l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux constitue une réparation appropriée peut être certifiée comme question commune. Cependant, cette question commune ne sera tranchée qu'au procès, une fois la responsabilité établie. La décision relative à l'applicabilité des dispositions de la CPA sur les dommages-intérêts globaux doit appartenir en fin de compte au juge du procès appelé à statuer sur les questions communes. L'omission de proposer ou de certifier à titre de question commune l'opportunité d'accorder des dommages-intérêts globaux ou une autre réparation n'empêche pas le juge du procès de se fonder sur les dispositions s'il l'estime indiqué.

La conclusion du juge saisi des demandes selon laquelle le recours collectif constitue la meilleure procédure ne doit pas être modifiée. Dans la présente affaire, non seulement l'existence de causes d'action, mais aussi la perte subie par les membres du groupe, constituent des questions communes. On peut dire que la perte constitue une question commune car il a été déterminé qu'une méthode proposée par un expert permettrait assez certainement d'établir la perte à l'échelle du groupe. Le règlement des questions communes devrait permettre de statuer sur la responsabilité de M et sur le transfert de la majoration aux acheteurs indirects. Puisqu'il est essentiel de statuer sur ces points afin que les membres du groupe puissent recouvrer le montant de la perte, le règlement des questions communes ferait progresser substantiellement l'instance.

Jurisprudence

Arrêts mentionnés : Sun-Rype Products Ltd. c. Archer Daniels Midland Co., 2011 BCCA 187, 305 B.C.A.C. 55, conf. par 2013 CSC 58, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 545; Infineon Technologies AG c. Option consommateurs, 2013 CSC 59, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 600; Hanover Shoe, Inc. c. United Shoe Machinery Corp., 392 U.S. 481 (1968); Kingstreet Investments Ltd. c. Nouveau-Brunswick (Finances), 2007 CSC 1, [2007] 1 R.C.S. 3; Commissioner of State Revenue (Victoria) c. Royal Insurance Australia Ltd. (1994), 182 C.L.R. 51; Colombie-Britannique c. Canadian Forest Products Ltd., 2004 CSC 38, [2004] 2 R.C.S. 74; Southern Pacific Co. c. Darnell-Taenzer Lumber Co., 245 U.S. 531 (1918); Illinois Brick Co. c. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720 (1977);

Chadha v. Bayer Inc. (2003), 63 O.R. (3d) 22; California v. ARC America Corp., 490 U.S. 93 (1989); Alberta v. Elder Advocates of Alberta Society, 2011 SCC 24, [2011] 2 S.C.R. 261; Hunt v. Carey Canada Inc., [1990] 2 S.C.R. 959; Hollick v. Toronto (City), 2001 SCC 68, [2001] 3 S.C.R. 158; Mulcahy v. The Queen (1868), L.R. 3 H.L. 306; Golden Capital Securities Ltd. v. Holmes, 2004 BCCA 565, 205 B.C.A.C. 54; Canada Cement LaFarge Ltd. v. British Columbia Lightweight Aggregate Ltd., [1983] 1 S.C.R. 452; Smith v. National Money Mart Co. (2006), 80 O.R. (3d) 81, leave to appeal refused, [2006] 1 S.C.R. xii; Correia v. Canac Kitchens, 2008 ONCA 506, 91 O.R. (3d) 353; OBG Ltd. v. Allan, [2007] UKHL 21, [2008] 1 A.C. 1; Bram Enterprises Ltd. v. A.I. Enterprises Ltd., 2012 NBCA 33, 387 N.B.R. (2d) 215, leave to appeal granted, [2012] 3 S.C.R. v; Garland v. Consumers' Gas Co., 2004 SCC 25, [2004] 1 S.C.R. 629; Rathwell v. Rathwell, [1978] 2 S.C.R. 436; Pettkus v. Becker, [1980] 2 S.C.R. 834; Peel (Regional Municipality) v. Canada, [1992] 3 S.C.R. 762; Kerr v. Baranow, 2011 SCC 10, [2011] 1 S.C.R. 269; United Australia, Ltd. v. Barclays Bank, Ltd., [1941] A.C. 1; Serhan (Trustee of) v. Johnson & Johnson (2006), 85 O.R. (3d) 665; National Trust Co. v. Gleason, 77 N.Y. 400 (1879); Federal Sugar Refining Co. v. United States Sugar Equalization Board, Inc., 268 F. 575 (1920); Mahesan v. Malaysia Government Officers' Co-operative Housing Society Ltd., [1979] A.C. 374; Universe Tankships Inc. of Monrovia v. International Transport Workers Federation, [1983] A.C. 366; Zidaric v. Toshiba of Canada Ltd. (2000), 5 C.C.L.T. (3d) 61; Reid v. Ford Motor Co., 2006 BCSC 712 (CanLII); Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. v. Infineon Technologies AG, 2009 BCCA 503, 98 B.C.L.R. (4th) 272, rev'g 2008 BCSC 575 (CanLII); Cloud v. Canada (Attorney General) (2004), 73 O.R. (3d) 401; In re: Hydrogen Peroxide Antitrust Litigation, 552 F.3d 305 (2008); Irving Paper Ltd. v. Atofina Chemicals Inc. (2009), 99 O.R. (3d) 358; Hague v. Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. (2004), 13 C.P.C. (6th) 1; Western Canadian Shopping Centres Inc. v. Dutton, 2001 SCC 46, [2001] 2 S.C.R. 534; In Re: Linerboard Antitrust Litigation, 305 F.3d 145 (2002); Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes, 131 S.Ct. 2541 (2011); Steele v. Toyota Canada Inc., 2011 BCCA 98, 329 D.L.R. (4th) 389; 2038724 Ontario Ltd. v. Quizno's Canada Restaurant Corp., 2010 ONCA 466, 100 O.R. (3d) 721.

Statutes and Regulations Cited

Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 50, ss. 1 "common issues", 4(1), (2), 5(4), (7), 10(1), 29(1), (2).

Multiple Access Ltd. c. McCutcheon, [1982] 2 R.C.S. 161; Chadha c. Bayer Inc. (2003), 63 O.R. (3d) 22; California c. ARC America Corp., 490 U.S. 93 (1989); Alberta c. Elder Advocates of Alberta Society, 2011 CSC 24, [2011] 2 R.C.S. 261; Hunt c. Carey Canada Inc., [1990] 2 R.C.S. 959; Hollick c. Toronto (Ville), 2001 CSC 68, [2001] 3 R.C.S. 158; Mulcahy c. The Queen (1868), L.R. 3 H.L. 306; Golden Capital Securities Ltd. c. Holmes, 2004 BCCA 565, 205 B.C.A.C. 54; Ciments Canada LaFarge Ltée c. British Columbia Lightweight Aggregate Ltd., [1983] 1 R.C.S. 452; Smith c. National Money Mart Co. (2006), 80 O.R. (3d) 81, autorisation d'appel refusée, [2006] 1 R.C.S. xii; Correia c. Canac Kitchens, 2008 ONCA 506, 91 O.R. (3d) 353; OBG Ltd. c. Allan, [2007] UKHL 21, [2008] 1 A.C. 1; Bram Enterprises Ltd. c. A.I. Enterprises Ltd., 2012 NBCA 33, 387 R.N.-B. (2e) 215, autorisation d'appel accordée, [2012] 3 R.C.S. v; Garland c. Consumers' Gas Co., 2004 CSC 25, [2004] 1 R.C.S. 629; Rathwell c. Rathwell, [1978] 2 R.C.S. 436; Pettkus c. Becker, [1980] 2 R.C.S. 834; Peel (Municipalité régionale) c. Canada, [1992] 3 R.C.S. 762; Kerr c. Baranow, 2011 CSC 10, [2011] 1 R.C.S. 269; United Australia, Ltd. c. Barclays Bank, Ltd., [1941] A.C. 1; Serhan (Trustee of) c. Johnson & Johnson (2006), 85 O.R. (3d) 665; National Trust Co. c. Gleason, 77 N.Y. 400 (1879); Federal Sugar Refining Co. c. United States Sugar Equalization Board, Inc., 268 F. 575 (1920); Mahesan c. Malaysia Government Officers' Co-operative Housing Society Ltd., [1979] A.C. 374; Universe Tankships Inc. of Monrovia c. International Transport Workers Federation, [1983] A.C. 366; Zidaric c. Toshiba of Canada Ltd. (2000), 5 C.C.L.T. (3d) 61; Reid c. Ford Motor Co., 2006 BCSC 712 (CanLII); Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. c. Infineon Technologies AG, 2009 BCCA 503, 98 B.C.L.R. (4th) 272, inf. 2008 BCSC 575 (CanLII); Cloud c. Canada (Attorney General) (2004), 73 O.R. (3d) 401; In re : Hydrogen Peroxide Antitrust Litigation, 552 F.3d 305 (2008); Irving Paper Ltd. c. Atofina Chemicals Inc. (2009), 99 O.R. (3d) 358; Hague c. Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. (2004), 13 C.P.C. (6th) 1; Western Canadian Shopping Centres Inc. c. Dutton, 2001 CSC 46, [2001] 2 R.C.S. 534; In Re : Linerboard Antitrust Litigation, 305 F.3d 145 (2002); Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. c. Dukes, 131 S.Ct. 2541 (2011); Steele c. Toyota Canada Inc., 2011 BCCA 98, 329 D.L.R. (4th) 389; 2038724 Ontario Ltd. c. Quizno's Canada Restaurant Corp., 2010 ONCA 466, 100 O.R. (3d) 721.

Lois et règlements cités

Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, ch. 50, art. 1 « common issues » (question commune), 4(1), (2), 5(4), (7), 10(1), 29(1), (2).

Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, ss. 36, Part VI, 45(1), 52(1).

Authors Cited

Antitrust Modernization Commission. Antitrust Modernization Commission: Report and Recommendations. Washington, D.C.: The Commission, 2007 (online: http://govinfo.library.unt.edu/amc/report_recommendation/toc.htm).

Beatson, J. The Use and Abuse of Unjust Enrichment: Essays on the Law of Restitution. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1991.

British Columbia. Official Report of Debates of the Legislative Assembly (Hansard), vol. 20, No. 20, 4th Sess., 35th Parl., June 6, 1995, p. 15078.

Cullity, Maurice. "Certification in Class Proceedings — The Curious Requirement of 'Some Basis in Fact'" (2011), 51 Can. Bus. L.J. 407.

Eizenga, Michael A., et al. Class Actions Law and Practice, 2nd ed. Markham, Ont.: LexisNexis, 2009 (loose-leaf updated March 2013, release 21).

Friedmann, Daniel. "Restitution for Wrongs: The Basis of Liability", in W. R. Cornish, et al., eds., Restitution: Past, Present and Future: Essays in Honour of Gareth Jones. Oxford: Hart Publishing, 1998, 133.

Gavil, Andrew I. "Thinking Outside the Illinois Brick Box: A Proposal for Reform" (2009), 76 Antitrust L.J. 167.

Glover, J. Maria. "The Structural Role of Private Enforcement Mechanisms in Public Law" (2012), 53 Wm. & Mary L. Rev. 1137.

Harris, Robert G., and Lawrence A. Sullivan. "Passing On the Monopoly Overcharge: A Comprehensive Policy Analysis" (1979), 128 U. Pa. L. Rev. 269.

Landes, William M., and Richard A. Posner. "Should Indirect Purchasers Have Standing To Sue Under the Antitrust Laws? An Economic Analysis of the Rule of Illinois Brick" (1979), 46 U. Chi. L. Rev. 602.

Landes, William M., and Richard A. Posner. "The Economics of Passing On: A Reply to Harris and Sullivan" (1980), 128 U. Pa. L. Rev. 1274.

Maddaugh, Peter D., and John D. McCamus. The Law of Restitution. Aurora, Ont.: Canada Law Book, 2004 (loose-leaf updated September 2005).

Maddaugh, Peter D., and John D. McCamus. The Law of Restitution. Toronto: Canada Law Book, 2013 (loose-leaf updated May 2013, release 10).

O'Connor, Kevin J. "Is the Illinois Brick Wall Crumbling?" (2001), 15:3 Antitrust 34.

Osborne, Philip H. The Law of Torts, 4th ed. Toronto: Irwin Law, 2011.

Loi sur la concurrence, L.R.C. 1985, ch. C-34, art. 36, partie VI, 45(1), 52(1).

Doctrine et autres documents cités

Antitrust Modernization Commission. Antitrust Modernization Commission : Report and Recommendations. Washington, D.C. : The Commission, 2007 (online : http://govinfo.library.unt.edu/amc/report_recommendation/toc.htm).

Beatson, J. The Use and Abuse of Unjust Enrichment : Essays on the Law of Restitution. Oxford : Clarendon Press, 1991.

Colombie-Britannique. Official Report of Debates of the Legislative Assembly (Hansard), vol. 20, No. 20, 4th Sess., 35th Parl., June 6, 1995, p. 15078.

Cullity, Maurice. « Certification in Class Proceedings — The Curious Requirement of "Some Basis in Fact" » (2011), 51 Rev. can. dr. comm. 407.

Eizenga, Michael A., et al. Class Actions Law and Practice, 2nd ed. Markham, Ont. : LexisNexis, 2009 (loose-leaf updated March 2013, release 21).

Friedmann, Daniel. « Restitution for Wrongs : The Basis of Liability », in W. R. Cornish, et al., eds., Restitution : Past, Present and Future : Essays in Honour of Gareth Jones. Oxford : Hart Publishing, 1998, 133.

Gavil, Andrew I. « Thinking Outside the Illinois Brick Box : A Proposal for Reform » (2009), 76 Antitrust L.J. 167.

Glover, J. Maria. « The Structural Role of Private Enforcement Mechanisms in Public Law » (2012), 53 Wm. & Mary L. Rev. 1137.

Harris, Robert G., and Lawrence A. Sullivan. « Passing On the Monopoly Overcharge : A Comprehensive Policy Analysis » (1979), 128 U. Pa. L. Rev. 269.

Landes, William M., and Richard A. Posner. « Should Indirect Purchasers Have Standing To Sue Under the Antitrust Laws? An Economic Analysis of the Rule of Illinois Brick » (1979), 46 U. Chi. L. Rev. 602.

Landes, William M., and Richard A. Posner. « The Economics of Passing On : A Reply to Harris and Sullivan » (1980), 128 U. Pa. L. Rev. 1274.

Maddaugh, Peter D., and John D. McCamus. The Law of Restitution. Aurora, Ont. : Canada Law Book, 2004 (loose-leaf updated September 2005).

Maddaugh, Peter D., and John D. McCamus. The Law of Restitution. Toronto : Canada Law Book, 2013 (loose-leaf updated May 2013, release 10).

O'Connor, Kevin J. « Is the Illinois Brick Wall Crumbling? » (2001), 15:3 Antitrust 34.

Osborne, Philip H. The Law of Torts, 4th ed. Toronto : Irwin Law, 2011.

Thimmesch, Adam. "Beyond Treble Damages: Hanover Shoe and Direct Purchaser Suits After Comes v. Microsoft Corp." (2005), 90 Iowa L. Rev. 1649.

Van Cott, Charles C. "Standing at the Fringe: Antitrust Damages and the Fringe Producer" (1983), 35 Stan. L. Rev. 763.

Werden, Gregory J., and Marius Schwartz. "Illinois Brick and the Deterrence of Antitrust Violations — An Economic Analysis" (1984), 35 Hastings L.J. 629.

APPEAL from a judgment of the British Columbia Court of Appeal (Donald, Lowry and Frankel JJ.A.), 2011 BCCA 186, 304 B.C.A.C. 90, 513 W.A.C. 90, 331 D.L.R. (4th) 671, [2011] B.C.J. No. 688 (QL), 2011 CarswellBC 930, setting aside a decision of Myers J., 2010 BCSC 285, [2010] B.C.J. No. 380 (QL), 2010 CarswellBC 508, and decisions of Tysoe J., 2006 BCSC 1738, 59 B.C.L.R. (4th) 111, [2007] 1 W.W.R. 541, 44 C.C.L.T. (3d) 146, [2006] B.C.J. No. 3035 (QL), 2006 CarswellBC 2892, and 2006 BCSC 1047, 57 B.C.L.R. (4th) 323, [2006] 11 W.W.R. 688, 40 C.C.L.T. (3d) 45, [2006] B.C.J. No. 1564 (QL), 2006 CarswellBC 1691. Appeal allowed.

J. J. Camp, Q.C., Reidar Mogerman, Melina Buckley and Michael Sobkin, for the appellants.

Neil Finkelstein, James Sullivan, Catherine Beagan Flood and Brandon Kain, for the respondents.

John S. Tyhurst, for the intervener.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

ROTHSTEIN J. —

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Thimmesch, Adam. « Beyond Treble Damages : Hanover Shoe and Direct Purchaser Suits After Comes v. Microsoft Corp. » (2005), 90 Iowa L. Rev. 1649.

Van Cott, Charles C. « Standing at the Fringe : Antitrust Damages and the Fringe Producer » (1983), 35 Stan. L. Rev. 763.

Werden, Gregory J., and Marius Schwartz. « Illinois Brick and the Deterrence of Antitrust Violations — An Economic Analysis » (1984), 35 Hastings L.J. 629.

POURVOI contre un arrêt de la Cour d'appel de la Colombie-Britannique (les juges Donald, Lowry et Frankel), 2011 BCCA 186, 304 B.C.A.C. 90, 513 W.A.C. 90, 331 D.L.R. (4th) 671, [2011] B.C.J. No. 688 (QL), 2011 CarswellBC 930, qui a infirmé une décision du juge Myers, 2010 BCSC 285, [2010] B.C.J. No. 380 (QL), 2010 CarswellBC 508, et des décisions du juge Tysoe, 2006 BCSC 1738, 59 B.C.L.R. (4th) 111, [2007] 1 W.W.R. 541, 44 C.C.L.T. (3d) 146, [2006] B.C.J. No. 3035 (QL), 2006 CarswellBC 2892, et 2006 BCSC 1047, 57 B.C.L.R. (4th) 323, [2006] 11 W.W.R. 688, 40 C.C.L.T. (3d) 45, [2006] B.C.J. No. 1564 (QL), 2006 CarswellBC 1691. Pourvoi accueilli.

J. J. Camp, c.r., Reidar Mogerman, Melina Buckley et Michael Sobkin, pour les appelants.

Neil Finkelstein, James Sullivan, Catherine Beagan Flood et Brandon Kain, pour les intimées.

John S. Tyhurst, pour l'intervenant.

Version française du jugement de la Cour rendu par

LE JUGE ROTHSTEIN —

TABLE DES MATIÈRES

I. Introduction

[1] It is no simple task to assess liability and apportion damages in situations where the wrongdoer and the harmed parties are separated by a long and complex chain of distribution, involving many parties, purchasers, resellers and intermediaries. Such is the problem presented by indirect purchaser actions in which downstream individual purchasers seek recovery for alleged unlawful overcharges that were passed on to them through the successive links in the chain.

[2] The complexities inherent in indirect purchaser actions are magnified when such actions are brought as a class proceeding. When that happens, the courts are required to grapple with not only the difficulties associated with indirect purchaser actions, but are also then asked to decide whether the requirements for certification of a class action are met. These are the questions the Court is faced with in this appeal.

II. Background

[3] The representative plaintiffs in this action, Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. and Neil Godfrey (collectively "Pro-Sys"), brought a class action against Microsoft Corporation and Microsoft Canada Co./Microsoft Canada CIE (collectively "Microsoft") alleging that beginning in 1988, Microsoft engaged in unlawful conduct by overcharging for its Intel-compatible PC operating systems and Intel-compatible PC applications software. Pro-Sys claims that as a direct consequence of Microsoft's unlawful conduct, it and all the class members paid and continue to pay higher prices for Microsoft operating systems and applications software than they would have paid absent the unlawful conduct.

I. Introduction

[1] Ce n'est pas tâche facile que de statuer sur la responsabilité et de répartir les dommages-intérêts lorsque le fautif et les parties lésées se trouvent aux extrémités d'une chaîne de distribution longue et complexe constituée de nombreuses personnes, qu'il s'agisse d'acheteurs, de revendeurs ou d'intermédiaires. Là réside la difficulté que présente l'action intentée par l'acheteur indirect, lequel se situe en aval dans la chaîne de distribution, en vue de recouvrer la majoration illégale qui lui aurait été transférée d'un maillon à l'autre de la chaîne.

[2] La complexité de l'action de l'acheteur indirect s'accentue lorsqu'il y a regroupement au sein d'un recours collectif. Les tribunaux doivent alors non seulement se colleter avec les problèmes liés à une telle action, mais aussi déterminer si les conditions de certification d'un recours collectif sont réunies. Telles sont les questions sur lesquelles la Cour doit se prononcer dans le présent pourvoi.

II. Contexte

[3] Les demandeurs constitués représentants en l'espèce, Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. et Neil Godfrey (collectivement, « Pro-Sys »), ont intenté un recours collectif contre Microsoft Corporation et Microsoft Canada Co./Microsoft Canada CIE (collectivement, « Microsoft »). Ils allèguent qu'à compter de 1988, Microsoft a agi illégalement en majorant le prix de ses systèmes d'exploitation et de ses logiciels d'application pour ordinateur personnel compatibles avec le processeur Intel. Selon Pro-Sys, le comportement illégal de Microsoft a eu pour conséquence directe que tous les membres du groupe et elle ont payé et paient toujours, pour les systèmes d'exploitation et les logiciels d'application de Microsoft, un prix supérieur à celui qu'ils auraient payé n'eût été ce comportement.

[4] Pro-Sys sought certification of the action as a class proceeding under the Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 50 ("CPA").

[5] The proposed class is made up of ultimate consumers who acquired Microsoft products from re-sellers, re-sellers who themselves purchased the products either directly from Microsoft or from other re-sellers higher up the chain of distribution. These consumers are known as the "indirect purchasers". The proposed class was defined in the statement of claim as > all persons resident in British Columbia who, on or after January 1, 1994, indirectly acquired a license for Microsoft Operating Systems and/or Microsoft Applications Software for their own use, and not for purposes of further selling or leasing.

(2010 BCSC 285 (CanLII), at para. 16)

III. The Proceedings Below

A. Certification Proceedings in the British Columbia Supreme Court

[6] Pro-Sys filed its original statement of claim in the British Columbia Supreme Court ("B.C.S.C.") in December 2004. Thereafter numerous amendments to the Statement of Claim were made with the approval of Tysoe J., ultimately resulting in the Third Further Amended Statement of Claim. A Fourth Further Amended Statement of Claim has not officially been filed.

[7] In 2006, Microsoft sought an order striking out the claim altogether and an order dismissing the action. In the alternative, it sought to strike out only portions of the claim. The parties agreed that the outcome of the application to strike would be determinative of the certification requirement under s. 4(1)(a) of the CPA that the pleadings disclose a cause of action.

[8] Tysoe J. found causes of action under s. 36 of the Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, in tort

[4] Pro-Sys a demandé la certification de l'action à titre de recours collectif en application de la Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, ch. 50 (« CPA »).

[5] Le groupe proposé se compose des consommateurs finaux qui ont acheté des produits Microsoft à des revendeurs qui les avaient eux-mêmes achetés soit directement à Microsoft, soit à d'autres revendeurs situés en amont dans la chaîne de distribution. On les qualifie d'« acheteurs indirects ». Le groupe proposé est défini comme suit dans la déclaration :

> [TRADUCTION] . . . toutes les personnes résidant en Colombie-Britannique qui, depuis le 1er janvier 1994, ont acquis indirectement une licence pour un système d'exploitation ou un logiciel d'application de Microsoft à leur usage personnel, et non aux fins de revente ou de location.

(2010 BCSC 285 (CanLII), par. 16)

III. Décisions des tribunaux inférieurs

A. Procédure de certification devant la Cour suprême de la Colombie-Britannique

[6] Pro-Sys a déposé sa déclaration initiale à la Cour suprême de la Colombie-Britannique (« C.S.C.-B. ») en décembre 2004. Puis, avec l'approbation du juge Tysoe, elle y a apporté de nombreuses modifications pour arriver finalement à la troisième déclaration modifiée. Une quatrième déclaration modifiée n'a pas été officiellement déposée au dossier.

[7] En 2006, Microsoft a demandé la radiation de la demande et le rejet de l'action. À titre subsidiaire, elle a demandé la radiation de certaines parties seulement de la demande. Les parties conviennent que le sort réservé à la demande de radiation sera déterminant sur le respect de la condition de certification, prévue à l'al. 4(1)(a) de la CPA, voulant que les actes de procédure révèlent une cause d'action.

[8] Le juge Tysoe conclut, pour les besoins de l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence, L.R.C. 1985, for conspiracy and intentional interference with economic interests and in restitution for waiver of tort (2006 BCSC 1047, 57 B.C.L.R. (4th) 323). He ordered that the portions of the pleadings dealing with unjust enrichment and constructive trust should be struck out as they were not sufficient to support such claims, unless they were amended by Pro-Sys. Upon further motion to amend the claims (2006 BCSC 1738, 59 B.C.L.R. (4th) 111), Tysoe J. allowed amendments to support the claims of unjust enrichment and constructive trust.

ch. C-34, à l'existence de causes d'action en responsabilité délictuelle pour complot et atteinte intentionnelle aux intérêts financiers, et en restitution pour renonciation au recours délictuel (2006 BCSC 1047, 57 B.C.L.R. (4th) 323). Il ordonne que les éléments des actes de procédure qui concernent l'enrichissement sans cause et la fiducie par interprétation soient radiés au motif que, dans leur libellé actuel et sauf modification par Pro-Sys, ils n'appuient pas les allégations. Sur demande de modification des actes de procédure, le juge Tysoe autorise ensuite leur modification (2006 BCSC 1738, 59 B.C.L.R. (4th) 111) afin qu'ils appuient les allégations d'un enrichissement sans cause et d'une fiducie par interprétation.

[9] Following his rulings on the applications to strike and to amend, Tysoe J. was appointed to the British Columbia Court of Appeal ("B.C.C.A."), and Myers J. assumed management of the case. Myers J. assessed the remaining certification requirements set out in s. 4(1) of the CPA, namely (i) whether there was an identifiable class (s. 4(1)(b)); (ii) whether the claims of the class members raised common issues (s. 4(1)(c)); (iii) whether the class action was the preferable procedure (s. 4(1)(d)); and (iv) whether Pro-Sys and Neil Godfrey could adequately represent the class (s. 4(1)(e)). Myers J. certified the action, finding that all four of the remaining requirements for certification were met (2010 BCSC 285 (CanLII)). The common issues certified by Myers J. are listed in the appendix to these reasons.

[9] Après avoir statué sur les demandes de radiation et de modification, le juge Tysoe a été nommé à la Cour d'appel de la Colombie-Britannique (« C.A.C.-B. »), et le juge Myers s'est vu confier la gestion de l'instance. Le juge Myers a examiné les autres conditions de certification prévues au par. 4(1) de la CPA, à savoir (i) l'existence d'un groupe identifiable de personnes (al. 4(1)(b)), (ii) le fait que les demandes des membres du groupe soulèvent une question commune (al. 4(1)(c)), (iii) le fait que le recours collectif constitue la meilleure procédure pour régler la question (al. 4(1)(d)) et (iv) l'aptitude de Pro-Sys et de Neil Godfrey à bien représenter le groupe (al. 4(1)(e)). Il a certifié le recours et conclu que ces quatre autres conditions étaient réunies (2010 BCSC 285 (CanLII)). Les questions communes certifiées par le juge Myers sont énumérées en annexe.

B. Appeal of the Certification to the British Columbia Court of Appeal, 2011 BCCA 186, 304 B.C.A.C. 90

B. Appel de la certification devant la Cour d'appel de la Colombie-Britannique, 2011 BCCA 186, 304 B.C.A.C. 90

[10] Microsoft appealed from the decisions of Tysoe and Myers JJ. The majority of the B.C.C.A., per Lowry J.A. (Frankel J.A. concurring), allowed the appeal, set aside the certification order and dismissed the action, finding it plain and obvious that the class members had no cause of action under s. 4(1)(a) of the CPA. The majority reached this conclusion after determining that indirect purchaser actions were not available as a matter of law

[10] Microsoft a porté en appel les décisions des juges Tysoe et Myers. Les juges majoritaires de la Cour d'appel, par la voix du juge Lowry (avec l'accord du juge Frankel), accueillent l'appel, annulent l'ordonnance de certification et rejettent l'action au motif qu'il est manifeste que les membres du groupe n'ont pas de cause d'action comme l'exige l'al. 4(1)(a) de la CPA. Ils arrivent à cette conclusion après avoir établi qu'un acheteur indirect in Canada. As such, it did not consider the other certification requirements.

[11] Donald J.A., dissenting, would have dismissed the appeal and certified the action, finding indirect purchaser actions to be permitted in Canada, and finding sufficient grounds for the action.

[12] In the B.C.C.A., the present case was heard together with another case dealing with substantially similar issues (Sun-Rype Products Ltd. v. Archer Daniels Midland Co., 2011 BCCA 187, 305 B.C.A.C. 55). Counsel for the plaintiffs was the same in both appeals and the appeals were heard by the same panel of judges. As in the present appeal, in Sun-Rype, the issue of whether indirect purchaser actions are available in Canada was determinative. In reasons released simultaneously with the reasons in this appeal, the majority of the B.C.C.A. disposed of Sun-Rype in the same manner, decertifying and dismissing the indirect purchasers' class action on the basis that indirect purchaser actions were not available under Canadian law. Donald J.A. dissented, finding, as in this appeal, that indirect purchaser actions were permitted.

[13] Leave to appeal was granted in both cases by this Court. They were heard with another indirect purchaser class action originating in Quebec, Infineon Technologies AG v. Option consommateurs, 2013 SCC 59, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 600, which this Court has addressed in separate reasons, per LeBel and Wagner JJ. Reasons in Sun-Rype can be found at 2013 SCC 58, [2013] 3 S.C.R. 545.

IV. Analysis

[14] The issues are addressed in the following order:

(1) Did the majority of the B.C.C.A. err in finding that indirect purchaser actions were not available as a matter of law in Canada?

ne peut légalement intenter une action au Canada. Ils n'examinent donc pas les autres conditions de certification.

[11] Dissident, le juge Donald aurait rejeté l'appel et certifié l'action car, selon lui, l'acheteur indirect peut poursuivre au Canada et l'action est suffisamment étayée.

[12] La Cour d'appel a entendu l'appel de pair avec un autre dont l'objet est assez semblable, soit Sun-Rype Products Ltd. c. Archer Daniels Midland Co., 2011 BCCA 187, 305 B.C.A.C. 55. Les demandeurs étaient représentés par les mêmes avocats, et les deux appels ont été entendus par la même formation de juges. Dans Sun-Rype, comme en l'espèce, la question déterminante était celle de savoir si, au Canada, un acheteur indirect peut intenter un recours. Dans des motifs rendus en même temps que dans la présente affaire, les juges majoritaires de la Cour d'appel réservent le même sort à l'appel, annulent la certification et rejettent le recours collectif des acheteurs indirects au motif que le droit canadien n'autorise pas le recours de l'acheteur indirect. Dissident, le juge Donald conclut que l'acheteur indirect possède un recours.

[13] L'autorisation de pourvoi devant notre Cour a été accordée dans les deux affaires. Il y a eu audition commune des deux appels, ainsi que d'Infineon Technologies AG c. Option consommateurs, 2013 CSC 59, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 600, une autre affaire de recours collectif intenté au Québec par des acheteurs indirects dans laquelle les juges LeBel et Wagner se prononcent dans des motifs distincts. Les motifs de l'arrêt Sun-Rype sont publiés sous la référence 2013 CSC 58, [2013] 3 R.C.S. 545.

IV. Analyse

[14] La Cour examine les questions en litige dans l'ordre suivant :

(1) Les juges majoritaires de la Cour d'appel de la Colombie-Britannique ont-ils tort de conclure qu'un acheteur indirect ne peut légalement intenter une action au Canada?

(2) Were the findings of Tysoe J. as to the requirement that the pleadings disclose a cause of action under s. 4(1)(a) of the CPA correct?

(3) Were the findings of Myers J. as to the balance of the certification requirements under s. 4(1) of the CPA correct?

A. Indirect Purchaser Actions (the "Passing-On" Issue)

[15] In this appeal, the parties have introduced numerous issues. The one occupying the largest portion of the factums and the oral argument was the question of whether indirect purchasers have the right to bring an action to recover losses that were passed on to them. Some sources have treated this issue as one of standing. I think it more appropriate to treat it as a threshold issue to be determined before moving into the specific causes of action alleged in the certification application.

[16] As I have described above, indirect purchasers are consumers who have not purchased a product directly from the alleged overcharger, but who have purchased it either from one of the overcharger's direct purchasers, or from some other intermediary in the chain of distribution. The issue is whether indirect purchasers have a cause of action against the party who has effectuated the overcharge at the top of the distribution chain that has allegedly injured them indirectly as the result of the overcharge being "passed on" down the chain to them.

[17] Microsoft argues that indirect purchasers should have no such cause of action. Its submits that permitting indirect purchasers to bring an action against the alleged overcharger to recover loss that has been "passed on" would be inconsistent with this Court's jurisprudence, which it says rejected passing on as a defence. Microsoft says that the rejection of the "passing-on" defence necessarily entails a rejection of the offensive use of passing on by indirect purchasers to recover overcharges that were passed on to them. I begin with a description

(2) Le juge Tysoe a-t-il raison de conclure que les actes de procédure révèlent une cause d'action comme l'exige l'al. 4(1)(a) de la CPA?

(3) La conclusion du juge Myers sur les autres conditions de certification prévues au par. 4(1) de la CPA est-elle fondée?

A. Action de l'acheteur indirect (la question du « transfert de la perte »)

[15] Les parties au pourvoi soulèvent de nombreuses questions, dont celle qui revient le plus souvent dans les mémoires et les plaidoiries, à savoir si l'acheteur indirect peut intenter une action pour recouvrer la perte qui lui a été transférée. D'aucuns estiment qu'il s'agit de savoir s'il a ou non qualité pour agir. Je pense qu'il convient davantage d'y voir une question préliminaire à trancher avant l'examen des causes d'action précises alléguées dans la demande de certification du recours collectif.

[16] Comme je l'indique précédemment, l'acheteur indirect est un consommateur qui n'a pas acheté le produit directement à l'auteur de la majoration, mais à un acheteur direct ou à un autre intermédiaire dans la chaîne de distribution. Dès lors, a-t-il une cause d'action contre l'auteur de la majoration qui se situe au sommet de la chaîne de distribution et qui l'aurait indirectement lésé du fait que la majoration lui a été « transférée » à l'autre extrémité de la chaîne de distribution?

[17] Microsoft fait valoir que l'acheteur indirect ne doit pas se voir reconnaître une telle cause d'action, car selon elle, l'autoriser à ester contre l'auteur allégué de la majoration pour recouvrer la perte qui lui a été « transférée » est incompatible avec la jurisprudence de notre Cour, qui écarte le moyen de défense fondé sur pareil transfert. Microsoft affirme que le rejet du transfert de la perte comme moyen de défense implique nécessairement son exclusion comme cause d'action aux fins de recouvrer la perte qui découle d'une of the passing-on defence and then deal with its impact on indirect purchaser actions.

(1) Rejection of Passing On as a Defence

[18] The passing-on defence was typically advanced by an overcharger at the top of a distribution chain. It was invoked under the proposition that if the direct purchaser who sustained the original overcharge then passed that overcharge on to its own customers, the gain conferred on the overcharger was not at the expense of the direct purchaser because the direct purchaser suffered no loss. As such, the fact that the overcharge was "passed on" was argued to be a defence to actions brought by the direct purchaser against the party responsible for the overcharge.

[19] The passing-on defence has been rejected in both Canadian and U.S. jurisprudence. It was first addressed by the Supreme Court of the United States in 1968 in Hanover Shoe, Inc. v. United Shoe Machinery Corp., 392 U.S. 481 (1968). In that case, Hanover sued United for damages under U.S. antitrust laws because United would only lease, not sell, its shoe machinery, which Hanover claimed resulted in an overcharge to it. United argued that Hanover had passed on the overcharge to its own customers and had therefore suffered no harm. The U.S. Supreme Court (per White J., Stewart J. dissenting) rejected the passing-on defence to overcharging. It cited difficulties in ascertaining the nature and extent of the passing on of the overcharge as the reason for rejecting the defence:

Even if it could be shown that the buyer raised his price in response to, and in the amount of, the overcharge and that his margin of profit and total sales had not thereafter declined, there would remain the nearly insuperable difficulty of demonstrating that the particular plaintiff could not or would not have raised his prices absent the overcharge or maintained the higher price majoration refilée à l'acheteur indirect. Je ferai d'abord état du moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte, puis j'examinerai son incidence sur l'action de l'acheteur indirect.

(1) Rejet du transfert de la perte comme moyen de défense

[18] Le transfert de la perte a généralement été invoqué en défense par l'auteur de la majoration situé au sommet de la chaîne de distribution. L'argument voulait que si l'acheteur direct absorbait la majoration puis la transférait à ses propres clients, l'auteur de la majoration ne réalisait pas le bénéfice au détriment de l'acheteur direct, car celui-ci ne subissait aucune perte. Ce « transfert » de la majoration était donc invoqué en défense à l'action intentée par l'acheteur direct contre l'auteur de la majoration.

[19] Les tribunaux tant canadiens qu'américains ont rejeté le moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte. La question a d'abord été examinée en 1968 par la Cour suprême des États-Unis dans Hanover Shoe, Inc. c. United Shoe Machinery Corp., 392 U.S. 481 (1968). Dans cette affaire, Hanover avait poursuivi United en dommages-intérêts sous le régime des dispositions américaines antitrust au motif que cette dernière offrait seulement la location, et non la vente, de ses équipements de fabrication de chaussures, ce qui coûtait plus cher. United avait fait valoir que Hanover avait transféré le surcoût à ses propres clients et n'avait donc pas subi de préjudice. La Cour suprême des États-Unis (le juge White, sous réserve de la dissidence du juge Stewart) a rejeté le moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte. Elle a invoqué la difficulté de déterminer la nature et la portée du transfert du surcoût :

[TRADUCTION] Même si l'on pouvait montrer que l'acheteur a augmenté son prix à cause du surcoût, et en proportion du surcoût, et que sa marge bénéficiaire et son chiffre de ventes total n'ont pas baissé après cela, il resterait une difficulté quasi insurmontable, c'est-à-dire de démontrer que, n'eût été le surcoût, le demandeur en cause n'aurait pas pu augmenter

had the overcharge been discontinued. Since establishing the applicability of the passing-on defense would require a convincing showing of each of these virtually unascertainable figures, the task would normally prove insurmountable. [p. 493]

[20] The court added that to leave the only actionable causes in the hands of the indirect purchasers who "have only a tiny stake in a lawsuit and little interest in attempting a class action", would mean that "those who violate the antitrust laws by price fixing or monopolizing would retain the fruits of their illegality" (Hanover Shoe, at p. 494). The court thus rejected the passing-on defence. Since Hanover Shoe, defendants who effectuate illegal overcharges have been precluded from employing the passing-on defence as a means of absolving themselves of liability to their direct purchasers.

[21] The passing-on defence was rejected in Canada in Kingstreet Investments Ltd. v. New Brunswick (Finance), 2007 SCC 1, [2007] 1 S.C.R. 3, in the context of a claim for the recovery of taxes paid pursuant to ultra vires legislation. The dispute in that case arose out of a claim for the recovery of ultra vires user charges on liquor levied by the province of New Brunswick against Kingstreet Investments, whose business, among other things, involved the operation of night clubs. Bastarache J., writing for a unanimous Court, held that a public authority who had illegally overcharged a taxpayer could not reduce its liability for the overcharge simply by establishing that some or all of the overcharge was passed on to the taxpayer's customers.

[22] Bastarache J. found the passing-on defence to be inconsistent with the basic premise of restitution law. Basic restitutionary principles "provide for restoration of 'what has been taken or received from the plaintiff without justification' . . . . Restitution law is not concerned by the possibility of the plaintiff obtaining a windfall precisely because it is not founded on the concept of compensation for ou n'aurait pas augmenté ses prix, ou qu'il n'aurait pas pu maintenir le prix plus élevé si le surcoût n'avait pas été imposé. Comme la preuve de l'applicabilité du moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte exigerait une démonstration convaincante à l'égard de chacune de ces données pratiquement impossible à établir, la tâche se révélerait normalement insurmontable. [p. 493]

[20] La cour ajoute que reconnaître une cause d'action au seul acheteur indirect, qui [TRADUCTION] « n'a qu'un intérêt minime dans la poursuite judiciaire et que peu d'intérêt à intenter un recours collectif » revient à permettre à « celui qui enfreint les dispositions antitrust interdisant la fixation des prix ou la monopolisation de conserver le fruit de ses actes illégaux » (Hanover Shoe, p. 494). Elle rejette donc le moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte. Depuis Hanover Shoe, le défendeur qui impose un surcoût illégal ou effectue une majoration illégale ne peut invoquer le transfert de la perte en défense pour échapper à sa responsabilité envers son acheteur direct.

[21] Au Canada, le moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte a été rejeté dans Kingstreet Investments Ltd. c. Nouveau-Brunswick (Finances), 2007 CSC 1, [2007] 1 R.C.S. 3, une affaire de recouvrement de taxes payées en application de dispositions ultra vires. Le litige découlait d'une action intentée par Kingstreet Investments, qui exploitait entre autres des boîtes de nuit, pour recouvrer le montant de redevances d'exploitation perçues illégalement par la province du Nouveau-Brunswick sur les boissons alcooliques. Au nom des juges unanimes de la Cour, le juge Bastarache conclut que l'autorité publique qui perçoit illégalement une taxe ne peut limiter sa responsabilité à cet égard en établissant simplement que le contribuable a refilé la taxe à ses clients en totalité ou en partie.

[22] Le juge Bastarache estime que ce moyen de défense est incompatible avec le fondement premier du droit de la restitution. Les principes fondamentaux applicables en la matière « pourvoient à la restitution au demandeur de [TRADUCTION] « "ce qui lui a été pris ou a été reçu de lui sans justification" [. . .] La possibilité que le demandeur obtienne un profit fortuit n'a pas d'importance du loss" (Kingstreet, at para. 47, quoting Commissioner of State Revenue (Victoria) v. Royal Insurance Australia Ltd. (1994), 182 C.L.R. 51 (H.C.A.), at p. 71). Accordingly, "[a]s between the taxpayer and the Crown, the question of whether the taxpayer has been able to recoup its loss from some other source is simply irrelevant" (Kingstreet, at para. 45, quoting P. D. Maddaugh and J. D. McCamus, The Law of Restitution (loose-leaf 2005), at p. 11-45).

[23] Bastarache J. also found the passing-on defence to be "economically misconceived" (Kingstreet, at para. 48). By this he accepted that the task of determining the ultimate location of the harm of the overcharge is "exceedingly difficult and constitutes an inappropriate basis for denying relief" (para. 44). Echoing the misgivings expressed in Hanover Shoe, he cited the inherent difficulty in accounting for the effects of market elasticities on the prices charged by direct purchasers as the basis for this conclusion. He found these complexities made it impossible to tell what part, if any, of the overcharge was actually passed on (Kingstreet, at para. 48).

[24] Pro-Sys says that Kingstreet stands only for the rejection of the defence in the context of ultra vires taxes. In my view, however, there are three reasons that lead to the conclusion that Bastarache J.'s rejection of the passing-on defence in Kingstreet was not limited to that context.

[25] First, this Court's jurisprudence supports the broader rejection of the passing-on defence. In British Columbia v. Canadian Forest Products Ltd., 2004 SCC 38, [2004] 2 S.C.R. 74 ("Canfor"), the Crown claimed "diminution of the value of the timber" that it sold, following a forest fire caused largely by Canfor. Though the Court ultimately held in that case that the Crown had not in fact suffered loss because it was able to recover its damages through the regulatory scheme it had point de vue du droit de la restitution, précisément parce que celui-ci ne repose pas sur le concept de l'indemnisation d'une perte » (Kingstreet, par. 47, citant Commissioner of State Revenue (Victoria) c. Royal Insurance Australia Ltd. (1994), 182 C.L.R. 51 (H.C.A.), p. 71). Par conséquent, « [d]u point de vue des rapports entre le contribuable et l'État, la question de savoir si le contribuable a été en mesure de récupérer sa perte auprès d'une autre source n'est tout simplement pas pertinente » (Kingstreet, par. 45, citant P. D. Maddaugh et J. D. McCamus, The Law of Restitution (feuilles mobiles 2005), p. 11-45).

[23] Le juge Bastarache conclut en outre que le moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte n'est pas « judicieux sur le plan économique » (Kingstreet, par. 48). Il admet ainsi que déterminer l'identité de celui à qui incombe en dernier ressort la charge de la taxe « s'avère extrêmement difficile, et il ne convient pas de refuser une réparation en se basant sur ce motif » (par. 44). Revenant sur les réserves exprimées dans Hanover Shoe, il évoque à l'appui de sa conclusion la difficulté de déterminer les effets que l'élasticité du marché aura sur les prix demandés par les acheteurs directs. Il conclut qu'en raison de cette difficulté, il est impossible de dire quelle partie de la perte, s'il en est, a été effectivement transférée (Kingstreet, par. 48).

[24] Selon Pro-Sys, l'arrêt Kingstreet ne milite en faveur du rejet du moyen de défense que dans le contexte du prélèvement d'une taxe ultra vires. J'estime toutefois qu'il y a lieu trois raisons de conclure que le juge Bastarache n'écarte pas le transfert de la perte comme moyen de défense que dans ce seul cas.

[25] Premièrement, la jurisprudence de notre Cour appuie le rejet général du moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte. Dans Colombie-Britannique c. Canadian Forest Products Ltd., 2004 CSC 38, [2004] 2 R.C.S. 74 (« Canfor »), la Couronne invoquait la « diminution de la valeur du bois » qu'elle avait vendu par suite d'un incendie de forêt imputable en grande partie à Canfor. Même si, en fin de compte, la Cour conclut que la Couronne n'a pas subi de préjudice puisqu'elle a pu instituted, Binnie J. stated (albeit in obiter) that "[i]t is not generally open to a wrongdoer to dispute the existence of a loss on the basis it has been 'passed on' by the plaintiff" because this would burden courts with "the endlessness and futility of the effort to follow every transaction to its ultimate result" (para. 111, quoting Southern Pacific Co. v. Darnell-Taenzer Lumber Co., 245 U.S. 531 (1918), at p. 534). Likewise, in the same decision LeBel J., dissenting, though not on this point, said that "the passing-on defence, on the facts of this case and generally, must not be allowed to take hold in Canadian jurisprudence" (para. 197). To allow otherwise, LeBel J. indicated, would force a difficult burden of proof on the plaintiff to demonstrate not only that it had suffered a loss, but that it did not engage in any other transactions that would have offset the loss (para. 203).

[26] In Kingstreet, Bastarache J. endorsed the reasons for rejecting the passing-on defence advanced by LeBel J. in the tort law context in Canfor, saying such rejection was of equal if not greater consequence in restitution law (para. 49).

[27] Second, in Kingstreet, Bastarache J. found that the rejection of the passing-on defence was consistent with basic restitutionary law principles. Specifically, the rejection of the defence accords with the principle against unjust enrichment or nullus commodum capere potest de injuria sua propria (barring wrongdoers from benefiting from their unlawful actions). Preventing defendants from invoking passing on as a defence helps to ensure that wrongdoers are not permitted to retain their ill-gotten gains simply because it would be difficult to ascertain the precise extent of the harm. Likewise, it is important as a matter of restitutionary law to ensure that wrongdoers who overcharge their purchasers do not operate with impunity, on the grounds that complexities in tracing the overcharge through the chain of distribution will serve to shield them from liability.

recouvrer ses pertes grâce au régime réglementaire applicable, le juge Binnie fait remarquer (de manière incidente) qu'« [i]l n'est généralement pas loisible à l'auteur d'une faute de contester l'existence d'une perte au motif qu'elle a été "transférée" par le demandeur », car pareille prétention obligerait le tribunal à entreprendre « la tâche interminable et futile de suivre chaque opération jusqu'à son aboutissement ultime » (par. 111, citant Southern Pacific Co. c. Darnell-Taenzer Lumber Co., 245 U.S. 531 (1918), p. 534). De même, le juge LeBel, dissident, mais non sur ce point, opine qu'« au regard des faits de l'espèce et en général, il ne faut pas laisser ce moyen de défense s'enraciner dans la jurisprudence canadienne » (par. 197). Selon lui, admettre ce moyen de défense obligerait le demandeur à prouver non seulement qu'il a subi une perte, mais aussi qu'il n'a pas réalisé d'autres opérations commerciales qui l'ont indemnisé de la perte, ce qui serait ardu (par. 203).

[26] Dans Kingstreet, le juge Bastarache souscrit aux motifs pour lesquels, dans Canfor, le juge LeBel rejette le moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte en droit de la responsabilité délictuelle et opine que ce rejet vaut tout autant, sinon plus, en droit de la restitution (par. 49).

[27] Deuxièmement, dans Kingstreet, le juge Bastarache conclut qu'écarter le moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte est compatible avec les principes fondamentaux du droit de la restitution. Plus précisément, c'est observer la règle qui interdit l'enrichissement sans cause ou la maxime nullus commodum capere potest de injuria sua propria (selon laquelle le fautif ne saurait tirer avantage de son acte illégal). Empêcher le défendeur d'invoquer le transfert de la perte en défense contribue à faire en sorte que le fautif ne puisse conserver le gain mal acquis seulement parce qu'il est difficile de circonscrire le préjudice avec précision. De même, en matière de restitution, il importe de s'assurer que le fautif qui majore le prix exigé de l'acheteur ne le fasse pas impunément parce que la difficulté de retracer le parcours de la majoration d'un maillon à l'autre de la chaîne de distribution ne permet pas d'établir sa responsabilité.

[28] Finally, there is support in the academic commentary for the broader rejection of the passing-on defence. Maddaugh and McCamus have stated that Kingstreet was an "authoritative and apparently comprehensive rejection" of the passing-on defence in Canada, and that "[i]n reaching this conclusion, the Supreme Court reflected a broad international consensus with respect to the unsuitability of this defence" ((loose-leaf 2013), at p. 11-46).

[29] For these reasons, I conclude that the rejection of the passing-on defence in Kingstreet is not limited to the context of the imposition of ultra vires taxes. There is no principled reason to reject the defence in one context but not another; the passing-on defence is rejected throughout the whole of restitutionary law.

(2) Significance of the Passing-On Defence in This Appeal

[30] As described above, the offensive use of passing on would provide the basis for indirect purchaser actions. Microsoft argues that this Court's rejection of the passing-on defence carries, as a necessary corollary, a corresponding rejection of the offensive use of passing on. The rationale is that the rejection should apply equally so that if overchargers are not permitted to rely on passing on in their own defence, indirect purchasers should also not be able to invoke passed on overcharges as a basis for their cause of action.

[31] Microsoft relies on the 1977 decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720 (1977). Illinois Brick manufactured concrete block and sold it to masonry contractors who in turn provided their services to general contractors. The general contractors incorporated the concrete block into buildings and sold the buildings to customers such as the State of Illinois. The State was therefore an indirect purchaser of the products of Illinois Brick (p. 726). The State alleged that Illinois Brick had engaged in a conspiracy to fix the prices of concrete block, contrary to U.S. antitrust legislation, [28] Enfin, l'exclusion générale du moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte trouve appui chez les auteurs de doctrine. Ainsi, selon Maddaugh et McCamus, l'arrêt Kingstreet constitue une [TRADUCTION] « exclusion globale à la fois péremptoire et manifeste » du moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte au Canada; « [p]our tirer cette conclusion, la Cour adhère au large consensus international sur l'inapplicabilité de ce moyen de défense » ((feuilles mobiles 2013), p. 11-46).

[29] C'est pourquoi je conclus que le rejet de ce moyen de défense dans Kingstreet ne vaut pas que pour l'imposition d'une taxe ultra vires. Nul motif rationnel ne permet d'écarter le moyen de défense dans un contexte, mais pas dans un autre; il est toujours exclu aux fins du droit de la restitution.

(2) Importance en l'espèce du moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte

[30] Comme je l'indique précédemment, le transfert de la perte comme cause d'action fonderait le recours de l'acheteur indirect. Pour Microsoft, le rejet par notre Cour du transfert de la perte comme moyen de défense a nécessairement pour corollaire son rejet comme cause d'action. Or, si l'auteur de la majoration ne peut invoquer le transfert de la perte en défense, l'acheteur indirect ne devrait pas non plus pouvoir l'invoquer en demande.

[31] Microsoft cite l'arrêt Illinois Brick Co. c. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720 (1977), rendu par la Cour suprême des États-Unis en 1977. Illinois Brick fabriquait des blocs de béton qu'elle vendait à des entrepreneurs en maçonnerie qui, à leur tour, fournissaient leurs services à des entrepreneurs généraux. Ces derniers utilisaient les blocs de béton pour construire des bâtiments qu'ils vendaient notamment à l'État de l'Illinois, lequel était donc un acheteur indirect des produits d'Illinois Brick (p. 726). À titre d'acheteur indirect, l'État a poursuivi Illinois Brick pour participation à un complot visant à fixer le prix des blocs de béton, and brought an indirect purchaser action against the company (p. 727).

[32] The U.S. Supreme Court found against the State of Illinois. It held that since, according to Hanover Shoe, passing on may not be used defensively, it should not be available to indirect purchasers to use offensively by bringing an action alleging that an overcharge was passed down to them. The court explained that "whatever rule [was] to be adopted regarding pass-on in antitrust damages actions, it must apply equally to plaintiffs and defendants" (Illinois Brick, at p. 728).

[33] Microsoft argues that, just as the prohibition on the offensive use of passing on in Illinois Brick was considered a necessary corollary to the rejection of the passing-on defence in Hanover Shoe, the same result should flow in Canada from the rejection of the passing-on defence in Kingstreet. The passing-on issue was not raised before either of the applications judges because those decisions were released prior to Kingstreet. However, the majority of the B.C.C.A. accepted this argument in dismissing the Pro-Sys claim.

(3) Analysis of the "Necessary Corollary" Argument

[34] As I will explain, despite the rejection of the passing-on defence, the arguments advanced by Microsoft as to why there should be a corresponding rejection of the offensive use of passing on are not persuasive. Symmetry for its own sake without adequate justification cannot support the "necessary corollary" argument. In my view, the arguments advanced by Microsoft do not provide such justification.

(a) Double or Multiple Recovery

[35] Microsoft submits that the offensive use of passing on through indirect purchaser actions leaves it exposed to liability from all purchasers in the chain of distribution. It says that its inability to contrairement aux dispositions américaines antitrust (p. 727).

[32] La Cour suprême des États-Unis l'a débouté. À son avis, puisque le transfert de la perte ne pouvait être invoqué en défense suivant l'arrêt Hanover Shoe, l'acheteur indirect ne pouvait non plus ester en alléguant que la majoration de prix lui avait été transférée. Selon la cour, [TRADUCTION] « quelle que soit la règle applicable au transfert de la perte pour les besoins d'une action antitrust en dommages-intérêts, elle doit s'appliquer tant au demandeur qu'au défendeur » (Illinois Brick, p. 728).

[33] Selon Microsoft, étant donné que, dans Illinois Brick, l'impossibilité d'invoquer en demande le transfert de la perte est considérée comme le corollaire nécessaire du rejet, dans Hanover Shoe, du transfert de la perte comme moyen de défense, le rejet du moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte dans Kingstreet doit emporter la même exclusion en demande au Canada. Les juges de première instance en l'espèce ayant été saisis des demandes avant l'arrêt Kingstreet, la question du transfert de la perte n'a pas été soulevée devant eux. Toutefois, les juges majoritaires de la C.A.C.-B. font droit à la prétention et rejettent l'action de Pro-Sys.

(3) L'argument du « corollaire nécessaire »

[34] Comme je l'explique plus loin, malgré le rejet du transfert de la perte comme moyen de défense, les arguments invoqués par Microsoft pour justifier également son exclusion comme cause d'action ne sont pas convaincants. À défaut d'une justification suffisante, la symétrie ne peut étayer à elle seule la thèse du « corollaire nécessaire ». À mon avis, la thèse avancée par Microsoft n'offre pas une telle justification.

a) Recouvrement double ou multiple

[35] Microsoft soutient que l'allégation en demande du transfert de la perte par un acheteur indirect lui fait courir le risque d'être tenue responsable vis-à-vis de tous les acquéreurs dans employ the passing-on defence means that direct purchasers would be able to seek recovery for the entire amount of the overcharge. If, at the same time, indirect purchasers bring actions, this would result in both direct and indirect purchasers seeking recovery of the same amount. Microsoft argues that this potential for double or even multiple recovery should be a sufficient reason to reject the offensive use of passing on.

[36] In Illinois Brick, the U.S. Supreme Court considered multiple recovery to be a "serious risk" and said that it was "unwilling to 'open the door to duplicative recoveries'" (pp. 730-31, per White J.):

> A one-sided application of Hanover Shoe substantially increases the possibility of inconsistent adjudications — and therefore of unwarranted multiple liability for the defendant — by presuming that one plaintiff (the direct purchaser) is entitled to full recovery while preventing the defendant from using that presumption against the other plaintiff . . . . [Emphasis deleted; p. 730.]

[37] This concern cannot be lightly dismissed. However, in my view, there are countervailing arguments to be considered. Practically, the risk of duplicate or multiple recoveries can be managed by the courts. Brennan J., dissenting in Illinois Brick, indicated that the risk of overlapping recovery exists only where additional suits are filed after an award for damages has been made or where actions by direct and indirect purchasers are pending at the same time. In both cases, he said, the risk is remote (pp. 762-64).

[38] In the first situation, Brennan J. stated that the complex and protracted nature of antitrust actions, coupled with the short four-year statute of limitations, "make it impractical for potential plaintiffs to sit on their rights until after entry of judgment in the earlier suit" (Illinois Brick, at p. 764). With respect to actions under the Competition Act, the same reasoning would apply in Canada where our competition actions are similarly complex and where legislation restricts individual la chaîne de distribution. Elle ajoute que l'impossibilité d'invoquer en défense le transfert de la perte permettra à l'acheteur direct d'obtenir le recouvrement intégral de la somme payée en trop. Si l'acheteur indirect intente lui aussi une action, tant l'acheteur direct que l'acheteur indirect pourront tenter de recouvrer la même somme. Microsoft fait valoir que ce risque de recouvrement double, voire multiple, justifie que l'on exclut l'allégation en demande du transfert de la perte.

[36] Dans Illinois Brick, la Cour suprême des États-Unis estime que le recouvrement multiple constitue un [TRADUCTION] « risque sérieux » et elle se dit « non disposée à y donner ouverture » (p. 730-731, le juge White) :

> [TRADUCTION] L'application asymétrique de l'arrêt Hanover Shoe augmente considérablement le risque de décisions contradictoires et, par conséquent, de responsabilité multiple imputée sans fondement au défendeur en ce qu'elle présume qu'un des demandeurs (l'acheteur direct) a droit au recouvrement intégral et qu'elle refuse au défendeur le droit d'invoquer cette présomption contre l'autre demandeur . . . [Italiques omis; p. 730.]

[37] On ne saurait écarter cette préoccupation à la légère, mais j'estime que des arguments à l'effet contraire doivent être considérés. Dans les faits, les tribunaux peuvent gérer le risque de recouvrement double ou multiple. Dans Illinois Brick, le juge Brennan, dissident, indique que ce risque n'existe que lorsque d'autres poursuites sont intentées après l'indemnisation ou que les actions d'acheteurs directs et indirects sont simultanément en instance. Selon lui, le risque demeure faible dans les deux cas (p. 762-764).

[38] Dans le premier cas, le juge Brennan affirme que la complexité et la durée des poursuites antitrust, auxquelles s'ajoute le court délai de prescription de quatre ans, [TRADUCTION] « peuvent empêcher les demandeurs éventuels d'attendre le prononcé d'un premier jugement pour faire valoir leurs droits » (Illinois Brick, p. 764). Le même raisonnement vaut au Canada pour les actions intentées sous le régime de la Loi sur la concurrence, qui sont tout aussi complexes et recovery for damages for violations to just two years (see Competition Act, at s. 36(4)(a)).

[39] As for the risk of double recovery where actions by direct and indirect purchasers are pending at the same time, it will be open to the defendant to bring evidence of this risk before the trial judge and ask the trial judge to modify any award of damages accordingly. In Multiple Access Ltd. v. McCutcheon, [1982] 2 S.C.R. 161, in discussing the risk of a plaintiff seeking double recovery under separate legal provisions, Dickson J. (as he then was), writing for the majority, held that

> [t]he courts are well able to prevent double recovery in the theoretical and unlikely event of plaintiffs trying to obtain relief under both sets of provisions. . . . [T]he Court at the final stage of finding and quantifying liability could prevent double recovery if in fact compensation and an accounting had already been made by a defendant. No court would permit double recovery. [p. 191]

If the defendant is able to satisfy the judge that the risk is beyond the court's control, the judge retains the discretion to deny the claim.

[40] Likewise, if the defendant presents evidence of parallel suits pending in other jurisdictions that would have the potential to result in multiple recovery, the judge may deny the claim or modify the damage award in accordance with an award sought or granted in the other jurisdiction in order to prevent overlapping recovery.

[41] In view of these practical tools at the courts' disposal, I would agree with Donald J.A. of the B.C.C.A., dissenting in Sun-Rype, that "the double recovery rule should not in the abstract bar a claim in real life cases where double recovery can be avoided" (para. 30). At this stage of the proceeding, Microsoft has not produced evidence auxquelles s'applique un délai de prescription de seulement deux ans lorsqu'une personne réclame une somme égale au montant des dommages qu'elle a subis (voir la Loi sur la concurrence, al. 36(4)a)).

[39] Dans le second cas — le risque de double indemnisation lorsque l'action de l'acheteur direct et celle de l'acheteur indirect sont en instance simultanément —, le défendeur peut présenter une preuve de ce risque au juge du procès et lui demander de modifier en conséquence tout octroi de dommages-intérêts. Dans Multiple Access Ltd. c. McCutcheon, [1982] 2 R.C.S. 161, au nom des juges majoritaires, le juge Dickson (plus tard Juge en chef) dit ce qui suit lorsqu'il se penche sur le risque que le demandeur invoque des régimes législatifs distincts pour être indemnisé deux fois :

> Les cours sont à même d'empêcher le double recouvrement dans le cas théorique et peu probable où des demandeurs cherchent à se faire indemniser en vertu des deux ensembles de dispositions. [. . .] [À] l'étape finale dans laquelle elle conclut à la responsabilité et en fixe le montant, la cour peut empêcher le double recouvrement si, en fait, un défendeur a déjà versé une indemnité et produit une reddition de compte. Aucune cour ne permettra le double recouvrement. [p. 191]

Si le défendeur est en mesure de le convaincre que le risque ne peut être géré par le tribunal, le juge conserve le pouvoir discrétionnaire de rejeter la demande.

[40] De même, si le défendeur établit que des poursuites sont intentées parallèlement dans d'autres ressorts et qu'elles peuvent entraîner une indemnisation supplémentaire, le juge peut rejeter la demande ou modifier l'octroi de dommages-intérêts en fonction des réparations sollicitées ou accordées dans les autres ressorts afin d'empêcher le cumul des indemnités.

[41] Au vu de ces mécanismes dont disposent les tribunaux, je conviens avec le juge Donald, de la C.A.C.-B., dissident dans Sun-Rype, que [TRADUCTION] « la règle théorique selon laquelle il ne peut y avoir double recouvrement ne devrait pas s'appliquer pour faire obstacle à une action dans une affaire réelle où il est possible d'empêcher to demonstrate that the courts in B.C. could not preclude double or multiple recovery. I would thus not reject indirect purchaser actions because of the risk of multiple recovery.

(b) Remoteness and Complexity

[42] Microsoft's second argument is that the remoteness of the overcharge and the complexities associated with tracing the loss constitute "'serious' and 'inherent' difficulties of proof associated with pass-on" (R.F., at para. 20). These difficulties are said to give rise to confusion and uncertainty and place a burden on the institutional capacities of the courts tasked with following each overcharge to its ultimate result.

[43] Microsoft relies on the reasoning of the Ontario Court of Appeal in Chadha v. Bayer Inc. (2003), 63 O.R. (3d) 22. In Chadha, that court denied certification of an indirect purchaser action citing "the many problems of proof facing the appellants . . . , including the number of parties in the chain of distribution and the 'multitude of variables' which would affect the end-purchase price" (para. 45 (adopting the findings of the Divisional Court)). Microsoft argues that if any part of the overcharge was absorbed by any party in the chain, "the chain would be broken" and the extent of the overcharge would become increasingly difficult to trace (R.F., at para. 22, quoting Chadha, at para. 45). The reasons on this point in Illinois Brick, on which Microsoft relies heavily, point out that there are significant "uncertainties and difficulties in analyzing price and output decisions 'in the real economic world rather than an economist's hypothetical model'" (pp. 731-32). The court lamented the "costs to the judicial system and the efficient enforcement of the antitrust laws of attempting to reconstruct those decisions in the courtroom" (p. 732).

le double recouvrement » (par. 30). À ce stade de l'instance, Microsoft n'a produit aucun élément de preuve selon lequel les tribunaux de la Colombie-Britannique ne peuvent empêcher le recouvrement double ou multiple. Je suis donc d'avis de ne pas écarter l'action de l'acheteur indirect en raison du risque de recouvrement multiple.

b) Caractère indirect et complexité

[42] Microsoft soutient deuxièmement que le caractère indirect de la majoration et la difficulté d'établir la perte subie constituent [TRADUCTION] « des obstacles "importants" et "fondamentaux" à la preuve du transfert de la perte » (m.i., par. 20). Ces obstacles seraient sources de confusion et d'incertitude et grèveraient les capacités institutionnelles des tribunaux appelés à retracer le parcours de chacune des majorations jusqu'à son aboutissement final.

[43] Microsoft invoque le raisonnement de la Cour d'appel de l'Ontario dans Chadha c. Bayer Inc. (2003), 63 O.R. (3d) 22, où cette dernière refuse de certifier l'action d'un acheteur indirect en raison [TRADUCTION] « des nombreux problèmes de preuve qui attendent les appelants [. . .], y compris le nombre des maillons de la chaîne de distribution et la "multitude de variables" qui jouent dans la détermination du prix d'achat final » (par. 45 (adhérant aux conclusions de la Cour divisionnaire)). Selon Microsoft, si quelque partie de la majoration était absorbée par l'un de ses maillons, [TRADUCTION] « la chaîne serait rompue » et il serait d'autant plus ardu de retracer le parcours de la majoration d'un maillon à l'autre (m.i., par. 22, citant Chadha, par. 45). Il appert des motifs formulés sur ce point dans Illinois Brick, et sur lesquels Microsoft insiste beaucoup, que [TRADUCTION] « l'analyse des décisions en matière de prix et de production comporte une grande part d'incertitude et de difficulté lorsqu'elle intervient "dans le monde économique réel plutôt que dans le cadre d'un modèle économique fictif" » (p. 731-732). Le tribunal déplore « les coûts supportés par le système judiciaire et les mécanismes d'application des dispositions antitrust lorsqu'il s'agit de reconstituer ces décisions en salle d'audience » (p. 732).

[44] Indirect purchaser actions, especially in the antitrust context, will often involve large amounts of evidence, complex economic theories and multiple parties in a chain of distribution, making the tracing of the overcharges to their ultimate end an unenviable task. However, Brennan J., dissenting in Illinois Brick, observed that these same concerns can be raised in most antitrust cases, and should not stand in the way of allowing indirect purchasers an opportunity to make their case:

> Admittedly, there will be many cases in which the plaintiff will be unable to prove that the overcharge was passed on. In others, the portion of the overcharge passed on may be only approximately determinable. But again, this problem hardly distinguishes this case from other antitrust cases. Reasoned estimation is required in all antitrust cases, but "while the damages [in such cases] may not be determined by mere speculation or guess, it will be enough if the evidence show the extent of the damages as a matter of just and reasonable inference, although the result be only approximate." . . . Lack of precision in apportioning damages between direct and indirect purchasers is thus plainly not a convincing reason for denying indirect purchasers an opportunity to prove their injuries and damages. [Text in brackets in original; pp. 759-60.]

[45] In bringing their action, the indirect purchasers willingly assume the burden of establishing that they have suffered loss. This task may well require expert testimony and complex economic evidence. Whether these tools will be sufficient to meet the burden of proof, in my view, is a factual question to be decided on a case-by-case basis. Indirect purchaser actions should not be barred altogether solely because of the likely complexity associated with proof of damages.

(c) Deterrence

[46] A third argument, which was not raised by Microsoft, but which was discussed in Illinois Brick and is particularly relevant to competition actions, is that allowing the offensive use of passing

[44] L'action intentée par un acheteur indirect, surtout sur le fondement des dispositions antitrust, comporte souvent une preuve volumineuse, la formulation de théories économiques complexes et l'existence de nombreuses parties le long de la chaîne de distribution, de sorte qu'il est d'autant plus ardu de retracer le parcours de la majoration d'un maillon à l'autre jusqu'à son aboutissement final. Toutefois, selon le juge Brennan, dissident dans Illinois Brick, il s'agit de caractéristiques communes à la plupart des affaires antitrust et elles ne devraient donc pas empêcher l'acheteur indirect de prouver ses allégations :

> [TRADUCTION] Certes, dans bien des cas, le demandeur ne sera pas en mesure de prouver le transfert de la majoration. Dans d'autres, la partie transférée ne pourra être déterminée qu'approximativement. Mais là encore, ce problème distingue à peine l'espèce d'une autre affaire antitrust. Dans ce domaine, toute instance exige une estimation raisonnée, mais « bien que les dommages [dans les affaires de cette nature] ne puissent être déterminés au moyen de simples spéculations ou conjectures, il suffira d'inférer de manière juste et raisonnable l'étendue des dommages, même si le résultat ne sera qu'approximatif. » [. . .] L'imprécision de la répartition des dommages-intérêts entre l'acheteur direct et l'acheteur indirect n'est donc pas une considération suffisante pour priver l'acheteur indirect de la possibilité d'établir le préjudice subi. [Texte entre crochets dans l'original; p. 759-760.]

[45] L'acheteur indirect qui intente une action contracte volontairement l'obligation d'établir qu'il a subi une perte, ce qui peut fort bien nécessiter le témoignage d'experts et une preuve complexe de nature économique. À mon avis, la question de savoir si ces éléments lui permettront de s'acquitter de cette obligation tient aux faits de l'espèce. Il n'y a pas lieu de faire totalement obstacle à l'action de l'acheteur indirect pour la seule raison qu'il sera ardu d'établir le préjudice subi.

c) Effet dissuasif

[46] Selon un troisième argument que ne soulève pas Microsoft, mais qui est examiné dans Illinois Brick et qui vaut particulièrement dans le cas d'actes anticoncurrentiels, permettre d'invoquer on frustrates the enforcement of competition laws, thus reducing deterrence. While enforcement of competition laws is generally a question for the government, private individuals are engaged in the enforcement by way of s. 36 which gives them a right of recovery for breaches of Part VI of the Competition Act.

[47] The majority in Illinois Brick understood Hanover Shoe to stand for the proposition that "antitrust laws will be more effectively enforced by concentrating the full recovery for the overcharge in the direct purchasers rather than by allowing every plaintiff potentially affected by the overcharge to sue only for the amount it could show was absorbed by it" (p. 735). The majority in Illinois Brick agreed, finding that direct purchasers would be in the best position to bring an action because the "massive evidence and complicated theories" that are characteristic of indirect purchaser actions impose an unacceptable burden on those plaintiffs, making success of such actions unlikely and thereby defeating the deterrence objectives of antitrust laws (p. 741).

[48] In my opinion, allowing the offensive use of passing on should not frustrate the deterrence objectives of Canadian competition laws. I agree with Brennan J., dissenting in Illinois Brick, that the offensive use of passing on, unlike the passing-on defence, creates little danger that the overcharger will escape liability and frustrate deterrence objectives but, "[r]ather, the same policies of insuring the continued effectiveness of the [antitrust] action and preventing wrongdoers from retaining the spoils of their misdeeds favor allowing indirect purchasers to prove that overcharges were passed on to them" (p. 753). The rationale for rejecting the passing-on defence because it frustrates enforcement is not a reason for denying an action to those who have a valid claim against the overcharger.

en demande le transfert de la perte ferait obstacle à l'application des dispositions sur la concurrence et nuirait ainsi à la dissuasion. Bien que cette application incombe généralement à l'État, une personne privée peut, suivant l'art. 36, faire respecter la loi et demander le recouvrement d'une somme par suite de la violation de la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence.

[47] Dans Illinois Brick, les juges majoritaires concluent de l'arrêt Hanover Shoe que [TRADUCTION] « les lois antitrust seront mieux appliquées si on assure le recouvrement intégral de la majoration par l'acheteur direct au lieu de permettre à chacune des personnes touchées par la majoration de recouvrer uniquement la partie qu'elle peut prouver avoir absorbée » (p. 735). Ils partagent ce point de vue et estiment que l'acheteur direct est le mieux placé pour ester en justice, car [TRADUCTION] « la preuve volumineuse et les théories compliquées » associées à l'instance engagée impose un trop lourd fardeau à l'acheteur indirect, de sorte qu'il est peu probable qu'il ait gain de cause, ce qui va à l'encontre des fins dissuasives des dispositions antitrust (p. 741).

[48] À mon avis, permettre d'alléguer en demande le transfert de la perte ne devrait pas nuire aux objectifs de dissuasion des dispositions canadiennes sur la concurrence. Je conviens avec le juge Brennan, dissident dans Illinois Brick, que contrairement au fait d'invoquer le transfert de la perte en défense, le fait d'alléguer le transfert de la perte en demande risque peu de faire en sorte que l'auteur de la majoration échappe à sa responsabilité et que la dissuasion soit compromise; [TRADUCTION] « [l]es mêmes principes qui consistent à assurer l'efficacité constante de l'action [antitrust] et à empêcher le fautif de conserver le gain mal acquis militent plutôt en faveur de la possibilité que l'acheteur indirect prouve que la majoration lui a été refilée » (p. 753). L'exclusion du transfert de la perte comme moyen de défense, afin de ne pas nuire à l'application de la loi, ne justifie pas de refuser son allégation en demande dans une action par ailleurs bien-fondée intentée contre l'auteur de la majoration.

[49] Further, despite evidence advanced by the respondents in the Sun-Rype appeal that direct purchasers are often the parties most likely to take action against the overchargers, there may be some situations where direct purchasers will have been overcharged but will be reticent to bring an action against the offending party for fear of jeopardizing a valuable business relationship. In this case, it is alleged that Microsoft's direct purchasers are parties to the overcharging arrangements and would themselves not be likely plaintiffs. Indirect purchaser actions may, in such circumstances, be the only means by which overcharges are claimed and deterrence is promoted. The rejection of indirect purchaser actions in such cases would increase the possibility that the overcharge would remain in the hands of the wrongdoer. For these reasons, I would be of the view that an absolute bar on indirect purchaser actions, thus leaving any potential action exclusively to direct purchasers, would not necessarily result in more effective deterrence than exclusively direct purchaser actions.

(d) Restitutionary Principles

[50] Restitution law is remedial in nature and is concerned with the recovery of gains from wrongdoing (see Maddaugh and McCamus (2013), at pp. 3-1 to 3-3). In my view, allowing indirect purchaser actions is consistent with the remediation objective of restitution law because it allows for compensating the parties who have actually suffered the harm rather than merely reserving these actions for direct purchasers who may have in fact passed on the overcharge.

(e) Departure From the Rule in Illinois Brick in the United States

[51] Although Illinois Brick remains the law at the federal level, it has been made inapplicable at the state level in many states through so-called "repealer statutes" or by judicial decisions. In 2007, the Antitrust Modernization Commission issued a report to Congress indicating that "more than thirty-five states permit indirect, as well as direct, purchasers to sue for damages under state law" (Antitrust Modernization Commission: Report and

[49] En outre, malgré la preuve des intimées dans Sun-Rype voulant que l'acheteur direct soit souvent le plus susceptible de poursuivre l'auteur de la majoration, il peut arriver qu'un acheteur direct hésite à intenter une action contre le fautif par crainte de mettre en péril de bonnes relations d'affaires. On soutient en l'espèce que les acheteurs directs sont parties aux arrangements de majoration de Microsoft, de sorte qu'il est peu probable qu'ils intentent quelque recours. Dans ces circonstances, les actions d'acheteurs indirects peuvent offrir le seul moyen de recouvrer la majoration et d'assurer la dissuasion. Exclure ces actions en pareil cas augmenterait le risque que la majoration demeure entre les mains du fautif. Pour ces motifs, je suis d'avis qu'écarter tout recours de l'acheteur indirect de sorte que seul l'acheteur direct puisse se pourvoir en justice n'accroîtrait pas nécessairement l'effet dissuasif.

d) Principes de la restitution

[50] De nature réparatrice, le droit de la restitution a pour objet le recouvrement du gain mal acquis (voir Maddaugh et McCamus (2013), p. 3-1 à 3-3). J'estime que permettre à l'acheteur indirect d'intenter une action en justice s'accorde avec l'objectif de réparation du droit de la restitution, car la personne qui a effectivement subi un préjudice, et non seulement l'acheteur direct qui a pu en fait transférer la majoration, peut ainsi être indemnisée.

e) Dérogation à la règle établie aux États-Unis dans l'arrêt Illinois Brick

[51] Bien que l'arrêt Illinois Brick établisse toujours le droit applicable au palier fédéral, de nombreux États l'ont écarté par voie législative ou judiciaire. En 2007, la commission de modernisation des lois antitrust a déposé au Congrès un rapport selon lequel [TRADUCTION] « plus de trente-cinq États permettaient à l'acheteur indirect, comme à l'acheteur direct, d'intenter une action en dommages-intérêts en application de la loi de l'État » (Antitrust Modernization Commission : Report and Recommendations (2007) (en ligne), p. 269). Elle recommandait l'« abrogation » de la règle issue de l'arrêt Illinois Brick par une loi fédérale (p. 270). Dans California c. ARC America Corp., 490 U.S. 93 (1989), la Cour suprême des États-Unis a été appelée à se prononcer sur la validité des « lois abrogatoires ». Elle a conclu que l'arrêt Illinois Brick ne faisait pas obstacle à l'adoption de dispositions antitrust par un État, même si ces dispositions avaient pour effet d'écarter la règle issue de cet arrêt. Voilà des éléments qui sont de nature à remettre en cause la thèse du « corollaire nécessaire » retenue dans Illinois Brick.

Recommendations (2007) (online), at p. 269). It recommended to Congress that the rule in Illinois Brick be statutorily repealed at the federal level (p. 270). The validity of the "repealer statutes" came before the U.S. Supreme Court in California v. ARC America Corp., 490 U.S. 93 (1989). That court held that Illinois Brick did not preempt the enactment of state antitrust laws, even if they had the effect of repealing the rule in Illinois Brick. These developments cast doubt on the "necessary corollary" approach in Illinois Brick.

(f) Doctrinal Commentary

[52] Doctrinal discussions of indirect purchaser actions are still shaped by the initial exchange that occurred directly following the release of Illinois Brick. Shortly after the judgment was issued, American scholars William M. Landes and Richard A. Posner (now a judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit) published an article defending the rule barring indirect purchaser actions (see "Should Indirect Purchasers Have Standing To Sue Under the Antitrust Laws? An Economic Analysis of the Rule of Illinois Brick" (1979), 46 U. Chi. L. Rev. 602, at pp. 634-35). They argued that reserving the right to bring an action against overchargers to the direct purchasers alone would best promote the antitrust laws. They wrote that allowing indirect purchasers to bring actions would have little to no effect on the objectives of compensation and deterrence because direct purchasers would be more likely to discover the overcharges in the first place and would be more likely to have the information and resources required to bring a successful antitrust action. They called the direct purchaser a more "efficient enforcer" of antitrust laws, and opined that with indirect purchasers, apportionment of the damages is so costly that it becomes a disincentive to sue and that sharing the right to sue among multiple parties has the effect of making the claims small and of weakening the deterrence effect (pp. 608-9). As to compensation, they argued that even if indirect

f) Doctrine

[52] Les débats des auteurs sur le recours de l'acheteur indirect demeurent axés sur les échanges qui ont tout juste suivi la publication de l'arrêt Illinois Brick. Peu après celle-ci, les Américains William M. Landes et Richard A. Posner (maintenant juge de la Cour d'appel des États-Unis pour le septième circuit) ont défendu dans un article la règle qui refusait le droit d'action à l'acheteur indirect (voir « Should Indirect Purchasers Have Standing To Sue Under the Antitrust Laws? An Economic Analysis of the Rule of Illinois Brick » (1979), 46 U. Chi. L. Rev. 602, p. 634-635). Selon eux, réserver à l'acheteur direct le droit d'intenter une action contre l'auteur de la majoration était l'option la plus susceptible de promouvoir les dispositions antitrust. Ils ajoutent que permettre à l'acheteur indirect d'intenter une action n'aura pas d'effet ou en aura peu sur la réalisation des objectifs d'indemnisation et de dissuasion, car l'acheteur direct sera plus susceptible de constater la majoration et, ensuite, de disposer des données et des ressources nécessaires pour avoir gain de cause dans une action antitrust. Ils voient dans l'acheteur direct un « agent efficace d'application » des dispositions antitrust et font valoir que permettre à l'acheteur indirect de se pourvoir en justice rendra la répartition des dommages-intérêts si coûteuse que les intéressés hésiteront à poursuivre et que le partage du droit d'action entre de multiples parties réduira l'importance des purchasers had no independent right of action, they were nonetheless compensated by the ability of direct purchasers to bring an action because the benefit accruing to the direct purchaser as a result of an anticipated successful antitrust action against the overcharger would be reflected in the prices charged by the direct purchasers to the indirect purchasers (p. 605).

[53] Shortly after the publication of Landes and Posner's article, two other antitrust authorities, Robert G. Harris and Lawrence A. Sullivan, expressed an opposing viewpoint (see "Passing On the Monopoly Overcharge: A Comprehensive Policy Analysis" (1979), 128 U. Pa. L. Rev. 269, at pp. 351-52). Harris and Sullivan argued that direct purchasers would be reluctant to disrupt valued supplier relationships and would thus be more likely to pass on the overcharge to their own customers. They would not therefore serve as efficient enforcers of the antitrust laws and, rather, it would be more suitable to vest standing in the indirect purchasers in order to best achieve deterrence.

[54] Landes and Posner published a direct response to Harris and Sullivan the next year (see "The Economics of Passing On: A Reply to Harris and Sullivan" (1980), 128 U. Pa. L. Rev. 1274). In response to Harris and Sullivan's argument that direct purchasers would be reticent to sue so as not to compromise valuable commercial relationships, they stated that "any forbearance by the direct purchaser to sue will be compensated. The supplier must pay something to bind the direct purchaser to him and this payment is, functionally, a form of antitrust damages" (p. 1278). In other words, the direct purchaser is receiving a financial inducement to be a part of the conspiracy and this benefit could be passed along to the indirect purchasers.

[55] In the years since the exchange between Landes and Posner and Harris and Sullivan, the literature has reflected an ongoing debate on the issue of indirect purchaser actions and specifically the rule in Illinois Brick. A survey of the literature demandes et affaiblira l'effet dissuasif (p. 608-609). Quant à l'indemnisation, ils soutiennent que, même s'il n'a pas de droit d'action indépendant, l'acheteur indirect sera néanmoins « indemnisé » grâce à la faculté de l'acheteur direct d'intenter une action, car ce dernier répercutera sur le prix demandé à l'acheteur indirect les retombées éventuelles d'une action antitrust contre l'auteur de la majoration (p. 605).

[53] Peu après la publication de l'article de Landes et Posner, deux autres spécialistes du droit antitrust, Robert G. Harris et Lawrence A. Sullivan, ont exprimé l'opinion contraire (voir « Passing On the Monopoly Overcharge : A Comprehensive Policy Analysis » (1979), 128 U. Pa. L. Rev. 269, p. 351-352). Selon Harris et Sullivan, l'acheteur direct hésitera à compromettre ses bonnes relations avec son fournisseur et sera donc plus enclin à refiler la note à ses clients à lui. Il ne serait donc pas un « agent efficace d'application » des dispositions antitrust; pour les besoins de l'effet dissuasif, mieux vaudrait reconnaître la qualité pour agir à l'acheteur indirect.

[54] L'année suivante, Landes et Posner répliquaient directement à la thèse de Harris et Sullivan (voir « The Economics of Passing On : A Reply to Harris and Sullivan » (1980), 128 U. Pa. L. Rev. 1274). En réponse à la thèse de leurs détracteurs, à savoir qu'un acheteur direct hésitera à intenter une action en justice afin de ne pas compromettre de bonnes relations commerciales, ils affirment que [TRADUCTION] « l'omission de l'acheteur direct d'intenter une action en justice sera récompensée. Le fournisseur doit verser quelque chose pour s'attacher l'acheteur direct et il s'agit en quelque sorte d'une indemnisation antitrust » (p. 1278). En d'autres termes, l'acheteur direct obtient pour sa participation au complot une gratification financière qui peut être transmise à l'acheteur indirect.

[55] Depuis ce débat entre Landes et Posner, d'une part, et Harris et Sullivan, d'autre part, la question du droit d'action de l'acheteur indirect et, en particulier, la règle issue de l'arrêt Illinois Brick, continuent d'alimenter la discussion. Plus reveals that most recently, however, there is a significant body of academic authority in favour of repealing the decision in Illinois Brick in order to best serve the objectives of the antitrust laws.

[56] Some authors, including Gregory J. Werden and Marius Schwartz, joined Harris and Sullivan in their critique of Landes and Posner, stating specifically that the notion that indirect purchasers would see any of the benefits accruing to a direct purchaser as the result of an anticipated recovery was "quite implausible" ("Illinois Brick and the Deterrence of Antitrust Violations — An Economic Analysis" (1984), 35 Hastings L.J. 629, at p. 638-39).

[57] The theory that direct purchasers may be unwilling to sue for fear of disrupting an important supplier relationship has also found favour among academics (see e.g. K. J. O'Connor, "Is the Illinois Brick Wall Crumbling?" (2001), 15:3 Antitrust 34, at p. 38 (noting that indirect purchasers are perhaps more likely to sue than are direct purchasers because they do not risk severing a "direct business relationship with the alleged violator"); A. Thimmesch, "Beyond Treble Damages: Hanover Shoe and Direct Purchaser Suits After Comes v. Microsoft Corp." (2005), 90 Iowa L. Rev. 1649, at p. 1668 and fn. 127 (stating that in many situations the direct purchaser is in fact dependent upon the supplier and as such would be reticent to sue)). As recently as 2012, the same opinion has been expressed: "This is especially true if direct purchasers are able to pass on any overcharges that result from antitrust violations to consumers. . . . [T]he Supreme Court [of the United States]'s all-or-nothing 'Indirect Purchaser Rule' sweeps too broadly" (J. M. Glover, "The Structural Role of Private Enforcement Mechanisms in Public Law" (2012), 53 Wm. & Mary L. Rev. 1137, at p. 1187).

[58] As to the objective of compensation, several authors have commented that the rule in Illinois Brick in fact runs contrary to the goal of compensation, with one author calling it "[t]he récemment, de nombreux auteurs ont cependant préconisé la neutralisation de l'arrêt afin de favoriser la réalisation des objectifs des dispositions antitrust.

[56] Certains, dont Gregory J. Werden et Marius Schwartz, se sont joints à Harris et Sullivan pour critiquer Landes et Posner. Ils qualifient d'[TRADUCTION] « assez invraisemblable » l'idée que l'acheteur indirect puisse bénéficier des retombées pour l'acheteur direct d'un recouvrement anticipé (« Illinois Brick and the Deterrence of Antitrust Violations — An Economic Analysis » (1984), 35 Hastings L.J. 629, p. 638-639).

[57] La thèse voulant qu'un acheteur direct hésite à poursuivre un fournisseur important par crainte de mettre en péril ses rapports avec lui a aussi ses tenants parmi les auteurs de doctrine (voir p. ex. K. J. O'Connor, « Is the Illinois Brick Wall Crumbling? » (2001), 15:3 Antitrust 34, p. 38 (selon lequel l'acheteur indirect est peut-être plus susceptible d'intenter une poursuite que l'acheteur direct parce qu'il ne risque pas la rupture de ses [TRADUCTION] « liens d'affaires directs avec le présumé contrevenant »); A. Thimmesch, « Beyond Treble Damages : Hanover Shoe and Direct Purchaser Suits After Comes v. Microsoft Corp. » (2005), 90 Iowa L. Rev. 1649, p. 1668 et note en bas de page 127 (selon lequel, dans bien des cas, l'acheteur direct est en situation de dépendance vis-à-vis du fournisseur et hésitera donc à le poursuivre)). Tout récemment, en 2012, on a avancé la même idée : [TRADUCTION] « Cela est particulièrement vrai lorsque l'acheteur direct peut transférer au consommateur toute somme payée en trop par suite d'une entorse à la concurrence. [. . .] [L]a règle par laquelle la Cour suprême [des États-Unis] refuse catégoriquement à "l'acheteur indirect le droit de poursuivre l'auteur" de la majoration a une portée excessive » (J. M. Glover, « The Structural Role of Private Enforcement Mechanisms in Public Law » (2012), 53 Wm. & Mary L. Rev. 1137, p. 1187).

[58] En ce qui concerne l'objectif d'indemnisation, plusieurs auteurs font observer que la règle issue de l'arrêt Illinois Brick va en fait à l'encontre de sa réalisation; l'un d'eux dit de cette décision most far-reaching deviation from the compensatory rationale" (C. C. Van Cott, "Standing at the Fringe: Antitrust Damages and the Fringe Producer" (1983), 35 Stan. L. Rev. 763, at p. 775). Likewise, Andrew I. Gavil, an antitrust scholar, has stated that "providing compensation to all victims of unlawful conduct for the harms inflicted by the wrongdoer is a secondary but also essential goal of a comprehensive remedial system, one that Illinois Brick disserves in many common circumstances" ("Thinking Outside the Illinois Brick Box: A Proposal for Reform" (2009), 76 Antitrust L.J. 167, at p. 170).

[59] As can be seen from this overview, despite initial support from well-reputed antitrust scholars, it cannot be said that the rule in Illinois Brick still finds favour in the academic literature.

(4) Conclusion on the Offensive Use of Passing On

[60] Although the passing-on defence is unavailable as a matter of restitution law, it does not follow that indirect purchasers should be foreclosed from claiming losses passed on to them. In summary:

(1) The risks of multiple recovery and the concerns of complexity and remoteness are insufficient bases for precluding indirect purchasers from bringing actions against the defendants responsible for overcharges that may have been passed on to them.

(2) The deterrence function of the competition law in Canada is not likely to be impaired by indirect purchaser actions.

(3) While the passing-on defence is contrary to basic restitutionary principles, those same principles are promoted by allowing passing on to be used offensively.

qu'elle est celle qui [TRADUCTION] « s'écarte le plus de l'objectif d'indemnisation » (C. C. Van Cott, « Standing at the Fringe : Antitrust Damages and the Fringe Producer » (1983), 35 Stan. L. Rev. 763, p. 775). Dans le même ordre d'idées, selon Andrew I. Gavil, spécialiste en matière antitrust, [TRADUCTION] « indemniser toutes les victimes du comportement illégal pour les préjudices causés par le contrevenant constitue un objectif secondaire, mais aussi essentiel, d'un régime de réparation complet, un objectif que l'arrêt Illinois Brick méconnaît dans bien des situations courantes » (« Thinking Outside the Illinois Brick Box : A Proposal for Reform » (2009), 76 Antitrust L.J. 167, p. 170).

[59] Comme il appert de cet aperçu, malgré son appui initial par des auteurs de renom du domaine antitrust, la règle dégagée dans l'arrêt Illinois Brick ne remporte plus la faveur des juristes versés en la matière.

(4) Conclusion sur l'allégation en demande du transfert de la perte

[60] Malgré l'impossibilité d'invoquer le transfert de la perte en défense à une action en restitution, l'acheteur indirect ne doit pas pour autant se voir empêcher de recouvrer la perte qui lui a été transférée. En bref, voici les éléments à retenir :

(1) Le risque de recouvrement multiple et les obstacles liés à la complexité de la preuve et au caractère indirect de la majoration ne constituent pas des considérations suffisantes pour priver l'acheteur indirect d'un recours contre l'auteur de la majoration dont le montant lui aurait été transféré.

(2) Le recours de l'acheteur indirect ne portera vraisemblablement pas atteinte à l'effet dissuasif que sont censées avoir les dispositions canadiennes sur la concurrence.

(3) Même si invoquer le transfert de la perte en défense à une action va à l'encontre des principes fondamentaux de la restitution, permettre son allégation en demande est dans le droit fil de ces mêmes principes.

(4) Although the rule in Illinois Brick remains good law at the federal level in the United States, its subsequent repeal at the state level in many jurisdictions and the report to Congress recommending its reversal demonstrate that its rationale is under question.

(5) Despite some initial support, the recent doctrinal commentary favours overturning the rule in Illinois Brick.

For these reasons, I would not agree with Microsoft's argument that this Court's rejection of the passing-on defence in previous cases and affirmed here precludes indirect purchaser actions.

B. Certification of the Class Action

[61] Having answered the threshold question and determined that indirect purchasers may use passing on offensively to bring an action, I turn to the question of whether the present action should be certified as a class action. Because the majority of the B.C.C.A. disposed of the appeal based on its finding that indirect purchaser actions were not available in Canada, it did not consider the certification requirements dealt with by Tysoe J. (causes of action under s. 4(1)(a) of the CPA) and Myers J. (balance of the certification requirements under s. 4(1)(b) to (e) of the CPA). It therefore remains for this Court to review the certification analysis carried out by the two applications judges. Microsoft contests their findings as to only three of the certification requirements: (1) whether the pleadings disclose a cause of action; (2) whether the claims raise common issues; and (3) whether a class action is the preferable procedure.

(1) The Requirements for Certification Under the British Columbia Class Proceedings Act

[62] Section 4(1) of the CPA provides:

4 (1) The court must certify a proceeding as a class proceeding on an application under section 2

(4) Bien que, aux États-Unis, la règle issue de l'arrêt Illinois Brick demeure valable au palier fédéral, son « abrogation » dans de nombreux États et le rapport recommandant au Congrès de l'infirmer remettent en question sa raison d'être.

(5) Malgré un certain appui initial, la doctrine récente penche en faveur de la suppression de la règle.

Pour ces motifs, je ne conviens pas avec Microsoft que le rejet par notre Cour dans des affaires antérieures et en l'espèce du moyen de défense fondé sur le transfert de la perte fait obstacle au recours de l'acheteur indirect.

B. Certification du recours collectif

[61] Après avoir tranché la question préliminaire et conclu que l'acheteur indirect peut invoquer le transfert de la perte en demande, j'examine maintenant s'il y a lieu ou non de certifier l'action intentée en l'espèce à titre de recours collectif. Étant donné que les juges majoritaires de la C.A.C.-B. statuent que l'acheteur indirect ne peut pas légalement intenter d'action au Canada, ils ne se penchent pas sur les conditions de certification examinées par le juge Tysoe (cause d'action exigée à l'al. 4(1)(a) de la CPA) et par le juge Myers (les autres conditions prévues aux al. 4(1)(b) à (e) de la CPA). Il nous faut donc contrôler l'analyse des deux juges saisis des demandes en ce qui concerne la certification. Microsoft ne conteste leurs conclusions qu'à l'égard de trois des conditions : (1) les actes de procédure révèlent une cause d'action, (2) les demandes soulèvent une question commune et (3) le recours collectif constitue la meilleure procédure pour régler cette question.

(1) Les conditions de certification selon la Class Proceedings Act de la Colombie-Britannique

[62] Le paragraphe 4(1) de la CPA dispose :

[TRADUCTION]

4 (1) Le tribunal saisi d'une demande visée à l'article 2 ou 3 certifie une instance à titre de recours or 3 if all of the following requirements are met:

(a) the pleadings disclose a cause of action;

(b) there is an identifiable class of 2 or more persons;

(c) the claims of the class members raise common issues, whether or not those common issues predominate over issues affecting only individual members;

(d) a class proceeding would be the preferable procedure for the fair and efficient resolution of the common issues;

(e) there is a representative plaintiff who

(i) would fairly and adequately represent the interests of the class,

(ii) has produced a plan for the proceeding that sets out a workable method of advancing the proceeding on behalf of the class and of notifying class members of the proceeding, and

(iii) does not have, on the common issues, an interest that is in conflict with the interests of other class members.

(2) Do the Pleadings Disclose a Cause of Action?

[63] The first certification requirement requires that the pleadings disclose a cause of action. In Alberta v. Elder Advocates of Alberta Society, 2011 SCC 24, [2011] 2 S.C.R. 261 ("Alberta Elders"), this Court explained that this requirement is assessed on the same standard of proof that applies to a motion to dismiss, as set out in Hunt v. Carey Canada Inc., [1990] 2 S.C.R. 959, at p. 980. That is, a plaintiff satisfies this requirement unless, assuming all facts pleaded to be true, it is plain and obvious that the plaintiff's claim cannot succeed (Alberta Elders, at para. 20; Hollick v. Toronto (City), 2001 SCC 68, [2001] 3 S.C.R. 158, at para. 25).

[64] Pro-Sys has alleged causes of action (1) under s. 36 of the Competition Act, (2) in tort collectif lorsque les conditions suivantes sont réunies :

(a) les actes de procédure révèlent une cause d'action;

(b) il existe un groupe identifiable de deux personnes ou plus;

(c) les demandes des membres du groupe soulèvent une question commune, que celle-ci l'emporte ou non sur les questions qui touchent uniquement les membres individuels;

(d) le recours collectif serait la meilleure procédure pour régler la question commune de manière juste et efficace;

(e) un demandeur-représentant :

(i) défendrait de manière juste et appropriée les intérêts du groupe,

(ii) a présenté, pour le recours collectif, un plan qui établit une méthode praticable de faire progresser l'instance au nom du groupe et d'aviser les membres du groupe de l'existence du recours collectif,

(iii) n'a pas de conflit d'intérêts avec d'autres membres du groupe en ce qui concerne les questions communes.

(2) Les actes de procédure révèlent-ils une cause d'action?

[63] La première condition de certification veut que les actes de procédure révèlent une cause d'action. Dans Alberta c. Elder Advocates of Alberta Society, 2011 CSC 24, [2011] 2 R.C.S. 261 (« Alberta Elders »), notre Cour explique que le respect de cette condition est apprécié au regard de la norme de preuve applicable à la requête en radiation selon l'arrêt Hunt c. Carey Canada Inc., [1990] 2 R.C.S. 959, p. 980. Le demandeur ne satisfait donc pas à la condition lorsque, à supposer que les faits invoqués soient vrais, la demande ne pourrait manifestement pas être accueillie (Alberta Elders, par. 20; Hollick c. Toronto (Ville), 2001 CSC 68, [2001] 3 R.C.S. 158, par. 25).

[64] Pro-Sys prétend avoir des causes d'action (1) suivant l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence, for conspiracy and intentional interference with economic interests, and (3) in restitution for unjust enrichment, constructive trust and waiver of tort. For the reasons that follow, I would agree with Tysoe J. that the pleadings disclose causes of action that should not be struck out at this stage of the proceedings.

(a) Section 36 of the Competition Act

[65] Under s. 36 of the Competition Act, any person who has suffered loss or damage as a result of conduct engaged in by any person contrary to Part VI of the Act may sue for and recover that loss or damage. Section 36 provides:

> 36. (1) Any person who has suffered loss or damage as a result of
>
> (a) conduct that is contrary to any provision of Part VI . . .
>
> . . .
>
> may in any court of competent jurisdiction, sue for and recover from the person who engaged in the conduct or failed to comply with the order an amount equal to the loss or damage proved to have been suffered by him, together with any additional amount that the court may allow not exceeding the full cost to him of any investigation in connection with the matter and of proceedings under this section.

[66] Part VI of the Competition Act is entitled "Offences in Relation to Competition". The Part VI offences alleged in this appeal are (1) conspiracy, contrary to s. 45(1), and (2) false or misleading representations, contrary to s. 52(1). At the time of the hearing before Tysoe J., those provisions read as follows:

> 45. (1) [Conspiracy] Every one who conspires, combines, agrees or arranges with another person

(2) en responsabilité délictuelle pour complot et atteinte intentionnelle aux intérêts financiers et (3) en restitution pour enrichissement sans cause, existence d'une fiducie par interprétation et renonciation au recours délictuel. Pour les motifs qui suivent, je conviens avec le juge Tysoe que les actes de procédure révèlent des causes d'action qu'on ne saurait radier à ce stade de l'instance.

a) Article 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence

[65] Selon l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence, toute personne qui a subi une perte ou des dommages par suite d'un comportement contraire à la partie VI de la Loi peut réclamer et recouvrer une somme égale au montant de la perte ou des dommages subis. Voici le libellé de l'art. 36 :

> 36. (1) Toute personne qui a subi une perte ou des dommages par suite :
>
> a) . . . d'un comportement allant à l'encontre d'une disposition de la partie VI;
>
> . . .
>
> peut, devant tout tribunal compétent, réclamer et recouvrer de la personne qui a eu un tel comportement ou n'a pas obtempéré à l'ordonnance une somme égale au montant de la perte ou des dommages qu'elle est reconnue avoir subis, ainsi que toute somme supplémentaire que le tribunal peut fixer et qui n'excède pas le coût total, pour elle, de toute enquête relativement à l'affaire et des procédures engagées en vertu du présent article.

[66] La partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence est intitulée « Infractions relatives à la concurrence ». Les infractions qu'elle crée et dont la perpétration est alléguée en l'espèce sont (1) le complot, au par. 45(1), et (2) les indications fausses ou trompeuses, au par. 52(1). Voici quel était le libellé de ces dispositions lors de l'audience présidée par le juge Tysoe :

> 45. (1) [Complot] Commet un acte criminel et encourt un emprisonnement maximal de cinq ans et une amende maximale de dix millions de dollars, ou l'une de ces peines, quiconque complote, se coalise ou conclut un accord ou arrangement avec une autre personne :

(a) to limit unduly the facilities for transporting, producing, manufacturing, supplying, storing or dealing in any product,

(b) to prevent, limit or lessen, unduly, the manufacture or production of a product or to enhance unreasonably the price thereof,

(c) to prevent or lessen, unduly, competition in the production, manufacture, purchase, barter, sale, storage, rental, transportation or supply of a product, or in the price of insurance on persons or property, or

(d) to otherwise restrain or injure competition unduly,

is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine not exceeding ten million dollars or to both.

a) soit pour limiter, indûment, les facilités de transport, de production, de fabrication, de fourniture, d'emmagasinage ou de négoce d'un produit quelconque;

b) soit pour empêcher, limiter ou réduire, indûment, la fabrication ou production d'un produit ou pour en élever déraisonnablement le prix;

c) soit pour empêcher ou réduire, indûment, la concurrence dans la production, la fabrication, l'achat, le troc, la vente, l'entreposage, la location, le transport ou la fourniture du produit, ou dans le prix d'assurances sur les personnes ou les biens;

d) soit, de toute autre façon, pour restreindre, indûment, la concurrence ou lui causer un préjudice indu.

52. (1) [False or misleading representations] No person shall, for the purpose of promoting, directly or indirectly, the supply or use of a product or for the purpose of promoting, directly or indirectly, any business interest, by any means whatever, knowingly or recklessly make a representation to the public that is false or misleading in a material respect.

52. (1) [Indications fausses ou trompeuses] Nul ne peut, de quelque manière que ce soit, aux fins de promouvoir directement ou indirectement soit la fourniture ou l'utilisation d'un produit, soit des intérêts commerciaux quelconques, donner au public, sciemment ou sans se soucier des conséquences, des indications fausses ou trompeuses sur un point important.

[67] The bulk of Microsoft's objections to the cause of action under s. 36 of the Competition Act are tied to the theory that offensive passing on is not permitted. In view of my earlier finding that indirect purchaser actions are permitted, those arguments are no longer of consequence in this appeal.

[67] Microsoft conteste l'existence d'une cause d'action fondée sur l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence et fait essentiellement valoir que le transfert de la perte ne peut être allégué en demande. Vu ma conclusion que l'acheteur indirect peut ester en justice, cette prétention n'importe plus aux fins du pourvoi.

[68] However, Microsoft also argues that the s. 36 cause of action is not properly pleaded before this Court because it was not included in Pro-Sys's statement of claim. It argues that any attempt to add it now would be barred by the two-year limitation period contained in s. 36(4) of the Act. However, Donald J.A., dissenting in the B.C.C.A., found Microsoft's contention to be a purely technical objection, and not one that would form a basis to dismiss the claim. I would agree. The Third Further Amended Statement of Claim alleges that the unlawful conduct was continuing, a fact that must be accepted as being true for the purposes of this appeal. As a result, it cannot be said that the action was not filed in a timely manner.

[68] Toutefois, Microsoft soutient par ailleurs que la cause d'action fondée sur l'art. 36 est irrégulièrement plaidée devant notre Cour car elle ne figure pas dans la déclaration de Pro-Sys. Selon elle, le délai de prescription de deux ans imparti au par. 36(4) de la Loi fait obstacle à l'ajout de cette cause d'action. Or, le juge Donald de la C.A.C.-B., dissident, conclut qu'il s'agit d'une prétention d'ordre purement technique et qu'elle ne permet pas de rejeter la demande. Je suis d'accord. Selon la troisième déclaration modifiée, le comportement illégal se poursuivait, ce qui doit être tenu pour avéré aux fins du pourvoi. On ne saurait donc dire que l'action n'a pas été déposée dans le délai prescrit.

[69] Moreover, the Third Further Amended Statement of Claim states specifically that "[t]he plaintiffs plead and rely upon . . . . Part VI of the Competition Act" (para. 109, A.R., vol. II, at p. 48) and seeks damages accordingly. Although the Third Further Amended Statement of Claim does not expressly refer to s. 36, recovery for breaches under Part VI of the Competition Act may only be sought by private individuals through a claim under s. 36. I agree with Donald J.A. that "the parties put their minds to s. 36 at the certification hearing and so no surprise or prejudice can be complained of" (B.C.C.A., at para. 59). For these reasons, I would not accede to Microsoft's argument that the claim should be barred by the limitation provision of the Competition Act.

[69] Par ailleurs, selon le libellé même de la troisième déclaration modifiée, [TRADUCTION] « [l]es demandeurs invoquent [. . .] la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence » (par. 109, d.a., vol. II, p. 48) et réclament des dommages-intérêts en conséquence. Bien que le document ne renvoie pas expressément à l'art. 36, le recouvrement pour violation de la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence ne peut être demandé par une personne privée que sur le fondement de cette disposition. Je conviens avec le juge Donald que [TRADUCTION] « les parties ont considéré l'art. 36 lors de l'audition de la demande de certification, de sorte que nulle allégation de surprise ou de préjudice ne saurait être retenue » (C.A.C.-B., par. 59). C'est pourquoi je ne fais pas droit à la prétention de Microsoft selon laquelle le délai de prescription imparti par la Loi sur la concurrence fait obstacle à la demande.

[70] Microsoft made other brief arguments objecting to the cause of action under s. 36. Before Tysoe J., it argued that the Competition Tribunal should have jurisdiction over the enforcement of the competition law. I agree that a number of provisions of the Competition Act assign jurisdiction to the Competition Tribunal rather than the courts. However, that is not the case with s. 36, which expressly provides that any person who suffered loss by virtue of a breach of Part VI of the Act may seek to recover that loss. The section expressly confers jurisdiction on the court to entertain such claims.

[70] Microsoft invoque d'autres motifs succincts à l'encontre de la reconnaissance d'une cause d'action fondée sur l'art. 36. Devant le juge Tysoe, elle a fait valoir qu'il devait incomber au Tribunal de la concurrence de faire respecter le droit de la concurrence. Je conviens que certaines dispositions de la Loi sur la concurrence confèrent compétence au Tribunal de la concurrence plutôt qu'à une cour de justice. Or, ce n'est pas le cas de l'art. 36, qui prévoit expressément que toute personne à qui une violation de la partie VI inflige une perte peut se pourvoir en recouvrement devant une cour de justice.

[71] For all these reasons, it is not plain and obvious that a claim under s. 36 of the Competition Act would be unsuccessful. For the purposes of s. 4(1)(a) of the CPA, it cannot be said that the pleadings do not disclose a cause of action under s. 36 of the Competition Act.

[71] Pour tous ces motifs, il n'est pas manifeste qu'une demande fondée sur l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence ne serait pas accueillie. Pour l'application de l'al. 4(1)(a) de la CPA, on ne saurait affirmer que les actes de procédure ne révèlent pas une cause d'action fondée sur l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence.

(b) Tort

b) Responsabilité délictuelle

[72] Pro-Sys alleges that Microsoft combined with various parties to commit the economic torts of conspiracy (both predominant purpose conspiracy and unlawful means conspiracy) and unlawful interference with economic interests. A

[72] Pro-Sys soutient que Microsoft s'est associée à diverses personnes pour commettre les délits civils financiers que sont le complot (tant celui qui vise principalement à causer un préjudice que celui qui prévoit l'emploi de moyens illégaux) et l'atteinte conspiracy arises when two or more parties agree "to do an unlawful act, or to do a lawful act by unlawful means" (Mulcahy v. The Queen (1868), L.R. 3 H.L. 306, at p. 317). Despite the fact that the tort of conspiracy traces its origins "to the Middle Ages, [it] is not now a well-settled tort in terms of its current utility or the scope of the remedy it affords" (Golden Capital Securities Ltd. v. Holmes, 2004 BCCA 565, 205 B.C.A.C. 54, at para. 42).

[73] Nonetheless, in Canada, two types of actionable conspiracy remain available under tort law: predominant purpose conspiracy and unlawful means conspiracy. I first address the arguments related to predominant purpose conspiracy. I then turn to unlawful means conspiracy and unlawful interference with economic interests and deal with them together, as the arguments against these causes of action relate to the "unlawful means" requirement common to both torts.

(i) Predominant Purpose Conspiracy

[74] Predominant purpose conspiracy is made out where the predominant purpose of the defendant's conduct is to cause injury to the plaintiff using either lawful or unlawful means, and the plaintiff does in fact suffer loss caused by the defendant's conduct. Where lawful means are used, if their object is to injure the plaintiff, the lawful acts become unlawful (Canada Cement LaFarge Ltd. v. British Columbia Lightweight Aggregate Ltd., [1983] 1 S.C.R. 452, at pp. 471-72).

[75] It is worth noting that in Cement LaFarge, Estey J. wrote that predominant purpose conspiracy is a "commercial anachronism" and that the approach to this tort should be to restrict its application:

> The tort of conspiracy to injure, even without the extension to include a conspiracy to perform unlawful illégale aux intérêts financiers. Il y a complot lorsqu'au moins deux personnes conviennent [TRADUCTION] « d'accomplir un acte illégal ou un acte légal par des moyens illégaux » (Mulcahy c. The Queen (1868), L.R. 3 H.L. 306, p. 317). Même si l'existence du délit civil de complot remonte [TRADUCTION] « au Moyen Âge, [il] ne s'agit pas aujourd'hui d'un délit civil bien établi quant à son utilité actuelle ou à la portée de la réparation qu'il permet » (Golden Capital Securities Ltd. c. Holmes, 2004 BCCA 565, 205 B.C.A.C. 54, par. 42).

[73] Il demeure que, au Canada, deux types de complot donnent ouverture à une action en droit de la responsabilité délictuelle : celui qui vise principalement à causer un préjudice et celui qui prévoit l'emploi de moyens illégaux. J'examine d'abord la thèse avancée relativement au complot qui vise principalement à causer un préjudice. Je me penche ensuite sur le complot qui prévoit le recours à des moyens illégaux et sur l'atteinte illégale aux intérêts financiers, que j'examine de pair puisque les motifs de contestation de ces causes d'action touchent à l'exigence, commune aux deux délits civils, du recours à des « moyens illégaux ».

(i) Complot visant principalement à causer un préjudice

[74] L'existence du complot visant principalement à causer un préjudice est établie lorsque le comportement du défendeur vise principalement à causer un préjudice au demandeur par des moyens légaux ou illégaux, et que le demandeur subit effectivement un préjudice à cause de ce comportement. Lorsque des moyens légaux sont employés à la même fin, les actes deviennent illégaux (Ciments Canada LaFarge Ltée c. British Columbia Lightweight Aggregate Ltd., [1983] 1 R.C.S. 452, p. 471-472).

[75] Mentionnons que, dans Ciments LaFarge, le juge Estey opine que le complot visant principalement à causer un préjudice constitue un « anachronisme commercial » et qu'il y aurait lieu d'en limiter l'application :

> Le délit civil de complot en vue de nuire, même s'il n'est pas étendu de manière à comprendre un complot acts where there is a constructive intent to injure, has been the target of much criticism throughout the common law world. It is indeed a commercial anachronism as so aptly illustrated by Lord Diplock in Lonrho, supra, at pp. 188-89. In fact, the action may have lost much of its usefulness in our commercial world, and survives in our law as an anomaly. Whether that be so or not, it is now too late in the day to uproot the tort of conspiracy to injure from the common law. No doubt the reaction of the courts in the future will be to restrict its application for the very reasons that some now advocate its demise. [p. 473] en vue d'accomplir des actes illégaux lorsqu'il y a une intention implicite de causer un préjudice, a été la cible de nombreuses critiques partout dans le monde de la common law. Comme l'indique si bien lord Diplock dans l'arrêt Lonrho, précité, aux pp. 188 et 189, il s'agit réellement d'un anachronisme commercial. En fait, il est possible que dans le contexte commercial actuel cette action ait perdu en grande partie son utilité et qu'elle survive comme une anomalie dans notre droit. Quoi qu'il en soit, il est maintenant trop tard pour déraciner de la common law le délit civil de complot en vue de nuire. Sans aucun doute, les cours tenteront dans l'avenir, pour les mêmes motifs que certains invoquent actuellement à l'appui de sa suppression, de limiter l'application de ce délit civil. [p. 473]

Notwithstanding these observations, whether predominant purpose conspiracy should be restricted so as not to apply to the facts of this case is not a matter that should be determined on an application to strike pleadings.

Néanmoins, la question de savoir si ce délit civil devrait voir sa portée limitée de sorte que les faits de la présente espèce n'y soient pas assimilés ne doit pas être tranchée dans le cadre d'une demande de radiation.

[76] At para. 91 of its Third Further Amended Statement of Claim, in a section discussing both predominant purpose and unlawful means conspiracy, Pro-Sys states that "[t]he defendants were motivated to conspire" and then lists the defendants' three "predominant purposes and predominant concerns": (1) to harm the plaintiffs by requiring them to purchase Microsoft products rather than competitors' products; (2) to harm the plaintiffs by requiring them to pay artificially high prices; and (3) to unlawfully increase their profits (A.R., vol. II, at p. 43).

[76] Au paragraphe 91 de sa troisième déclaration modifiée, sous une rubrique portant à la fois sur le complot qui vise principalement à causer un préjudice et celui qui prévoit l'emploi de moyens illégaux, Pro-Sys affirme que [TRADUCTION] « [l]es défenderesses entendaient comploter », puis elle énumère les trois « objectifs principaux » de celles-ci : (1) causer un préjudice aux demandeurs en exigeant qu'ils achètent les produits de Microsoft plutôt que ceux de concurrents, (2) causer un préjudice aux demandeurs en exigeant d'eux un prix majoré de façon artificielle et (3) accroître illégalement leurs profits (d.a., vol. II, p. 43).

[77] Microsoft argues that the tort of predominant purpose conspiracy is not made out because Pro-Sys's statement of claim fails to identify one true predominant purpose and instead lists several "overlapping purpose[s]" (R.F., at para. 93). Microsoft submits that by pleading that it was "motivated solely by economic considerations" (para. 94), Pro-Sys in effect concedes that the predominant purpose of Microsoft's alleged conduct could not have been to cause injury to the plaintiff as required under the law.

[77] Microsoft soutient que le délit civil de complot visant principalement à causer un préjudice n'est pas étayé, car la déclaration de Pro-Sys ne révèle pas un véritable objet principal, mais en énumère plutôt [TRADUCTION] « plusieurs qui se chevauchent » (m.i., par. 93). À son avis, lorsque Pro-Sys allègue que Microsoft était « motivée uniquement par des considérations d'ordre financier » (par. 94), elle admet en fait que l'objet principal du comportement reproché ne pouvait être de lui causer un préjudice comme l'exige la loi.

[78] There is disagreement between the parties as to what the pleadings mean. Microsoft says that Pro-Sys failed to identify injury to the plaintiffs as the one true predominant purpose. Pro-Sys argues that its pleadings state that Microsoft acted with the predominant purpose of injuring the class members which resulted in, among other things, increased profits. While the pleadings could have been drafted with a more precise focus, I would hesitate on a pleadings application to rule definitively that the predominant purpose conspiracy pleading is so flawed that no cause of action is disclosed. At this stage, I cannot rule out Pro-Sys's explanation that Microsoft's primary intent was to injure the plaintiffs and that unlawfully increasing its profits was a result of that intention. For this reason, I cannot say it is plain and obvious that Pro-Sys's claim in predominant purpose conspiracy cannot succeed.

[78] Il y a désaccord entre les parties sur la portée des allégations de Pro-Sys. Microsoft affirme

[79] Microsoft also argues that this claim should be struck to the extent it applies as between corporate affiliates because "[p]arent and wholly-owned subsidiary corporations always act in combination" (R.F., at para. 95). Pro-Sys says that "[t]his is not true as a matter of law" (appellants' response factum, at para. 55). Both parties cite, among other cases, para. 19 of Smith v. National Money Mart Co. (2006), 80 O.R. (3d) 81 (C.A.), leave to appeal refused, [2006] 1 S.C.R. xii, which says that "there can be a conspiracy between a parent and a subsidiary corporation". In my view, this statement appears to leave open a cause of action in predominant purpose conspiracy even when the conspiracy is between affiliated corporations. Again, it would not be appropriate on a pleadings application to make a definitive ruling on this issue. In the circumstances, I cannot say it is plain and obvious that the predominant purpose conspiracy claim as it applies to an alleged conspiracy between a parent corporation and its subsidiaries should be struck at this phase of the proceedings.

qu'elles n'établissent pas que le véritable objet principal du complot était de causer un préjudice aux demandeurs. Pro-Sys fait valoir que, suivant ses allégations, les actes de Microsoft visaient principalement à causer un préjudice aux membres du groupe et qu'ils ont notamment eu pour effet d'accroître ses profits. Même si les actes de procédure auraient pu être rédigés de manière plus précise et directe, j'hésite à statuer définitivement, sur demande de radiation, que l'allégation d'un complot visant principalement à causer un préjudice est si lacunaire qu'aucune cause d'action n'est révélée. Pour l'heure, je ne peux écarter l'explication de Pro-Sys selon laquelle l'intention première de Microsoft était de causer un préjudice aux demandeurs et l'accroissement illégal de ses profits a résulté de cette intention. C'est pourquoi je ne saurais dire qu'il ne peut manifestement pas être fait droit à l'allégation de Pro-Sys selon laquelle il y a eu complot visant principalement à causer un préjudice.

[79] Microsoft ajoute que l'allégation doit être radiée dans la mesure où elle vise des sociétés liées, car [TRADUCTION] « [s]ociétés mères et filiales à 100 p. 100 agissent toujours de concert » (m.i., par. 95). Pro-Sys rétorque que [TRADUCTION] « [l]a prétention est infondée en droit » (mémoire en réponse des appelants, par. 55). Les deux invoquent entre autres le par. 19 de l'arrêt Smith c. National Money Mart Co. (2006), 80 O.R. (3d) 81 (C.A.), autorisation d'appel refusée, [2006] 1 R.C.S. xii, où la Cour d'appel dit [TRADUCTION] « qu'il peut y avoir complot entre une société mère et une filiale ». À mon sens, cet énoncé paraît permettre que le complot visant principalement à causer un préjudice puisse constituer une cause d'action même lorsque le complot serait le fait de sociétés liées. Là encore, il ne convient pas de statuer définitivement sur ce point au stade de la demande de radiation. Dans les circonstances, je ne peux conclure que l'allégation de complot entre une société mère et sa filiale visant principalement à causer un préjudice doit manifestement être radiée à ce stade de l'instance.

(ii) Unlawful Means Conspiracy and Intentional Interference With Economic Interests

[80] The second type of conspiracy, called "unlawful means conspiracy", requires no predominant purpose but requires that the unlawful conduct in question be directed toward the plaintiff, that the defendant should know that injury to the plaintiff is likely to result, and that the injury to the plaintiff does in fact occur (Cement LaFarge, at pp. 471-72).

[81] The tort of intentional interference with economic interests aims to provide a remedy to victims of intentional commercial wrongdoing (Correia v. Canac Kitchens, 2008 ONCA 506, 91 O.R. (3d) 353, at para. 98; OBG Ltd. v. Allan, [2007] UKHL 21, [2008] 1 A.C. 1). The three essential elements of this tort are (1) the defendant intended to injure the plaintiff's economic interests; (2) the interference was by illegal or unlawful means; and (3) the plaintiff suffered economic loss or harm as a result (see P. H. Osborne, The Law of Torts (4th ed. 2011), at p. 336).

[82] Microsoft argues that the claims for unlawful means conspiracy and intentional interference with economic interests should be struck because their common element requiring the use of "unlawful means" cannot be established.

[83] These alleged causes of action must be dealt with summarily as the proper approach to the unlawful means requirement common to both torts is presently under reserve in this Court in Bram Enterprises Ltd. v. A.I. Enterprises Ltd., 2012 NBCA 33, 387 N.B.R. (2d) 215, leave to appeal granted, [2012] 3 S.C.R. v. Suffice it to say that at this point it is not plain and obvious that there is no cause of action in unlawful means conspiracy or in intentional interference with economic interests. I would therefore not strike these claims. Depending on the decision of this Court in Bram, it will

(ii) Complot prévoyant le recours à des moyens illégaux et atteinte intentionnelle aux intérêts financiers

[80] Pour le deuxième type de complot — celui « qui prévoit le recours à des moyens illégaux » —, point n'est besoin d'objet principal; il faut seulement que le comportement illégal soit dirigé contre le demandeur, que le défendeur doive savoir que le demandeur en subira vraisemblablement un préjudice et que le demandeur subisse effectivement un préjudice (Ciments LaFarge, p. 471-472).

[81] La raison d'être du délit civil d'atteinte intentionnelle aux intérêts financiers est l'indemnisation des victimes de pratiques commerciales délibérément préjudiciables (Correia c. Canac Kitchens, 2008 ONCA 506, 91 O.R. (3d) 353, par. 98; OBG Ltd. c. Allan, [2007] UKHL 21, [2008] 1 A.C. 1). Les trois éléments essentiels de ce délit civil sont (1) l'intention du défendeur de porter atteinte aux intérêts financiers du demandeur, (2) le recours à des moyens illégaux et (3) le préjudice consécutif subi par le demandeur (voir P. H. Osborne, The Law of Torts (4e éd. 2011), p. 336).

[82] Microsoft fait valoir que les allégations de complot prévoyant le recours à des moyens illégaux et d'atteinte intentionnelle aux intérêts financiers doivent être radiées vu l'impossibilité d'établir l'élément qui leur est commun, soit le recours à des « moyens illégaux ».

[83] Ces causes d'action alléguées doivent être examinées sommairement car, dans le dossier Bram Enterprises Ltd. c. A.I. Enterprises Ltd., 2012 NBCA 33, 387 R.N.-B. (2e) 215, autorisation d'appel accordée, [2012] 3 R.C.S. v, actuellement en délibéré, notre Cour ne s'est pas encore prononcée sur l'approche qui s'impose à l'égard de cet élément commun aux deux délits civils. Il suffit de constater que, pour l'heure, l'inexistence d'une cause d'action fondée sur le complot prévoyant le recours à des moyens illégaux ou sur l'atteinte intentionnelle aux intérêts financiers n'est pas be open to Microsoft to raise the matter in the B.C.S.C. should it consider it advisable to do so.

(c) Restitution

[84] Pro-Sys makes restitutionary claims alleging causes of action in unjust enrichment, constructive trust and waiver of tort.

(i) Unjust Enrichment

[85] The well-known elements required to establish an unjust enrichment are (1) an enrichment of the defendant; (2) a corresponding deprivation of the plaintiff; and (3) an absence of juristic reason (such as a contract) for the enrichment (see Alberta Elders, at para. 82; Garland v. Consumers' Gas Co., 2004 SCC 25, [2004] 1 S.C.R. 629, at para. 30; Rathwell v. Rathwell, [1978] 2 S.C.R. 436, at p. 455; Pettkus v. Becker, [1980] 2 S.C.R. 834). Pro-Sys says that Microsoft was unjustly enriched by the overcharge to its direct purchasers that was passed through the chain of distribution to the class members.

[86] Microsoft argues that any enrichment it received came from the direct purchasers, and not from the class members, and that this lack of a direct connection between it and the class members forecloses the claim of unjust enrichment. Additionally, it says that the contracts between Microsoft and the direct purchasers and the contracts between the direct purchasers and the indirect purchasers (the existence of which are undisputed) constitute a juristic reason for the enrichment.

[87] In support of its first argument, Microsoft cites Peel (Regional Municipality) v. Canada, [1992] 3 S.C.R. 762. In Peel, McLachlin J. (as she then was) held, at p. 797, that "[t]he cases in which claims for unjust enrichment have been made out generally deal with benefits conferred manifeste. Je suis donc d'avis de ne pas radier les allégations. Selon l'issue du pourvoi dans Bram, Microsoft pourra demander à la Cour suprême de la Colombie-Britannique de statuer sur ce point si elle le juge opportun.

c) Restitution

[84] Pro-Sys demande restitution sur le fondement de l'enrichissement sans cause, de la fiducie par interprétation et de la renonciation au recours délictuel.

(i) Enrichissement sans cause

[85] Les éléments qui doivent être réunis pour qu'il y ait enrichissement sans cause sont bien connus : (1) l'enrichissement du défendeur, (2) l'appauvrissement corrélatif du demandeur et (3) l'absence d'une cause juridique de cet enrichissement (p. ex., un contrat) (voir Alberta Elders, par. 82; Garland c. Consumers' Gas Co., 2004 CSC 25, [2004] 1 R.C.S. 629, par. 30; Rathwell c. Rathwell, [1978] 2 R.C.S. 436, p. 455; Pettkus c. Becker, [1980] 2 R.C.S. 834). Selon Pro-Sys, Microsoft s'est injustement enrichie par la majoration du prix exigé de ses acheteurs directs, lesquels ont transféré cette majoration aux membres du groupe situés en aval dans la chaîne de distribution.

[86] Microsoft prétend que l'enrichissement, s'il en est, provient des acheteurs directs, et non des membres du groupe, et que son absence de lien direct avec ces derniers scelle le sort de l'allégation d'enrichissement sans cause. Elle ajoute que les contrats qu'elle a conclus avec les acheteurs directs et ceux intervenus entre les acheteurs directs et les acheteurs indirects (dont l'existence n'est pas contestée) constituent la cause juridique de l'enrichissement.

[87] À l'appui de sa première prétention, Microsoft invoque l'arrêt Peel (Municipalité régionale) c. Canada, [1992] 3 R.C.S. 762, où la juge McLachlin (maintenant Juge en chef) conclut à la p. 797 que « [l]es affaires dans lesquelles l'enrichissement sans cause a été établi concernent directly and specifically on the defendant". A claim in unjust enrichment must be based on "more than an incidental blow-by. A secondary collateral benefit will not suffice. To permit recovery for incidental collateral benefits would be to admit of the possibility that a plaintiff could recover twice — once from the person who is the immediate beneficiary of the payment or benefit . . . , and again from the person who reaped an incidental benefit" (Peel, at p. 797). The words of Peel themselves would appear to foreclose the possibility of an indirect relationship between plaintiff and defendant. However, this does not resolve the issue. First, it is not apparent that the benefit to Microsoft is an "incidental blow-by" or "collateral benefit". Second, Pro-Sys relies on Alberta Elders, which it says stands for the proposition that an unjust enrichment may be possible where the benefit was indirect and was passed on by a third party. At this stage, I cannot conclude that it is plain and obvious that a claim in unjust enrichment will be made out only where the relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant is direct.

généralement des avantages conférés directement et expressément au défendeur ». Pour fonder l'allégation d'enrichissement sans cause, l'avantage conféré ne doit pas revêtir qu'un « caractère purement incident. Un avantage secondaire et accessoire ne suffit pas. En effet, permettre qu'il y ait recouvrement à l'égard d'avantages accessoires et incidents reviendrait à admettre la possibilité d'un double recouvrement par le demandeur — d'abord, de la personne qui bénéficie immédiatement du paiement ou de l'avantage [. . .] et ensuite, de la personne qui en a tiré un avantage incident » (Peel, p. 797). Les mots employés dans cet arrêt paraissent écarter en eux-mêmes la possibilité d'un lien indirect entre le demandeur et le défendeur, mais la question n'est pas résolue pour autant. Premièrement, il n'est pas évident que l'avantage obtenu par Microsoft revêt un caractère « purement incident » ou qu'il est « accessoire ». Deuxièmement, Pro-Sys invoque l'arrêt Alberta Elders, selon lequel il peut y avoir enrichissement sans cause lorsque l'avantage conféré est indirect et qu'il a été transféré par un tiers. À ce stade, je ne peux conclure qu'il est manifeste que l'enrichissement sans cause ne sera établi que si le lien entre le demandeur et le défendeur est direct.

[88] With regard to Microsoft's juristic reason justification, Pro-Sys pleads that these contracts are "illegal and void" because they constitute a restraint of trade at common law, they violate U.S. antitrust law, they are prohibited by Microsoft's own corporate policies and they violate Part VI of the Competition Act. It submits that the contracts cannot therefore constitute a juristic reason for the enrichment. The question of whether the contracts are illegal and void should not be resolved at this stage of the proceedings. These are questions that must be left to the trial judge.

[88] En ce qui concerne la prétendue cause juridique de l'enrichissement de Microsoft, Pro-Sys fait valoir que les contrats en cause sont [TRADUCTION] « illégaux et nuls » en ce qu'ils portent atteinte à la liberté du commerce en common law, ils enfreignent les dispositions américaines antitrust, ils vont à l'encontre des politiques d'entreprise de Microsoft et ils contreviennent à la partie VI de la Loi sur la concurrence. Elle soutient qu'il ne s'agit donc pas d'une cause juridique de l'enrichissement. Il n'y a pas lieu, à ce stade de l'instance, de statuer sur la légalité et la validité des contrats. Il appartiendra au juge du procès de le faire.

[89] I am thus unable to find that it is plain and obvious that the claim in unjust enrichment cannot succeed.

[89] Je ne saurais donc conclure qu'il ne peut manifestement pas être fait droit à l'allégation d'enrichissement sans cause.

(ii) Constructive Trust

(ii) Fiducie par interprétation

[90] As a remedy for the alleged unjust enrichment, Pro-Sys submits that an amount equal to the

[90] Pro-Sys soutient qu'en guise de réparation de l'enrichissement sans cause allégué, Microsoft overcharge from the sales of Microsoft operating systems and Microsoft applications software in British Columbia should be held by Microsoft in trust for the class members. In other words, Pro-Sys is asking that Microsoft be constituted a constructive trustee in favour of Pro-Sys.

[91] Kerr v. Baranow, 2011 SCC 10, [2011] 1 S.C.R. 269, is the relevant controlling authority on constructive trusts. In Kerr, Justice Cromwell explains that in order to find that a constructive trust is made out, the plaintiff must be able to point to a link or causal connection between his or her contribution and the acquisition of specific property:

> . . . the constructive trust is a broad and flexible equitable tool used to determine beneficial entitlement to property (Pettkus, at pp. 843-44 and 847-48). Where the plaintiff can demonstrate a link or causal connection between his or her contributions and the acquisition, preservation, maintenance or improvement of the disputed property, a share of the property proportionate to the unjust enrichment can be impressed with a constructive trust in his or her favour (Pettkus, at pp. 852-53; Sorochan, at p. 50). [para. 50]

[92] In the present case, there is no referential property; Pro-Sys makes a purely monetary claim. Constructive trusts are designed to "determine beneficial entitlement to property" when "a monetary award is inappropriate or insufficient" (Kerr, at para. 50). As Pro-Sys's claim neither explains why a monetary award is inappropriate or insufficient nor shows a link to specific property, the claim does not satisfy the conditions necessary to ground a constructive trust. On the pleadings, it is plain and obvious that Pro-Sys's claim that an amount equal to the overcharge from the sale of Microsoft operating systems and Microsoft applications software in British Columbia should be held by Microsoft in trust for the class members cannot succeed. The pleadings based on constructive trust must be struck.

devrait détenir en fiducie pour le compte des membres du groupe une somme égale au montant de la majoration du prix de ses systèmes d'exploitation et de ses logiciels d'application vendus en Colombie-Britannique. En d'autres termes, elle demande que Microsoft soit constituée fiduciaire par interprétation à son bénéfice.

[91] L'arrêt Kerr c. Baranow, 2011 CSC 10, [2011] 1 R.C.S. 269, est décisif en matière de fiducies par interprétation. Le juge Cromwell y explique que pour faire la preuve d'une fiducie par interprétation, le demandeur doit pouvoir établir un lien ou un rapport de causalité entre sa contribution et l'acquisition du bien en cause :

> . . . la fiducie [par interprétation] est un outil général, souple et juste qui permet de déterminer le droit de propriété véritable (Pettkus, p. 843-844 et 847-848). Si le demandeur peut établir un lien ou un rapport de causalité entre ses contributions et l'acquisition, la conservation, l'entretien ou l'amélioration du bien en cause, une part proportionnelle à l'enrichissement sans cause peut faire l'objet d'une fiducie [par interprétation] en sa faveur (Pettkus, p. 852-853; Sorochan, p. 50). [par. 50]

[92] Nul bien n'est en cause en l'espèce; Pro-Sys réclame seulement une réparation pécuniaire. La fiducie par interprétation sert à « déterminer le droit de propriété véritable » lorsqu'« une réparation pécuniaire est inappropriée ou insuffisante » (Kerr, par. 50). Étant donné que Pro-Sys n'indique pas en quoi une réparation pécuniaire serait inappropriée ou insuffisante, et qu'elle n'établit pas de lien avec un bien en particulier, l'allégation ne satisfait pas aux conditions d'imposition d'une fiducie par interprétation. Au vu des actes de procédure, il est manifeste qu'on ne saurait faire droit à l'allégation de Pro-Sys selon laquelle Microsoft devrait conserver en fiducie pour le compte des membres du groupe une somme égale au montant de la majoration du prix de ses systèmes d'exploitation et de ses logiciels d'application vendus en Colombie-Britannique. Les éléments des actes de procédure qui concernent l'existence d'une fiducie par interprétation doivent être radiés.

(iii) Waiver of Tort

[93] As an alternative to the causes of action in tort, Pro-Sys waives the tort and seeks to recover the unjust enrichment accruing to Microsoft. Waiver of tort occurs when the plaintiff gives up the right to sue in tort and elects instead to base its claim in restitution, "thereby seeking to recoup the benefits that the defendant has derived from the tortious conduct" (Maddaugh and McCamus (2013), at p. 24-1). Causes of action in tort and restitution are not mutually exclusive, but rather provide alternative remedies that may be pursued concurrently (United Australia, Ltd. v. Barclays Bank, Ltd., [1941] A.C. 1 (H.L.), at p. 18). Waiver of tort is based on the theory that "in certain situations, where a tort has been committed, it may be to the plaintiff's advantage to seek recovery of an unjust enrichment accruing to the defendant rather than normal tort damages" (Maddaugh and McCamus, at pp. 24-1 and 24-2). An action in waiver of tort is considered by some to offer the plaintiff an advantage in that it may relieve them of the need to prove loss in tort, or in fact at all (Maddaugh and McCamus, at p. 24-4).

[94] Microsoft advances two arguments as to why this claim should be struck. First, it states that Pro-Sys has pleaded waiver of tort as a remedy and not a cause of action, and therefore proof of loss is an essential element. Second, if indeed waiver of tort is pleaded as a cause of action, the underlying tort must therefore be established, including the element of loss. In my view, neither argument provides a sufficient basis upon which to find that a claim in waiver of tort would plainly and obviously be unsuccessful.

[95] In Serhan (Trustee of) v. Johnson & Johnson (2006), 85 O.R. (3d) 665 (S.C.J. (Div. Ct.)), Epstein J. (as she then was) performed an extensive review

(iii) Renonciation au recours délictuel

[93] Subsidiairement à une cause d'action en responsabilité délictuelle, Pro-Sys invoque la renonciation au recours délictuel et demande à recouvrer une somme égale à l'enrichissement sans cause obtenu par Microsoft. Il y a renonciation au recours délictuel lorsque le demandeur renonce à son droit d'intenter une action en responsabilité délictuelle et choisit plutôt de se pourvoir en restitution et [TRADUCTION] « de recouvrer ainsi le bénéfice que le défendeur a tiré de la conduite délictueuse » (Maddaugh et McCamus (2013), p. 24-1). Les causes d'action en responsabilité délictuelle et en restitution ne s'excluent pas mutuellement, mais offrent plutôt des mesures de réparation qui peuvent être réclamées simultanément (United Australia, Ltd. c. Barclays Bank, Ltd., [1941] A.C. 1 (H.L.), p. 18). La renonciation au recours délictuel a pour prémisse que, [TRADUCTION] « dans certains cas de délit civil, le demandeur peut avoir avantage à recouvrer l'enrichissement sans cause obtenu par le défendeur plutôt qu'à obtenir des dommages-intérêts dans le cadre d'une action en responsabilité délictuelle » (Maddaugh et McCamus, p. 24-1 et 24-2). D'aucuns considèrent que l'action fondée sur la renonciation au recours délictuel confère un avantage au demandeur en ce qu'elle peut le dispenser de prouver la perte au regard des règles de la responsabilité délictuelle ou même de quelque manière (Maddaugh et McCamus, p. 24-4).

[94] Microsoft fait valoir deux motifs de radier cette allégation. Premièrement, Pro-Sys invoque la renonciation au recours délictuel dans une optique de réparation, et non à titre de cause d'action, de sorte que la preuve de la perte est essentielle. Deuxièmement, si la renonciation au recours délictuel est effectivement invoquée comme cause d'action, il faut donc établir le délit civil sous-jacent, y compris la perte. À mon avis, aucun des deux motifs avancés ne permet de conclure que la demande fondée sur la renonciation au recours délictuel ne peut manifestement pas être accueillie.

[95] Dans Serhan (Trustee of) c. Johnson & Johnson (2006), 85 O.R. (3d) 665 (C.S.J. (C. div.)), la juge Epstein (maintenant juge de la Cour d'appel of the doctrine of waiver of tort. Her analysis found numerous authorities accepting the viability of waiver of tort as its own cause of action intended to disgorge a defendant's unjust enrichment gained through wrongdoing, as opposed to merely a remedy for unjust enrichment. These authorities differed, however, as to the question of whether the underlying tort needed to be established in order to sustain the action in waiver of tort.

[96] The U.S. and U.K. jurisprudence as well as the academic texts on the subject have largely rejected the requirement that the underlying tort must be established in order for a claim in waiver of tort to succeed (see Serhan, at paras. 51-68, citing Maddaugh and McCamus (2005), at p. 24-20; J. Beatson, The Use and Abuse of Unjust Enrichment: Essays on the Law of Restitution (1991); D. Friedmann, "Restitution for Wrongs: The Basis of Liability", in W. R. Cornish, et al., eds., Restitution: Past, Present and Future: Essays in Honour of Gareth Jones (1998), 133; National Trust Co. v. Gleason, 77 N.Y. 400 (1879); Federal Sugar Refining Co. v. United States Sugar Equalization Board, Inc., 268 F. 575 (S.D.N.Y. 1920); Mahesan v. Malaysia Government Officers' Co-operative Housing Society Ltd., [1979] A.C. 374 (P.C.); Universe Tankships Inc. of Monrovia v. International Transport Workers Federation, [1983] A.C. 366 (H.L.)). Another line of cases would find a cause of action in waiver of tort to be unavailable unless it can be established that the defendant has committed the underlying tort giving rise to the cause of action (see United Australia, at p. 18; Zidaric v. Toshiba of Canada Ltd. (2000), 5 C.C.L.T. (3d) 61 (Ont. S.C.J.), at para. 14; Reid v. Ford Motor Co., 2006 BCSC 712 (CanLII)). At least one of these cases (Reid) suggests that a reluctance to eliminate the requirement of proving loss as an element of the cause of action is part of the reason for requiring the establishment of the underlying tort (para. 17).

de l'Ontario) examine minutieusement la notion de renonciation au recours délictuel. Elle constate que de nombreux auteurs reconnaissent sa validité comme cause d'action pour la restitution par le défendeur de l'enrichissement sans cause obtenu par des moyens répréhensibles, et non seulement pour la réparation de cet enrichissement sans cause. Ces auteurs diffèrent cependant d'avis quant à savoir si le délit civil sous-jacent doit être prouvé ou non pour les besoins de l'action fondée sur la renonciation au recours délictuel.

[96] Les tribunaux américains et britanniques, ainsi que les auteurs de doctrine en la matière, écartent pour la plupart l'obligation du demandeur d'établir le délit civil sous-jacent pour qu'il puisse avoir gain de cause sur le fondement de la renonciation au recours délictuel (voir Serhan, par. 51-68, citant Maddaugh et McCamus (2005), p. 24-20; J. Beatson, The Use and Abuse of Unjust Enrichment : Essays on the Law of Restitution (1991); D. Friedmann, « Restitution for Wrongs : The Basis of Liability », dans W. R. Cornish et autres, dir., Restitution : Past, Present and Future : Essays in Honour of Gareth Jones (1998), 133; National Trust Co. c. Gleason, 77 N.Y. 400 (1879); Federal Sugar Refining Co. c. United States Sugar Equalization Board, Inc., 268 F. 575 (S.D.N.Y. 1920); Mahesan c. Malaysia Government Officers' Co-operative Housing Society Ltd., [1979] A.C. 374 (P.C.); Universe Tankships Inc. of Monrovia c. International Transport Workers Federation, [1983] A.C. 366 (H.L.)). Selon un autre courant jurisprudentiel, il ne peut y avoir de cause d'action fondée sur la renonciation au recours délictuel que s'il est établi que le défendeur a commis le délit civil y donnant ouverture (voir United Australia, p. 18; Zidaric c. Toshiba of Canada Ltd. (2000), 5 C.C.L.T. (3d) 61 (C.S.J. Ont.), par. 14; Reid c. Ford Motor Co., 2006 BCSC 712 (CanLII)). Dans au moins une de ces affaires (Reid), le tribunal laisse entendre que la réticence à écarter l'obligation de prouver la perte comme élément de la cause d'action explique en partie qu'il faille prouver le délit civil sous-jacent (par. 17).

[97] Epstein J. ultimately concluded that, given this contradictory law, "[c]learly, it cannot be said that an action based on waiver of tort is sure to fail" and that the questions "about the consequences of identifying waiver of tort as an independent cause of action in circumstances such as exist here, involv[e] matters of policy that should not be determined at the pleadings stage" (Serhan, at para. 68). I agree. In my view, this appeal is not the proper place to resolve the details of the law of waiver of tort, nor the particular circumstances in which it can be pleaded. I cannot say that it is plain and obvious that a cause of action in waiver of tort would not succeed.

[97] La juge Epstein conclut au final que, vu l'état contradictoire du droit, [TRADUCTION] « [o]n ne saurait affirmer, de toute évidence, que le demandeur qui fonde son action sur la renonciation au recours délictuel sera assurément débouté »; elle ajoute que le débat « sur les conséquences de la reconnaissance de la renonciation au recours délictuel comme cause d'action indépendante dans des circonstances comme celles de l'espèce fait intervenir des principes sur lesquels il ne convient pas de prononcer à l'étape de l'examen des allégations » (Serhan, par. 68). Je suis d'accord. À mon avis, il ne convient pas de statuer plus avant, dans le cadre du pourvoi, sur le droit applicable en matière de renonciation au recours délictuel, ni sur le contexte particulier dans lequel on peut invoquer celle-ci. Je ne peux affirmer que le demandeur qui fonde son action sur la renonciation au recours délictuel sera manifestement débouté.

(3) The Remaining Certification Requirements

(3) Les autres conditions présidant à la certification

[98] The causes of action under s. 36 of the Competition Act, in tort and in restitution (except for constructive trust) have met the first certification requirement that the pleadings disclose a cause of action. I now turn to Microsoft's argument that the claims should nevertheless be rejected because they do not meet two of the remaining certification requirements: that the claims of the class members raise common issues and that a class action is the preferable procedure in this case.

[98] Les causes d'action que confère l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence, en responsabilité délictuelle et en restitution (sauf sur le fondement de la fiducie par interprétation) remplissent la première condition de certification voulant que les actes de procédure révèlent une cause d'action. Je me penche maintenant sur la prétention de Microsoft selon laquelle les demandes des membres du groupe doivent néanmoins être rejetées parce qu'elles ne satisfont pas à deux des autres conditions, à savoir qu'une question commune soit soulevée et que le recours collectif constitue la meilleure procédure pour régler cette question.

(a) Standard of Proof

a) Norme de preuve

[99] The starting point in determining the standard of proof to be applied to the remaining certification requirements is the standard articulated in this Court's seminal decision in Hollick. In that case, McLachlin C.J. succinctly set out the standard: ". . . the class representative must show some basis in fact for each of the certification requirements set out in . . . the Act, other than the requirement that the pleadings disclose a cause of action" (para. 25 (emphasis added)). She noted, however, that "the certification stage is decidedly not meant to be a test of the merits of the action" (para. 16). Rather, this stage is concerned with form and with whether the action can properly proceed as a class action (see Hollick, at para. 16; Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. v. Infineon Technologies AG, 2009 BCCA 503, 98 B.C.L.R. (4th) 272 ("Infineon"), at para. 65; Cloud v. Canada (Attorney General) (2004), 73 O.R. (3d) 401 (C.A.), at para. 50).

[99] Le point de départ pour déterminer la norme de preuve applicable aux autres conditions de certification réside dans l'arrêt de principe Hollick où la juge en chef McLachlin énonce succinctement cette norme : « . . . le représentant du groupe doit établir un certain fondement factuel pour chacune des conditions énumérées [dans] la Loi, autre que l'exigence que les actes de procédure révèlent une cause d'action » (par. 25 (je souligne)). La Juge

[100] The Hollick standard of proof asks not whether there is some basis in fact for the claim itself, but rather whether there is some basis in fact which establishes each of the individual certification requirements. McLachlin C.J. did, however, note in Hollick that evidence has a role to play in the certification process. She observed that "the Report of the Attorney General's Advisory Committee on Class Action Reform clearly contemplates that the class representative will have to establish an evidentiary basis for certification" (para. 25).

[101] Microsoft, while accepting the "some basis in fact" standard, argues that "in order for the Plaintiffs to meet the standard of proof, the evidence must establish that the proposed class action raises common issues and is the preferable procedure on a balance of probabilities" (R.F., at para. 41 (emphasis in original)). Microsoft relies on the academic writings of Justice Cullity of the Ontario Superior Court of Justice. Cullity J. expressed the view that "[t]o the extent that some basis in fact reflects a concern that certification motions are procedural and should not be concerned with the merits of the claims asserted, there seems no justification for applying the lesser standard to essential preconditions for certification that will not be within the jurisdiction of the court at trial" ("Certification in Class Proceedings — The Curious Requirement of 'Some Basis in Fact'" (2011), 51 Can. Bus. L.J. 407, at p. 422). In other words, Cullity J. suggests that because certification requirements are procedural, they will not be revisited at a trial of the common issues. As such, there is no reason to assess them on a en chef signale que « [l]a Loi écarte carrément un examen au fond à l'étape de la certification » (par. 16). Cette étape intéresse plutôt la forme et le caractère approprié de la poursuite par voie de recours collectif (voir Hollick, par. 16; Pro-Sys Consultants Ltd. c. Infineon Technologies AG, 2009 BCCA 503, 98 B.C.L.R. (4th) 272 (« Infineon »), par. 65; Cloud c. Canada (Attorney General) (2004), 73 O.R. (3d) 401 (C.A.), par. 50).

[100] Suivant la norme de preuve issue de l'arrêt Hollick, la question n'est pas celle de savoir si la demande a un certain fondement factuel, mais plutôt si un certain fondement factuel établit chacune des conditions de certification. La juge en chef McLachlin signale cependant que la preuve importe aux fins de la certification. Elle fait remarquer que « le rapport [. . .] du comité consultatif du procureur général [sur la réforme du recours collectif] envisageait manifestement que le représentant du groupe serait tenu d'étayer sa demande de certification » (par. 25).

[101] Bien qu'elle souscrive à la norme fondée sur l'existence d'« un certain fondement factuel », Microsoft fait valoir que [TRADUCTION] « pour respecter la norme de preuve, les demandeurs doivent établir selon la prépondérance des probabilités que le recours collectif proposé soulève une question commune et qu'il constitue la meilleure procédure pour régler cette question » (m.i., par. 41 (en italique dans l'original)). Elle invoque à l'appui les propos du juge Cullity, de la Cour supérieure de justice de l'Ontario, selon lesquels, [TRADUCTION] « [d]ans la mesure où l'exigence d'un certain fondement factuel est liée au fait que la demande de certification revêt un caractère procédural et que son examen ne doit pas porter sur le fond des allégations, rien ne paraît justifier l'application d'une norme moins stricte aux conditions essentielles qui président à la certification et qui échapperont à la compétence du tribunal lors du procès » (« Certification in Class Proceedings — The Curious Requirement of "Some Basis in Fact" » (2011), 51 Rev. can. dr. comm. 407, p. 422). En d'autres termes, le juge Cullity indique qu'en standard lower than the traditional civil standard of "balance of probabilities". Microsoft further submits that this Court should endorse the American approach of making factual determinations at the certification stage on a preponderance of the evidence and should require certification judges to weigh the evidence so as to resolve all factual or legal disputes at certification, even if those disputes overlap with the merits (see R.F., at para. 42, citing In re: Hydrogen Peroxide Antitrust Litigation, 552 F.3d 305 (3rd Cir. 2008), at p. 307, and R.F., at para. 43).

[102] I cannot agree with Microsoft's submissions on this issue. Had McLachlin C.J. intended that the standard of proof to meet the certification requirements was a "balance of probabilities", that is what she would have stated. There is nothing obscure here. The Hollick standard has never been judicially interpreted to require evidence on a balance of probabilities. Further, Microsoft's reliance on U.S. law is novel and departs from the Hollick standard. The "some basis in fact" standard does not require that the court resolve conflicting facts and evidence at the certification stage. Rather, it reflects the fact that at the certification stage "the court is ill-equipped to resolve conflicts in the evidence or to engage in the finely calibrated assessments of evidentiary weight" (Cloud, at para. 50; Irving Paper Ltd. v. Atofina Chemicals Inc. (2009), 99 O.R. (3d) 358 (S.C.J.), at para. 119, citing Hague v. Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. (2004), 13 C.P.C. (6th) 1 (Ont. S.C.J.)). The certification stage does not involve an assessment of the merits of the claim and is not intended to be a pronouncement on the viability or strength of the action; "rather, it focuses on the form of the action in order to determine whether the action can appropriately go forward as a class proceeding" (Infineon, at para. 65).

raison de leur nature procédurale, les conditions de certification ne feront pas l'objet d'un nouvel examen lors du procès. Il n'y a donc aucune raison de statuer sur le respect de ces conditions selon une norme moins stricte que celle de la « prépondérance des probabilités » généralement appliquée en matière civile. Microsoft ajoute que notre Cour devrait, à l'instar des tribunaux américains, tirer des conclusions de fait à l'étape de la certification selon la prépondérance de la preuve et exiger du juge saisi de la demande de certification qu'il évalue la preuve de façon à régler les différends d'ordre factuel ou juridique à cette étape, même lorsque ces différends touchent le fond du litige (voir m.i., par. 42, citant In re : Hydrogen Peroxide Antitrust Litigation, 552 F.3d 305 (3rd Cir. 2008), p. 307, et m.i., par. 43).

[102] Je ne saurais souscrire aux observations de Microsoft sur ce point. Si la juge en chef McLachlin avait voulu que le respect des conditions de certification soit assujetti à la norme de la « prépondérance des probabilités », elle l'aurait précisé. Or, la règle établie est claire. Les tribunaux n'ont jamais considéré que l'arrêt Hollick exigeait une preuve selon la prépondérance des probabilités. En outre, en s'appuyant sur le droit américain, Microsoft adopte une approche nouvelle et rompt avec la norme de l'arrêt Hollick. La norme fondée sur l'existence d'« un certain fondement factuel » n'exige pas que le tribunal se prononce sur les éléments de fait et les éléments de preuve contradictoires à l'étape de la certification. Elle tient plutôt compte du fait que, à cette étape, [TRADUCTION] « le tribunal n'est pas en mesure de statuer sur les éléments contradictoires de la preuve non plus que de déterminer sa valeur probante à l'issue d'une analyse nuancée » (Cloud, par. 50; Irving Paper Ltd. c. Atofina Chemicals Inc. (2009), 99 O.R. (3d) 358 (C.S.J.), par. 119, citant Hague c. Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. (2004), 13 C.P.C. (6th) 1 (C.S.J. Ont.)). La procédure de certification ne comporte pas d'examen au fond de la demande et elle ne vise pas à déterminer le bien-fondé des allégations; [TRADUCTION] « elle intéresse plutôt la forme que revêt l'action pour déterminer s'il convient de procéder par recours collectif » (Infineon, par. 65).

[103] Nevertheless, it has been well over a decade since Hollick was decided, and it is worth reaffirming the importance of certification as a meaningful screening device. The standard for assessing evidence at certification does not give rise to "a determination of the merits of the proceeding" (CPA, s. 5(7)); nor does it involve such a superficial level of analysis into the sufficiency of the evidence that it would amount to nothing more than symbolic scrutiny.

[104] In any event, in my respectful opinion, there is limited utility in attempting to define "some basis in fact" in the abstract. Each case must be decided on its own facts. There must be sufficient facts to satisfy the applications judge that the conditions for certification have been met to a degree that should allow the matter to proceed on a class basis without foundering at the merits stage by reason of the requirements of s. 4(1) of the CPA not having been met.

[105] Finally, I would note that Canadian courts have resisted the U.S. approach of engaging in a robust analysis of the merits at the certification stage. Consequently, the outcome of a certification application will not be predictive of the success of the action at the trial of the common issues. I think it important to emphasize that the Canadian approach at the certification stage does not allow for an extensive assessment of the complexities and challenges that a plaintiff may face in establishing its case at trial. After an action has been certified, additional information may come to light calling into question whether the requirements of s. 4(1) continue to be met. It is for this reason that enshrined in the CPA is the power of the court to decertify the action if at any time it is found that the conditions for certification are no longer met (s. 10(1)).

(b) Do the Claims of the Class Members Raise Common Issues?

[106] The commonality requirement has been described as "[t]he central notion of a class proceeding" (M. A. Eizenga et al., Class Actions Law

[103] De toute manière, plus d'une décennie s'est écoulée depuis Hollick et il convient de confirmer l'importance que revêt la procédure de certification comme mécanisme de filtrage efficace. La norme de preuve appliquée au stade de la certification n'emporte pas de [TRADUCTION] « conclusion sur le bien-fondé de l'instance » (CPA, par. 5(7)); elle ne donne pas lieu non plus à un examen du caractère suffisant de la preuve qui soit superficiel au point d'être strictement symbolique.

[104] Quoi qu'il en soit, j'estime en toute déférence qu'il serait peu utile de tenter de définir « un certain fondement factuel » dans l'abstrait. L'issue d'une affaire dépend des faits qui lui sont propres. Suffisamment de faits doivent permettre de convaincre le juge saisi des demandes que les conditions de certification sont réunies de telle sorte que l'instance puisse suivre son cours sous forme de recours collectif sans s'écrouler à l'étape de l'examen au fond à cause du non-respect des conditions prévues au par. 4(1) de la CPA.

[105] Enfin, je fais observer que les tribunaux canadiens ont refusé d'adopter l'approche américaine et de se livrer à une analyse rigoureuse sur le fond à l'étape de la certification. En conséquence, la certification du recours collectif ne garantit aucunement que les demandeurs auront gain de cause lors de l'examen des questions communes au procès. J'estime qu'il importe de souligner que l'approche canadienne à l'étape de la certification ne permet pas d'apprécier toutes les difficultés et tous les défis que le demandeur devra surmonter pour prouver ses allégations au procès. Une fois le recours certifié, de nouvelles données peuvent apparaître et remettre en question le respect des conditions du par. 4(1). C'est la raison pour laquelle la CPA consacre le pouvoir du tribunal de révoquer la certification du recours collectif à tout moment où il est établi que les conditions de certification ne sont plus réunies (par. 10(1)).

b) Les demandes des membres du groupe soulèvent-elles des questions communes?

[106] L'exigence d'une question commune a été qualifiée de [TRADUCTION] « [f]ondamentale au recours collectif » (M. A. Eizenga et autres, Class and Practice (loose-leaf), at p. 3-34.6). It is based on the notion that "individuals who have litigation concerns 'in common' ought to be able to resolve those common concerns in one central proceeding rather than through an inefficient multitude of repetitive proceedings" (ibid.).

[107] Section 4(1)(c) of the CPA states that the court must certify an action as a class proceeding if, among other requirements, "the claims of the class members raise common issues, whether or not those common issues predominate over issues affecting only individual members". Section 1 of the CPA defines "common issues" as "(a) common but not necessarily identical issues of fact, or (b) common but not necessarily identical issues of law that arise from common but not necessarily identical facts".

[108] In Western Canadian Shopping Centres Inc. v. Dutton, 2001 SCC 46, [2001] 2 S.C.R. 534, this Court addressed the commonality question, stating that "[t]he underlying question is whether allowing the suit to proceed as a [class action] will avoid duplication of fact-finding or legal analysis" (para. 39). I list the balance of McLachlin C.J.'s instructions, found at paras. 39-40 of that decision:

(1) The commonality question should be approached purposively.

(2) An issue will be "common" only where its resolution is necessary to the resolution of each class member's claim.

(3) It is not essential that the class members be identically situated vis-à-vis the opposing party.

(4) It not necessary that common issues predominate over non-common issues. However, the class members' claims must share a substantial common ingredient to justify Actions Law and Practice (feuilles mobiles), p. 3-34.6). Elle repose sur l'idée que « les personnes qui soulèvent une question de droit "commune" doivent pouvoir obtenir le règlement de cette question commune dans le cadre d'une seule instance plutôt que d'instances multiples et répétitives confinant à l'inefficacité » (ibid.).

[107] L'alinéa 4(1)(c) de la CPA dispose que le tribunal certifie qu'il s'agit d'un recours collectif lorsque, notamment, [TRADUCTION] « les demandes des membres du groupe soulèvent une question commune, que celle-ci l'emporte ou non sur les questions qui touchent uniquement les membres individuels ». Selon l'article 1 de la CPA, « question commune » s'entend, selon le cas, « (a) d'une question de fait commune, mais pas nécessairement identique ou (b) d'une question de droit commune, mais pas nécessairement identique, qui découle de faits qui sont communs, mais pas nécessairement identiques ».

[108] Dans l'arrêt Western Canadian Shopping Centres Inc. c. Dutton, 2001 CSC 46, [2001] 2 R.C.S. 534, notre Cour aborde la notion de communauté et conclut que « [l]a question sous-jacente est de savoir si le fait d'autoriser le recours collectif permettra d'éviter la répétition dans l'appréciation des faits ou l'analyse juridique » (par. 39). J'énumère les autres paramètres établis par la juge en chef McLachlin et qui figurent aux par. 39-40 de l'arrêt :

(1) Il faut aborder le sujet de la communauté en fonction de l'objet.

(2) Une question n'est « commune » que lorsque son règlement est nécessaire au règlement des demandes de chacun des membres du groupe.

(3) Il n'est pas essentiel que les membres du groupe soient tous dans la même situation par rapport à la partie adverse.

(4) Il n'est pas nécessaire que les questions communes l'emportent sur les questions non communes. Les demandes des membres du groupe doivent toutefois partager a class action. The court will examine the significance of the common issues in relation to individual issues.

(5) Success for one class member must mean success for all. All members of the class must benefit from the successful prosecution of the action, although not necessarily to the same extent.

[109] Microsoft argues that the differences among the proposed class members are too great to satisfy the common issues requirement. It argues that the plaintiffs allege they were injured by multiple separate instances of wrongdoing, that these acts occurred over a period of 24 years and had to do with 19 different products, and that various co-conspirators and countless licences are implicated. Microsoft also argues that the fact that the overcharge has been passed on to the class members through the chain of distribution makes it unfeasible to prove loss to each of the class members for the purposes of establishing common issues.

[110] The multitude of variables involved in indirect purchaser actions may well present a significant challenge at the merits stage. However, there would appear to be a number of common issues that are identifiable. In order to establish commonality, evidence that the acts alleged actually occurred is not required. Rather, the factual evidence required at this stage goes only to establishing whether these questions are common to all the class members.

[111] Myers J. concluded that the claims raised common issues. I agree that their resolution is indeed necessary to the resolution of the claims of each class member. Their resolution would appear to advance the claims of the entire class and to answer them commonly will avoid duplication in legal and factual analysis. Those findings are entitled to deference from an appellate court.

un élément commun important afin de justifier le recours collectif. Le tribunal évalue l'importance des questions communes par rapport aux questions individuelles.

(5) Le succès d'un membre du groupe emporte nécessairement celui de tous. Tous les membres du groupe doivent profiter du dénouement favorable de l'action, mais pas nécessairement dans la même proportion.

[109] Microsoft fait valoir que les différences entre les membres du groupe proposé sont trop importantes et ne permettent pas de satisfaire à l'exigence d'une question commune. Selon elle, les demandeurs allèguent avoir subi un préjudice à l'occasion de comportements fautifs distincts, que ces actes ont eu lieu sur une période de 24 ans, qu'ils ont visé 19 produits différents, que diverses personnes ont pris part au complot et que d'innombrables licences sont en cause. Elle ajoute que le transfert de la majoration aux membres du groupe en aval dans la chaîne de distribution rend impossible la preuve de la perte de chacun des membres du groupe aux fins d'établir l'existence d'une question commune.

[110] La multitude de variables que font intervenir les actions d'acheteurs indirects pourrait fort bien présenter un défi de taille à l'étape de l'examen au fond. Toutefois, plusieurs questions communes paraissent discernables. Établir la communauté des questions n'exige pas la preuve que les actes allégués ont effectivement eu lieu. À ce stade, il faut plutôt établir que les questions soulevées sont communes à tous les membres du groupe.

[111] Le juge Myers conclut que les demandes soulèvent des questions communes. Je conviens que leur règlement est en effet nécessaire à celui de la réclamation de chacun des membres du groupe. Il permettrait de faire progresser l'examen des allégations du groupe dans son ensemble et d'éviter la répétition dans l'analyse du droit et des faits. Une cour d'appel doit faire preuve de déférence à l'égard de ces conclusions.

[112] The differences cited by Microsoft are, in my view, insufficient to defeat a finding of commonality. Dutton confirms that even a significant level of difference among the class members does not preclude a finding of commonality. In any event, as McLachlin C.J. stated, "[i]f material differences emerge, the court can deal with them when the time comes" (Dutton, at para. 54).

[113] In addition to the common issues relating to scope and existence of the causes of action pleaded, the remaining common issues certified by Myers J. relate to the alleged loss suffered by the class members and as to whether damages can be calculated on an aggregate basis. The loss-related common issues, that is to say the proposed common issues that ask whether loss to the class members can be established on a class-wide basis, require the use of expert evidence in order for commonality to be established. The standard upon which that evidence should be assessed is contested and I turn to it first below. A question was also raised regarding whether the aggregate damages provision can be used to establish liability. I also address this below.

(i) Expert Evidence in Indirect Purchaser Class Actions

[114] One area in which difficulty is encountered in indirect purchaser actions is in assessing the commonality of the harm or loss-related issues. In order to determine if the loss-related issues meet the "some basis in fact" standard, some assurance is required that the questions are capable of resolution on a common basis. In indirect purchaser actions, plaintiffs generally seek to satisfy this requirement through the use of expert evidence in the form of economic models and methodologies.

[115] The role of the expert methodology is to establish that the overcharge was passed on to the indirect purchasers, making the issue common to the class as a whole (see Chadha, at para. 31).

[112] À mon sens, les différences invoquées par Microsoft ne permettent pas d'écarter la conclusion qu'il y a questions communes. L'arrêt Dutton confirme que même des différences assez importantes entre les membres du groupe n'empêchent pas de conclure à l'existence de questions communes. En tout état de cause, comme le fait remarquer la juge en chef McLachlin, « [s]i des différences importantes surviennent, le tribunal réglera la question le moment venu » (Dutton, par. 54).

[113] Outre celles liées à l'existence et à la portée des causes d'action invoquées, les autres questions communes certifiées par le juge Myers portent sur la perte qu'auraient subie les membres du groupe et sur la possibilité d'établir les dommages-intérêts de manière globale. Démontrer le caractère commun des questions liées à la perte — la perte subie par les membres peut-elle être circonscrite à l'échelle du groupe? — commande le recours à une preuve d'expert. La norme de preuve applicable à cette preuve est contestée, et je l'examine ci-après. On soulève par ailleurs la question de savoir si les dispositions sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux peuvent servir à fonder la responsabilité. J'examine ce point ensuite.

(i) Preuve d'expert dans le cadre d'actions d'acheteurs indirects

[114] L'une des difficultés que pose le recours d'acheteurs indirects a trait à l'appréciation du caractère commun des questions liées au préjudice ou à la perte. Pour que ces questions puissent satisfaire à la norme d'« un certain fondement factuel », il doit être assez certain qu'elles peuvent faire l'objet d'un règlement commun. Dans le cadre d'actions intentées par des acheteurs indirects, les demandeurs tentent généralement de satisfaire à cette exigence en offrant une preuve d'expert qui revêt la forme de modèles et de méthodes économiques.

[115] La méthode proposée par l'expert vise à établir que la majoration a été transférée aux acheteurs indirects, ce qui rend la question commune au groupe dans son ensemble (voir Chadha,

The requirement at the certification stage is not that the methodology quantify the damages in question; rather, the critical element that the methodology must establish is the ability to prove "common impact", as described in the U.S. antitrust case of In Re: Linerboard Antitrust Litigation, 305 F.3d 145 (3rd Cir. 2002). That is, plaintiffs must demonstrate that "sufficient proof [is] available, for use at trial, to prove antitrust impact common to all the members of the class" (ibid., at p. 155). It is not necessary at the certification stage that the methodology establish the actual loss to the class, as long as the plaintiff has demonstrated that there is a methodology capable of doing so. In indirect purchaser actions, this means that the methodology must be able to establish that the overcharges have been passed on to the indirect-purchaser level in the distribution chain.

[116] The most contentious question involving the use of expert evidence is how strong the evidence must be at the certification stage to satisfy the court that there is a method by which impact can be proved on a class-wide basis. The B.C.C.A. in Infineon called for the plaintiff to show "only a credible or plausible methodology" and held that "[i]t was common ground that statistical regression analysis is in theory capable of providing reasonable estimates of gain or aggregate harm and the extent of pass-through in price-fixing cases" (para. 68). This was the standard adopted by Myers J. in the present case. Under this standard, he found the plaintiffs' methodologies to be adequate to satisfy the commonality requirement.

[117] Microsoft submits that the "credible or plausible methodology" standard adopted by Myers J. was too permissive and allowed for a claim to be founded on insufficient evidence. It argues that under s. 5(4) of the CPA, the parties are required to file affidavits containing all material facts upon which they intend to rely, and as such Myers J. was under an obligation to weigh par. 31). À l'étape de la certification, la méthode n'a pas à déterminer le montant des dommages-intérêts, mais doit plutôt — et c'est là l'élément crucial — être susceptible de prouver « les conséquences communes », comme le conclut un tribunal américain dans une affaire antitrust, In Re : Linerboard Antitrust Litigation, 305 F.3d 145 (3rd Cir. 2002). Les demandeurs doivent démontrer qu'une [TRADUCTION] « preuve permettra d'établir, lors du procès, les conséquences antitrust qui sont communes à tous les membres du groupe » (ibid., p. 155). À l'étape de la certification, point n'est besoin que la méthode établisse la perte réellement subie par le groupe dans la mesure où le demandeur démontre qu'une méthode permet de le faire. Dans le cadre d'actions d'acheteurs indirects, la méthode doit donc pouvoir établir que la majoration a été transférée à l'acheteur indirect situé en aval dans la chaîne de distribution.

[116] La question la plus vivement débattue au chapitre de l'utilisation de la preuve d'expert est celle de savoir à quel point la preuve doit être concluante à l'étape de la certification pour convaincre le tribunal qu'une méthode permet d'établir les conséquences communes à l'échelle du groupe. Dans l'affaire Infineon, la C.A.C.-B. a invité la demanderesse à ne présenter [TRADUCTION] « qu'une méthode valable ou acceptable » pour ensuite conclure qu'« [i]l est bien établi que l'analyse de régression statistique offre en principe une estimation raisonnable du bénéfice ou du préjudice global et de l'étendue du transfert de la perte lorsqu'il y a eu fixation des prix » (par. 68). C'est le critère appliqué par le juge Myers en l'espèce, de sorte qu'il conclut que les méthodes employées par les parties demanderesses permettaient de satisfaire à l'exigence d'une question commune.

[117] Microsoft soutient que le critère de la « méthode valable ou acceptable » adopté par le juge Myers est trop laxiste et ouvre la voie à des demandes étayées par une preuve insuffisante. Elle fait valoir que le par. 5(4) de la CPA oblige les parties à déposer des affidavits qui énoncent tous les faits importants qu'elles entendent invoquer et que le juge Myers avait donc l'obligation de mettre

the evidence of both parties where a conflict arises. Microsoft alleges that despite this requirement, Myers J. failed to weigh Pro-Sys's expert evidence against Microsoft's expert evidence, merely concluding that Pro-Sys's expert evidence was "not implausible" and that assessing competing evidence was "not something that can and should be done in a certification application" (R.F., at para. 43, citing reasons of Myers J., at para. 144). Microsoft argues that this approach was in error and is inconsistent with the standard required at certification. Once again relying on U.S. case law, Microsoft urges this Court to weigh conflicting expert testimony at certification and to perform this review in a "robust" and "rigorous" manner (R.F., at paras. 45-48, citing Hydrogen Peroxide, at p. 323, and Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes, 131 S.Ct. 2541 (2011), at p. 2551).

[118] In my view, the expert methodology must be sufficiently credible or plausible to establish some basis in fact for the commonality requirement. This means that the methodology must offer a realistic prospect of establishing loss on a class-wide basis so that, if the overcharge is eventually established at the trial of the common issues, there is a means by which to demonstrate that it is common to the class (i.e. that passing on has occurred). The methodology cannot be purely theoretical or hypothetical, but must be grounded in the facts of the particular case in question. There must be some evidence of the availability of the data to which the methodology is to be applied.

[119] To hold the methodology to the robust or rigorous standard suggested by Microsoft, for instance to require the plaintiff to demonstrate actual harm, would be inappropriate at the certification stage. In Canada, unlike the U.S., precertification discovery does not occur as a matter of right. Although document production may be ordered at the discretion of the applications judge, Microsoft objected and Myers J. acceded to Microsoft's position and refused to order it in this case (2007 BCSC 1663, 76 B.C.L.R. (4th) 171). Microsoft can hardly argue for rigorous and robust en balance les éléments de preuve des deux parties en cas de conflit. Elle allègue que, au mépris de cette exigence, le juge Myers ne soupèse pas la preuve d'expert de Pro-Sys au regard de la sienne, mais conclut simplement que la preuve d'expert de Pro-Sys n'est [TRADUCTION] « pas inacceptable » et que l'appréciation des éléments de preuve contradictoires « ne peut et ne doit pas intervenir à l'étape de la certification » (m.i., par. 43, citant le par. 144 des motifs du juge Myers). Or, selon Microsoft, cette approche est erronée et incompatible avec la norme applicable à cette étape. Invoquant encore une fois la jurisprudence américaine, elle exhorte notre Cour à apprécier les témoignages d'expert contradictoires à l'étape de la certification, et ce, de manière [TRADUCTION] « stricte » et « rigoureuse » (m.i., par. 45-48, citant Hydrogen Peroxide, p. 323, et Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. c. Dukes, 131 S.Ct. 2541 (2011), p. 2551).

[118] À mon avis, la méthode d'expert doit être suffisamment valable ou acceptable pour établir un certain fondement factuel aux fins du respect de l'exigence d'une question commune. Elle doit donc offrir une possibilité réaliste d'établir la perte à l'échelle du groupe, de sorte que, si la majoration est établie à l'issue de l'examen des questions communes au procès, un moyen permette de démontrer qu'elle est commune aux membres du groupe (c.-à-d. que le transfert a eu lieu). Or, il ne peut s'agir d'une méthode purement théorique ou hypothétique; elle doit reposer sur les faits de l'affaire. L'existence des données auxquelles la méthode est censée s'appliquer doit être étayée par quelque preuve.

[119] Il ne convient pas, à l'étape de la certification, de soumettre la méthode à la norme stricte ou rigoureuse que préconise Microsoft, notamment d'exiger du demandeur qu'il prouve le préjudice effectivement subi. Au Canada, contrairement à ce qui a cours aux États-Unis, il n'y a pas d'emblée un droit à la communication de documents avant la certification. Même si le juge saisi des demandes a le pouvoir discrétionnaire de l'ordonner, Microsoft s'y est opposée et le juge Myers a refusé de l'ordonner en l'espèce (2007 BCSC 1663, 76 B.C.L.R. (4th) 171). Microsoft peut difficilement plaider en scrutiny when it objected to pre-certification discovery and was successful before the applications judge.

[120] Here, the Pro-Sys expert evidence consists of methodologies proposed by two economists, Professor James Brander and Dr. Janet Netz. Professor Brander's affidavit identified him as the Asia-Pacific Professor of International Business in the Sauder School of Business at the University of British Columbia and senior consultant in the Delta Economics Group. Dr. Netz's affidavit described her as an economist, a founding partner of ApplEcon LLC, an economics consulting firm based in Ann Arbor, Michigan, a tenured Associate Professor of Economics at Purdue University and a Visiting Associate Professor at the University of Michigan. Dr. Netz acted as expert witness in several similar cases brought against Microsoft in the United States. Dr. Netz's testimony drew heavily from the evidence she had prepared in her role as expert in those U.S. cases.

[121] It is Dr. Netz's evidence that the same methodology that applied in the U.S. would apply equally to the case at bar. She testified that the methodologies can demonstrate the initial overcharges by Microsoft to its direct purchasers as well as the pass-through to the indirect purchasers. Dr. Netz outlines three alternative methods by which harm and damages can be calculated. The first two methods, called the "rate of return method" and the "profit margin method", identify the overcharge at the first level of the distribution chain — that is, the overcharge in the sales made directly by Microsoft to its own customers. The first two models do not on their own establish that the overcharge was passed on but are intended to prove the total amount received by Microsoft as a result of the overcharge. The third methodology, the "price premium method", begins the analysis at the other end of the distribution chain, at the ultimate-purchaser level.

faveur d'un examen strict ou rigoureux, alors qu'elle s'est opposée à la communication de documents avant la certification et que le juge saisi des demandes a retenu son opposition.

[120] En l'espèce, la preuve d'expert de Pro-Sys est constituée de méthodes proposées par deux économistes, les professeurs James Brander et Janet Netz. Dans son affidavit, le professeur Brander déclare enseigner le commerce international pour la zone Asie-Pacifique à la Sauder School of Business de l'Université de la Colombie-Britannique et exercer la fonction de conseiller principal au sein du Delta Economics Group. Selon son affidavit, la professeure Netz est économiste et associée fondatrice d'ApplEcon LLC, un cabinet de services-conseils en économie établi à Ann Arbor, au Michigan, professeure agrégée permanente d'économie à l'Université Purdue, ainsi que professeure agrégée invitée à l'Université du Michigan. Elle a été témoin expert dans plusieurs instances semblables engagées contre Microsoft aux États-Unis. Son témoignage s'appuie en grande partie sur les éléments de preuve qu'elle a présentés à titre d'experte dans ces instances.

[121] La professeure Netz estime que les méthodes employées aux États-Unis peuvent également l'être en l'espèce. Selon elle, ces méthodes permettent d'établir la majoration que Microsoft a imposée initialement à ses acheteurs directs, ainsi que son transfert aux acheteurs indirects. Elle fait état de trois méthodes pour évaluer le préjudice subi et établir le montant des dommages-intérêts. Les deux premières méthodes, à savoir celle fondée sur le taux de rentabilité (« rate of return method ») et celle fondée sur la marge bénéficiaire (« profit margin method »), permettent de déterminer la majoration intervenue au sommet de la chaîne de distribution — soit la majoration directe par Microsoft lors de la vente à ses propres clients. Ces méthodes ne permettent pas à elles seules d'établir le transfert de la majoration, mais elles visent à déterminer la somme totale touchée par Microsoft par suite de la majoration. En ce qui concerne la troisième méthode, celle fondée sur l'augmentation du prix (« price premium method »), l'analyse commence à l'autre extrémité de la chaîne de distribution, là où se situe le consommateur final.

[122] Dr. Netz describes the price premium method as follows:

> Under this method, one calculates the retail price premium that Microsoft products have relative to competing products for the products at issue and for a set of benchmark products where there have not been allegations of anticompetitive conduct. The overcharge equals the percentage decrease in the retail price of the products at issue such that Microsoft would still realize the same retail price premium as it does on the benchmark products (i.e., products in markets not affected by Microsoft's unlawful conduct). [Emphasis in original; 2010 BCSC 285, at para. 26.]

[123] Once the retail price overcharge is calculated, the total class member expenditure on the products should then be multiplied by the overcharge percentage in order to arrive at the quantum of damages.

[124] Dr. Netz testified that regression analysis could be employed to ascertain the extent of passing on in order to establish loss at the indirect-purchaser level. Relying on the successful application of the methods in the U.S., Dr. Netz testified that "[t]here is no theoretical reason, in my opinion, why the methods described above cannot be applied to the sales of Microsoft software in Canada" (Netz affidavit, at para. 49 (A.R., vol. II, at p. 177)). Implicit in this evidence is that the data necessary to apply the methodologies in Canada is available.

[125] Myers J. dealt with Microsoft's criticisms of Dr. Netz's testimony at paras. 131-64 of his reasons. Microsoft's criticisms pertained to her alleged failure to take Canadian context into account, the lack of an evidentiary basis for her findings, alleged flaws in the benchmark products she selected, and a lack of workability in her proposed methodology. Myers J. found that despite these criticisms, Dr. Netz had demonstrated a plausible methodology for proving class-wide loss. He therefore did not proceed to address Professor Brander's proposed methods (para. 164).

[122] La professeure Netz décrit comme suit la méthode fondée sur l'augmentation du prix :

> [TRADUCTION] Cette méthode sert à calculer l'augmentation du prix au détail des produits de Microsoft par rapport à ceux de concurrents pour les produits en cause et pour un ensemble de produits de référence lorsqu'il n'y a pas eu d'allégations de comportement anticoncurrentiel. La majoration correspond au pourcentage de diminution du prix au détail des produits en question qui permettrait à Microsoft de toucher la même augmentation du prix au détail que pour les produits de référence (à savoir des produits offerts sur des marchés non touchés par le comportement illégal de Microsoft). [En italique dans l'original; 2010 BCSC 285, par. 26.]

[123] Une fois déterminée la majoration du prix au détail, on établit le montant des dommages-intérêts en multipliant par le pourcentage de majoration le total des dépenses faites par les membres du groupe pour les produits en question.

[124] Selon la professeure Netz, l'analyse de régression peut servir à déterminer l'étendue du transfert afin d'établir la perte subie par l'acheteur indirect. Faisant fond sur l'application concluante de ces méthodes aux États-Unis, elle précise que, [TRADUCTION] « [s]ur le plan théorique, rien ne s'oppose à ce que les méthodes s'appliquent à la vente des logiciels de Microsoft au Canada » (affidavit de la professeure Netz, par. 49 (d.a., vol. II, p. 177)). Il appert implicitement de son témoignage que les données nécessaires à l'application des méthodes existent au Canada.

[125] Aux paragraphes 131-164 de ses motifs, le juge Myers se penche sur les critiques formulées par Microsoft à l'égard du témoignage de la professeure Netz. Microsoft reproche au témoin de ne pas tenir compte du contexte canadien, de n'offrir aucune preuve à l'appui de ses conclusions, de ne pas bien choisir les produits de référence et de proposer des méthodes inapplicables. Le juge Myers conclut que la professeure Netz fait néanmoins état d'une méthode acceptable pour établir la perte infligée à l'échelle du groupe. Il n'examine donc pas les méthodes proposées par le professeur Brander (par. 164).

[126] It is indeed possible that at trial the expert evidence presented by Microsoft will prove to be stronger and more credible than the evidence of Dr. Netz and Professor Brander. However, resolving conflicts between the experts is an issue for the trial judge and not one that should be engaged in at certification (see Infineon, at para. 68; Irving, at para. 143). The trial judge will have the benefit of a full record upon which to assess the appropriateness of any damages award that may be made pursuant to the proposed methodology. For the purposes of certification and having regard to the deference due the applications judge on this issue, I would not interfere with the findings of Myers J. as to the commonality of the loss-related issues.

(ii) Aggregate Assessment of Damages

[127] The issue raised here is whether the question of aggregate assessment of damages is properly certified as a common issue. The aggregate damages provisions in the CPA provide for the quantification of the monetary award on a class-wide basis. Sections 29(1) and 29(2) of the CPA are relevant:

29 (1) The court may make an order for an aggregate monetary award in respect of all or any part of a defendant's liability to class members and may give judgment accordingly if

(a) monetary relief is claimed on behalf of some or all class members,

(b) no questions of fact or law other than those relating to the assessment of monetary relief remain to be determined in order to establish the amount of the defendant's monetary liability, and

(c) the aggregate or a part of the defendant's liability to some or all class members can

[126] Il se peut effectivement que, au procès, le témoignage d'expert présenté par Microsoft se révèle plus convaincant et plus digne de foi que ceux de la professeure Netz et du professeur Brander. Or, trancher entre des preuves d'expert contradictoires relève du juge du procès et ne doit pas intervenir à l'étape de la certification (voir Infineon, par. 68; Irving, par. 143). Le juge du procès disposera d'un dossier complet qui lui permettra de se prononcer sur le caractère approprié de tout octroi de dommages-intérêts fondé sur la méthode proposée. Aux fins de la certification, et compte tenu de la déférence à laquelle a droit le juge saisi des demandes sur ce point, je suis d'avis de ne pas modifier les conclusions du juge Myers sur le caractère commun des questions touchant à la perte subie.

(ii) Détermination globale du montant des dommages-intérêts

[127] La question qui se pose en l'espèce est celle de savoir s'il y a lieu de certifier comme questions communes celles se rapportant à l'opportunité de dommages-intérêts globaux. Les dispositions de la CPA sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux prévoient l'établissement de la réparation pécuniaire à l'échelle du groupe. Voici le libellé des par. 29(1) et (2) de la CPA :

[TRADUCTION]

29 (1) Le tribunal peut fixer par ordonnance le montant global des dommages-intérêts quant à la totalité ou à une partie de la responsabilité pécuniaire d'un défendeur envers les membres du groupe, et rendre jugement en conséquence, si :

(a) une réparation pécuniaire est demandée au nom de tous les membres du groupe ou de certains d'entre eux;

(b) il ne reste à trancher que des questions de fait ou de droit touchant à la détermination de la réparation pécuniaire afin de fixer le montant de la responsabilité pécuniaire du défendeur;

(c) la totalité ou une partie de la responsabilité du défendeur envers tous les membres du reasonably be determined without proof by individual class members.

(2) Before making an order under subsection (1), the court must provide the defendant with an opportunity to make submissions to the court in respect of any matter touching on the proposed order including, without limitation,

(a) submissions that contest the merits or amount of an award under that subsection, and

(b) submissions that individual proof of monetary relief is required due to the individual nature of the relief.

[128] In this case, the common issues that were certified are whether damages can be determined on an aggregate basis and if so, in what amount. For the reasons below, I would not disturb the applications judge's decision to certify these common issues. However, while the aggregate damages common issues certified by Myers J. deal only with the assessment of damages and not proof of loss, there is some confusion in his reasons about whether the aggregate damages provisions of the CPA may be relied on to establish proof of loss where proof of loss is an essential element of proving liability. That question has been resolved differently by various courts in Ontario and British Columbia, where the aggregate damages provisions are sufficiently similar to allow comparison.

[129] In this case, Myers J. concluded that the aggregate damages provisions can be used to establish what I interpret to be the proof of loss element of proving liability. He stated that "the aggregate damages section of the Class Proceedings Act allow the harm to be shown in the aggregate to the class as a whole" (para. 126), and also that "the Court of Appeal must be taken to have accepted that for certification of the damage claims, a method of showing harm to all class members need not be demonstrated and, further, that the groupe ou certains d'entre eux peut raisonnablement être établie sans que des membres n'aient à en faire la preuve individuellement.

(2) Avant de rendre l'ordonnance visée au paragraphe (1), le tribunal permet au défendeur de présenter des observations sur toute question qui touche l'ordonnance proposée, y compris sur ce qui suit :

(a) le bien-fondé de l'ordonnance rendue en application de ce paragraphe ou le montant des dommages-intérêts qui y sont accordés;

(b) la nécessité d'une preuve individuelle du droit à la réparation pécuniaire étant donné la nature individuelle de celle-ci.

[128] Dans la présente affaire, les questions communes qui ont été certifiées sont les suivantes : peut-on établir les dommages-intérêts de manière globale et, dans l'affirmative, à combien se montent-ils? Pour les motifs qui suivent, la décision du juge saisi des demandes de certifier ces questions ne doit pas être réformée. Toutefois, même si les questions que certifie le juge Myers relativement aux dommages-intérêts globaux n'ont trait qu'à la détermination de leur montant, et non à la preuve de la perte, ses motifs créent une certaine incertitude quant à savoir si les dispositions de la CPA sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux peuvent être invoquées pour prouver la perte lorsque la preuve de celle-ci est un élément essentiel de l'établissement de la responsabilité. Cette question a été tranchée différemment par les tribunaux de l'Ontario et de la Colombie-Britannique, deux provinces dont les dispositions pertinentes s'apparentent suffisamment entre elles pour qu'on puisse les comparer.

[129] Dans la présente affaire, le juge Myers conclut que ces dispositions peuvent être invoquées pour établir ce qui me paraît être la preuve de la perte qui permet d'établir la responsabilité. Il dit que [TRADUCTION] « les dispositions de la Class Proceedings Act sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux permettent de prouver le préjudice infligé globalement au groupe en entier » (par. 126) et aussi qu'« il faut considérer que, pour la Cour d'appel, la certification d'une demande d'indemnisation n'exige pas la démonstration qu'une méthode aggregate damages sections can be used to establish liability" (B.C.S.C., at para. 125).

[130] In finding that the aggregate damages provisions of the CPA can be used to establish proof of loss to the class as a whole, Myers J. followed a line of jurisprudence of the British Columbia Court of Appeal. This reasoning appears in Infineon:

> In Knight, this Court affirmed the certification of an aggregate monetary award under the CPA as a common issue in a claim for disgorgement of the benefits of the defendants' wrongful conduct without an antecedent liability finding — rather, the aggregate assessment would establish concurrently both that the defendant benefited from its wrongful conduct and the extent of the benefit. [para. 39]

(See also Steele v. Toyota Canada Inc., 2011 BCCA 98, 329 D.L.R. (4th) 389, at paras. 50-52.)

[131] With respect, I do not agree with this reasoning. The aggregate damages provisions of the CPA relate to remedy and are procedural. They cannot be used to establish liability (2038724 Ontario Ltd. v. Quizno's Canada Restaurant Corp., 2010 ONCA 466, 100 O.R. (3d) 721, at para. 55). The language of s. 29(1)(b) specifies that no question of fact or law, other than the assessment of damages, should remain to be determined in order for an aggregate monetary award to be made. As I read it, this means that an antecedent finding of liability is required before resorting to the aggregate damages provision of the CPA. This includes, where required by the cause of action such as in a claim under s. 36 of the Competition Act, a finding of proof of loss. I do not see how a statutory provision designed to award damages on an aggregate basis can be said to be used to establish any aspect of liability.

permet d'établir le préjudice infligé à tous les membres du groupe et, en outre, les dispositions sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux peuvent être invoquées pour établir la responsabilité » (C.S.C.-B., par. 125).

[130] Pour arriver à la conclusion que les dispositions de la CPA sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux peuvent être invoquées pour prouver la perte infligée au groupe dans son ensemble, le juge Myers s'appuie sur la jurisprudence de la Cour d'appel de la Colombie-Britannique. Son raisonnement figure dans Infineon :

> [TRADUCTION] Dans Knight, la Cour confirme la certification de la réparation pécuniaire globale fondée sur la CPA comme question commune dans une instance en restitution des profits tirés du comportement fautif sans détermination préalable de la responsabilité du défendeur — en fait, l'évaluation globale établirait à la fois le fait que le défendeur a tiré profit de son comportement fautif et l'étendue de ce profit. [par. 39]

(Voir également Steele c. Toyota Canada Inc., 2011 BCCA 98, 329 D.L.R. (4th) 389, par. 50-52.)

[131] Soit dit en tout respect, je n'adhère pas à ce raisonnement. Les dispositions de la CPA sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux ont trait à la réparation, sont de nature procédurale et ne peuvent permettre d'établir la responsabilité (2038724 Ontario Ltd. c. Quizno's Canada Restaurant Corp., 2010 ONCA 466, 100 O.R. (3d) 721, par. 55). Le libellé de l'al. 29(1)(b*)* veut qu'il ne reste à trancher que des questions de fait ou de droit touchant à la détermination de la réparation pécuniaire pour qu'une réparation pécuniaire globale puisse être accordée. À mon sens, il faut une conclusion préalable de responsabilité avant d'appliquer les dispositions de la CPA sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux, ce qui comprend, lorsque l'exige une cause d'action comme celles prévues à l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence, une conclusion sur la preuve de la perte. Je ne vois pas comment une disposition visant à accorder des dommages-intérêts de manière globale pourrait être le fondement d'une conclusion sur quelque volet de la responsabilité.

[132] I agree with Feldman J.A.'s holding in Chadha that aggregate damages provisions are "applicable only once liability has been established, and provid[e] a method to assess the quantum of damages on a global basis, but not the fact of damage" (para. 49). I also agree with Masuhara J. of the B.C.S.C. in Infineon that "liability requires that a pass-through reached the Class Members", and that "[t]hat question requires an answer before the aggregation provisions, which are only a tool to assist in the distribution of damages, can be invoked" (2008 BCSC 575 (CanLII), at para. 176). Furthermore, I agree with the Ontario Court of Appeal in Quizno's, that "[t]he majority clearly recognized that s. 24 [of the Ontario Class Proceedings Act, 1992, S.O. 1992, c. 6] is procedural and cannot be used in proving liability" (para. 55).

[132] Je souscris à la conclusion de la juge Feldman dans Chadha, à savoir que les dispositions sur l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux [TRADUCTION] « s'appliquent seulement une fois la responsabilité établie et offrent une méthode d'évaluation globale des dommages-intérêts, mais ne permettent pas d'établir le préjudice » (par. 49). Je conviens également avec le juge Masuhara de la Cour suprême de la Colombie-Britannique qu'[TRADUCTION] « établir la responsabilité exige de prouver que le transfert de la perte a atteint les membres du groupe. Il faut statuer sur ce point avant d'appliquer les dispositions sur l'évaluation globale des dommages-intérêts, lesquelles n'offrent qu'un moyen d'attribuer l'indemnité » (voir Infineon, 2008 BCSC 575 (CanLII), par. 176). Aussi, je partage l'avis de la Cour d'appel de l'Ontario dans Quizno's selon lequel [TRADUCTION] « [l]es juges majoritaires reconnaissent clairement que l'art. 24 [de la Loi de 1992 sur les recours collectifs de l'Ontario, L.O. 1992, ch. 6] est de nature procédurale et ne peut servir d'assise à l'établissement de la responsabilité » (par. 55).

[133] This reasoning reflects the intention of the Attorney General of British Columbia. When he introduced the CPA in the British Columbia legislature, he stated that the goal of the legislation was to allow individuals who have similar claims to come together and pursue those individual claims collectively: "In simple terms, all we are doing here is finding a way to enable the access that individuals have to the court to be an access that individuals combining together can have to the court" (Hon. c. Gabelmann, Official Report of Debates of the Legislative Assembly (Hansard), vol. 20, No. 20, 4th Sess., 35th Parl., June 6, 1995, p. 15078). The CPA was not intended to allow a group to prove a claim that no individual could. Rather, an important objective of the CPA is to allow individuals who have provable individual claims to band together to make it more feasible to pursue their claims.

[133] Ce raisonnement traduit l'intention du procureur général de la Colombie-Britannique. Lorsque ce dernier a présenté la CPA à l'Assemblée législative de la province, il a précisé que la loi visait à permettre aux personnes ayant des réclamations apparentées de réunir leurs demandes individuelles et de poursuivre collectivement : [TRADUCTION] « En somme, le but est seulement de trouver un moyen de reconnaître aussi à un regroupement de personnes le droit d'ester en justice que l'on reconnaît à une personne individuelle » (l'hon. C. Gabelmann, Official Report of Debates of the Legislative Assembly (Hansard), vol. 20, nº 20, 4e sess., 35e lég., 6 juin 1995, p. 15078). La CPA ne visait pas à permettre à un groupe de personnes de prouver ce que nulle personne individuelle ne pouvait prouver. L'un de ses principaux objectifs était plutôt de faire en sorte que les personnes qui ont des réclamations individuelles prouvables puissent se regrouper et voir ainsi leurs démarches judiciaires facilitées.

[134] The question of whether damages assessed in the aggregate are an appropriate remedy can be certified as a common issue. However, this common issue is only determined at the common issues trial after a finding of liability has been made. The ultimate decision as to whether the aggregate damages provisions of the CPA should be available is one that should be left to the common issues trial judge. Further, the failure to propose or certify aggregate damages, or another remedy, as a common issue does not preclude a trial judge from invoking the provisions if considered appropriate once liability is found.

[134] La question de savoir si l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux constitue une réparation appropriée peut être certifiée comme question commune. Cependant, cette question commune ne

[135] However, as stated above, the determination that the aggregate damages provisions cannot be used to establish proof of loss does not affect Myers J.'s decision to certify aggregate damages as a common issue. Despite his erroneous finding that aggregate damages provisions may be invoked to establish liability, he stated that invoking these provisions for that purpose was not necessary in this case (see paras. 119-20 and 127). The aggregate damages questions he certified relate solely to whether damages can be determined on an aggregate basis and if so in what amount. Having not actually relied on the proposition that aggregate damages provisions can be used to determine liability, Myers J.'s decision to certify questions related to aggregate damages should not be disturbed.

(c) Is a Class Action the Preferable Procedure?

[136] The provision of the CPA relevant to the preferable procedure requirement is s. 4(2). It reads:

> (2) In determining whether a class proceeding would be the preferable procedure for the fair and efficient resolution of the common issues, the court must consider all relevant matters including the following:
>
> (a) whether questions of fact or law common to the members of the class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members;

sera tranchée qu'au procès, une fois la responsabilité établie. La décision relative à l'applicabilité des dispositions de la CPA sur les dommages-intérêts globaux doit appartenir en fin de compte au juge du procès appelé à statuer sur les questions communes. En outre, l'omission de proposer ou de certifier à titre de question commune l'opportunité d'accorder des dommages-intérêts globaux ou une autre réparation n'empêche pas le juge de se fonder sur les dispositions s'il l'estime indiqué.

[135] Toutefois, rappelons que même si les dispositions sur les dommages-intérêts globaux ne sauraient servir à prouver la perte, la décision du juge Myers de certifier que leur application soulève une question commune demeure valable. Même s'il conclut à tort qu'elles peuvent être invoquées pour établir la responsabilité, il ajoute que point n'est besoin de les invoquer en l'espèce (voir par. 119-120 et 127). Les questions qui s'y rapportent et qu'il certifie consistent seulement à savoir si le montant des dommages-intérêts peut être arrêté globalement et, dans l'affirmative, quel est ce montant. Puisque le juge Myers ne s'appuie pas véritablement sur sa conclusion que les dispositions peuvent être invoquées pour prouver la responsabilité, sa décision de certifier des questions communes touchant à l'octroi de dommages-intérêts globaux n'a pas à être modifiée.

c) Le recours collectif constitue-t-il la meilleure procédure pour régler les questions communes?

[136] Le paragraphe 4(2) de la CPA prévoit que le recours collectif doit constituer la meilleure procédure pour régler une question commune :

[TRADUCTION]

> (2) Pour déterminer si le recours collectif serait la meilleure procédure pour régler la question commune de manière juste et efficace, le tribunal tient compte des facteurs applicables et se demande notamment ce qui suit :
>
> (a) la question de fait ou de droit qui est commune aux membres du groupe l'emporte-t-elle sur celle qui touche uniquement les membres individuels;

(b) whether a significant number of the members of the class have a valid interest in individually controlling the prosecution of separate actions;

(c) whether the class proceeding would involve claims that are or have been the subject of any other proceedings;

(d) whether other means of resolving the claims are less practical or less efficient;

(e) whether the administration of the class proceeding would create greater difficulties than those likely to be experienced if relief were sought by other means.

[137] In Hollick, this Court said that preferability must be examined in reference to the three principal aims of the class action regime: ". . . judicial economy, access to justice, and behaviour modification" (para. 27).

[138] Microsoft argues that the lack of commonality between the class members and the abundance of individual issues signifies that a class proceeding will not be a "fair, efficient and manageable method of advancing the claim" as required by Hollick (R.F., at para. 84, citing Hollick, at para. 28). It argues that the access to justice function of class actions will not be served by certifying the action because it will inevitably break down into numerous individual trials, subjecting the class members to delays. It also argues that the tendency of indirect purchaser action to result in cy-près awards — made where it would be impractical to distribute the award to the individual plaintiffs — further frustrates the access to justice aim. As to the objective of behaviour modification, Microsoft contends that it is more properly a concern for the Competition Commissioner and that the procedures that can be initiated by that body are the preferable forum in which to deal with the wrongs alleged in this case.

(b) un nombre important de membres du groupe ont-ils véritablement intérêt à poursuivre des instances séparées;

(c) le recours collectif comprend-il des demandes qui ont été ou qui font l'objet d'autres instances;

(d) les autres modes de règlement sont-ils moins pratiques ou efficaces;

(e) la gestion du recours collectif crée-t-elle de plus grandes difficultés que l'adoption d'un autre moyen?

[137] Dans l'arrêt Hollick, notre Cour confirme que le fait de constituer ou non la meilleure procédure pour régler les questions communes est fonction des trois principaux avantages du recours collectif : « . . . l'économie des ressources judiciaires, l'accès à la justice et la modification des comportements » (par. 27).

[138] Selon Microsoft, l'absence de caractéristiques communes aux membres du groupe et le grand nombre de questions individuelles font que le recours collectif n'est pas un moyen [TRADUCTION] « juste, efficace et pratique de faire progresser l'instance » comme l'exige l'arrêt Hollick (m.i., par. 84, citant Hollick, par. 28). Elle ajoute que la certification de l'action ne saurait remplir la fonction du recours collectif qui consiste à faciliter l'accès à la justice, car l'action se fragmenterait inévitablement en de nombreux procès individuels, ce qui causerait des retards au détriment des membres du groupe. Microsoft soutient en outre que les actions d'acheteurs indirects donnent généralement lieu à des versements selon le principe de l'aussi-près (en anglais, « cy près doctrine ») — lorsqu'il est irréaliste de distribuer la somme accordée aux demandeurs individuels —, ce qui n'est pas non plus de nature à favoriser l'accès à la justice. En ce qui concerne l'objectif de modifier les comportements, Microsoft soutient qu'il relève plutôt du commissaire de la concurrence et que les instances susceptibles d'être engagées par cet organisme offrent le meilleur moyen de statuer sur les actes fautifs allégués en l'espèce.

[139] I am unable to accept these arguments. In Hollick, McLachlin C.J. was of the view that the plaintiff had not satisfied the certification requirements on the grounds that a class proceeding was not the preferable procedure. In that case, she found that the question of whether or not the defendant had unlawfully emitted methane gas and other pollutants was common to all class members. However, as to whether loss could be established on a class-wide basis, she found too many differences among the class members to consider loss a common issue. In other words, while she found that there was a common issue related to the existence of the cause of action, she did not consider the loss-related issues to be common to all the class members. She dismissed the class action on the basis that "[o]nce the common issue is seen in the context of the entire claim, it becomes difficult to say that the resolution of the common issue will significantly advance the action" (para. 32).

[140] In the present case, there are common issues related to the existence of the causes of action, but there are also common issues related to loss to the class members. Unlike Hollick, here the loss-related issues can be said to be common because there is an expert methodology that has been found to have a realistic prospect of establishing loss on a class-wide basis. If the common issues were to be resolved, they would be determinative of Microsoft's liability and of whether passing on of the overcharge to the indirect purchasers has occurred. Because such determinations will be essential in order for the class members to recover, it can be said, in this case, that a resolution of the common issues would significantly advance the action. While it is possible that individual issues may arise at the trial of the common issues, it is implicit in the reasons of Myers J. that, at the certification stage, he found the common issues to predominate over issues affecting only individual class members. I would agree. In the circumstances, I would not interfere with his finding that the class action is the preferable procedure.

[139] Je ne puis faire droit à ces prétentions. Dans Hollick, la juge en chef McLachlin estime que le demandeur ne satisfait pas aux conditions de certification en ce que le recours collectif ne constitue pas la meilleure procédure. Selon elle, la question de savoir si la défenderesse a émis illégalement du méthane et d'autres polluants est commune à tous les membres du groupe. Sur la question de savoir si la perte peut être établie à l'échelle du groupe, elle conclut cependant que, en raison de différences trop nombreuses entre les membres du groupe, il n'y a pas lieu de voir dans la perte une question commune. En d'autres termes, bien qu'elle conclue que l'existence d'une cause d'action soulève une question commune, la Juge en chef estime que les questions liées à la perte ne sont pas communes à tous les membres du groupe. Elle refuse de certifier le recours collectif au motif que, « [u]ne fois la question commune considérée dans le contexte global de la demande, il devient difficile d'affirmer que le règlement de la question commune fera progresser substantiellement l'instance » (par. 32).

[140] Dans la présente affaire, non seulement l'existence de causes d'action, mais aussi la perte subie par les membres du groupe, constituent des questions communes. Contrairement à l'affaire Hollick, on peut dire en l'espèce que la perte constitue une question commune car il a été déterminé qu'une méthode proposée par un expert permettrait assez certainement d'établir la perte à l'échelle du groupe. Le règlement des questions communes devrait permettre de statuer sur la responsabilité de Microsoft et sur le transfert de la majoration aux acheteurs indirects. Puisqu'il est essentiel de statuer sur ces points afin que les membres du groupe puissent recouvrer le montant de la perte, on peut soutenir en l'espèce que le règlement des questions communes fera progresser substantiellement l'instance. Bien qu'il soit possible que des questions individuelles soient soulevées à l'audition des questions communes, le juge Myers indique implicitement dans ses motifs que, à l'étape de la certification, les questions communes l'emportent sur les questions qui ne touchent que des membres individuels. Je suis d'accord. Dans les circonstances, je suis d'avis de ne pas modifier sa conclusion portant que le recours collectif constituerait la meilleure procédure pour régler les questions communes.

[141] It is also premature to assume that the award in this case will result in cy-près distribution or that the objective of access to justice will be frustrated on this account. Further, while under the Competition Act the Competition Commissioner is the primary organ responsible for deterrence and behaviour modification, the Competition Bureau in this case has said that it will not be pursuing any action against Microsoft. Accordingly, if the class action does not proceed, the objectives of deterrence and behaviour modification will not be addressed at all. On this issue, the class action is not only the preferable procedure but the only procedure available to serve these objectives.

(4) Conclusion on the Certification of the Action

[142] I would restore the orders of the applications judges allowing for certification of this action as a class proceeding with the exception that the pleadings based on constructive trust be struck.

V. Conclusion

[143] For the above reasons, I would allow the appeal with costs throughout.

Appendix: Common Issues Certified by Myers J.

Breach of Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34

(a) Did the Defendants, or either of them, engage in conduct which is contrary to s. 45 and or s. 52 of the Competition Act?

(b) Are the Class Members entitled to losses or damages pursuant to section 36 of the Competition Act, and, if so, in what amount?

[141] De plus, il est trop tôt pour présumer que la réparation accordée en l'espèce donnera lieu à des versements selon le principe de l'aussi-près ou que, le cas échéant, l'objectif de favoriser l'accès à la justice sera compromis. En outre, bien que, sous le régime de la Loi sur la concurrence, la dissuasion et la modification des comportements relèvent en premier lieu du commissaire de la concurrence, le Bureau de la concurrence a indiqué qu'il ne poursuivrait pas Microsoft dans le présent dossier. Par conséquent, si le recours collectif n'est par certifié, les objectifs de dissuasion et de modification des comportements ne feront l'objet d'aucune mesure. Non seulement le recours collectif constitue la meilleure procédure pour atteindre ces objectifs, mais il est le seul.

(4) Conclusion sur la certification du recours collectif

[142] Je suis d'avis de rétablir les ordonnances des juges saisis des demandes qui font droit à la demande de certification de l'action à titre de recours collectif, sous réserve de la radiation des allégations fondées sur la fiducie par interprétation.

V. Conclusion

[143] Pour les motifs qui précèdent, je suis d'avis d'accueillir le pourvoi avec dépens devant tous les cours.

Annexe : Questions communes certifiées par le juge Myers

[TRADUCTION]

Violation de la Loi sur la concurrence, L.R.C. 1985, ch. C-34

a) Les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles se sont-elles livrées à un comportement allant à l'encontre des art. 45 ou 52 de la Loi sur la concurrence?

b) Les membres du groupe ont-ils droit, suivant l'art. 36 de la Loi sur la concurrence, au recouvrement des pertes ou des dommages subis et, dans l'affirmative, à raison de quel montant?

(c) Can the amount of damages be determined on an aggregate basis and if so, in what amount?

Conspiracy

(d) Did the Defendants, or either [of] them, conspire to harm the Class Members?

(e) Did the Defendants, or either of them, act in furtherance of the conspiracy?

(f) Was the predominant purpose of the conspiracy to harm the Class Members?

(g) Did the conspiracy involve unlawful acts?

(h) Did the Defendants, or either of them, know that the conspiracy would likely cause injury to the Class Members?

(i) Did the Class Members suffer economic loss?

(j) What damages, if any, are payable by the Defendants, or either of them, to the Class Members?

(k) Can the amount of damages be determined on an aggregate basis and if so, in what amount?

Tortious Interference with Economic Interests

(l) Did the Defendants, or either of them, intend to injure the Class Members?

(m) Did the Defendants, or either of them, interfere with the economic interests of the Class Members by unlawful or illegal means?

(n) Did the Class Members suffer economic loss as a result of the Defendants' interference?

(o) What damages, if any, are payable by the Defendants, or either of them, to the Class Members?

(p) Can the amount of damages be determined on an aggregate basis and if so, in what amount?

Unjust Enrichment, Waiver of Tort and Constructive Trust

(q) Have the Defendants, or either of them, been unjustly enriched by the receipt of an Overcharge? "Overcharge" means the difference

c) Le montant des dommages-intérêts peut-il être établi de manière globale et, dans l'affirmative, quel est-il?

Complot

d) Les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles ont-elles participé à un complot visant à causer un préjudice aux membres du groupe?

e) Les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles ont-elles agi en vue de la réalisation du complot?

f) Le complot visait-il principalement à causer un préjudice aux membres du groupe?

g) Les auteurs du complot ont-ils eu recours à des actes illégaux?

h) Les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles savaient-elles que le complot causerait vraisemblablement un préjudice aux membres du groupe?

i) Les membres du groupe ont-ils subi une perte financière?

j) Quel est le montant des dommages-intérêts, s'il en est, payables par les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles aux membres du groupe?

k) Le montant des dommages-intérêts peut-il être établi globalement et, dans l'affirmative, quel est-il?

Atteinte délictuelle aux intérêts financiers

l) Les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles ont-elles eu l'intention de nuire aux membres du groupe?

m) Les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles ont-elles porté atteinte aux intérêts financiers des membres du groupe par des moyens illégaux?

n) Les membres du groupe ont-ils subi une perte financière par suite de cette atteinte?

o) Quel est le montant des dommages-intérêts, s'il en est, payables par les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles aux membres du groupe?

p) Le montant des dommages-intérêts peut-il être établi globalement et, dans l'affirmative, quel est-il?

Enrichissement sans cause, renonciation au recours délictuel et fiducie par interprétation

q) Les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles se sont-elles enrichies sans cause par suite d'une majoration? « Majoration » s'entend de la différence entre between the prices the Defendants actually charged for Microsoft Operating Systems and Microsoft Applications Software in the PC market in Canada and the prices that the Defendants would have been able to charge in the absence of their wrongdoing.

(r) Have the Class Members suffered a corresponding deprivation in the amount of the Overcharge?

(s) Is there a juridical reason why the Defendants, or either of them, should be entitled to retain the Overcharge?

(t) What restitution, if any, is payable by the Defendants, or either of them, to the Class Members based on unjust enrichment?

(u) Should the Defendants, or either of them, be constituted as constructive trustees in favour of the Class Members for the Overcharge?

(v) What is the quantum of the Overcharge, if any, that the Defendants, or either of them, hold in trust for the Class Members?

(w) What restitution, if any, is payable by the Defendants to the Class Members based on the doctrine of waiver of tort?

(x) Are the Defendants, or either of them, liable to account to the Class Members for the wrongful profits, if any, that they obtained on the sale of Microsoft Operating Systems or Microsoft Applications Software to the Class Members based on the doctrine of waiver of tort?

(y) Can the amount of restitution be determined on an aggregate basis and if so, in what amount?

Punitive Damages

(z) Are the Defendants, or either of them, liable to pay punitive or exemplary damages having regard to the nature of their conduct and if so, in what amount and to whom?

Interest

(aa) What is the liability, if any, of the Defendants, or either of them, for court order interest?

les prix que les défenderesses ont effectivement exigés pour les systèmes d'exploitation et les logiciels d'application Microsoft sur le marché canadien des ordinateurs personnels et les prix qu'elles auraient pu exiger n'eût été leur comportement fautif.

r) Les membres du groupe se sont-ils appauvris d'un montant égal à celui de la majoration?

s) Une cause juridique justifie-t-elle les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles de conserver le fruit de la majoration?

t) Quelle somme les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles doivent-elles restituer aux membres du groupe, le cas échéant, sur le fondement de l'enrichissement sans cause?

u) Les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles doivent-elles être constituées fiduciaires par interprétation au bénéfice des membres du groupe quant au montant de la majoration?

v) À combien se monte la majoration, s'il en est, que les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles détiennent en fiducie pour les membres du groupe?

w) Quelle somme, s'il en est, les défenderesses doivent-elles restituer aux membres du groupe sur le fondement de la renonciation au recours délictuel?

x) Les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles sont-elles tenues de comptabiliser à l'intention des membres du groupe les profits illégitimes réalisés, le cas échéant, lorsqu'elles leur ont vendu des systèmes d'exploitation et des logiciels d'application Microsoft, sur le fondement de la renonciation au recours délictuel?

y) Le montant de la restitution peut-il être établi globalement et, dans l'affirmative, quel est-il?

Dommages-intérêts punitifs

z) Les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles sont-elles tenues de verser des dommages-intérêts punitifs ou exemplaires eu égard à la nature de leur comportement et, dans l'affirmative, quel est ce montant et qui sont les bénéficiaires?

Intérêt

aa) Quelle obligation, s'il en est, les défenderesses ou l'une d'elles ont-elles de verser l'intérêt dont le paiement est ordonné par la cour?

Distribution of Damages and/or Trust Funds

(bb) What is the appropriate distribution of damages and/or trust funds and interest to the Class Members and who should pay for the cost of that distribution? [A.R., vol. I, at pp. 167-69]

Appeal allowed with costs throughout.

Solicitors for the appellants: Camp Fiorante Matthews Mogerman, Vancouver; Michael Sobkin, Ottawa.

Solicitors for the respondents: McCarthy Tétrault, Toronto; Blake, Cassels & Graydon, Vancouver and Toronto.

Solicitor for the intervener: Attorney General of Canada, Ottawa.

Distribution des dommages-intérêts ou des fonds détenus en fiducie

bb) Quel est le bon mode de distribution aux membres du groupe des dommages-intérêts ou des fonds détenus en fiducie et de l'intérêt, et qui doit assumer le coût de cette distribution? [d.a., vol. I, p. 167-169]

Pourvoi accueilli avec dépens devant toutes les cours.

Procureurs des appelants : Camp Fiorante Matthews Mogerman, Vancouver; Michael Sobkin, Ottawa.

Procureurs des intimées : McCarthy Tétrault, Toronto; Blake, Cassels & Graydon, Vancouver et Toronto.

Procureur de l'intervenant : Procureur général du Canada, Ottawa.

22

Philippe Adrien, Emilia Berardi, Paul Creador, Lorenzo Abel Vasquez and Lindy Wagner on their own behalf and on behalf of the other former employees of Rizzo & Rizzo Shoes Limited Appellants

v.

Zittrer, Siblin & Associates, Inc., Trustees in Bankruptcy of the Estate of Rizzo & Rizzo Shoes Limited Respondent

and

The Ministry of Labour for the Province of Ontario, Employment Standards Branch Party

INDEXED AS: RIZZO & RIZZO SHOES LTD. (RE)

File No.: 24711.

1997: October 16; 1998: January 22.

Present: Gonthier, Cory, McLachlin, Iacobucci and Major JJ.

ON APPEAL FROM THE COURT OF APPEAL FOR ONTARIO

Employment law — Bankruptcy — Termination pay and severance available when employment terminated by the employer — Whether bankruptcy can be said to be termination by the employer — Employment Standards Act, R.S.O. 1980, c. 137, ss. 7(5), 40(1), (7), 40a — Employment Standards Amendment Act, 1981, S.O. 1981, c. 22, s. 2(3) — Bankruptcy Act, R.S.C., 1985, c. B-3, s. 121(1) — Interpretation Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. I.11, ss. 10, 17.

A bankrupt firm's employees lost their jobs when a receiving order was made with respect to the firm's property. All wages, salaries, commissions and vacation pay were paid to the date of the receiving order. The province's Ministry of Labour audited the firm's records to determine if any outstanding termination or severance pay was owing to former employees under the Employment Standards Act ("ESA") and delivered a proof of claim to the Trustee. The Trustee disallowed the claims on the ground that the bankruptcy of an employer does not constitute dismissal from employment and accordingly creates no entitlement to sever-

Philippe Adrien, Emilia Berardi, Paul Creador, Lorenzo Abel Vasquez et Lindy Wagner en leur propre nom et en celui des autres anciens employés de Rizzo & Rizzo Shoes Limited Appelants

c.

Zittrer, Siblin & Associates, Inc., syndic de faillite de Rizzo & Rizzo Shoes Limited Intimée

et

Le ministère du Travail de la province d'Ontario, Direction des normes d'emploi Partie

RÉPERTORIÉ: RIZZO & RIZZO SHOES LTD. (RE)

Nº du greffe: 24711.

1997: 16 octobre; 1998: 22 janvier.

Présents: Les juges Gonthier, Cory, McLachlin, Iacobucci et Major.

EN APPEL DE LA COUR D'APPEL DE L'ONTARIO

Employeur et employé — Faillite — Indemnités de licenciement et de cessation d'emploi payables en cas de licenciement par l'employeur — Faillite peut-elle être assimilée au licenciement par l'employeur? — Loi sur les normes d'emploi, L.R.O. 1980, ch. 137, art. 7(5), 40(1), (7), 40a — Employment Standards Amendment Act, 1981, L.O. 1981, ch. 22, art. 2(3) — Loi sur la faillite, L.R.C. (1985), ch. B-3, art. 121(1) — Loi d'interprétation, L.R.O. 1990, ch. I.11, art. 10, 17.

Les employés d'une entreprise en faillite ont perdu leur emploi lorsqu'une ordonnance de séquestre a été rendue à l'égard des biens de l'entreprise. Tous les salaires, les traitements, toutes les commissions et les paies de vacances ont été versés jusqu'à la date de l'ordonnance de séquestre. Le ministère du Travail de la province a vérifié les dossiers de l'entreprise pour déterminer si des indemnités de licenciement ou de cessation d'emploi devaient encore être versées aux anciens employés en application de la Loi sur les normes d'emploi (la «LNE») et il a remis une preuve de réclamation au syndic. Ce dernier a rejeté les réclamations pour le ance, termination or vacation pay under the ESA. The Ministry successfully appealed to the Ontario Court (General Division) but the Ontario Court of Appeal overturned that court's ruling and restored the Trustee's decision. The Ministry sought leave to appeal from the Court of Appeal judgment but discontinued its application. Following the discontinuance of the appeal, the Trustee paid a dividend to Rizzo's creditors, thereby leaving significantly less funds in the estate. Subsequently, the appellants, five former employees of Rizzo, moved to set aside the discontinuance, add themselves as parties to the proceedings, and requested and were granted an order granting them leave to appeal. At issue here is whether the termination of employment caused by the bankruptcy of an employer give rise to a claim provable in bankruptcy for termination pay and severance pay in accordance with the provisions of the ESA.

Held: The appeal should be allowed.

At the heart of this conflict is an issue of statutory interpretation. Although the plain language of ss. 40 and 40*a* of the ESA suggests that termination pay and severance pay are payable only when the employer terminates the employment, statutory interpretation cannot be founded on the wording of the legislation alone. The words of an Act are to be read in their entire context and in their grammatical and ordinary sense harmoniously with the scheme of the Act, the object of the Act, and the intention of Parliament. Moreover, s. 10 of Ontario's Interpretation Act provides that every Act "shall be deemed to be remedial" and directs that every Act shall "receive such fair, large and liberal construction and interpretation as will best ensure the attainment of the object of the Act according to its true intent, meaning and spirit".

The objects of the ESA and of the termination and severance pay provisions themselves are broadly premised upon the need to protect employees. Finding ss. 40 and 40*a* to be inapplicable in bankruptcy situations is incompatible with both the object of the ESA and the termination and severance pay provisions. The legislature does not intend to produce absurd consequences and such a consequence would result if employees dismissed before the bankruptcy were to be entitled to these benefits while those dismissed after a bankruptcy would not be so entitled. A distinction would be made between employees merely on the basis of the timing of their dismissal and such a result would arbimotif que la faillite d'un employeur ne constituant pas un congédiement, aucun droit à une indemnité de cessation d'emploi, à une indemnité de licenciement ni à une paie de vacances ne prenait naissance sous le régime de la LNE. En appel, le ministère a eu gain de cause devant la Cour de l'Ontario (Division générale) mais la Cour d'appel de l'Ontario a infirmé ce jugement et a rétabli la décision du syndic. Le ministère a demandé l'autorisation d'interjeter appel de l'arrêt de la Cour d'appel mais il s'est désisté. Après l'abandon de l'appel, le syndic a versé un dividende aux créanciers de Rizzo, réduisant de façon considérable l'actif. Par la suite, les appelants, cinq anciens employés de Rizzo, ont demandé et obtenu l'annulation du désistement, l'obtention de la qualité de parties à l'instance et une ordonnance leur accordant l'autorisation d'interjeter appel. En l'espèce, il s'agit de savoir si la cessation d'emploi résultant de la faillite de l'employeur donne naissance à une réclamation prouvable en matière de faillite en vue d'obtenir une indemnité de licenciement et une indemnité de cessation d'emploi conformément aux dispositions de la LNE.

Arrêt: Le pourvoi est accueilli.

Une question d'interprétation législative est au centre du présent litige. Bien que le libellé clair des art. 40 et 40*a* de la LNE donne à penser que les indemnités de licenciement et de cessation d'emploi doivent être versées seulement lorsque l'employeur licencie l'employé, l'interprétation législative ne peut pas être fondée sur le seul libellé du texte de loi. Il faut lire les termes d'une loi dans leur contexte global en suivant le sens ordinaire et grammatical qui s'harmonise avec l'esprit de la loi, l'objet de la loi et l'intention du législateur. Au surplus, l'art. 10 de la Loi d'interprétation ontarienne dispose que les lois «sont réputées apporter une solution de droit» et qu'elles doivent «s'interpréter de la manière la plus équitable et la plus large qui soit pour garantir la réalisation de leur objet selon leurs sens, intention et esprit véritables».

L'objet de la LNE et des dispositions relatives à l'indemnité de licenciement et à l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi elles-mêmes repose de manière générale sur la nécessité de protéger les employés. Conclure que les art. 40 et 40*a* sont inapplicables en cas de faillite est incompatible tant avec l'objet de la LNE qu'avec les dispositions relatives aux indemnités de licenciement et de cessation d'emploi. Le législateur ne peut avoir voulu des conséquences absurdes mais c'est le résultat auquel on arriverait si les employés congédiés avant la faillite avaient droit à ces avantages mais pas les employés congédiés après la faillite. Une distinction serait établie entre les employés sur la seule base de la date de leur trarily deprive some of a means to cope with economic dislocation.

The use of legislative history as a tool for determining the intention of the legislature is an entirely appropriate exercise. Section 2(3) of the Employment Standards Amendment Act, 1981 exempted from severance pay obligations employers who became bankrupt and lost control of their assets between the coming into force of the amendment and its receipt of royal assent. Section 2(3) necessarily implies that the severance pay obligation does in fact extend to bankrupt employers. If this were not the case, no readily apparent purpose would be served by this transitional provision. Further, since the ESA is benefits-conferring legislation, it ought to be interpreted in a broad and generous manner. Any doubt arising from difficulties of language should be resolved in favour of the claimant.

When the express words of ss. 40 and 40*a* are examined in their entire context, the words "terminated by an employer" must be interpreted to include termination resulting from the bankruptcy of the employer. The impetus behind the termination of employment has no bearing upon the ability of the dismissed employee to cope with the sudden economic dislocation caused by unemployment. As all dismissed employees are equally in need of the protections provided by the ESA, any distinction between employees whose termination resulted from the bankruptcy of their employer and those who have been terminated for some other reason would be arbitrary and inequitable. Such an interpretation would defeat the true meaning, intent and spirit of the ESA. Termination as a result of an employer's bankruptcy therefore does give rise to an unsecured claim provable in bankruptcy pursuant to s. 121 of the Bankruptcy Act for termination and severance pay in accordance with ss. 40 and 40*a* of the ESA. It was not necessary to address the applicability of s. 7(5) of the ESA.

Cases Cited

Distinguished: Re Malone Lynch Securities Ltd., [1972] 3 O.R. 725; Re Kemp Products Ltd. (1978), 27 C.B.R. (N.S.) 1; Mills-Hughes v. Raynor (1988), 63 O.R. (2d) 343; referred to: U.F.C.W., Loc. 617P v. Royal Dressed Meats Inc. (Trustee of) (1989), 76 C.B.R. (N.S.) 86; R. v. Hydro-Québec, [1997] 1 S.C.R. 213; congédiement et un tel résultat les priverait arbitrairement de certains des moyens dont ils disposent pour faire face à un bouleversement économique.

Le recours à l'historique législatif pour déterminer l'intention du législateur est tout à fait approprié. En vertu du par. 2(3) de l'Employment Standards Amendment Act, 1981, étaient exemptés de l'obligation de verser des indemnités de cessation d'emploi, les employeurs qui avaient fait faillite et avaient perdu la maîtrise de leurs biens entre le moment où les modifications sont entrées en vigueur et celui où elles ont reçu la sanction royale. Le paragraphe 2(3) implique nécessairement que les employeurs en faillite sont assujettis à l'obligation de verser une indemnité de cessation d'emploi. Si tel n'était pas le cas, cette disposition transitoire semblerait ne poursuivre aucune fin. En outre, comme la LNE est une loi conférant des avantages, elle doit être interprétée de façon libérale et généreuse. Tout doute découlant de l'ambiguïté des textes doit se résoudre en faveur du demandeur.

Lorsque les mots exprès employés aux art. 40 et 40*a* sont examinés dans leur contexte global, les termes «l'employeur licencie» doivent être interprétés de manière à inclure la cessation d'emploi résultant de la faillite de l'employeur. Les raisons qui motivent la cessation d'emploi n'ont aucun rapport avec la capacité de l'employé congédié de faire face au bouleversement économique soudain causé par le chômage. Comme tous les employés congédiés ont également besoin des protections prévues par la LNE, toute distinction établie entre les employés qui perdent leur emploi en raison de la faillite de leur employeur et ceux qui sont licenciés pour quelque autre raison serait arbitraire et inéquitable. Une telle interprétation irait à l'encontre des sens, intention et esprit véritables de la LNE. La cessation d'emploi résultant de la faillite de l'employeur donne effectivement naissance à une réclamation non garantie prouvable en matière de faillite au sens de l'art. 121 de la LF en vue d'obtenir une indemnité de licenciement et une indemnité de cessation d'emploi en conformité avec les art. 40 et 40*a* de la LNE. Il était inutile d'examiner la question de l'applicabilité du par. 7(5) de la LNE.

Jurisprudence

Distinction d'avec les arrêts: Re Malone Lynch Securities Ltd., [1972] 3 O.R. 725; Re Kemp Products Ltd. (1978), 27 C.B.R. (N.S.) 1; Mills-Hughes c. Raynor (1988), 63 O.R. (2d) 343; arrêts mentionnés: U.F.C.W., Loc. 617P c. Royal Dressed Meats Inc. (Trustee of) (1989), 76 C.B.R. (N.S.) 86; R. c. Hydro-Québec,

Royal Bank of Canada v. Sparrow Electric Corp., [1997] 1 S.C.R. 411; Verdun v. Toronto-Dominion Bank, [1996] 3 S.C.R. 550; Friesen v. Canada, [1995] 3 S.C.R. 103; Machtinger v. HOJ Industries Ltd., [1992] 1 S.C.R. 986; Wallace v. United Grain Growers Ltd., [1997] 3 S.C.R. 701; R. v. TNT Canada Inc. (1996), 27 O.R. (3d) 546; Re Telegram Publishing Co. v. Zwelling (1972), 1 L.A.C. (2d) 1; R. v. Vasil, [1981] 1 S.C.R. 469; Paul v. The Queen, [1982] 1 S.C.R. 621; R. v. Morgentaler, [1993] 3 S.C.R. 463; Abrahams v. Attorney General of Canada, [1983] 1 S.C.R. 2; Hills v. Canada (Attorney General), [1988] 1 S.C.R. 513; British Columbia (Director of Employment Standards) v. Eland Distributors Ltd. (Trustee of) (1996), 40 C.B.R. (3d) 25; R. v. Z. (D.A.), [1992] 2 S.C.R. 1025.

Statutes and Regulations Cited

Bankruptcy Act, R.S.C., 1985, c. B-3 [now the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act], s. 121(1).
Employment Standards Act, R.S.O. 1970, c. 147, s. 13(2).
Employment Standards Act, R.S.O. 1980, c. 137, ss. 7(5) [rep. & sub. 1986, c. 51, s. 2], 40(1) [rep. & sub. 1987, c. 30, s. 4(1)], (7), 40*a*(1) [rep. & sub. ibid., s. 5(1)].
Employment Standards Act, 1974, S.O. 1974, c. 112, s. 40(7).
Employment Standards Amendment Act, 1981, S.O. 1981, c. 22, s. 2.
Interpretation Act, R.S.O. 1980, c. 219 [now R.S.O. 1990, c. I.11], ss. 10, 17.
Labour Relations and Employment Statute Law Amendment Act, 1995, S.O. 1995, c. 1, ss. 74(1), 75(1).

Authors Cited

Christie, Innis, Geoffrey England and Brent Cotter. Employment Law in Canada, 2nd ed. Toronto: Butterworths, 1993.
Côté, Pierre-André. The Interpretation of Legislation in Canada, 2nd ed. Cowansville, Que.: Yvon Blais, 1991.
Driedger, Elmer A. Construction of Statutes, 2nd ed. Toronto: Butterworths, 1983.
Ontario. Legislature of Ontario Debates, 1st sess., 32nd Parl., June 4, 1981, pp. 1236-37.
Ontario. Legislature of Ontario Debates, 1st sess., 32nd Parl., June 16, 1981, p. 1699.
Sullivan, Ruth. Driedger on the Construction of Statutes, 3rd ed. Toronto: Butterworths, 1994.

[1997] 1 R.C.S. 213; Banque Royale du Canada c. Sparrow Electric Corp., [1997] 1 R.C.S. 411; Verdun c. Banque Toronto-Dominion, [1996] 3 R.C.S. 550; Friesen c. Canada, [1995] 3 R.C.S. 103; Machtinger c. HOJ Industries Ltd., [1992] 1 R.C.S. 986; Wallace c. United Grain Growers Ltd., [1997] 3 R.C.S. 701; R. c. TNT Canada Inc. (1996), 27 O.R. (3d) 546; Re Telegram Publishing Co. c. Zwelling (1972), 1 L.A.C. (2d) 1; R. c. Vasil, [1981] 1 R.C.S. 469; Paul c. La Reine, [1982] 1 R.C.S. 621; R. c. Morgentaler, [1993] 3 R.C.S. 463; Abrahams c. Procureur général du Canada, [1983] 1 R.C.S. 2; Hills c. Canada (Procureur général), [1988] 1 R.C.S. 513; British Columbia (Director of Employment Standards) c. Eland Distributors Ltd. (Trustee of) (1996), 40 C.B.R. (3d) 25; R. c. Z. (D.A.), [1992] 2 R.C.S. 1025.

Lois et règlements cités

Employment Standards Act, R.S.O. 1970, ch. 147, art. 13(2).
Employment Standards Act, 1974, S.O. 1974, ch. 112, art. 40(7).
Employment Standards Amendment Act, 1981, L.O. 1981, ch. 22, art. 2.
Loi d'interprétation, L.R.O. 1980, ch. 219 [maintenant L.R.O. 1990, ch. I-11], art. 10, 17.
Loi de 1995 modifiant des lois en ce qui concerne les relations de travail et l'emploi, L.O. 1995, ch. 1, art. 74(1), 75(1).
Loi sur la faillite, L.R.C. (1985), ch. B-3 [maintenant la Loi sur la faillite et l'insolvabilité], art. 121(1).
Loi sur les normes d'emploi, L.R.O. 1980, ch. 137, art. 7(5) [abr. & rempl. 1986, ch. 51, art. 2], 40(1) [abr. & rempl. 1987, ch. 30, art. 4(1)], (7), 40*a*(1) [abr. & rempl. ibid., art. 5(1)].

Doctrine citée

Christie, Innis, Geoffrey England and Brent Cotter. Employment Law in Canada, 2nd ed. Toronto: Butterworths, 1993.
Côté, Pierre-André. Interprétation des lois, 2e éd. Cowansville, Qué.: Yvon Blais, 1990.
Driedger, Elmer A. Construction of Statutes, 2nd ed. Toronto: Butterworths, 1983.
Ontario. Legislature of Ontario Debates, 1st sess., 32nd Parl., June 4, 1981, pp. 1236-37.
Ontario. Legislature of Ontario Debates, 1st sess., 32nd Parl., June 16, 1981, p. 1699.
Sullivan, Ruth. Driedger on the Construction of Statutes, 3rd ed. Toronto: Butterworths, 1994.

Sullivan, Ruth. Statutory Interpretation. Concord, Ont.: Irwin Law, 1997.

APPEAL from a judgment of the Ontario Court of Appeal (1995), 22 O.R. (3d) 385, 80 O.A.C. 201, 30 C.B.R. (3d) 1, 9 C.C.E.L. (2d) 264, 95 C.L.L.C. ¶210-020, [1995] O.J. No. 586 (QL), reversing a judgment of the Ontario Court (General Division) (1991), 6 O.R. (3d) 441, 11 C.B.R. (3d) 246, 92 C.L.L.C. ¶14,013, ruling that the Ministry of Labour could prove claims on behalf of employees of the bankrupt. Appeal allowed.

Steven M. Barrett and Kathleen Martin, for the appellants.

Raymond M. Slattery, for the respondent.

David Vickers, for the Ministry of Labour for the Province of Ontario, Employment Standards Branch.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by IACOBUCCI J. — This is an appeal by the former employees of a now bankrupt employer from an order disallowing their claims for termination pay (including vacation pay thereon) and severance pay. The case turns on an issue of statutory interpretation. Specifically, the appeal decides whether, under the relevant legislation in effect at the time of the bankruptcy, employees are entitled to claim termination and severance payments where their employment has been terminated by reason of their employer's bankruptcy.

1. Facts

Prior to its bankruptcy, Rizzo & Rizzo Shoes Limited ("Rizzo") owned and operated a chain of retail shoe stores across Canada. Approximately 65 percent of those stores were located in Ontario. On April 13, 1989, a petition in bankruptcy was filed against the chain. The following day, a receiving Sullivan, Ruth. Statutory Interpretation. Concord, Ont.: Irwin Law, 1997.

POURVOI contre un arrêt de la Cour d'appel de l'Ontario (1995), 22 O.R. (3d) 385, 80 O.A.C. 201, 30 C.B.R. (3d) 1, 9 C.C.E.L. (2d) 264, 95 C.L.L.C. ¶210-020, [1995] O.J. nº 586 (QL), qui a infirmé un jugement de la Cour de l'Ontario (Division générale) (1991), 6 O.R. (3d) 441, 11 C.B.R. (3d) 246, 92 C.L.L.C. ¶14,013, statuant que le ministère du Travail pouvait prouver des réclamations au nom des employés de l'entreprise en faillite. Pourvoi accueilli.

Steven M. Barrett et Kathleen Martin, pour les appelants.

Raymond M. Slattery, pour l'intimée.

David Vickers, pour le ministère du Travail de la province d'Ontario, Direction des normes d'emploi.

Version française du jugement de la Cour rendu par

LE JUGE IACOBUCCI — Il s'agit d'un pourvoi interjeté par les anciens employés d'un employeur maintenant en faillite contre une ordonnance qui a rejeté les réclamations qu'ils ont présentées en vue d'obtenir une indemnité de licenciement (y compris la paie de vacances) et une indemnité de cessation d'emploi. Le litige porte sur une question d'interprétation législative. Tout particulièrement, le pourvoi tranche la question de savoir si, en vertu des dispositions législatives pertinentes en vigueur à l'époque de la faillite, les employés ont le droit de réclamer une indemnité de licenciement et une indemnité de cessation d'emploi lorsque la cessation d'emploi résulte de la faillite de leur employeur. 1

1. Les faits

Avant sa faillite, la société Rizzo & Rizzo Shoes Limited («Rizzo») possédait et exploitait au Canada une chaîne de magasins de vente au détail de chaussures. Environ 65 pour 100 de ces magasins étaient situés en Ontario. Le 13 avril 1989, une pétition en faillite a été présentée contre la 2 order was made on consent in respect of Rizzo's property. Upon the making of that order, the employment of Rizzo's employees came to an end.

chaîne de magasins. Le lendemain, une ordonnance de séquestre a été rendue sur consentement à l'égard des biens de Rizzo. Au prononcé de l'ordonnance, les employés de Rizzo ont perdu leur emploi.

3 Pursuant to the receiving order, the respondent, Zittrer, Siblin & Associates, Inc. (the "Trustee") was appointed as trustee in bankruptcy of Rizzo's estate. The Bank of Nova Scotia privately appointed Peat Marwick Limited ("PML") as receiver and manager. By the end of July 1989, PML had liquidated Rizzo's property and assets and closed the stores. PML paid all wages, salaries, commissions and vacation pay that had been earned by Rizzo's employees up to the date on which the receiving order was made.

Conformément à l'ordonnance de séquestre, l'intimée, Zittrer, Siblin & Associates, Inc. (le «syndic») a été nommée syndic de faillite de l'actif de Rizzo. La Banque de Nouvelle-Écosse a nommé Peat Marwick Limitée («PML») comme administrateur séquestre. Dès la fin de juillet 1989, PML avait liquidé les biens de Rizzo et fermé les magasins. PML a versé tous les salaires, les traitements, toutes les commissions et les paies de vacances qui avaient été gagnés par les employés de Rizzo jusqu'à la date à laquelle l'ordonnance de séquestre a été rendue.

4 In November 1989, the Ministry of Labour for the Province of Ontario, Employment Standards Branch (the "Ministry") audited Rizzo's records to determine if there was any outstanding termination or severance pay owing to former employees under the Employment Standards Act, R.S.O. 1980, c. 137, as amended (the "ESA"). On August 23, 1990, the Ministry delivered a proof of claim to the respondent Trustee on behalf of the former employees of Rizzo for termination pay and vacation pay thereon in the amount of approximately $2.6 million and for severance pay totalling $14,215. The Trustee disallowed the claims, issuing a Notice of Disallowance on January 28, 1991. For the purposes of this appeal, the relevant ground for disallowing the claim was the Trustee's opinion that the bankruptcy of an employer does not constitute a dismissal from employment and thus, no entitlement to severance, termination or vacation pay is created under the ESA.

En novembre 1989, le ministère du Travail de la province d'Ontario, Direction des normes d'emploi (le «ministère») a vérifié les dossiers de Rizzo afin de déterminer si des indemnités de licenciement ou de cessation d'emploi devaient encore être versées aux anciens employés en application de la Loi sur les normes d'emploi, L.R.O. 1980, ch. 137 et ses modifications (la «LNE»). Le 23 août 1990, au nom des anciens employés de Rizzo, le ministère a remis au syndic intimé une preuve de réclamation pour des indemnités de licenciement et des paies de vacances (environ 2,6 millions de dollars) et pour des indemnités de cessation d'emploi (14 215 $). Le syndic a rejeté les réclamations et a donné avis du rejet le 28 janvier 1991. Aux fins du présent pourvoi, les réclamations ont été rejetées parce que le syndic était d'avis que la faillite d'un employeur ne constituant pas un congédiement, aucun droit à une indemnité de cessation d'emploi, à une indemnité de licenciement ni à une paie de vacances ne prenait naissance sous le régime de la LNE.

5 The Ministry appealed the Trustee's decision to the Ontario Court (General Division) which reversed the Trustee's disallowance and allowed the claims as unsecured claims provable in bankruptcy. On appeal, the Ontario Court of Appeal overturned the trial court's ruling and restored the decision of the Trustee. The Ministry sought leave

Le ministère a interjeté appel de la décision du syndic devant la Cour de l'Ontario (Division générale) laquelle a infirmé la décision du syndic et a admis les réclamations en tant que réclamations non garanties prouvables en matière de faillite. En appel, la Cour d'appel de l'Ontario a cassé le jugement de la cour de première instance et rétabli la to appeal from the Court of Appeal judgment, but discontinued its application on August 30, 1993. Following the discontinuance of the appeal, the Trustee paid a dividend to Rizzo's creditors, thereby leaving significantly less funds in the estate. Subsequently, the appellants, five former employees of Rizzo, moved to set aside the discontinuance, add themselves as parties to the proceedings, and requested an order granting them leave to appeal. This Court's order granting those applications was issued on December 5, 1996.

2. Relevant Statutory Provisions

The relevant versions of the Bankruptcy Act (now the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act) and the Employment Standards Act for the purposes of this appeal are R.S.C., 1985, c. B-3 (the "BA"), and R.S.O. 1980, c. 137, as amended to April 14, 1989 (the "ESA") respectively.

Employment Standards Act, R.S.O. 1980, c. 137, as amended:

7. —

(5) Every contract of employment shall be deemed to include the following provision:

> All severance pay and termination pay become payable and shall be paid by the employer to the employee in two weekly instalments beginning with the first full week following termination of employment and shall be allocated to such weeks accordingly. This provision does not apply to severance pay if the employee has elected to maintain a right of recall as provided in subsection 40a (7) of the Employment Standards Act.

40. — (1) No employer shall terminate the employment of an employee who has been employed for three months or more unless the employee gives,

(a) one weeks notice in writing to the employee if his or her period of employment is less than one year;

(b) two weeks notice in writing to the employee if his or her period of employment is one year or more but less than three years;

décision du syndic. Le ministère a demandé l'autorisation d'en appeler de l'arrêt de la Cour d'appel, mais il s'est désisté le 30 août 1993. Après l'abandon de l'appel, le syndic a versé un dividende aux créanciers de Rizzo, réduisant de façon considérable l'actif. Par la suite, les appelants, cinq anciens employés de Rizzo, ont demandé l'annulation du désistement, l'obtention de la qualité de parties à l'instance et une ordonnance leur accordant l'autorisation d'interjeter appel. L'ordonnance de notre Cour faisant droit à ces demandes a été rendue le 5 décembre 1996.

2. Les dispositions législatives pertinentes

Aux fins du présent pourvoi, les versions pertinentes de la Loi sur la faillite (maintenant la Loi sur la faillite et l'insolvabilité) et de la Loi sur les normes d'emploi sont respectivement les suivantes: L.R.C. (1985), ch. B-3 (la «LF») et L.R.O. 1980, ch. 137 et ses modifications au 14 avril 1989 (la «LNE»). 6

Loi sur les normes d'emploi, L.R.O. 1980, ch. 137 et ses modifications:

7 . . .

(5) Tout contrat de travail est réputé comprendre la disposition suivante:

> L'indemnité de cessation d'emploi et l'indemnité de licenciement deviennent exigibles et sont payées par l'employeur à l'employé en deux versements hebdomadaires à compter de la première semaine complète suivant la cessation d'emploi, et sont réparties sur ces semaines en conséquence. La présente disposition ne s'applique pas à l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi si l'employé a choisi de maintenir son droit d'être rappelé, comme le prévoit le paragraphe 40a (7) de la Loi sur les normes d'emploi.

40 (1) Aucun employeur ne doit licencier un employé qui travaille pour lui depuis trois mois ou plus à moins de lui donner:

a) un préavis écrit d'une semaine si sa période d'emploi est inférieure à un an;

b) un préavis écrit de deux semaines si sa période d'emploi est d'un an ou plus mais de moins de trois ans;

(c) three weeks notice in writing to the employee if his or her period of employment is three years or more but less than four years;

(d) four weeks notice in writing to the employee if his or her period of employment is four years or more but less than five years;

(e) five weeks notice in writing to the employee if his or her period of employment is five years or more but less than six years;

(f) six weeks notice in writing to the employee if his or her period of employment is six years or more but less than seven years;

(g) seven weeks notice in writing to the employee if his or her period of employment is seven years or more but less than eight years;

(h) eight weeks notice in writing to the employee if his or her period of employment is eight years or more, and such notice has expired.

. . .

(7) Where the employment of an employee is terminated contrary to this section,

(a) the employer shall pay termination pay in an amount equal to the wages that the employee would have been entitled to receive at his regular rate for a regular non-overtime work week for the period of notice prescribed by subsection (1) or (2), and any wages to which he is entitled;

. . .

40a* . . .

(1a) Where,

(a) fifty or more employees have their employment terminated by an employer in a period of six months or less and the terminations are caused by the permanent discontinuance of all or part of the business of the employer at an establishment; or

(b) one or more employees have their employment terminated by an employer with a payroll of $2.5 million or more, the employer shall pay severance pay to each employee whose employment has been terminated and who has been employed by the employer for five or more years.

c) un préavis écrit de trois semaines si sa période d'emploi est de trois ans ou plus mais de moins de quatre ans;

d) un préavis écrit de quatre semaines si sa période d'emploi est de quatre ans ou plus mais de moins de cinq ans;

e) un préavis écrit de cinq semaines si sa période d'emploi est de cinq ans ou plus mais de moins de six ans;

f) un préavis écrit de six semaines si sa période d'emploi est de six ans ou plus mais de moins de sept ans;

g) un préavis écrit de sept semaines si sa période d'emploi est de sept ans ou plus mais de moins de huit ans;

h) un préavis écrit de huit semaines si sa période d'emploi est de huit ans ou plus, et avant le terme de la période de ce préavis.

. . .

(7) Si un employé est licencié contrairement au présent article:

a) l'employeur lui verse une indemnité de licenciement égale au salaire que l'employé aurait eu le droit de recevoir à son taux normal pour une semaine normale de travail sans heures supplémentaires pendant la période de préavis fixée par le paragraphe (1) ou (2), de même que tout salaire auquel il a droit;

. . .

40a* . . .

[TRADUCTION] (1a) L'employeur verse une indemnité de cessation d'emploi à chaque employé licencié qui a travaillé pour lui pendant cinq ans ou plus si, selon le cas:

a) l'employeur licencie cinquante employés ou plus au cours d'une période de six mois ou moins et que les licenciements résultent de l'interruption permanente de l'ensemble ou d'une partie des activités de l'employeur à un établissement;

b) l'employeur dont la masse salariale est de 2,5 millions de dollars ou plus licencie un ou plusieurs employés.

Employment Standards Amendment Act, 1981, S.O. 1981, c. 22

2. — (1) Part XII of the said Act is amended by adding thereto the following section:

. . .

(3) Section 40*a* of the said Act does not apply to an employer who became a bankrupt or an insolvent person within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act (Canada) and whose assets have been distributed among his creditors or to an employer whose proposal within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act (Canada) has been accepted by his creditors in the period from and including the 1st day of January, 1981, to and including the day immediately before the day this Act receives Royal Assent.

Bankruptcy Act, R.S.C., 1985, c. B-3

121. (1) All debts and liabilities, present or future, to which the bankrupt is subject at the date of the bankruptcy or to which he may become subject before his discharge by reason of any obligation incurred before the date of the bankruptcy shall be deemed to be claims provable in proceedings under this Act.

Interpretation Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. I.11

10. Every Act shall be deemed to be remedial, whether its immediate purport is to direct the doing of anything that the Legislature deems to be for the public good or to prevent or punish the doing of any thing that it deems to be contrary to the public good, and shall accordingly receive such fair, large and liberal construction and interpretation as will best ensure the attainment of the object of the Act according to its true intent, meaning and spirit.

. . .

17. The repeal or amendment of an Act shall be deemed not to be or to involve any declaration as to the previous state of the law.

3. Judicial History

A. Ontario Court (General Division) (1991), 6 O.R. (3d) 441

Employment Standards Amendment Act, 1981, L.O. 1981, ch. 22

[TRADUCTION]

2. (1) La partie XII de la loi est modifiée par adjonction de l'article suivant:

. . .

(3) L'article 40*a* de la loi ne s'applique pas à l'employeur qui a fait faillite ou est devenu insolvable au sens de la Loi sur la faillite (Canada) et dont les biens ont été distribués à ses créanciers ou à l'employeur dont la proposition au sens de la Loi sur la faillite (Canada) a été acceptée par ses créanciers pendant la période qui commence le 1er janvier 1981 et se termine le jour précédant immédiatement celui où la présente loi a reçu la sanction royale inclusivement.

Loi sur la faillite, L.R.C. (1985), ch. B-3

121. (1) Toutes créances et tous engagements, présents ou futurs, auxquels le failli est assujetti à la date de la faillite, ou auxquels il peut devenir assujetti avant sa libération, en raison d'une obligation contractée antérieurement à la date de la faillite, sont réputés des réclamations prouvables dans des procédures entamées en vertu de la présente loi.

Loi d'interprétation, L.R.O. 1990, ch. I.11

10 Les lois sont réputées apporter une solution de droit, qu'elles aient pour objet immédiat d'ordonner l'accomplissement d'un acte que la Législature estime être dans l'intérêt public ou d'empêcher ou de punir l'accomplissement d'un acte qui lui paraît contraire à l'intérêt public. Elles doivent par conséquent s'interpréter de la manière la plus équitable et la plus large qui soit pour garantir la réalisation de leur objet selon leurs sens, intention et esprit véritables.

. . .

17 L'abrogation ou la modification d'une loi n'est pas réputée constituer ou impliquer une déclaration portant sur l'état antérieur du droit.

3. L'historique judiciaire

A. La Cour de l'Ontario (Division générale) (1991), 6 O.R. (3d) 441

7 Having disposed of several issues which do not arise on this appeal, Farley J. turned to the question of whether termination pay and severance pay are provable claims under the BA. Relying on U.F.C.W., Loc. 617P v. Royal Dressed Meats Inc. (Trustee of) (1989), 76 C.B.R. (N.S.) 86 (Ont. S.C. in Bankruptcy), he found that it is clear that claims for termination and severance pay are provable in bankruptcy where the statutory obligation to provide such payments arose prior to the bankruptcy. Accordingly, he reasoned that the essential matter to be resolved in the case at bar was whether bankruptcy acted as a termination of employment thereby triggering the termination and severance pay provisions of the ESA such that liability for such payments would arise on bankruptcy as well.

Après avoir tranché plusieurs points non soulevés dans le présent pourvoi, le juge Farley est passé à la question de savoir si l'indemnité de licenciement et l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi sont des réclamations prouvables en application de la LF. S'appuyant sur la décision U.F.C.W., Loc. 617P c. Royal Dressed Meats Inc. (Trustee of) (1989), 76 C.B.R. (N.S.) 86 (C.S. Ont. en matière de faillite), il a conclu que manifestement, l'indemnité de licenciement et l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi sont prouvables en matière de faillite lorsque l'obligation légale d'effectuer ces versements a pris naissance avant la faillite. Par conséquent, il a estimé que le point essentiel à résoudre en l'espèce était de savoir si la faillite était assimilable au licenciement et entraînait l'application des dispositions relatives à l'indemnité de licenciement et à l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi de la LNE de manière que l'obligation de verser ces indemnités prenne naissance également au moment de la faillite.

8 In addressing this question, Farley J. began by noting that the object and intent of the ESA is to provide minimum employment standards and to benefit and protect the interests of employees. Thus, he concluded that the ESA is remedial legislation and as such it should be interpreted in a fair, large and liberal manner to ensure that its object is attained according to its true meaning, spirit and intent.

Le juge Farley a abordé cette question en faisant remarquer que l'objet et l'intention de la LNE étaient d'établir des normes minimales d'emploi et de favoriser et protéger les intérêts des employés. Il a donc conclu que la LNE visait à apporter une solution de droit et devait dès lors être interprétée de manière équitable et large afin de garantir la réalisation de son objet selon ses sens, intention et esprit véritables.

9 Farley J. then held that denying employees in this case the right to claim termination and severance pay would lead to the arbitrary and unfair result that an employee whose employment is terminated just prior to a bankruptcy would be entitled to termination and severance pay, whereas one whose employment is terminated by the bankruptcy itself would not have that right. This result, he stated, would defeat the intended working of the ESA.

Le juge Farley a ensuite décidé que priver les employés en l'espèce du droit de réclamer une indemnité de licenciement et une indemnité de cessation d'emploi aurait pour conséquence injuste et arbitraire que l'employé licencié juste avant la faillite aurait droit à une indemnité de licenciement et à une indemnité de cessation d'emploi, alors que celui qui a perdu son emploi en raison de la faillite elle-même n'y aurait pas droit. Ce résultat, a-t-il dit, irait à l'encontre du but visé par la loi.

10 Farley J. saw no reason why the claims of the employees in the present case would not generally be contemplated as wages or other claims under the BA. He emphasized that the former employees in the case at bar had not alleged that termination pay and severance pay should receive a priority in

Le juge Farley ne voyait pas pourquoi les réclamations des employés en l'espèce ne seraient pas généralement considérées comme des réclamations concernant les salaires ou comme d'autres réclamations présentées en application de la LF. Il a souligné que les anciens employés en l'espèce the distribution of the estate, but merely that they are provable (unsecured and unpreferred) claims in a bankruptcy. For this reason, he found it inappropriate to make reference to authorities whose focus was the interpretation of priority provisions in the BA.

n'avaient pas soutenu que les indemnités de licenciement et de cessation d'emploi devaient être prioritaires dans la distribution de l'actif, mais tout simplement qu'elles étaient des réclamations prouvables en matière de faillite (non garanties et non privilégiées). Pour ce motif, il a conclu qu'il ne convenait pas d'invoquer la jurisprudence et la doctrine portant sur l'interprétation des dispositions relatives à la priorité de la LF.

Even if bankruptcy does not terminate the employment relationship so as to trigger the ESA termination and severance pay provisions, Farley J. was of the view that the employees in the instant case would nevertheless be entitled to such payments as these were liabilities incurred prior to the date of the bankruptcy by virtue of s. 7(5) of the ESA. He found that s. 7(5) deems every employment contract to include a provision to provide termination and severance pay following the termination of employment and concluded that a contingent obligation is thereby created for a bankrupt employer to make such payments from the outset of the relationship, long before the bankruptcy.

11 Même si la faillite ne met pas fin à la relation entre l'employeur et l'employé de façon à faire jouer les dispositions relatives aux indemnités de licenciement et de cessation d'emploi de la LNF, le juge Farley était d'avis que les employés en l'espèce avaient néanmoins droit à ces indemnités, car il s'agissait d'engagements contractés avant la date de la faillite conformément au par. 7(5) de la LNE. Il a conclu d'une part qu'aux termes du par. 7(5), tout contrat de travail est réputé comprendre une disposition prévoyant le versement d'une indemnité de licenciement et d'une indemnité de cessation d'emploi au moment de la cessation d'emploi et d'autre part que l'employeur en faillite est assujetti à l'obligation conditionnelle de verser ces indemnités depuis le début de la relation entre l'employeur et l'employé, soit bien avant la faillite.

Farley J. also considered s. 2(3) of the Employment Standards Amendment Act, 1981, S.O. 1981, c. 22 (the "ESAA"), which is a transitional provision that exempted certain bankrupt employers from the newly introduced severance pay obligations until the amendments received royal assent. He was of the view that this provision would not have been necessary if the obligations of employers upon termination of employment had not been intended to apply to bankrupt employers under the ESA. Farley J. concluded that the claim by Rizzo's former employees for termination pay and severance pay could be provided as unsecured and unpreferred debts in a bankruptcy. Accordingly, he allowed the appeal from the decision of the Trustee.

12 Le juge Farley a également examiné le par. 2(3) de l'Employment Standards Amendment Act, 1981, L.O. 1981, ch. 22 («l'ESAA»), qui est une disposition transitoire exemptant certains employeurs en faillite des nouvelles obligations relatives au paiement de l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi jusqu'à ce que les modifications aient reçu la sanction royale. Il était d'avis que cette disposition n'aurait pas été nécessaire si le législateur n'avait pas voulu que les obligations auxquelles sont tenus les employeurs au moment d'un licenciement s'appliquent aux employeurs en faillite en vertu de la LNE. Le juge Farley a conclu que la réclamation présentée par les anciens employés de Rizzo en vue d'obtenir des indemnités de licenciement et de cessation d'emploi pouvait être traitée comme une créance non garantie et non privilégiée dans une faillite. Par conséquent, il a accueilli l'appel formé contre la décision du syndic.

B. Ontario Court of Appeal (1995), 22 O.R. (3d) 385

13 Austin J.A., writing for a unanimous court, began his analysis of the principal issue in this appeal by focussing upon the language of the termination pay and severance pay provisions of the ESA. He noted, at p. 390, that the termination pay provisions use phrases such as "[n]o employer shall terminate the employment of an employee" (s. 40(1)), "the notice required by an employer to terminate the employment" (s. 40(2)), and "[a]n employer who has terminated or who proposes to terminate the employment of employees" (s. 40(5)). Turning to severance pay, he quoted s. 40*a*(1)(a) (at p. 391) which includes the phrase "employees have their employment terminated by an employer". Austin J.A. concluded that this language limits the obligation to provide termination and severance pay to situations in which the employer terminates the employment. The operation of the ESA, he stated, is not triggered by the termination of employment resulting from an act of law such as bankruptcy.

14 In support of his conclusion, Austin J.A. reviewed the leading cases in this area of law. He cited Re Malone Lynch Securities Ltd., [1972] 3 O.R. 725 (S.C. in bankruptcy), wherein Houlden J. (as he then was) concluded that the ESA termination pay provisions were not designed to apply to a bankrupt employer. He also relied upon Re Kemp Products Ltd. (1978), 27 C.B.R. (N.S.) 1 (Ont. S.C. in bankruptcy), for the proposition that the bankruptcy of a company at the instance of a creditor does not constitute dismissal. He concluded as follows at p. 395:

The plain language of ss. 40 and 40*a* does not give rise to any liability to pay termination or severance pay except where the employment is terminated by the employer. In our case, the employment was terminated, not by the employer, but by the making of a receiving order against Rizzo on April 14, 1989, following a peti-

B. La Cour d'appel de l'Ontario (1995), 22 O.R. (3d) 385

Au nom d'une cour unanime, le juge Austin a commencé son analyse de la question principale du présent pourvoi en s'arrêtant sur le libellé des dispositions relatives à l'indemnité de licenciement et à l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi de la LNE. Il a noté, à la p. 390, que les dispositions relatives à l'indemnité de licenciement utilisent des expressions comme «[a]ucun employeur ne doit licencier un employé» (par. 40(1)), «le préavis qu'un employeur donne pour licencier» (par. 40(2)) et les «employés qu'un employeur a licenciés ou se propose de licencier» (par. 40(5)). Passant à l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi, il a cité l'al. 40*a*(1)a), à la p. 391, lequel contient l'expression «l'employeur licencie cinquante employés». Le juge Austin a conclu que ce libellé limite l'obligation d'accorder une indemnité de licenciement et une indemnité de cessation d'emploi aux cas où l'employeur licencie des employés. Selon lui, la cessation d'emploi résultant de l'effet de la loi, notamment de la faillite, n'entraîne pas l'application de la LNE.

À l'appui de sa conclusion, le juge Austin a examiné les arrêts de principe dans ce domaine du droit. Il a cité Re Malone Lynch Securities Ltd., [1972] 3 O.R. 725 (C.S. en matière de faillite), dans lequel le juge Houlden (maintenant juge de la Cour d'appel) a statué que les dispositions relatives à l'indemnité de licenciement de la LNE n'étaient pas conçues pour s'appliquer à l'employeur en faillite. Il a également invoqué Re Kemp Products Ltd. (1978), 27 C.B.R. (N.S.) 1 (C.S. Ont. en matière de faillite), à l'appui de la proposition selon laquelle la faillite d'une compagnie à la demande d'un créancier ne constitue pas un congédiement. Il a conclu ainsi, à la p. 395:

[TRADUCTION] Le libellé clair des art. 40 et 40*a* ne crée une obligation de verser une indemnité de licenciement ou une indemnité de cessation d'emploi que si l'employeur licencie l'employé. En l'espèce, la cessation d'emploi n'est pas le fait de l'employeur, elle résulte d'une ordonnance de séquestre rendue à l'encontre de Rizzo le 14 avril 1989, à la suite d'une pétition présentée par l'un de ses créanciers. Le droit à une indemnité tion by one of its creditors. No entitlement to either termination or severance pay ever arose.

Regarding s. 7(5) of the ESA, Austin J.A. rejected the trial judge's interpretation and found that the section does not create a liability. Rather, in his opinion, it merely states when a liability otherwise created is to be paid and therefore it was not considered relevant to the issue before the court. Similarly, Austin J.A. did not accept the lower court's view of s. 2(3), the transitional provision in the ESAA. He found that that section had no effect upon the intention of the Legislature as evidenced by the terminology used in ss. 40 and 40*a*.

Austin J.A. concluded that, because the employment of Rizzo's former employees was terminated by the order of bankruptcy and not by the act of the employer, no liability arose with respect to termination, severance or vacation pay. The order of the trial judge was set aside and the Trustee's disallowance of the claims was restored.

4. Issues

This appeal raises one issue: does the termination of employment caused by the bankruptcy of an employer give rise to a claim provable in bankruptcy for termination pay and severance pay in accordance with the provisions of the ESA?

5. Analysis

The statutory obligation upon employers to provide both termination pay and severance pay is governed by ss. 40 and 40*a* of the ESA, respectively. The Court of Appeal noted that the plain language of those provisions suggests that termination pay and severance pay are payable only when the employer terminates the employment. For example, the opening words of s. 40(1) are: "No employer shall terminate the employment of an employee. . . ." Similarly, s. 40*a*(1a) begins with de licenciement ou à une indemnité de cessation d'emploi n'a jamais pris naissance.

15 En ce qui concerne le par. 7(5) de la LNE, le juge Austin a rejeté l'interprétation du juge de première instance et a estimé que cette disposition ne créait pas d'engagement. Selon lui, elle ne faisait que préciser quand l'engagement contracté par ailleurs devait être acquitté et ne se rapportait donc pas à la question dont la cour était saisie. Le juge Austin n'a pas accepté non plus l'opinion exprimée par le tribunal inférieur au sujet du par. 2(3), la disposition transitoire de l'ESAA. Il a jugé que cette disposition n'avait aucun effet quant à l'intention du législateur, comme l'attestait la terminologie employée aux art. 40 et 40*a*.

16 Le juge Austin a conclu que, comme la cessation d'emploi subie par les anciens employés de Rizzo résultait d'une ordonnance de faillite et n'était pas le fait de l'employeur, il n'existait aucun engagement en ce qui concerne l'indemnité de licenciement, l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi ni la paie de vacances. L'ordonnance du juge de première instance a été annulée et la décision du syndic de rejeter les réclamations a été rétablie.

4. Les questions en litige

17 Le présent pourvoi soulève une question: la cessation d'emploi résultant de la faillite de l'employeur donne-t-elle naissance à une réclamation prouvable en matière de faillite en vue d'obtenir une indemnité de licenciement et une indemnité de cessation d'emploi conformément aux dispositions de la LNE?

5. Analyse

18 L'obligation légale faite aux employeurs de verser une indemnité de licenciement ainsi qu'une indemnité de cessation d'emploi est régie respectivement par les art. 40 et 40*a* de la LNE. La Cour d'appel a fait observer que le libellé clair de ces dispositions donne à penser que les indemnités de licenciement et de cessation d'emploi doivent être versées seulement lorsque l'employeur licencie l'employé. Par exemple, le par. 40(1) commence par les mots suivants: «Aucun employeur ne doit the words, "Where . . . fifty or more employees have their employment terminated by an employer. . . ." Therefore, the question on which this appeal turns is whether, when bankruptcy occurs, the employment can be said to be terminated "by an employer".

19 The Court of Appeal answered this question in the negative, holding that, where an employer is petitioned into bankruptcy by a creditor, the employment of its employees is not terminated "by an employer", but rather by operation of law. Thus, the Court of Appeal reasoned that, in the circumstances of the present case, the ESA termination pay and severance pay provisions were not applicable and no obligations arose. In answer, the appellants submit that the phrase "terminated by an employer" is best interpreted as reflecting a distinction between involuntary and voluntary termination of employment. It is their position that this language was intended to relieve employers of their obligation to pay termination and severance pay when employees leave their jobs voluntarily. However, the appellants maintain that where an employee's employment is involuntarily terminated by reason of their employer's bankruptcy, this constitutes termination "by an employer" for the purpose of triggering entitlement to termination and severance pay under the ESA.

20 At the heart of this conflict is an issue of statutory interpretation. Consistent with the findings of the Court of Appeal, the plain meaning of the words of the provisions here in question appears to restrict the obligation to pay termination and severance pay to those employers who have actively terminated the employment of their employees. At first blush, bankruptcy does not fit comfortably into this interpretation. However, with respect, I believe this analysis is incomplete.

21 Although much has been written about the interpretation of legislation (see, e.g., Ruth Sullivan, Statutory Interpretation (1997); Ruth Sullivan, Driedger on the Construction of Statutes (3rd ed. 1994) (hereinafter "Construction of Statutes"); Pierre-André Côté, The Interpretation of Legisla- licencier un employé . . .» Le paragraphe 40*a*(1a) contient également les mots: «si [. . .] l'employeur licencie cinquante employés ou plus . . .» Par conséquent, la question dans le présent pourvoi est de savoir si l'on peut dire que l'employeur qui fait faillite a licencié ses employés.

La Cour d'appel a répondu à cette question par la négative, statuant que, lorsqu'un créancier présente une pétition en faillite contre un employeur, les employés ne sont pas licenciés par l'employeur mais par l'effet de la loi. La Cour d'appel a donc estimé que, dans les circonstances de l'espèce, les dispositions relatives aux indemnités de licenciement et de cessation d'emploi de la LNE n'étaient pas applicables et qu'aucune obligation n'avait pris naissance. Les appelants répliquent que les mots «l'employeur licencie» doivent être interprétés comme établissant une distinction entre la cessation d'emploi volontaire et la cessation d'emploi forcée. Ils soutiennent que ce libellé visait à dégager l'employeur de son obligation de verser des indemnités de licenciement et de cessation d'emploi lorsque l'employé quittait son emploi volontairement. Cependant, les appelants prétendent que la cessation d'emploi forcée résultant de la faillite de l'employeur est assimilable au licenciement effectué par l'employeur pour l'exercice du droit à une indemnité de licenciement et à une indemnité de cessation d'emploi prévu par la LNE.

Une question d'interprétation législative est au centre du présent litige. Selon les conclusions de la Cour d'appel, le sens ordinaire des mots utilisés dans les dispositions en cause paraît limiter l'obligation de verser une indemnité de licenciement et une indemnité de cessation d'emploi aux employeurs qui ont effectivement licencié leurs employés. À première vue, la faillite ne semble pas cadrer très bien avec cette interprétation. Toutefois, en toute déférence, je crois que cette analyse est incomplète.

Bien que l'interprétation législative ait fait couler beaucoup d'encre (voir par ex. Ruth Sullivan, Statutory Interpretation (1997); Ruth Sullivan, Driedger on the Construction of Statutes (3e éd. 1994) (ci-après «Construction of Statutes»); Pierre-André Côté, Interprétation des lois (2e éd.

tion in Canada (2nd ed. 1991)), Elmer Driedger in Construction of Statutes (2nd ed. 1983) best encapsulates the approach upon which I prefer to rely. He recognizes that statutory interpretation cannot be founded on the wording of the legislation alone. At p. 87 he states:

> Today there is only one principle or approach, namely, the words of an Act are to be read in their entire context and in their grammatical and ordinary sense harmoniously with the scheme of the Act, the object of the Act, and the intention of Parliament.

Recent cases which have cited the above passage with approval include: R. v. Hydro-Québec, [1997] 1 S.C.R. 213; Royal Bank of Canada v. Sparrow Electric Corp., [1997] 1 S.C.R. 411; Verdun v. Toronto-Dominion Bank, [1996] 3 S.C.R. 550; Friesen v. Canada, [1995] 3 S.C.R. 103.

1990)), Elmer Driedger dans son ouvrage intitulé Construction of Statutes (2e éd. 1983) résume le mieux la méthode que je privilégie. Il reconnaît que l'interprétation législative ne peut pas être fondée sur le seul libellé du texte de loi. À la p. 87, il dit:

> [TRADUCTION] Aujourd'hui il n'y a qu'un seul principe ou solution: il faut lire les termes d'une loi dans leur contexte global en suivant le sens ordinaire et grammatical qui s'harmonise avec l'esprit de la loi, l'objet de la loi et l'intention du législateur.

Parmi les arrêts récents qui ont cité le passage ci-dessus en l'approuvant, mentionnons: R. c. Hydro-Québec, [1997] 1 R.C.S. 213; Banque Royale du Canada c. Sparrow Electric Corp., [1997] 1 R.C.S. 411; Verdun c. Banque Toronto-Dominion, [1996] 3 R.C.S. 550; Friesen c. Canada, [1995] 3 R.C.S. 103.

I also rely upon s. 10 of the Interpretation Act, R.S.O. 1980, c. 219, which provides that every Act "shall be deemed to be remedial" and directs that every Act shall "receive such fair, large and liberal construction and interpretation as will best ensure the attainment of the object of the Act according to its true intent, meaning and spirit".

22 Je m'appuie également sur l'art. 10 de la Loi d'interprétation, L.R.O. 1980, ch. 219, qui prévoit que les lois «sont réputées apporter une solution de droit» et doivent «s'interpréter de la manière la plus équitable et la plus large qui soit pour garantir la réalisation de leur objet selon leurs sens, intention et esprit véritables».

Although the Court of Appeal looked to the plain meaning of the specific provisions in question in the present case, with respect, I believe that the court did not pay sufficient attention to the scheme of the ESA, its object or the intention of the legislature; nor was the context of the words in issue appropriately recognized. I now turn to a discussion of these issues.

23 Bien que la Cour d'appel ait examiné le sens ordinaire des dispositions en question dans le présent pourvoi, en toute déférence, je crois que la cour n'a pas accordé suffisamment d'attention à l'économie de la LNE, à son objet ni à l'intention du législateur; le contexte des mots en cause n'a pas non plus été pris en compte adéquatement. Je passe maintenant à l'analyse de ces questions.

In Machtinger v. HOJ Industries Ltd., [1992] 1 S.C.R. 986, at p. 1002, the majority of this Court recognized the importance that our society accords to employment and the fundamental role that it has assumed in the life of the individual. The manner in which employment can be terminated was said to be equally important (see also Wallace v. United Grain Growers Ltd., [1997] 3 S.C.R. 701). It was in this context that the majority in Machtinger described, at p. 1003, the object of the ESA as being the protection of "... the interests of employees by requiring employers to comply with certain minimum standards, including minimum periods of notice of termination". Accordingly, the majority concluded, at p. 1003, that, ". . . an interpretation of the Act which encourages employers to comply with the minimum requirements of the Act, and so extends its protections to as many employees as possible, is to be favoured over one that does not".

24 Dans l'arrêt Machtinger c. HOJ Industries Ltd., [1992] 1 R.C.S. 986, à la p. 1002, notre Cour, à la majorité, a reconnu l'importance que notre société accorde à l'emploi et le rôle fondamental qu'il joue dans la vie de chaque individu. La manière de mettre fin à un emploi a été considérée comme étant tout aussi importante (voir également Wallace c. United Grain Growers Ltd., [1997] 3 R.C.S. 701). C'est dans ce contexte que les juges majoritaires dans l'arrêt Machtinger ont défini, à la p. 1003, l'objet de la LNE comme étant la protection «. . . [d]es intérêts des employés en exigeant que

25 The objects of the termination and severance pay provisions themselves are also broadly premised upon the need to protect employees. Section 40 of the ESA requires employers to give their employees reasonable notice of termination based upon length of service. One of the primary purposes of this notice period is to provide employees with an opportunity to take preparatory measures and seek alternative employment. It follows that s. 40(7)(a), which provides for termination pay in lieu of notice when an employer has failed to give the required statutory notice, is intended to "cushion" employees against the adverse effects of economic dislocation likely to follow from the absence of an opportunity to search for alternative employment. (Innis Christie, Geoffrey England and Brent Cotter, Employment Law in Canada (2nd ed. 1993), at pp. 572-81.)

26 Similarly, s. 40*a*, which provides for severance pay, acts to compensate long-serving employees for their years of service and investment in the employer's business and for the special losses they suffer when their employment terminates. In R. v. TNT Canada Inc. (1996), 27 O.R. (3d) 546, Robins J.A. quoted with approval at pp. 556-57 from the words of D. D. Carter in the course of an employment standards determination in Re Telegram Publishing Co. v. Zwelling (1972), 1 L.A.C. (2d) 1 (Ont.), at p. 19, wherein he described the role of severance pay as follows:

Severance pay recognizes that an employee does make an investment in his employer's business — the extent of this investment being directly related to the length of les employeurs respectent certaines normes minimales, notamment en ce qui concerne les périodes minimales de préavis de licenciement». Par conséquent, les juges majoritaires ont conclu, à la p. 1003, qu'«. . . une interprétation de la Loi qui encouragerait les employeurs à se conformer aux exigences minimales de celle-ci et qui ferait ainsi bénéficier de sa protection le plus grand nombre d'employés possible est à préférer à une interprétation qui n'a pas un tel effet».

L'objet des dispositions relatives à l'indemnité de licenciement et à l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi elles-mêmes repose de manière générale sur la nécessité de protéger les employés. L'article 40 de la LNE oblige les employeurs à donner à leurs employés un préavis de licenciement raisonnable en fonction des années de service. L'une des fins principales de ce préavis est de donner aux employés la possibilité de se préparer en cherchant un autre emploi. Il s'ensuit que l'al. 40(7)a), qui prévoit une indemnité de licenciement tenant lieu de préavis lorsqu'un employeur n'a pas donné le préavis requis par la loi, vise à protéger les employés des effets néfastes du bouleversement économique que l'absence d'une possibilité de chercher un autre emploi peut entraîner. (Innis Christie, Geoffrey England et Brent Cotter, Employment Law in Canada (2e éd. 1993), aux pp. 572 à 581.)

De même, l'art. 40*a*, qui prévoit l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi, vient indemniser les employés ayant beaucoup d'années de service pour ces années investies dans l'entreprise de l'employeur et pour les pertes spéciales qu'ils subissent lorsqu'ils sont licenciés. Dans l'arrêt R. c. TNT Canada Inc. (1996), 27 O.R. (3d) 546, le juge Robins a cité en les approuvant, aux pp. 556 et 557, les propos tenus par D. D. Carter dans le cadre d'une décision rendue en matière de normes d'emploi dans Re Telegram Publishing Co. c. Zwelling (1972), 1 L.A.C. (2d) 1 (Ont.), à la p. 19, où il a décrit ainsi le rôle de l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi:

[TRADUCTION] L'indemnité de cessation d'emploi reconnaît qu'un employé fait un investissement dans l'entreprise de son employeur — l'importance de cet investis-

the employee's service. This investment is the seniority that the employee builds up during his years of service. . . . Upon termination of the employment relationship, this investment of years of service is lost, and the employee must start to rebuild seniority at another place of work. The severance pay, based on length of service, is some compensation for this loss of investment.

sement étant liée directement à la durée du service de l'employé. Cet investissement est l'ancienneté que l'employé acquiert durant ses années de service [. . .] À la fin de la relation entre l'employeur et l'employé, cet investissement est perdu et l'employé doit recommencer à acquérir de l'ancienneté dans un autre lieu de travail. L'indemnité de cessation d'emploi, fondée sur les années de service, compense en quelque sorte cet investissement perdu.

In my opinion, the consequences or effects which result from the Court of Appeal's interpretation of ss. 40 and 40*a* of the ESA are incompatible with both the object of the Act and with the object of the termination and severance pay provisions themselves. It is a well established principle of statutory interpretation that the legislature does not intend to produce absurd consequences. According to Côté, supra, an interpretation can be considered absurd if it leads to ridiculous or frivolous consequences, if it is extremely unreasonable or inequitable, if it is illogical or incoherent, or if it is incompatible with other provisions or with the object of the legislative enactment (at pp. 378-80). Sullivan echoes these comments noting that a label of absurdity can be attached to interpretations which defeat the purpose of a statute or render some aspect of it pointless or futile (Sullivan, Construction of Statutes, supra, at p. 88).

27

À mon avis, les conséquences ou effets qui résultent de l'interprétation que la Cour d'appel a donnée des art. 40 et 40*a* de la LNE ne sont compatibles ni avec l'objet de la Loi ni avec l'objet des dispositions relatives à l'indemnité de licenciement et à l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi elles-mêmes. Selon un principe bien établi en matière d'interprétation législative, le législateur ne peut avoir voulu des conséquences absurdes. D'après Côté, op. cit., on qualifiera d'absurde une interprétation qui mène à des conséquences ridicules ou futiles, si elle est extrêmement déraisonnable ou inéquitable, si elle est illogique ou incohérente, ou si elle est incompatible avec d'autres dispositions ou avec l'objet du texte législatif (aux pp. 430 à 432). Sullivan partage cet avis en faisant remarquer qu'on peut qualifier d'absurdes les interprétations qui vont à l'encontre de la fin d'une loi ou en rendent un aspect inutile ou futile (Sullivan, Construction of Statutes, op. cit., à la p. 88).

The trial judge properly noted that, if the ESA termination and severance pay provisions do not apply in circumstances of bankruptcy, those employees "fortunate" enough to have been dismissed the day before a bankruptcy would be entitled to such payments, but those terminated on the day the bankruptcy becomes final would not be so entitled. In my view, the absurdity of this consequence is particularly evident in a unionized workplace where seniority is a factor in determining the order of lay-off. The more senior the employee, the larger the investment he or she has made in the employer and the greater the entitlement to termination and severance pay. However, it is the more senior personnel who are likely to be employed up

28

Le juge de première instance a noté à juste titre que, si les dispositions relatives à l'indemnité de licenciement et à l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi de la LNE ne s'appliquent pas en cas de faillite, les employés qui auraient eu la «chance» d'être congédiés la veille de la faillite auraient droit à ces indemnités, alors que ceux qui perdraient leur emploi le jour où la faillite devient définitive n'y auraient pas droit. À mon avis, l'absurdité de cette conséquence est particulièrement évidente dans les milieux syndiqués où les mises à pied se font selon l'ancienneté. Plus un employé a de l'ancienneté, plus il a investi dans l'entreprise de l'employeur et plus son droit à une indemnité de licenciement et à une indemnité de cessation d'emploi est fondé. Pourtant, c'est le personnel ayant le plus d'ancienneté qui risque de travailler until the time of the bankruptcy and who would thereby lose their entitlements to these payments.

29 If the Court of Appeal's interpretation of the termination and severance pay provisions is correct, it would be acceptable to distinguish between employees merely on the basis of the timing of their dismissal. It seems to me that such a result would arbitrarily deprive some employees of a means to cope with the economic dislocation caused by unemployment. In this way the protections of the ESA would be limited rather than extended, thereby defeating the intended working of the legislation. In my opinion, this is an unreasonable result.

30 In addition to the termination and severance pay provisions, both the appellants and the respondent relied upon various other sections of the ESA to advance their arguments regarding the intention of the legislature. In my view, although the majority of these sections offer little interpretive assistance, one transitional provision is particularly instructive. In 1981, s. 2(1) of the ESAA introduced s. 40*a*, the severance pay provision, to the ESA. Section 2(2) deemed that provision to come into force on January 1, 1981. Section 2(3), the transitional provision in question provided as follows:

2. . . .

(3) Section 40*a* of the said Act does not apply to an employer who became a bankrupt or an insolvent person within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act (Canada) and whose assets have been distributed among his creditors or to an employer whose proposal within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act (Canada) has been accepted by his creditors in the period from and including the 1st day of January, 1981, to and including the day immediately before the day this Act receives Royal Assent.

31 The Court of Appeal found that it was neither necessary nor appropriate to determine the intention of the legislature in enacting this provisional jusqu'au moment de la faillite et de perdre ainsi le droit d'obtenir ces indemnités.

Si l'interprétation que la Cour d'appel a donnée des dispositions relatives à l'indemnité de licenciement et de l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi est correcte, il serait acceptable d'établir une distinction entre les employés en se fondant simplement sur la date de leur congédiement. Il me semble qu'un tel résultat priverait arbitrairement certains employés d'un moyen de faire face au bouleversement économique causé par le chômage. De cette façon, les protections de la LNE seraient limitées plutôt que d'être étendues, ce qui irait à l'encontre de l'objectif que voulait atteindre le législateur. À mon avis, c'est un résultat déraisonnable.

En plus des dispositions relatives à l'indemnité de licenciement et de l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi, tant les appelants que l'intimée ont invoqué divers autres articles de la LNE pour appuyer les arguments avancés au sujet de l'intention du législateur. Selon moi, bien que la plupart de ces dispositions ne soient d'aucune utilité en ce qui concerne l'interprétation, il est une disposition transitoire particulièrement révélatrice. En 1981, le par. 2(1) de l'ESAA a introduit l'art. 40*a*, la disposition relative à l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi. En application du par. 2(2), cette disposition entrait en vigueur le 1er janvier 1981. Le paragraphe 2(3), la disposition transitoire en question, était ainsi conçue:

[TRADUCTION]

2. . . .

(3) L'article 40*a* de la loi ne s'applique pas à l'employeur qui a fait faillite ou est devenu insolvable au sens de la Loi sur la faillite (Canada) et dont les biens ont été distribués à ses créanciers ou à l'employeur dont la proposition au sens de la Loi sur la faillite (Canada) a été acceptée par ses créanciers pendant la période qui commence le 1er janvier 1981 et se termine le jour précédant immédiatement celui où la présente loi a reçu la sanction royale inclusivement.

La Cour d'appel a conclu qu'il n'était ni nécessaire ni approprié de déterminer l'intention qu'avait le législateur en adoptant ce paragraphe subsection. Nevertheless, the court took the position that the intention of the legislature as evidenced by the introductory words of ss. 40 and 40*a* was clear, namely, that termination by reason of a bankruptcy will not trigger the severance and termination pay obligations of the ESA. The court held that this intention remained unchanged by the introduction of the transitional provision. With respect, I do not agree with either of these findings. Firstly, in my opinion, the use of legislative history as a tool for determining the intention of the legislature is an entirely appropriate exercise and one which has often been employed by this Court (see, e.g., R. v. Vasil, [1981] 1 S.C.R. 469, at p. 487; Paul v. The Queen, [1982] 1 S.C.R. 621, at pp. 635, 653 and 660). Secondly, I believe that the transitional provision indicates that the Legislature intended that termination and severance pay obligations should arise upon an employers' bankruptcy.

provisoire. Néanmoins, la cour a estimé que l'intention du législateur, telle qu'elle ressort des premiers mots des art. 40 et 40*a*, était claire, à savoir que la cessation d'emploi résultant de la faillite ne fera pas naître l'obligation de verser l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi et l'indemnité de licenciement qui est prévue par la LNE. La cour a jugé que cette intention restait inchangée à la suite de l'adoption de la disposition transitoire. Je ne puis souscrire ni à l'une ni à l'autre de ces conclusions. En premier lieu, à mon avis, l'examen de l'historique législatif pour déterminer l'intention du législateur est tout à fait approprié et notre Cour y a eu souvent recours (voir, par ex., R. c. Vasil, [1981] 1 R.C.S. 469, à la p. 487; Paul c. La Reine, [1982] 1 R.C.S. 621, aux pp. 635, 653 et 660). En second lieu, je crois que la disposition transitoire indique que le législateur voulait que l'obligation de verser une indemnité de licenciement et une indemnité de cessation d'emploi prenne naissance lorsque l'employeur fait faillite.

In my view, by extending an exemption to employers who became bankrupt and lost control of their assets between the coming into force of the amendment and its receipt of royal assent, s. 2(3) necessarily implies that the severance pay obligation does in fact extend to bankrupt employers. It seems to me that, if this were not the case, no readily apparent purpose would be served by this transitional provision.

32 À mon avis, en raison de l'exemption accordée au par. 2(3) aux employeurs qui ont fait faillite et ont perdu la maîtrise de leurs biens entre le moment où les modifications sont entrées en vigueur et celui où elles ont reçu la sanction royale, il faut nécessairement que les employeurs faisant faillite soient de fait assujettis à l'obligation de verser une indemnité de cessation d'emploi. Selon moi, si tel n'était pas le cas, cette disposition transitoire semblerait ne poursuivre aucune fin.

I find support for my conclusion in the decision of Saunders J. in Royal Dressed Meats Inc., supra. Having reviewed s. 2(3) of the ESAA, he commented as follows (at p. 89):

33 Je m'appuie sur la décision rendue par le juge Saunders dans l'affaire Royal Dressed Meats Inc., précitée. Après avoir examiné le par. 2(3) de l'ESAA, il fait l'observation suivante (à la p. 89):

> . . . any doubt about the intention of the Ontario Legislature has been put to rest, in my opinion, by the transitional provision which introduced severance payments into the E.S.A. . . . it seems to me an inescapable inference that the legislature intended liability for severance payments to arise on a bankruptcy. That intention would, in my opinion, extend to termination payments which are similar in character.

> [TRADUCTION] . . . tout doute au sujet de l'intention du législateur ontarien est dissipé, à mon avis, par la disposition transitoire qui introduit les indemnités de cessation d'emploi dans la L.N.E. [. . .] Il me semble qu'il faut conclure que le législateur voulait que l'obligation de verser des indemnités de cessation d'emploi prenne naissance au moment de la faillite. Selon moi, cette intention s'étend aux indemnités de licenciement qui sont de nature analogue.

This interpretation is also consistent with statements made by the Minister of Labour at the time

34 Cette interprétation est également compatible avec les déclarations faites par le ministre du he introduced the 1981 amendments to the ESA. With regard to the new severance pay provision he stated:

> The circumstances surrounding a closure will govern the applicability of the severance pay legislation in some defined situations. For example, a bankrupt or insolvent firm will still be required to pay severance pay to employees to the extent that assets are available to satisfy their claims.
>
> . . .
>
> . . . the proposed severance pay measures will, as I indicated earlier, be retroactive to January 1 of this year. That retroactive provision, however, will not apply in those cases of bankruptcy and insolvency where the assets have already been distributed or where an agreement on a proposal to creditors has already been reached.

(Legislature of Ontario Debates, 1st sess., 32nd Parl., June 4, 1981, at pp. 1236-37.)

Moreover, in the legislative debates regarding the proposed amendments the Minister stated:

> For purposes of retroactivity, severance pay will not apply to bankruptcies under the Bankruptcy Act where assets have been distributed. However, once this act receives royal assent, employees in bankruptcy closures will be covered by the severance pay provisions.

(Legislature of Ontario Debates, 1st sess., 32nd Parl., June 16, 1981, at p. 1699.)

35 Although the frailties of Hansard evidence are many, this Court has recognized that it can play a limited role in the interpretation of legislation. Writing for the Court in R. v. Morgentaler, [1993] 3 S.C.R. 463, at p. 484, Sopinka J. stated:

> . . . until recently the courts have balked at admitting evidence of legislative debates and speeches. . . . The main criticism of such evidence has been that it cannot represent the "intent" of the legislature, an incorporeal body, but that is equally true of other forms of legisla-

Travail au moment de l'introduction des modifications apportées à la LNE en 1981. Au sujet de la nouvelle disposition relative à l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi, il a dit ce qui suit:

> [TRADUCTION] Les circonstances entourant une fermeture régissent l'applicabilité de la législation en matière d'indemnité de cessation d'emploi dans certains cas précis. Par exemple, une société insolvable ou en faillite sera encore tenue de verser l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi aux employés dans la mesure où il y a des biens pour acquitter leurs réclamations.
>
> . . .
>
> . . . les mesures proposées en matière d'indemnité de cessation d'emploi seront, comme je l'ai mentionné précédemment, rétroactives au 1er janvier de cette année. Cette disposition rétroactive, toutefois, ne s'appliquera pas en matière de faillite et d'insolvabilité dans les cas où les biens ont déjà été distribués ou lorsqu'une entente est déjà intervenue au sujet de la proposition des créanciers.

(Legislature of Ontario Debates, 1re sess., 32e Lég., 4 juin 1981, aux pp. 1236 et 1237.)

De plus, au cours des débats parlementaires sur les modifications proposées, le ministre a déclaré:

> [TRADUCTION] En ce qui a trait à la rétroactivité, l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi ne s'appliquera pas aux faillites régies par la Loi sur la faillite lorsque les biens ont été distribués. Cependant, lorsque la présente loi aura reçu la sanction royale, les employés visés par des fermetures entraînées par des faillites seront visés par les dispositions relatives à l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi.

(Legislature of Ontario Debates, 1re sess., 32e Lég., 16 juin 1981, à la p. 1699.)

Malgré les nombreuses lacunes de la preuve des débats parlementaires, notre Cour a reconnu qu'elle peut jouer un rôle limité en matière d'interprétation législative. S'exprimant au nom de la Cour dans l'arrêt R. c. Morgentaler, [1993] 3 R.C.S. 463, à la p. 484, le juge Sopinka a dit:

> . . . jusqu'à récemment, les tribunaux ont hésité à admettre la preuve des débats et des discours devant le corps législatif. [. . .] La principale critique dont a été l'objet ce type de preuve a été qu'elle ne saurait représenter «l'intention» de la législature, personne morale, mais tive history. Provided that the court remains mindful of the limited reliability and weight of Hansard evidence, it should be admitted as relevant to both the background and the purpose of legislation.

c'est aussi vrai pour d'autres formes de contexte d'adoption d'une loi. À la condition que le tribunal n'oublie pas que la fiabilité et le poids des débats parlementaires sont limités, il devrait les admettre comme étant pertinents quant au contexte et quant à l'objet du texte législatif.

Finally, with regard to the scheme of the legislation, since the ESA is a mechanism for providing minimum benefits and standards to protect the interests of employees, it can be characterized as benefits-conferring legislation. As such, according to several decisions of this Court, it ought to be interpreted in a broad and generous manner. Any doubt arising from difficulties of language should be resolved in favour of the claimant (see, e.g., Abrahams v. Attorney General of Canada, [1983] 1 S.C.R. 2, at p. 10; Hills v. Canada (Attorney General), [1988] 1 S.C.R. 513, at p. 537). It seems to me that, by limiting its analysis to the plain meaning of ss. 40 and 40*a* of the ESA, the Court of Appeal adopted an overly restrictive approach that is inconsistent with the scheme of the Act.

36 Enfin, en ce qui concerne l'économie de la loi, puisque la LNE constitue un mécanisme prévoyant des normes et des avantages minimaux pour protéger les intérêts des employés, on peut la qualifier de loi conférant des avantages. À ce titre, conformément à plusieurs arrêts de notre Cour, elle doit être interprétée de façon libérale et généreuse. Tout doute découlant de l'ambiguïté des textes doit se résoudre en faveur du demandeur (voir, par ex., Abrahams c. Procureur général du Canada, [1983] 1 R.C.S. 2, à la p. 10; Hills c. Canada (Procureur général), [1988] 1 R.C.S. 513, à la p. 537). Il me semble que, en limitant cette analyse au sens ordinaire des art. 40 et 40*a* de la LNE, la Cour d'appel a adopté une méthode trop restrictive qui n'est pas compatible avec l'économie de la Loi.

The Court of Appeal's reasons relied heavily upon the decision in Malone Lynch, supra. In Malone Lynch, Houlden J. held that s. 13, the group termination provision of the former ESA, R.S.O. 1970, c. 147, and the predecessor to s. 40 at issue in the present case, was not applicable where termination resulted from the bankruptcy of the employer. Section 13(2) of the ESA then in force provided that, if an employer wishes to terminate the employment of 50 or more employees, the employer must give notice of termination for the period prescribed in the regulations, "and until the expiry of such notice the terminations shall not take effect". Houlden J. reasoned that termination of employment through bankruptcy could not trigger the termination payment provision, as employees in this situation had not received the written notice required by the statute, and therefore could not be said to have been terminated in accordance with the Act.

37 La Cour d'appel s'est fortement appuyée sur la décision rendue dans Malone Lynch, précité. Dans cette affaire, le juge Houlden a conclu que l'art. 13, la disposition relative aux mesures de licenciement collectif de l'ancienne ESA, R.S.O. 1970, ch. 147, qui a été remplacée par l'art. 40 en cause dans le présent pourvoi, n'était pas applicable lorsque la cessation d'emploi résultait de la faillite de l'employeur. Le paragraphe 13(2) de l'ESA alors en vigueur prévoyait que, si un employeur voulait licencier 50 employés ou plus, il devait donner un préavis de licenciement dont la durée était prévue par règlement [TRADUCTION] «et les licenciements ne prenaient effet qu'à l'expiration de ce délai». Le juge Houlden a conclu que la cessation d'emploi résultant de la faillite ne pouvait entraîner l'application de la disposition relative à l'indemnité de licenciement car les employés placés dans cette situation n'avaient pas reçu le préavis écrit requis par la loi et ne pouvaient donc pas être considérés comme ayant été licenciés conformément à la Loi.

Two years after Malone Lynch was decided, the 1970 ESA termination pay provisions were amended by The Employment Standards Act, 1974, S.O. 1974, c. 112. As amended, s. 40(7) of the 1974 ESA eliminated the requirement that notice be given before termination can take effect. This provision makes it clear that termination pay is owing where an employer fails to give notice of termination and that employment terminates irrespective of whether or not proper notice has been given. Therefore, in my opinion it is clear that the Malone Lynch decision turned on statutory provisions which are materially different from those applicable in the instant case. It seems to me that Houlden J.'s holding goes no further than to say that the provisions of the 1970 ESA have no application to a bankrupt employer. For this reason, I do not accept the Malone Lynch decision as persuasive authority for the Court of Appeal's findings. I note that the courts in Royal Dressed Meats, supra, and British Columbia (Director of Employment Standards) v. Eland Distributors Ltd. (Trustee of) (1996), 40 C.B.R. (3d) 25 (B.C.S.C.), declined to rely upon Malone Lynch based upon similar reasoning.

38 Deux ans après que la décision Malone Lynch eut été prononcée, les dispositions relatives à l'in-

demnité de licenciement de l'ESA de 1970 ont été modifiées par The Employment Standards Act, 1974, S.O. 1974, ch. 112. Dans la version modifiée du par. 40(7) de l'ESA de 1974, il n'était plus nécessaire qu'un préavis soit donné avant que le licenciement puisse produire ses effets. Cette disposition vient préciser que l'indemnité de licenciement doit être versée lorsqu'un employeur omet de donner un préavis de licenciement et qu'il y a cessation d'emploi, indépendamment du fait qu'un préavis régulier ait été donné ou non. Il ne fait aucun doute selon moi que la décision Malone Lynch portait sur des dispositions législatives très différentes de celles qui sont applicables en l'espèce. Il me semble que la décision du juge Houlden a une portée limitée, soit que les dispositions de l'ESA de 1970 ne s'appliquent pas à un employeur en faillite. Pour cette raison, je ne reconnais à la décision Malone Lynch aucune valeur persuasive qui puisse étayer les conclusions de la Cour d'appel. Je souligne que les tribunaux dans Royal Dressed Meats, précité, et British Columbia (Director of Employment Standards) c. Eland Distributors Ltd. (Trustee of) (1996), 40 C.B.R. (3d) 25 (C.S.C.-B.), ont refusé de se fonder sur Malone Lynch en invoquant des raisons similaires.

39 The Court of Appeal also relied upon Re Kemp Products Ltd., supra, for the proposition that although the employment relationship will terminate upon an employer's bankruptcy, this does not constitute a "dismissal". I note that this case did not arise under the provisions of the ESA. Rather, it turned on the interpretation of the term "dismissal" in what the complainant alleged to be an employment contract. As such, I do not accept it as authoritative jurisprudence in the circumstances of this case. For the reasons discussed above, I also disagree with the Court of Appeal's reliance on Mills-Hughes v. Raynor (1988), 63 O.R. (2d) 343 (C.A.), which cited the decision in Malone Lynch, supra, with approval.

La Cour d'appel a également invoqué Re Kemp Products Ltd., précité, à l'appui de la proposition selon laquelle, bien que la relation entre l'employeur et l'employé se termine à la faillite de l'employeur, cela ne constitue pas un «congédiement». Je note que ce litige n'est pas fondé sur les dispositions de la LNE. Il portait plutôt sur l'interprétation du terme «congédiement» dans le cadre de ce que le plaignant alléguait être un contrat de travail. J'estime donc que cette décision ne fait pas autorité dans les circonstances de l'espèce. Pour les raisons exposées ci-dessus, je ne puis accepter non plus que la Cour d'appel se fonde sur l'arrêt Mills-Hughes c. Raynor (1988), 63 O.R. (2d) 343 (C.A.), qui citait la décision Malone Lynch, précitée, et l'approuvait.

40 As I see the matter, when the express words of ss. 40 and 40*a* of the ESA are examined in their entire context, there is ample support for the con-

Selon moi, l'examen des termes exprès des art. 40 et 40*a* de la LNE, replacés dans leur contexte global, permet largement de conclure que les clusion that the words "terminated by the employer" must be interpreted to include termination resulting from the bankruptcy of the employer. Using the broad and generous approach to interpretation appropriate for benefits-conferring legislation, I believe that these words can reasonably bear that construction (see R. v. Z. (D.A.), [1992] 2 S.C.R. 1025). I also note that the intention of the Legislature as evidenced in s. 2(3) of the ESAA, clearly favours this interpretation. Further, in my opinion, to deny employees the right to claim ESA termination and severance pay where their termination has resulted from their employer's bankruptcy, would be inconsistent with the purpose of the termination and severance pay provisions and would undermine the object of the ESA, namely, to protect the interests of as many employees as possible.

mots «l'employeur licencie» doivent être interprétés de manière à inclure la cessation d'emploi résultant de la faillite de l'employeur. Adoptant l'interprétation libérale et généreuse qui convient aux lois conférant des avantages, j'estime que ces mots peuvent raisonnablement recevoir cette interprétation (voir R. c. Z. (D.A.), [1992] 2 R.C.S. 1025). Je note également que l'intention du législateur, qui ressort du par. 2(3) de l'ESAA, favorise clairement cette interprétation. Au surplus, à mon avis, priver des employés du droit de réclamer une indemnité de licenciement et une indemnité de cessation d'emploi en application de la LNE lorsque la cessation d'emploi résulte de la faillite de leur employeur serait aller à l'encontre des fins visées par les dispositions relatives à l'indemnité de licenciement et à l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi et minerait l'objet de la LNE, à savoir protéger les intérêts du plus grand nombre d'employés possible.

In my view, the impetus behind the termination of employment has no bearing upon the ability of the dismissed employee to cope with the sudden economic dislocation caused by unemployment. As all dismissed employees are equally in need of the protections provided by the ESA, any distinction between employees whose termination resulted from the bankruptcy of their employer and those who have been terminated for some other reason would be arbitrary and inequitable. Further, I believe that such an interpretation would defeat the true meaning, intent and spirit of the ESA. Therefore, I conclude that termination as a result of an employer's bankruptcy does give rise to an unsecured claim provable in bankruptcy pursuant to s. 121 of the BA for termination and severance pay in accordance with ss. 40 and 40*a* of the ESA. Because of this conclusion, I do not find it necessary to address the alternative finding of the trial judge as to the applicability of s. 7(5) of the ESA.

41 À mon avis, les raisons qui motivent la cessation d'emploi n'ont aucun rapport avec la capacité de l'employé congédié de faire face au bouleversement économique soudain causé par le chômage. Comme tous les employés congédiés ont également besoin des protections prévues par la LNE, toute distinction établie entre les employés qui perdent leur emploi en raison de la faillite de leur employeur et ceux qui ont été licenciés pour quelque autre raison serait arbitraire et inéquitable. De plus, je pense qu'une telle interprétation irait à l'encontre des sens, intention et esprit véritables de la LNE. Je conclus donc que la cessation d'emploi résultant de la faillite de l'employeur donne effectivement naissance à une réclamation non garantie prouvable en matière de faillite au sens de l'art. 121 de la LF en vue d'obtenir une indemnité de licenciement et une indemnité de cessation d'emploi en conformité avec les art. 40 et 40*a* de la LNE. En raison de cette conclusion, j'estime inutile d'examiner l'autre conclusion tirée par le juge de première instance quant à l'applicabilité du par. 7(5) de la LNE.

I note that subsequent to the Rizzo bankruptcy, the termination and severance pay provisions of the ESA underwent another amendment. Sections

42 Je fais remarquer qu'après la faillite de Rizzo, les dispositions relatives à l'indemnité de licenciement et à l'indemnité de cessation d'emploi de la

74(1) and 75(1) of the Labour Relations and Employment Statute Law Amendment Act, 1995, S.O. 1995, c. 1, amend those provisions so that they now expressly provide that where employment is terminated by operation of law as a result of the bankruptcy of the employer, the employer will be deemed to have terminated the employment. However, s. 17 of the Interpretation Act directs that, "[t]he repeal or amendment of an Act shall be deemed not to be or to involve any declaration as to the previous state of the law". As a result, I note that the subsequent change in the legislation has played no role in determining the present appeal.

LNE ont été modifiées à nouveau. Les paragraphes 74(1) et 75(1) de la Loi de 1995 modifiant des lois en ce qui concerne les relations de travail et l'emploi, L.O. 1995, ch. 1, ont apporté des modifications à ces dispositions qui prévoient maintenant expressément que, lorsque la cessation d'emploi résulte de l'effet de la loi à la suite de la faillite de l'employeur, ce dernier est réputé avoir licencié ses employés. Cependant, comme l'art. 17 de la Loi d'interprétation dispose que «[l]'abrogation ou la modification d'une loi n'est pas réputée constituer ou impliquer une déclaration portant sur l'état antérieur du droit», je précise que la modification apportée subséquemment à la loi n'a eu aucune incidence sur la solution apportée au présent pourvoi.

6. Disposition and Costs

43 I would allow the appeal and set aside paragraph 1 of the order of the Court of Appeal. In lieu thereof, I would substitute an order declaring that Rizzo's former employees are entitled to make claims for termination pay (including vacation pay due thereon) and severance pay as unsecured creditors. As to costs, the Ministry of Labour led no evidence regarding what effort it made in notifying or securing the consent of the Rizzo employees before it discontinued its application for leave to appeal to this Court on their behalf. In light of these circumstances, I would order that the costs in this Court be paid to the appellant by the Ministry on a party-and-party basis. I would not disturb the orders of the courts below with respect to costs.

Appeal allowed with costs.

Solicitors for the appellants: Sack, Goldblatt, Mitchell, Toronto.

Solicitors for the respondent: Minden, Gross, Grafstein & Greenstein, Toronto.

Solicitor for the Ministry of Labour for the Province of Ontario, Employment Standards Branch: The Attorney General for Ontario, Toronto.

6. Dispositif et dépens

Je suis d'avis d'accueillir le pourvoi et d'annuler le premier paragraphe de l'ordonnance de la Cour d'appel. Je suis d'avis d'y substituer une ordonnance déclarant que les anciens employés de Rizzo ont le droit de présenter des demandes d'indemnité de licenciement (y compris la paie de vacances due) et d'indemnité de cessation d'emploi en tant que créanciers ordinaires. Quant aux dépens, le ministère du Travail n'ayant produit aucun élément de preuve concernant les efforts qu'il a faits pour informer les employés de Rizzo ou obtenir leur consentement avant de se désister de sa demande d'autorisation de pourvoi auprès de notre Cour en leur nom, je suis d'avis d'ordonner que les dépens devant notre Cour soient payés aux appelants par le ministère sur la base des frais entre parties. Je suis d'avis de ne pas modifier les ordonnances des juridictions inférieures à l'égard des dépens.

Pourvoi accueilli avec dépens.

Procureurs des appelants: Sack, Goldblatt, Mitchell, Toronto.

Procureurs de l'intimée: Minden, Gross, Grafstein & Greenstein, Toronto.

Procureur du ministère du Travail de la province d'Ontario, Direction des normes d'emploi: Le procureur général de l'Ontario, Toronto.

23

PUBLIC VERSION

Reference: Sears Canada Inc. v. Parfums Christian Dior Canada Inc. and Parfums Givenchy Canada Ltd., 2007 Comp. Trib. 6
File No.: CT-2007-001
Registry Document No.: 0030

IN THE MATTER OF the Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, as amended;

AND IN THE MATTER OF an application under section 103.1 of the Competition Act by Sears Canada Inc. for leave to make an application under section 75 of the Competition Act

B E T W E E N :

Sears Canada Inc.
(applicant)

and

Parfums Christian Dior Canada Inc. and
Parfums Givenchy Canada Ltd.
(respondents)

Date of hearing: 20070314
Presiding Judicial Member: Simpson J. (Chair)
Date of Reasons and Order: March 23, 2007
Reasons and Order signed by: Madam Justice S. Simpson

REASONS FOR ORDER AND ORDER DISMISSING AN APPLICATION FOR LEAVE UNDER SECTION 103.1 OF THE ACT

INTRODUCTION

[1] Sears Canada Inc. has applied under subsection 103.1(7) of the Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34 (the Act) for leave to commence an application for a supply order based on the Respondents' refusal to supply the Prestige Fragrances and Cosmetics described in paragraph 5 below.

THE PARTIES

[2] Sears Canada Inc. (Sears) is incorporated pursuant to the laws of Canada and is a multi-channel, multi-product retailer with a network that includes 196 company-owned stores, 178 dealer stores, more than 1850 catalogue merchandise pick-up locations and internet shopping.

[3] Parfums Christian Dior Canada Inc. (Dior) is a Quebec corporation and Parfums Givenchy Canada Ltd. (Givenchy) is incorporated pursuant to the laws of Ontario. Both Dior and Givenchy are wholly-owned subsidiaries of LVMH Louis Vuitton Möet Hennessy.

THE EVIDENCE

[4] Sears' evidence is provided in an affidavit sworn by Carol Wheatley on February 22, 2007 (the Wheatley Affidavit). She describes her present position and experience as follows:

> I am the General Merchandise Manager, Cosmetics and Accessories, of the Applicant, Sears Canada Inc. ("Sears"). I have held this position since August 1, 2004. In my position, I am responsible for developing and managing Sears' Cosmetics and Accessories categories. Prior to this, I held the position of Shop Co-ordinator, Cosmetics at Sears from June 1999 to August 2004. Prior to this, I was a Buyer, Fragrances, at T. Eaton & Co. Ltd. from May 1998 to June 1999, and for the thirteen years prior to that, I held various positions at Quadrant Cosmetics, Sanofi Beaute / Parfums Stern, and Germaine Monteil / Revlon, all of which are cosmetics manufacturers or distributors.

THE SUPPLY

[5] For at least fourteen years, Dior has supplied Sears with Dior fragrances, make-up and skin care products (collectively the Dior Products). They are currently sold in 104 of Sears' 196 company-owed department stores. In the same period, Givenchy supplied Sears with Givenchy fragrances (the Givenchy Products) which are sold in 121 of Sears' 196 company stores.

[6] The Dior and Givenchy Products are included in an industry product category known as Prestige Fragrances and Cosmetics. Counsel for Sears indicated that Dior make-up and skin care products are one of the fifteen to twenty brands of Prestige Cosmetics sold in Sears stores. He derived this information from an analysis of the exhibits to the Wheatley Affidavit.

[7] The sale of the Dior and Givenchy Products generates revenues for Sears of approximately sixteen million dollars per annum. Sears' annual revenue from the sale of all its products exceeds six billion dollars.

THE REFUSAL TO SUPPLY

[8] In December 2006, Givenchy advised Sears that it could not supply the Givenchy Products because of "shipping" issues. Then on January 18, 2007, both Dior and Givenchy indicated that they would no longer be doing business with Sears. In a letter of January 24, 2007, counsel for the Respondents terminated the supply of the Dior and Givenchy Products to Sears effective March 24, 2007. However, by agreement during this proceeding, that date was extended to May 4, 2007.

[9] Sears speculates that the refusal to supply was prompted by the discounts it offered in December 2006 on all cosmetics products. The Dior and Givenchy Products were included.

FACTS NOT IN DISPUTE

[10] Revenues from the sale of the Dior and Givenchy Products represent an insignificant percentage [CONFIDENTIAL] % of Sears' overall sales and a modest percentage [CONFIDENTIAL] % of Sears total cosmetics business. The Dior and Givenchy Products with sales of $ [CONFIDENTIAL] and $ [CONFIDENTIAL] in 2006 ranked [CONFIDENTIAL] and [CONFIDENTIAL] respectively among cosmetic lines sold in Sears stores. The five top selling cosmetic lines had sales of [CONFIDENTIAL] in 2006.

[11] Sears has been losing market share to The Bay in Prestige Fragrances and Cosmetics over the past three years.

[12] In addition to Sears, London Drugs has also been refused supply of the Dior and Givenchy Products. This means that only The Bay, Holt Renfrew and Shoppers Drug Mart will continue to distribute the Dior and Givenchy Products in Canada. The status of Jean Coutu as a distributor is uncertain but it is probable that it has also been refused supply.

[13] The Dior and Givenchy Products have not traditionally competed on the basis of price with other brands of Prestige Fragrances and Cosmetics.

THE ISSUES

[14] The following are the issues:

1. What is Sears' business for the purpose of this application?
2. Is there reason to believe that Sears is directly and substantially affected in its business?
3. Is there reason to believe that an order could be made under subsection 75(1) of the Act?

Issue 1 – Sears' Business

[15] The relevant language in subsection 103.1(7) and paragraph 75(1)(a) and subsection 75(2) of the Act is highlighted below:

| | |
|---|---|
| 103.1 (1) Any person may apply to the Tribunal for leave to make an application under section 75 or 77. The application for leave must be accompanied by an affidavit setting out the facts in support of the person's application under section 75 or 77. | 103.1 (1) Toute personne peut demander au Tribunal la permission de présenter une demande en vertu des articles 75 ou 77. La demande doit être accompagnée d'une déclaration sous serment faisant état des faits sur lesquels elle se fonde. |
| … | … |
| (7) The Tribunal may grant leave to make an application under section 75 or 77 if it has reason to believe that the applicant is directly and substantially affected in the applicants' business by any practice referred to in one of those sections that could be subject to an order under that section. | (7) Le Tribunal peut faire droit à une demande de permission de présenter une demande en vertu des articles 75 ou 77 s'il a des raisons de croire que l'auteur de la demande est directement et sensiblement gêné dans son entreprise en raison de l'existence de l'une ou l'autre des pratiques qui pourraient faire l'objet d'une ordonnance en vertu de ces articles. |
| 75. (1) Where, on application by the Commissioner or a person granted leave under section 103.1, the Tribunal finds that(a) a person is substantially affected in his business or is precluded from carrying on business due to his inability to obtain adequate supplies of a product anywhere in a market on usual trade terms, | 75. (1) Lorsque, à la demande du commissaire ou d'une personne autorisée en vertu de l'article 103.1, le Tribunal conclut :a) qu'une personne est sensiblement gênée dans son entreprise ou ne peut exploiter une entreprise du fait qu'elle est incapable de se procurer un produit de façon suffisante, où que ce soit sur un marché, aux conditions de commerce normales; |
| **… | **… |
| 75. (2) For the purposes of this section, an article is not a separate product in a market only because it is differentiated from other articles in its class by a trade-mark, proprietary name or the like, unless the article so differentiated occupies such a dominant position in that market as to substantially affect the ability of a person to carry on business in that class of articles unless that person has access to the article so differentiated.[my emphasis] | 75. (2) Pour l'application du présent article, n'est pas un produit distinct sur un marché donné l'article qui se distingue des autres articles de sa catégorie en raison uniquement de sa marque de commerce, de son nom de propriétaire ou d'une semblable particularité à moins que la position de cet article sur ce marché ne soit à ce point dominante qu'elle nuise sensiblement à la faculté d'une personne à exploiter une entreprise se rapportant à cette catégorie d'articles si elle n'a pas accès à l'article en question.[je souligne] |

The cases

[16] Sears says that this application for leave is significant because it raises for the first time the question of how the Tribunal will approach the issue of a substantial effect on a multi-product business when the refused items impact only one sector or segment of the overall business. However, this issue is not new. It has already been considered in five cases: Chrysler, three Pharmacy cases and Construx Engineering.

[17] In Director of Investigation & Research v. Chrysler Canada Ltd., 27 C.P.R. (3d) 1, aff'd 38 C.P.R. (3d) 25 (F.C.A.), the Director of Investigation and Research applied for an order under section 75 of the Act. The Tribunal was required to consider the language of paragraph 75(1)(a) of the Act and determine whether Mr. Brunet had been substantially affected in his business by Chrysler's (the Respondent's) refusal to supply Chrysler auto parts. The Director argued that the business at issue was the sale of Chrysler auto parts. Chrysler said that Mr. Brunet's overall auto parts export business was the business at issue and not just the segment involving Chrysler parts and that this broader interpretation was mandated by the definition of "business" in subsection 2(1) of the Act.

[18] The Tribunal found that Chrysler's refusal to supply had caused losses of approximately $200,000 in sales and $30,000 in gross profits and that those losses were substantial for Mr. Brunet's small business. The Tribunal concluded as follows "A majority of the Tribunal agrees with the submission of the respondent that the effect on the entire activity of which the refused supplies are a part should be used." The Tribunal then said that the question of whether the refused product accounted for a large percentage of the overall business was the first issue to be addressed. The Tribunal concluded that Mr. Brunet's overall business had been substantially affected by Chrysler's refusal to supply its auto parts.

[19] The three Pharmacy cases are 1177057 Ontario Inc. (c.o.b. as Broadview Pharmacy) v. Wyeth Canada Inc., 2004 Comp. Trib. 22, Paradise Pharmacy Inc. v. Novartis Pharmaceuticals Canada Inc., 2004 Comp. Trib. 21 and Broadview Pharmacy v. Pfizer Canada Inc., 2004 Comp. Trib. 23. These cases involved applications for leave under subsection 103.1(7) of the Act. In each case, the Tribunal considered whether the withdrawal of certain brands of prescription drugs had had a direct and substantial effect on the applicants' businesses. In each case, the pharmacy sold products other than prescription drugs and, in each case, Blais J. considered the loss of the prescription drug sales in the context of the pharmacy's overall business.

[20] Finally, in Construx Engineering Corporation v. General Motors of Canada, 2005 Comp. Trib. 21, the applicant for leave was a wholesale dealer and broker of transportation products including automobiles. GM had refused supply. The only evidence before the Tribunal was that in 2003, the sale of GM vehicles represented 67% of Construx' sales of new motor vehicles. Leave under subsection 103.1(7) of the Act was refused because there was no evidence to show the impact of GM's refusal to supply cars on the whole enterprise.

[21] Based on this review, I have concluded that the Tribunal has consistently taken the position that a substantial effect on a business is measured in the context of the entire business.

The parties' submissions

[22] Sears' written representations do not include a description of Sears' business for the purpose of this application for leave. However, in his oral submissions, counsel for Sears said that, for the purpose of this application, Sears' business is the sale of the Dior and Givenchy Products.

[23] The Respondents say that Sears' business is the operation of department stores.

[24] The Wheatley Affidavit provides the evidence which was referred to in support of Sears' position. Carol Wheatley says that:

- Consumers of Prestige Fragrances and Cosmetics are intensely brand loyal and, if their preferred product is not available at Sears, they will seek it elsewhere.
- The Dior and Givenchy Products are unique and are "not" or "often not" interchangeable with other brands of Prestige Fragrances and Cosmetics.
- The Dior and Givenchy Products are the subject of heavy investment in research and development which results in innovative and unique products.
- Dior Givenchy Products are advertised as status symbols in association with their brand names.
- Along with other brands of Prestige Fragrances and Cosmetics, the Dior and Givenchy Products are distributed on a selective basis.
- The Dior and Givenchy Products compete with other brands of Prestige Fragrances and Cosmetics on the basis of service and advertising with celebrity endorsements rather than on price.

[25] In my view, this evidence is not helpful. It might be apt if used to argue that the Dior and Givenchy Products are "products" as that term is used in paragraph 75(1)(a) of the Act but it does not assist in reaching a conclusion about the breadth of Sears' business for the purpose of subsection 103.1(7) of the Act.

The Language of the Act

[26] As shown in paragraph 15 above, subsection 75(2) of the Act refers to a person carrying on business in a class of articles. It is therefore my view that, if Parliament had intended the substantial effect in subsection 103.1(7) and paragraph 75(1)(a) of the Act to be on a business in a class of articles such as the Dior and Givenchy Products, it would have said so.

Conclusion - Issue 1

[27] In my view, both the Tribunal's earlier decisions and the plain language used in the subsection lead to the conclusion that Sears' entire business as a department store retailer is the business under consideration for the purposes of subsection 103.1(7) of the Act.

Issue 2 – Substantial Effect

[28] Sears suggested that the French version of paragraph 75(1)(a) which uses the phrase "sensiblement gênée dans son entreprise" indicates that a substantial effect need not be a very significant or important effect.

[29] In this regard, Sears relied on a Larousse French English Dictionary at page 834 to show that "sensiblement" means "appreciably", "noticeably" and "markedly" (Grand Dictionnaire Larousse Chambers, Anglais-Français Français-Anglais, s.v. "sensiblement"). Further, it noted that according to Collins Robert French-English Dictionary at page 328, "gêner" as a verb means to "bother", "disturb" or "be in the way" (Collins Robert French-English English French Dictionary, 2nd ed., s.v. "gêner").

[30] It is a principle of statutory interpretation that bilingual legislation may be construed by determining the meaning shared by the two versions of the provision. The Harrap French-English Dictionary defines "sensiblement" as "appreciable; perceptible; obviously; to a considerable extent" and the word is defined in Le Petit Robert as "d'une manière appreciable" (see Grand Harrap Dictionnaire français-anglais et anglais-français, s.v. "sensiblement" and Le Petit Robert, s.v. "sensiblement").

[31] In my view, there is nothing in the French language version of paragraph 75(1)(a) that detracts from the notion that substantial in the English carries meanings such as important and significant. This is the meaning shared by the two versions and is the one which has already been confirmed by this Tribunal in Chrysler where it said that "important" was an acceptable synonym for substantial.

[32] Sears says that the substantial effect on its business is the combined impact of the following:

(i) $16,000,000 in lost sales
(ii) Loss of cross-segment sales
(iii) A negative impact on Sears' ability to negotiate with and attract other brands of Prestige Fragrances and Cosmetics
(iv) A negative impact on Sears' ability to compete with The Bay
(v) A negative impact on Sears' marketing strategy and reputation in the marketplace

I will deal with each in turn.

(i) Lost Sales

[33] As described above, the Dior and Givenchy Products generate revenues of $16 million. However, some of the lost sales will be recouped when customers switch to other brands of Prestige Fragrances and Cosmetics at Sears, so the $16 million figure is slightly high. The Wheatley Affidavit acknowledges this in paragraph 61(a) which says:

> First, Sears will lose a significant portion of the $16 million in annual sales revenue from these products, because only a fraction of the customers will select an alternate brand. The remaining sales revenue will simply be lost as customers look for that product elsewhere.

In my view, whether the figure is $16 million or something less, it is insignificant when considered in the context of Sears' $6 billion overall business.

(ii) Cross-Segment Sales

[34] Sears says that the Dior and Givenchy Products generate $14 million in sales of other products at Sears. However, this figure is difficult to assess because it is not clear what portion of the sales were made to customers who were motivated to go to Sears to purchase a Dior or Givenchy Product and then purchased something else. Sales of that kind would be relevant as the Wheatley Affidavit acknowledges. However, sales to customers who went to Sears for other products and happened to purchase a Dior or Givenchy Product would not count as relevant cross-segment sales. Since the value of such sales is not in the evidence, the cross-segment sales figure of $14 million must be discounted by an unknown amount. Whatever that amount may be it will not, even when combined with lost sales, be substantial in the context of Sears' entire business.

(iii) Dealings with other Brands

[35] Sears says that it will suffer harm because the bargaining position and negotiating power of other brands of Prestige Fragrances and Cosmetics will be improved if Sears no longer carries the Dior and Givenchy Products. The Wheatley Affidavit states this as a fact but in my view it is mere speculation because there is no discussion that shows that it is based on the deponent's experience or on comments made by personnel who work for other brands. For this reason, I have given this assertion of alleged harm little weight.

(iv) Competition with The Bay

[36] The Wheatley Affidavit shows that Sears has lost market share in Prestige Fragrances and Cosmetics in the last three years. It decreased from 26.3% in 2004 to 23.5% in 2005 and to 23.0% in 2006. The concern is that the loss of the Dior and Givenchy Products will contribute to a continuation of the trend. As the loyal Dior and Givenchy customers are lost, Sears says they will be lost principally to The Bay and, while there is no evidence quantifying this effect, I accept Sears' submission.

(v) Sears Marketing

[37] Sears treats Prestige Fragrances and Cosmetics and Accessories as one of six destination categories in its department stores. The Wheatley Affidavit indicates that Sears must have the Dior and Givenchy Products to convey the message to the market that this destination is credible. Sears says that its reputation and market image will suffer if it does not carry a full range of Prestige Fragrances and Cosmetics. I accept that this could be true to some degree.

[38] Sears also uses Dior as the "central magnet" in its Toronto Eaton Centre and Vancouver Pacific Centre flagship stores. The evidence shows that Dior's display is one of the first things customers see when they use one of the ground floor entrances to the stores. As well, in the Calgary store and Rideau Centre store in Ottawa, Dior has branded displays in key locations. Sears estimates that it will cost $600,000 to remove and replace the Dior displays. However, the Respondents have said in paragraph 11 of their written representations that they are willing to cover reasonable costs associated with the removal or renovation of any related displays or shelving units.

Conclusion – Issue 2

[39] I have concluded that, when taken together, these submissions show that Sears will be directly affected by the Respondents' refusal to supply the Dior and Givenchy Products, but that the effect on Sears' department store business will not be substantial.

[40] Accordingly, applying the test for leave approved by the Federal Court of Appeal in Symbol Technologies ULC v. Barcode Systems Inc., [2004] F.C.A. 339 at paragraph 16, I am not satisfied that Sears has provided sufficient credible evidence to give rise to a bona fide belief that it may have been directly and substantially affected in its business by the Respondents' refusal to supply the Dior and Givenchy Products.

Issue 3 – A section 75 order

[41] In view of the previous conclusion, it is not necessary to consider whether the Tribunal could make an order under paragraphs 75(1)(a-e) of the Act.

FOR THESE REASONS, THE TRIBUNAL ORDERS THAT:

[42] The application for leave is hereby dismissed with costs.

DATED at Ottawa, this 23th day of March, 2007

SIGNED on behalf of the Tribunal by the Chairperson of the Tribunal.

(s) Sandra J. Simpson

APPEARANCES:

For the applicant:

Sears Canada Inc.:

John F. Rook, Q.C.
Derek J. Bell
Linda Visser

For the respondents:

Parfums Christian Dior Canada Inc.
Parfums Givenchy Canada Ltd.

James Orr
Jennifer Cantwell

24

A-39-04
2004 FCA 339

Symbol Technologies Canada ULC (Appellant) (Respondent)

v.

Barcode Systems Inc. (Respondent) (Applicant)

INDEXED AS: SYMBOL TECHNOLOGIES CANADA ULC v. BARCODE SYSTEMS INC. (F.C.A.)

Federal Court of Appeal, Richard C.J., Létourneau and Rothstein JJ.A.—Winnipeg, September 28; Ottawa, October 7, 2004.

Competition — Appeal from Competition Tribunal decision granting respondent leave to make Competition Act, s. 75 application for order requiring appellant to accept respondent as customer against appellant — Appellant, Canadian subsidiary of bar code equipment manufacturer, sells, distributes products in Canada — Respondent taking over distribution in Western Canada in about 1994 — Since 2003, appellant refusing to deal with respondent — Respondent bringing leave application pursuant to Act, s. 103.1(1), alleging appellant engaged in restrictive trade practice of "refusal to deal" within meaning of Act, s. 75 — Tribunal granting leave under Act, s. 103.1(7) — Appellant arguing Tribunal erred in granting leave because not taking into account all elements of refusal to deal set out in Act, s. 75(1) — As question of law not engaging particular expertise of Tribunal, correctness appropriate standard of review — Test for granting leave in s. 103.1(7) application set out in National Capital News Canada v. Canada (Speaker of the House of Commons) applied: whether sufficient credible evidence of what is alleged to give rise to bona fide belief by Tribunal that applicant directly, substantially affected in its business by reviewable restrictive trade practice that could be subject of Tribunal order under Act, s. 75 or 77 — That threshold for obtaining leave lower than balance of probabilities — All elements of reviewable practice of refusal to deal, set out in Act, s. 75(1), need to be addressed by Tribunal on leave application in order for it to reach conclusion as to whether practice alleged could be subject to order — Court resolving matter without remitting it to Tribunal — Evidence that respondent substantially affected in its business — Real controversy whether evidence refusal to deal likely to have adverse effect on competition in market (Act, s. 75(1)(e)) — Leave application not appropriate occasion to interpret Act, s. 75(1)(e) for first time — Benefit of any doubt working in favour of granting leave — Sufficient

A-39-04
2004 CAF 339

Symbol Technologies Canada ULC (appelante) (défenderesse)

c.

Barcode Systems Inc. (intimée) (demanderesse)

RÉPERTORIÉ: SYMBOL TECHNOLOGIES CANADA ULC c. BARCODE SYSTEMS INC. (C.A.F.)

Cour d'appel fédérale, juge en chef Richard, juges Létourneau et Rothstein, J.C.A.—Winnipeg, 28 septembre; Ottawa, 7 octobre 2004.

Concurrence — Appel d'une décision du Tribunal de la concurrence accordant à l'intimée la permission de présenter contre l'appelante une demande fondée sur l'art. 75 de la Loi sur la concurrence en vue d'obtenir une ordonnance enjoignant à celle-ci de l'accepter comme cliente — L'appelante, filiale canadienne d'un fabricant de lecteurs de codes à barres, vend et distribue des produits au Canada — Vers 1994, l'intimée a pris en charge la distribution dans l'Ouest canadien — Depuis 2003, l'appelante refuse de traiter avec l'intimée — L'intimée a présenté une demande de permission en vertu de l'art. 103.1(1) de la Loi, alléguant que l'appelante se livrait à une pratique restrictive du commerce, à savoir le refus de vendre au sens de l'art. 75 de la Loi — Le Tribunal a accordé la permission en vertu de l'art. 103.1(7) de la Loi — L'appelante soutient que le Tribunal a commis une erreur en accordant la permission parce qu'il n'a pas pris en considération tous les éléments du refus de vendre énoncés à l'art. 75(1) de la Loi — Comme les questions de droit ne font appel à aucune expertise particulière du Tribunal, la norme applicable est celle de la décision correcte — Le critère applicable pour faire droit à la demande de permission en vertu de l'art. 103.1(7), énoncé dans la décision National Capital News Canada c. Canada (Président de la Chambre des communes), s'appliquait: il faut se demander s'il existe suffisamment d'éléments de preuve crédibles établissant le bien-fondé des allégations pour que le Tribunal puisse croire de bonne foi que le demandeur a été directement et sensiblement gêné dans son entreprise à cause d'une pratique restrictive susceptible d'examen et que cette pratique pourrait faire l'objet d'une ordonnance du Tribunal en vertu des art. 75 ou 77 — Cette charge qui incombe à l'auteur de la demande de permission est moins lourde que celle imposée par la norme de la prépondérance de la preuve — Tous les éléments de la pratique susceptible d'examen que constitue le refus de vendre, énoncés à l'art. 75(1), doivent être considérés evidence constituting reasonable grounds for believing refusal to deal could be subject to order under Act — Appeal dismissed.

This was an appeal from a decision of the Competition Tribunal granting leave to the respondent to make an application against the appellant. The appellant is the Canadian subsidiary of Symbol Technologies Inc. (Symbol US), the largest single manufacturer of bar code equipment in the world. The appellant sells and distributes Symbol US products in Canada. In or about 1994, the respondent took over the appellant's distribution in Western Canada. Since May 1, 2003, the appellant refused to deal with the respondent. The respondent's application for leave to apply for an order under Competition Act subsection 75(1) requiring Symbol to accept Barcode as a customer before the Tribunal (brought pursuant to subsection 103.1(1) of the Act) alleged that Symbol was engaging in the reviewable restrictive trade practice of "refusal to deal" within the meaning of section 75 of the Act. Leave was granted and the present appeal ensued. The appellant argued that the Tribunal member who granted leave erred in law by refusing to take into account all of the elements of the reviewable practice of refusal to deal set out in subsection 75(1) and that the decision to grant leave should be quashed.

Held, the appeal should be dismissed.

Subsection 103.1(7) of the Act provides that to grant leave, the Tribunal must have reason to believe that the applicant is directly and substantially affected in its business by a reviewable restrictive trade practice that could be the subject of a Tribunal order under section 75 or 77 of the Act. The decision to grant leave is a discretionary one. However, the question at issue here whether the Tribunal is required to consider all the elements of the restrictive trade practice of refusal to deal was one of law. This question of statutory interpretation does not engage any particular expertise of the Tribunal. Thus, the standard of review was correctness.

par le Tribunal qui se penche sur une demande de permission pour que celui-ci puisse se prononcer sur la question de savoir si la pratique alléguée pourrait faire l'objet d'une ordonnance — La Cour a tranché l'affaire sans la renvoyer au Tribunal — Preuve a été faite que l'intimée est sensiblement gênée dans son entreprise — Le point véritablement controversé est de savoir s'il y a preuve que le refus de vendre aura vraisemblablement pour effet de nuire à la concurrence dans un marché (art. 75(1)e) de la Loi) — La demande de permission n'est pas l'occasion appropriée pour interpréter l'art. 75(1)e) de la Loi pour la première fois — Le bénéfice du doute devrait jouer en faveur de l'octroi de la permission — La preuve est suffisante pour fonder des motifs raisonnables de croire que le refus de vendre pourrait faire l'objet d'une ordonnance en vertu de la Loi — Appel rejeté.

Il s'agissait de l'appel d'une décision du Tribunal de la concurrence accordant à l'intimée la permission de présenter une demande à l'encontre de l'appelante. L'appelante est la filiale canadienne de Symbol Technologies Inc. (Symbol US), le principal fabricant de lecteurs de codes à barres au monde. L'appelante vend et distribue les produits Symbol US au Canada. Vers 1994, l'intimée a pris en charge le service de distribution de l'appelante dans l'Ouest canadien. Depuis le 1er mai 2003, l'appelante a refusé de traiter avec l'intimée. Dans sa demande présentée au Tribunal (en vertu du paragraphe 103.1(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence) en vue d'obtenir la permission de demander que soit prononcée, en vertu du paragraphe 75(1) de la Loi, une ordonnance enjoignant à Symbol de l'accepter comme cliente, l'intimée a allégué que Symbol se livrait à une pratique restrictive du commerce susceptible d'examen, à savoir le refus de vendre au sens de l'article 75 de la Loi. La permission a été accordée et le présent appel a été interjeté. L'appelante a soutenu que le membre du Tribunal qui a fait droit à la demande de permission a commis une erreur de droit en refusant de tenir compte de tous les éléments de la pratique susceptible d'examen que constitue le refus de vendre, énoncés au paragraphe 75(1) de la Loi, et que la décision d'accorder l'autorisation devrait être annulée.

Arrêt: l'appel doit être rejeté.

Le paragraphe 103.1(7) de la Loi prévoit que pour faire droit à la demande, le Tribunal doit avoir des raisons de croire que l'auteur de la demande est directement et sensiblement gêné dans son entreprise par une pratique restrictive du commerce susceptible d'examen et pouvant faire l'objet d'une ordonnance en vertu des articles 75 ou 77 de la Loi. La décision de faire droit ou non à la demande de permission est discrétionnaire. Toutefois, la question en litige en l'espèce, qui consistait à savoir si, dans l'exercice de son pouvoir discrétionnaire, le Tribunal devait considérer tous les éléments de la pratique commerciale restrictive que constitue le refus de vendre, énoncés au paragraphe 75(1), en était une de droit.

The test for granting leave in an application under subsection 103.1(7) found in National Capital News Canada v. Canada (Speaker of the House of Commons) was adopted. The application must be supported by sufficient credible evidence to give rise to a bona fide belief by the Tribunal that the applicant may have been directly and substantially affected in its business by a reviewable practice, and that the practice in question could be subject to an order. This threshold is lower than proof on a balance of probabilities. That said, the elements of the reviewable trade practice of refusal to deal set out in subsection 75(1) must all be shown and addressed by the Tribunal before it may make an order, not only the merits of the application, but also on an application for leave under subsection 103.1(7). As long as each element is considered, even summarily, the Tribunal's decision to grant or refuse leave will be treated with deference.

Use of essentially the same words in subsection 103.1(7) and paragraph 75(1)(a) "that the applicant is directly and substantially affected in the applicants' business", while there are no such similar words in paragraphs 75(1)(b) to (e) in subsection 103.1(7), does not imply that the statutory elements in paragraphs 75(1)(b) to (e) need not be considered on a leave application. To determine the leave application, the Tribunal must consider whether the practice that is alleged could be subject to an order under subsection 75(1); and it cannot reach such a conclusion without considering all the elements of refusal to deal set out in that subsection. Also, the purpose of the Act is to maintain and encourage competition in Canada, and so at the leave stage, there must be some evidence by the applicant and some consideration by the Tribunal of the effect of the refusal to deal on competition in a market (paragraph 75(1)(e) of Act).

It was deemed appropriate for the Court to resolve the matter instead of remitting the matter to the Tribunal for redetermination as leave applications were intended to be dealt with summarily. There was evidence that the respondent was substantially affected in its business due to its inability to obtain the appellant's products. The only real controversy was whether there was evidence that the appellant's refusal to deal was likely to have an adverse effect on competition in a

Cette question d'interprétation législative ne fait appel à aucune expertise particulière du Tribunal. La norme applicable était donc celle de la décision correcte.

Le critère applicable pour faire droit à la demande de permission en vertu du paragraphe 103.1(7), énoncé dans la décision National Capital News Canada c. Canada (Président de la Chambre des communes), a été adopté. La demande doit être appuyée par des éléments de preuve crédibles suffisants pour que le Tribunal puisse croire de bonne foi que le demandeur a pu être directement et sensiblement gêné dans son entreprise à cause d'une pratique susceptible d'examen et que cette pratique pourrait faire l'objet d'une ordonnance. Cette norme de preuve est moins élevée que la norme de la prépondérance de la preuve. Cela dit, les éléments de la pratique commerciale susceptible d'examen que constitue le refus de vendre, énoncés au paragraphe 75(1), doivent tous être prouvés et considérés par le Tribunal pour que celui-ci puisse rendre une ordonnance et ce, non seulement lorsqu'il examine l'affaire au fond, mais aussi lorsqu'il se penche sur une demande de permission selon le paragraphe 103.1(7). Pourvu que chaque élément soit pris en considération, même brièvement, la décision du Tribunal de faire droit ou non à la demande de permission sera traitée avec déférence.

Le fait que les termes employés au paragraphe 103.1(7), à savoir «que l'auteur de la demande est directement et sensiblement gêné dans son entreprise», soient essentiellement les mêmes que ceux utilisés à l'alinéa 75(1)a), alors que ce paragraphe ne comporte pas de termes similaires à ceux employés aux alinéas 75(1)b) à e), ne signifie pas que les éléments énoncés aux alinéas 75(1)b) à e) n'ont pas à être considérés au stade de la demande de permission. Pour se prononcer sur la demande de permission, le Tribunal doit se demander si la pratique alléguée pourrait faire l'objet d'une ordonnance en vertu du paragraphe 75(1); et il ne peut tirer pareille conclusion sans considérer tous les éléments du refus de vendre, énoncés à ce même paragraphe. De plus, comme l'objet fondamental de la Loi est de préserver et de favoriser la concurrence au Canada, l'auteur de la demande doit, au stade de la demande de permission, fournir certains éléments de preuve concernant l'effet du refus de vendre sur la concurrence dans un marché (alinéa 75(1)e) de la Loi), et le Tribunal doit prendre ces éléments en considération.

On a jugé qu'il était approprié pour la Cour de trancher l'affaire plutôt que de la renvoyer au Tribunal pour qu'il rende une nouvelle décision puisque les demandes de permission sont censées revêtir un caractère sommaire. Preuve a été faite que l'intimée a été sensiblement gênée dans son entreprise en raison de son incapacité à obtenir les produits de l'appelante. Le seul point véritablement controversé était de savoir s'il y avait preuve que le refus de vendre de l'appelante aurait market. The relevant provision, paragraph 75(1)(e), has not been interpreted by the Tribunal or this Court, and a leave application was not considered the appropriate occasion to do so. Therefore, if there were facts in the respondent's affidavit that might meet the requirements of paragraph 75(1)(e), the benefit of any doubt was to work in favour of granting leave. Here, there was sufficient evidence to constitute reasonable grounds to believe that the appellant's alleged refusal to deal could be the subject of an order under subsection 75(1): the respondent had somewhat of a presence in the Western Canadian market, and its difficult financial situation could be likely to impede its ability to be an effective competitor in that market.

vraisemblablement pour effet de nuire à la concurrence dans un marché. La disposition pertinente, l'alinéa 75(1)e), n'a jamais été interprétée par le Tribunal ou par la Cour, et une demande de permission n'était pas l'occasion appropriée pour le faire. Conséquemment, s'il y avait des faits énoncés dans la déclaration sous serment de l'intimée qui pouvaient satisfaire aux exigences de l'alinéa 75(1)e), le bénéfice du doute devait jouer en sa faveur. En l'espèce, la preuve était suffisante pour fonder des motifs raisonnables de croire que le refus de vendre allégué de l'appelante pourrait faire l'objet d'une ordonnance en vertu du paragraphe 75(1): l'intimée avait une certaine présence dans le marché de l'Ouest canadien, et sa situation financière difficile pouvait vraisemblablement gêner sa capacité à se positionner comme un concurrent dynamique dans ce marché.

STATUTES AND REGULATIONS JUDICIALLY CONSIDERED

Competition Act, R.S.C., 1985, c. C-34, ss. 1 (as am. by R.S.C., 1985 (2nd Supp.), c. 19, s. 19), 1.1 (as enacted idem), 75 (as am. idem, s. 45; 2002, c. 16, s. 11.1), 77 (as am. by R.S.C., 1985 (2nd Supp.), c. 19, s. 45; S.C. 1999, c. 2, s. 23; 2002, c. 16, ss. 11.2, 11.3), 103.1 (as enacted idem, s. 12).
Competition Tribunal Act, R.S.C., 1985 (2nd Supp.), c. 19, s. 13(1) (as am. by S.C. 2002, c. 8, s. 130), (2).

LOIS ET RÈGLEMENTS CITÉS

Loi sur la concurrence, L.R.C. (1985), ch. C-34, art. 1 (mod. par L.R.C. (1985) (2e suppl.), ch. 19, art. 19), 1.1 (édicté, idem), 75 (mod., idem, art. 45; 2002, ch. 16, art. 11.1), 77 (mod. par L.R.C. (1985) (2e suppl.), ch. 19, art. 45; L.C. 1999, ch. 2, art. 23; ch. 31, art. 52; 2002, ch. 16, art. 11.2, 11.3), 103.1 (édicté, idem, art. 12).
Loi sur le Tribunal de la concurrence, L.R.C. (1985) (2e suppl.), ch. 19, art. 13(1) (mod. par L.C. 2002, ch. 8, art. 130), (2).

CASES JUDICIALLY CONSIDERED

APPLIED:

National Capital News Canada v. Canada (Speaker of the House of Commons) (2002), 23 C.P.R. (4th) 77 (Comp. Trib.).

REFERRED TO:

Suresh v. Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration), [2002] 1 S.C.R. 3; (2002), 208 D.L.R. (4th) 1; 37 Admin. L.R. (3d) 152; 90 C.R.R. (2d) 1; 18 Imm. L.R. (3d) 1; 281 N.R. 1.

JURISPRUDENCE CITÉE

DÉCISION APPLIQUÉE:

National Capital News Canada c. Canada (Président de la Chambre des communes) (2002), 23 C.P.R. (4th) 77 (Trib. conc.).

DÉCISION EXAMINÉE:

Suresh c. Canada (Ministre de la Citoyenneté et de l'Immigration), [2002] 1 R.C.S. 3; (2002), 208 D.L.R. (4th) 1; 37 Admin. L.R. (3d) 152; 90 C.R.R. (2d) 1; 18 Imm. L.R. (3d) 1; 281 N.R. 1.

APPEAL from a decision of the Competition Tribunal ([2004] C.C.T.D. No. 1 (Comp. Trib.) (QL)) granting leave to the respondent to make an application against the appellant. Appeal dismissed.

APPEL d'une décision du Tribunal de la concurrence ([2004] D.T.C.C. nº 1 (Trib. conc.) (QL)) accordant à l'intimée la permission de présenter une demande à l'encontre de l'appelante. Appel rejeté.

APPEARANCES:

Steven E. Field and David G. Hill for appellant (respondent).
Lindy J. R. Choy for respondent (applicant).

ONT COMPARU:

Steven E. Field et David G. Hill pour l'appelante (défenderesse).
Lindy J. R. Choy pour l'intimée (demanderesse).

SOLICITORS OF RECORD:

Hill Abra Dewar, Winnipeg, for appellant (respondent).
Thompson Dorfman Sweatman LLP, Winnipeg, for respondent (applicant).

The following are the reasons for judgment rendered in English by

ROTHSTEIN J.A.:

INTRODUCTION

[1] This is an appeal by Symbol Technologies Canada ULC (Symbol) from a decision of the Competition Tribunal [Barcode Systems Inc. v. Symbol Technologies Canada ULC, [2004] C.C.T.D. No. 1 (QL)] under subsection 103.1(7) [as enacted by S.C. 2002, c. 16, s. 12] of the Competition Act, R.S.C., 1985, c. C-34 [s. 1 (as am. by R.S.C., 1985 (2nd Supp.), c. 19, s. 19)] granting leave to the respondent Barcode Systems Inc. (Barcode) to make an application to the Tribunal against Symbol. In its leave application to the Tribunal, Barcode alleged that Symbol was engaging in the reviewable restrictive trade practice of "refusal to deal" within the meaning of section 75 [as am. idem, c. 19, s. 45; S.C. 2002, c. 16, s. 11.1] of the Act.

[2] Barcode's application before the Tribunal is for an order under subsection 75(1) of the Competition Act requiring Symbol to accept Barcode as a customer.

[3] In this appeal, Symbol says that the Tribunal member who granted leave erred in law by refusing to take into account statutory requirements and that the decision to grant leave should be quashed by this Court.

FACTS

[4] The facts are taken from the affidavit of David Sokolow, the President of Barcode. There has been no cross-examination on that affidavit. Symbol is the

AVOCATS INSCRITS AU DOSSIER:

Hill Abra Dewar, Winnipeg, pour l'appelante (défenderesse).
Thompson Dorfman Sweatman LLP, Winnipeg, pour l'intimée (demanderesse).

Ce qui suit est la version française des motifs du jugement rendus par

LE JUGE ROTHSTEIN, J.C.A.:

INTRODUCTION

[1] Symbol Technologies Canada ULC (Symbol) interjette appel d'une décision du Tribunal de la concurrence [Barcode Systems Inc. c. Symbol Technologies Canada ULC, [2004] D.T.C.C. nº 1 (QL)] accordant à l'intimée Barcode Systems Inc. (Barcode), suivant le paragraphe 103.1(7) [édicté par L.C. 2002, ch. 16, art. 12] de la Loi sur la concurrence, L.R.C. (1985), ch. C-34 [art. 1 (mod. par L.R.C. (1985) (2e suppl.), ch. 19, art. 19)], la permission de présenter une demande au Tribunal à l'encontre de Symbol. Dans sa demande de permission, Barcode a allégué que Symbol se livrait à une pratique restrictive du commerce susceptible d'examen, à savoir le refus de vendre au sens de l'article 75 [mod. idem, ch. 19, art. 45; L.C. 2002, ch. 16, art. 11.1] de la Loi.

[2] Dans sa demande présentée au Tribunal, Barcode demandait que soit prononcée, en vertu du paragraphe 75(1) de la Loi sur la concurrence, une ordonnance enjoignant à Symbol de l'accepter comme cliente.

[3] Dans le présent appel, Symbol déclare que le membre du Tribunal qui a fait droit à la demande de permission a commis une erreur de droit en refusant de tenir compte des exigences de la loi, et que la décision d'accorder l'autorisation devrait être annulée par la Cour.

FAITS

[4] Les faits sont tirés de l'affidavit de David Sokolow, président de Barcode. Il n'y a pas eu de contre-interrogatoire relativement à cet affidavit. Symbol est la

Canadian subsidiary of Symbol Technologies Inc. (Symbol US). Symbol US is the largest single manufacturer of bar code equipment in the world. Symbol sells and distributes Symbol US products in Canada. In or about 1994, Barcode took over Symbol's distribution in Western Canada.

[5] In or about January 2003, Symbol informed Barcode that it could no longer buy parts for Symbol products. In April 2003, Symbol informed Barcode that it would not accept purchase orders from Barcode. Barcode says that since May 1, 2003, Symbol has refused to deal with Barcode.

RELEVANT STATUTORY PROVISIONS

[6] Until 2002, only the Commissioner of Competition could bring an application before the Competition Tribunal in respect of reviewable restrictive trade practices described in Part VIII of the Competition Act, e.g. refusal to deal (section 75) and tied selling (section 77 [as am. by R.S.C., 1985 (2nd Supp.), c. 19, s. 45; S.C. 1999, c. 2, s. 23; 2002, c. 16, ss. 11.2, 11.3]). By amendments to the Competition Act, S.C. 2002, c. 16, ss. 11.1 to 11.3, private applicants were given the opportunity to bring applications to the Tribunal, subject to the Tribunal granting them leave to do so. Subsection 103.1(1) [as enacted idem, s. 12] of the Competition Act provides:

103.1 (1) Any person may apply to the Tribunal for leave to make an application under section 75 or 77. The application for leave must be accompanied by an affidavit setting out the facts in support of the person's application under section 75 or 77.

[7] The considerations the Tribunal is to take into account in determining a leave application are set out in subsection 103.1(7). To grant leave, the Tribunal must have reason to believe that the applicant is directly and substantially affected in its business by a reviewable restrictive trade practice that could be the subject of a Tribunal order under section 75 or 77 of the Competition Act. Subsection 103.1(7) provides:

103.1 . . . .

filiale canadienne de Symbol Technologies Inc. (Symbol US). Symbol US est le principal fabricant de lecteurs de codes à barres au monde. Symbol vend et distribue les produits Symbol US au Canada. Vers 1994, Barcode a pris en charge le service de distribution de Symbol dans l'Ouest canadien.

[5] Vers janvier 2003, Symbol a informé Barcode qu'elle ne pourrait plus acheter les pièces destinées aux produits Symbol. En avril 2003, Symbol a informé Barcode qu'elle n'accepterait pas ses bons de commande. Barcode affirme que depuis le 1er mai 2003, Symbol a refusé de traiter avec elle.

DISPOSITIONS LÉGISLATIVES PERTINENTES

[6] Jusqu'en 2002, seul le Commissaire de la concurrence pouvait présenter une demande au Tribunal en ce qui concerne les pratiques restrictives du commerce susceptibles d'examen, définies à la Partie VIII de la Loi sur la concurrence, tels le refus de vendre (article 75) et les ventes liées (article 77 [mod. par L.R.C. (1985) (2e suppl.), ch. 19, art. 45; L.C. 1999, ch. 2, art. 23; ch. 31, art. 52; 2002 , ch. 16, art. 11.2, 11.3]). À la suite de modifications à la Loi sur la concurrence, L.C. 2002, ch. 16, art. 11.1 à 11.3, les particuliers se sont vus accorder la possibilité de présenter des demandes au Tribunal à condition d'en obtenir la permission. Le paragraphe 103.1(1) [édicté, idem, art. 12] de la Loi sur la concurrence dispose:

103.1 (1) Toute personne peut demander au Tribunal la permission de présenter une demande en vertu des articles 75 ou 77. La demande doit être accompagnée d'une déclaration sous serment faisant état des faits sur lesquels elle se fonde.

[7] Le paragraphe 103.1(7) énonce les éléments que le Tribunal doit prendre en considération pour se prononcer sur une demande de permission. Pour faire droit à la demande, le Tribunal doit avoir des raisons de croire que l'auteur de la demande est directement et sensiblement gêné dans son entreprise par une pratique restrictive du commerce susceptible d'examen et pouvant faire l'objet d'une ordonnance en vertu des articles 75 ou 77 de la Loi sur la concurrence. Le paragraphe 103.1(7) prévoit:

103.1 [. . .]

(7) The Tribunal may grant leave to make an application under section 75 or 77 if it has reason to believe that the applicant is directly and substantially affected in the applicants' business by any practice referred to in one of those sections that could be subject to an order under that section.

[8] The reviewable restrictive trade practice relied on by Barcode is refusal to deal. Subsection 75(1) provides:

75. (1) Where, on application by the Commissioner or a person granted leave under section 103.1, the Tribunal finds that

(a) a person is substantially affected in his business or is precluded from carrying on business due to his inability to obtain adequate supplies of a product anywhere in a market on usual trade terms,

(b) the person referred to in paragraph (a) is unable to obtain adequate supplies of the product because of insufficient competition among suppliers of the product in the market,

(c) the person referred to in paragraph (a) is willing and able to meet the usual trade terms of the supplier or suppliers of the product,

(d) the product is in ample supply, and

(e) the refusal to deal is having or is likely to have an adverse effect on competition in a market,

the Tribunal may order that one or more suppliers of the product in the market accept the person as a customer within a specified time on usual trade terms unless, within the specified time, in the case of an article, any customs duties on the article are removed, reduced or remitted and the effect of the removal, reduction or remission is to place the person on an equal footing with other persons who are able to obtain adequate supplies of the article in Canada.

THE ALLEGED ERROR OF LAW

[9] Symbol submits that the Competition Tribunal member who granted leave refused to take account of all the elements of the reviewable practice of refusal to deal set out in subsection 75(1) and therefore erred in law by

(7) Le Tribunal peut faire droit à une demande de permission de présenter une demande en vertu des articles 75 ou 77 s'il a des raisons de croire que l'auteur de la demande est directement et sensiblement gêné dans son entreprise en raison de l'existence de l'une ou l'autre des pratiques qui pourraient faire l'objet d'une ordonnance en vertu de ces articles.

[8] La pratique commerciale restrictive d'examen sur laquelle se fonde Barcode est le refus de vendre. Le paragraphe 75(1) est ainsi rédigé:

75. (1) Lorsque, à la demande du commissaire ou d'une personne autorisée en vertu de l'article 103.1, le Tribunal conclut:

a) qu'une personne est sensiblement gênée dans son entreprise ou ne peut exploiter une entreprise du fait qu'elle est incapable de se procurer un produit de façon suffisante, où que ce soit sur un marché, aux conditions de commerce normales;

b) que la personne mentionnée à l'alinéa a) est incapable de se procurer le produit de façon suffisante en raison de l'insuffisance de la concurrence entre les fournisseurs de ce produit sur ce marché;

c) que la personne mentionnée à l'alinéa a) accepte et est en mesure de respecter les conditions de commerce normales imposées par le ou les fournisseurs de ce produit;

d) que le produit est disponible en quantité amplement suffisante;

e) que le refus de vendre a ou aura vraisemblablement pour effet de nuire à la concurrence dans un marché, le Tribunal peut ordonner qu'un ou plusieurs fournisseurs de ce produit sur le marché en question acceptent cette personne comme client dans un délai déterminé aux conditions de commerce normales à moins que, au cours de ce délai, dans le cas d'un article, les droits de douane qui lui sont applicables ne soient supprimés, réduits ou remis de façon à mettre cette personne sur un pied d'égalité avec d'autres personnes qui sont capables de se procurer l'article en quantité suffisante au Canada.

L'ERREUR DE DROIT ALLÉGUÉE

[9] Symbol soutient que le membre du Tribunal qui a fait droit à la demande a refusé de prendre en considération tous les éléments du refus de vendre susceptible d'examen, énoncés au paragraphe 75(1), et not taking account of statutory requirements. Symbol's main argument is that the member refused to consider whether Symbol's alleged refusal to deal was likely to have an adverse effect on competition in a market as required by paragraph 75(1)(e).

[10] Indeed, in his reasons, the member specifically finds that on an application for leave, the Tribunal is not to have regard to whether the refusal to deal is likely to have an adverse effect on competition in a market. At paragraphs 8 and 10, the member states:

> What the Tribunal must have reason to believe is that Barcode is directly and substantially affected in its business by Symbol's refusal to sell. The Tribunal is not required to have reason to believe that Symbol's refusal to deal has or is likely to have an adverse effect on competition in a market at this stage.
>
> . . .
>
> As I read the Act, adverse effect on competition in a market is a necessary element to the Tribunal finding a breach of section 75 and a necessary condition in order that the Tribunal make a remedial order under that section. It is not, however, part of the test for the Tribunal's granting leave or not.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

[11] Subsection 13(1) [as am. by S.C. 2002, c. 8, s. 130] of the Competition Tribunal Act, R.S.C., 1985, (2nd Supp.), c. 19, provides for a statutory right of appeal to the Federal Court of Appeal from any decision or order whether final, interlocutory or interim of the Competition Tribunal as if it were a judgment of the Federal Court. The unrestricted right of appeal (except in the case of appeals on questions of fact under subsection 13(2)) is an indication of a correctness standard of review.

[12] Whether to grant leave under subsection 103.1(7) is a discretionary decision of the Tribunal. However, the qu'il a donc commis une erreur de droit en ne tenant pas compte des exigences de la loi. Symbol soutient essentiellement que le membre a refusé de considérer la question de savoir si le refus de vendre reproché à Symbol aurait vraisemblablement pour effet de nuire à la concurrence dans un marché, comme l'exige l'alinéa 75(1)e).

[10] De fait, dans ses motifs, le membre conclut précisément que, saisi d'une demande de permission, le Tribunal n'a pas à considérer la question de savoir si le refus de vendre aura vraisemblablement pour effet de nuire à la concurrence dans un marché. Aux paragraphes 8 et 10, le membre affirme:

> Le Tribunal doit avoir des raisons de croire que Barcode est directement et sensiblement gênée dans son entreprise par le refus de vendre de Symbol. À ce stade, il n'est pas nécessaire que le Tribunal ait des raisons de croire que ce refus a ou aura vraisemblablement pour effet de nuire à la concurrence dans un marché.
>
> [. . .]
>
> Selon mon interprétation de la Loi, il doit y avoir atteinte à la concurrence dans un marché pour que le Tribunal conclue à l'existence d'une contravention à l'article 75 et prononce l'ordonnance corrective prévue par cette disposition. Cette atteinte, toutefois n'est pas une exigence du critère appliqué par le Tribunal pour déterminer s'il accordera ou non une permission.

NORME DE CONTRÔLE

[11] Le paragraphe 13(1) [mod. par L.C. 2002, ch. 8, art. 130] de la Loi sur le Tribunal de la concurrence, L.R.C. (1985) (2e suppl.), ch. 19, prévoit que les décisions ou ordonnances du Tribunal, que celles-ci soient définitives, interlocutoires ou provisoires, sont susceptibles d'appel devant la Cour d'appel fédérale tout comme s'il s'agissait de jugements de la Cour fédérale. Le droit d'appel absolu (sauf en cas d'appels sur des questions de fait suivant le paragraphe 13(2)) est une indication que la norme de contrôle applicable est celle de la décision correcte.

[12] La décision de faire droit ou non à la demande de permission en vertu du paragraphe 103.1(7) relève du question at issue here is whether, in exercising its discretion, the Tribunal is required to consider all the elements of the restrictive trade practice of refusal to deal set out in subsection 75(1). That is a question of law, a straight question of statutory interpretation. It is the task of the Court to determine whether the Tribunal has exercised its discretionary power within the constraints imposed by Parliament. See Suresh v. Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration), [2002] 1 S.C.R. 3, at paragraph 38.

[13] This question of statutory interpretation does not engage any particular expertise of the Tribunal. Economic and commercial considerations are not part of the analysis of whether, on a leave application, all the elements listed in subsection 75(1) must be considered. That expertise is not engaged on the question of statutory interpretation at issue here therefore points to the correctness standard.

[14] The basic purpose of the Competition Act as described in section 1.1 [as enacted by R.S.C., 1985 (2nd Supp.), c. 19, s. 19] is "to maintain and encourage competition in Canada" and the purpose of section 75 is in furtherance of that objective. When economic and commercial considerations are being considered, deference may be called for. But these considerations are not at issue in the present appeal.

[15] Weighing these pragmatic and functional considerations, I conclude that the standard of review in this appeal is correctness.

ANALYSIS

The legal test in an application under subsection 103.1(7)

[16] In National Capital News Canada v. Canada (Speaker of the House of Commons) (2002), 23 C.P.R. (4th) 77 (Comp. Trib.), Dawson J., in her capacity as a member of the Competition Tribunal, reviewed the test pouvoir discrétionnaire du Tribunal. Toutefois, la question en litige en l'espèce est de savoir si, dans l'exercice de son pouvoir discrétionnaire, le Tribunal doit considérer tous les éléments de la pratique commerciale restrictive que constitue le refus de vendre, énoncés au paragraphe 75(1). Il s'agit là d'une question de droit, d'une question classique d'interprétation législative. Il appartient à la Cour de décider si le Tribunal a exercé son pouvoir discrétionnaire à l'intérieur des limites imposées par le législateur. Voir Suresh c. Canada (Ministre de la Citoyenneté et de l'Immigration), [2002] 1 R.C.S. 3, au paragraphe 38.

[13] Cette question d'interprétation législative ne fait appel à aucune expertise particulière du Tribunal. Les considérations économiques et commerciales ne font pas partie de l'analyse quant à savoir si, s'agissant d'une demande de permission, tous les éléments énumérés au paragraphe 75(1) doivent être examinés. Qu'il ne soit pas nécessaire de faire appel à une expertise pour résoudre la question d'interprétation législative en litige en l'espèce indique que la norme applicable est celle de la décision correcte.

[14] L'objet fondamental de la Loi sur la concurrence, tel qu'il est défini à l'article 1.1 [édicté par L.R.C. (1985) (2e suppl.), ch. 19, art. 19], est «de préserver et de favoriser la concurrence au Canada», et l'objet de l'article 75 confirme cette intention. Lorsque des considérations économiques et commerciales entrent en jeu, la déférence peut être de mise. Mais tel n'est pas le cas en l'espèce.

[15] Après avoir soupesé ces considérations pragmatiques et fonctionnelles, je conclus que la norme de contrôle applicable au présent appel est celle de la décision correcte.

ANALYSE

Le critère juridique applicable à une demande suivant le paragraphe 103.1(7)

[16] Dans la décision National Capital News Canada c. Canada (Président de la Chambre des communes) (2002), 23 C.P.R. (4th) 77 (Trib. conc.), la juge Dawson, à titre de membre du Tribunal de la concurrence, a for the granting of leave under subsection 103.1(7). After citing authorities on the term "reasonable grounds to believe" she stated at paragraph 14 of her reasons:

> Accordingly on the basis of the plain meaning of the wording used in s. 103.1(7) of the Act and the jurisprudence referred to above, I conclude that the appropriate standard under s. 103.1(7) is whether the leave application is supported by sufficient credible evidence to give rise to a bona fide belief that the applicant may have been directly and substantially affected in the applicant's business by a reviewable practice, and that the practice in question could be subject to an order.

I agree with Dawson J. and adopt her analysis and conclusion as to the test for granting leave under subsection 103.1(7).

[17] The threshold for an applicant obtaining leave is not a difficult one to meet. It need only provide sufficient credible evidence of what is alleged to give rise to a bona fide belief by the Tribunal. This is a lower standard of proof than proof on a balance of probabilities which will be the standard applicable to the decision on the merits.

[18] However, it is important not to conflate the low standard of proof on a leave application with what evidence must be before the Tribunal and what the Tribunal must consider on that application. For purposes of obtaining an order under subsection 75(1), a refusal to deal is not simply the refusal by a supplier to sell a product to a willing customer. The elements of the reviewable trade practice of refusal to deal that must be shown before the Tribunal may make an order are those set out in subsection 75(1). These elements are conjunctive and must all be addressed by the Tribunal, not only when it considers the merits of the application, but also on an application for leave under subsection 103.1(7). That is because, unless the Tribunal considers all the elements of the practice set out in subsection 75(1) on the leave application, it could not conclude, as required by paragraph 103.1(7), that there was reason to believe that an alleged practice could be subject to an examiné le critère applicable à l'octroi d'une demande de permission en application du paragraphe 103.1(7). Après avoir cité des précédents portant sur l'interprétation de l'expression «motifs raisonnables de croire», elle a déclaré au paragraphe 14 de ses motifs:

> Par conséquent, me fondant sur le sens ordinaire des termes utilisés au paragraphe 103.1(7) de la Loi et sur la jurisprudence à laquelle je me suis reportée, je conclus que la norme appropriée en vertu du paragraphe 103.1(7) consiste à se demander si la demande de permission est appuyée par des éléments de preuve crédibles suffisants pour qu'on puisse croire de bonne foi que le demandeur a pu être directement et sensiblement gêné dans son entreprise à cause d'une pratique susceptible d'examen et que cette pratique pourrait faire l'objet d'une ordonnance.

Je suis du même avis que la juge Dawson, et j'endosse son analyse et sa conclusion quant au critère applicable pour faire droit à la demande de permission en vertu du paragraphe 103.1(7).

[17] La charge qui incombe à l'auteur de la demande de permission n'est pas très lourde. Il n'a qu'à fournir une preuve crédible suffisante de ce qui est allégué pour faire naître une croyance légitime dans l'esprit du Tribunal. Il s'agit là d'une norme de preuve moins élevée que la norme de la prépondérance de la preuve, laquelle s'appliquera à la décision sur le fond.

[18] Toutefois, il est important de ne pas confondre la norme de preuve peu élevée applicable à la demande de permission avec le type de preuve devant être présenté au Tribunal et considéré par lui pour trancher cette demande. Pour obtenir une ordonnance suivant le paragraphe 75(1), le refus de vendre n'est pas simplement le refus d'un fournisseur de vendre un produit à un client intéressé. Les éléments de la pratique commerciale susceptible d'examen que constitue le refus de vendre, éléments devant être prouvés pour que le Tribunal puisse rendre une ordonnance, sont ceux qui sont énoncés au paragraphe 75(1). Ces éléments se combinent et doivent tous être considérés par le Tribunal et ce, non seulement lorsqu'il examine l'affaire au fond, mais aussi lorsqu'il se penche sur une demande de permission selon le paragraphe 103.1(7). Cela s'explique du fait que, s'il ne considérait pas tous les éléments de la pratique énoncés au paragraphe 75(1) pour trancher la order under subsection 75(1).

[19] The Tribunal may address each element summarily in keeping with the expeditious nature of the leave proceeding under section 103.1. As long as it is apparent that each element is considered, the Tribunal's discretionary decision to grant or refuse leave will be treated with deference by this Court. But the Tribunal's discretion to grant leave is not unfettered. The Tribunal must consider all the elements in subsection 75(1).

[20] The words of subsection 103.1(1) support this interpretation of the requirements of subsection 103.1(7). Subsection 103.1(1) requires that the application for leave be accompanied by an affidavit setting out the facts in support of the application under subsection 75(1). That affidavit must therefore contain the facts relevant to the elements of the reviewable trade practice of refusal to deal set out in subsection 75(1). It is that affidavit which the Tribunal will consider in determining a leave application under subsection 103.1(7). While the standard of proof on the leave application is lower than when the case is considered on its merits, nonetheless, the same considerations are relevant to both and must be taken into account at both stages.

[21] The respondent says that the words in subsection 103.1(7) "that the applicant is directly and substantially affected in the applicants' business" are essentially the words in paragraph 75(1)(a) and because there are no words similar to those in paragraphs 75(1)(b) to (e) in subsection 103.1(7), Parliament did not intend that each element in paragraphs 75(1)(b) to (e) need be taken into account on a leave application.

[22] I do not think that is correct. Because subsection 103.1(1) says that "any person may apply", it is demande de permission, le Tribunal ne pourrait conclure, comme le prescrit le paragraphe 103.1(7), qu'il existait des motifs de croire qu'une pratique alléguée pourrait faire l'objet d'une ordonnance en vertu du paragraphe 75(1).

[19] Le Tribunal peut examiner chaque élément brièvement pour respecter la nature expéditive de la procédure de permission prévue à l'article 103.1. Pourvu que chaque élément paraisse être pris en considération, la décision discrétionnaire du Tribunal de faire droit ou non à la demande de permission sera traitée avec déférence par la Cour. Mais le pouvoir discrétionnaire du Tribunal n'est pas absolu. Il doit prendre en considération tous les éléments énoncés au paragraphe 75(1).

[20] Les termes utilisés au paragraphe 103.1(1) confortent cette interprétation des conditions prescrites au paragraphe 103.1(7). Le paragraphe 103.1(1) exige que la demande de permission soit accompagnée d'une déclaration sous serment faisant état des faits. Cette déclaration sous serment doit donc contenir les faits pertinents par rapport aux éléments de la pratique commerciale susceptible d'examen que constitue le refus de vendre, énoncés au paragraphe 75(1). C'est cette déclaration qu'examinera le Tribunal pour trancher une demande de permission en vertu du paragraphe 103.1(7). Bien que la norme de preuve soit moins élevée au stade de la demande de permission qu'à celui de l'examen au fond, il demeure que les mêmes considérations sont pertinentes et doivent être examinées aux deux stades.

[21] L'intimée affirme que les termes employés au paragraphe 103.1(7), à savoir «que l'auteur de la demande est directement et sensiblement gêné dans son entreprise», sont essentiellement les mêmes que ceux utilisés à l'alinéa 75(1)a), alors que ce paragraphe ne comporte pas de termes similaires à ceux employés aux alinéas 75(1)b) à e). Il s'ensuit, dit-il, que le législateur n'entendait pas obliger le Tribunal à prendre en considération chaque élément des alinéas 75(1)b) à e) au stade de la demande de permission.

[22] Je ne crois pas que cette affirmation soit juste. Étant donné que le paragraphe 103.1(1) dit que «[t]oute theoretically possible for someone other than a person substantially and directly affected to bring a private application. However, Parliament clearly intended to limit private applications to persons who themselves are directly and substantially affected in their businesses by the alleged reviewable practice. I think that is the reason for the use of words in subsection 103.1(7) that are substantially similar to those in paragraph 75(1)(a). However, the use of these words does not imply that the statutory elements in paragraphs 75(1)(b) to (e) need not be considered on a leave application. That is because, on a leave application, the Tribunal must consider whether the practice that is alleged could be subject to an order under subsection 75(1); and it cannot reach that conclusion without considering all the elements of refusal to deal set out in that subsection.

[23] Counsel for Symbol argued that on a purposive interpretation, it should be clear that on a leave application, the Tribunal must have regard to all the statutory elements in subsection 75(1). I agree. The purpose of the Competition Act is to maintain and encourage competition in Canada. It is not to provide a statutory cause of action for the resolution of a dispute between a supplier and a customer that has no bearing on the maintenance or encouragement of competition. That is the obvious reason for paragraph 75(1)(e). The threshold at the leave stage is low, but there must be some evidence by the applicant and some consideration by the Tribunal of the effect of the refusal to deal on competition in a market.

Application of the test for leave to the facts

[24] Having determined the correct legal test on an application seeking leave to apply for an order under subsection 75(1), the question is whether this matter should be remitted to the Tribunal for redetermination or whether this Court should dispose of it. Barcode has pointed out that a leave application is intended to be a summary screening process. There is no right of cross-examination on the affidavit filed in support of the application for leave, there is no provision for the respondent to file affidavit evidence and the time limits personne peut demander», il est théoriquement possible pour quelqu'un d'autre qu'une personne directement et sensiblement gêné de présenter une demande au Tribunal. Cependant, le législateur voulait clairement limiter les demandes des particuliers aux personnes qui sont elles-mêmes directement et sensiblement gênées dans leur entreprise par la pratique alléguée. Je crois que cela explique pourquoi les mots employés au paragraphe 103.1(7) sont substantiellement les mêmes que ceux choisis par le législateur à l'alinéa 75(1)a). Toutefois, l'emploi de ces termes ne signifie pas que les éléments énoncés aux alinéas 75(1)b) à e) n'ont pas à être considérés au stade de la demande de permission, parce qu'à ce stade, le Tribunal doit se demander si la pratique alléguée pourrait faire l'objet d'une ordonnance en vertu du paragraphe 75(1); et il ne peut tirer pareille conclusion sans considérer tous les éléments du refus de vendre, énoncés à ce même paragraphe.

[23] L'avocat de Symbol a fait valoir que, selon une interprétation téléologique, il devrait être clair que pour trancher une demande de permission, le Tribunal doit considérer tous les éléments prévus au paragraphe 75(1). J'endosse ce point de vue. L'objet de la Loi sur la concurrence est de préserver et de favoriser la concurrence au Canada, et non d'offrir un recours pour régler un différend entre un fournisseur et un client qui n'a aucune incidence sur la préservation ou l'encouragement de la concurrence. C'est là l'objet manifeste de l'alinéa 75(1)e). La charge à ce stade est légère, mais l'auteur de la demande doit fournir certains éléments de preuve concernant l'effet du refus de vendre sur la concurrence dans un marché, et le Tribunal doit prendre ces éléments en considération.

Application du critère aux faits de l'espèce

[24] Ayant établi le critère juridique approprié à une demande de permission de présenter une demande d'ordonnance en vertu du paragraphe 75(1), il reste à se demander si cette affaire devrait être renvoyée au Tribunal pour qu'il rende une nouvelle décision, ou si la Cour devrait trancher elle-même le litige. Barcode fait valoir que la demande de permission se veut un processus sommaire d'examen préalable. Il n'y a pas de droit au contre-interrogatoire sur la déclaration déposée au soutien de la demande, aucune disposition ne permet in section 103.1 are short, consistent with leave applications being dealt with summarily. For these reasons, I think the appropriate course of action in this case would be for this Court to resolve the matter without further delay.

[25] Is there credible evidence to support a finding that there are reasonable grounds to believe that Symbol's refusal to supply Barcode could be subject to an order under subsection 75(1)? There is evidence that Barcode is substantially affected in its business due to its inability to obtain Symbol's products. Barcode's evidence is that it cannot obtain these products either directly from Symbol or from other Symbol distributors. Barcode says it is willing and able to meet Symbol's usual trade terms and that Symbol's products are in ample supply.

[26] The only real controversy is whether there is evidence that Symbol's refusal to deal is likely to have an adverse effect on competition in a market.

[27] On this point, paragraph 75(1)(e) has not been interpreted by the Tribunal or this Court and a leave application is not the appropriate occasion to do so. Therefore, if there are any facts in its affidavit that might meet the requirements of paragraph 75(1)(e), the benefit of any doubt should work in favour of granting leave in order not to finally preclude Barcode from its day before the Tribunal.

[28] The evidence of Barcode is that in or about 1994, it took over Symbol's distribution in Western Canada and that by 2002 its annual revenues were in excess of $20 million. Symbol US is the largest single manufacturer of bar code equipment in the world. Barcode's evidence is that if Symbol continues to refuse to supply, Barcode will be forced into receivership, and indeed, the Tribunal member found that on December 19, 2003, Barcode was petitioned into receivership.

[29] From Barcode's evidence, I think it may be inferred, for leave to apply purposes, that there are à l'intimée de produire une preuve par affidavit et les délais prévus à l'article 103.1 sont courts, toutes choses qui tendent à confirmer le caractère sommaire de cette procédure. Pour ces motifs, j'estime qu'il conviendrait en l'espèce que la Cour tranche l'affaire sans délai.

[25] Y a-t-il une preuve crédible pour étayer la conclusion voulant qu'il y ait des motifs raisonnables de croire que le refus de Symbol d'approvisionner Barcode pourrait faire l'objet d'une ordonnance en vertu du paragraphe 75(1)? Preuve a été faite que Barcode est sensiblement gênée dans son entreprise en raison de son incapacité à obtenir les produits de Symbol. La preuve de Barcode veut qu'elle ne puisse obtenir ces produits directement de Symbol ou par l'intermédiaire d'un de ses distributeurs. Barcode affirme vouloir se conformer aux conditions commerciales habituelles de Symbol et être en mesure de le faire, et dit que les produits de Symbol sont en quantité amplement suffisante.

[26] Le seul point véritablement controversé est de savoir s'il y a preuve que le refus de vendre de Symbol aura vraisemblablement pour effet de nuire à la concurrence dans un marché.

[27] L'alinéa 75(1)e) n'a jamais été interprété sur ce point par le Tribunal ou par la Cour, et une demande de permission n'est pas l'occasion appropriée pour le faire. Conséquemment, s'il y a des faits énoncés dans la déclaration sous serment de Barcode qui pourraient satisfaire aux exigences de l'alinéa 75(1)e), le bénéfice du doute devrait jouer en sa faveur afin de ne pas lui interdire définitivement l'accès au Tribunal.

[28] La preuve de Barcode veut que, vers 1994, elle se soit chargée de la distribution de Symbol dans l'Ouest canadien, et qu'en 2002 ses profits dépassaient 20 millions de dollars. Symbol US est le plus grand fabricant au monde de lecteurs de codes à barres. Si Symbol continue à refuser de l'approvisionner, Barcode se verra acculée à la faillite, et, de fait, le membre du Tribunal a constaté que, le 19 décembre 2003, Barcode a été mise sous séquestre.

[29] En me fondant sur la preuve soumise par Barcode, je crois que l'on peut inférer, aux fins de la reasonable grounds to believe that Barcode had somewhat of a presence in the Western Canadian market for the supply and servicing of Symbol's products. Its difficult financial situation reflected by its receivership could be likely to impede its ability to be an effective competitor in that market, thereby having an adverse effect on competition in that market. The evidence may not be strong but I think it is sufficient to constitute reasonable grounds to believe that Symbol's alleged refusal to deal could be the subject of an order under subsection 75(1).

CONCLUSION

[30] For these reasons I would dismiss the appeal with costs.

RICHARD C.J.: I agree.

LÉTOURNEAU J.A.: I agree.

permission de présenter une demande, qu'il existe des motifs raisonnables de croire que Barcode avait une certaine présence dans le marché de l'Ouest canadien pour fournir et réparer les produits Symbol. Sa situation financière difficile, dont témoigne sa mise sous séquestre, pourrait vraisemblablement gêner sa capacité à se positionner comme un concurrent dynamique dans ce marché, ayant ainsi pour effet de nuire à la concurrence dans ce marché. La preuve n'est peut-être pas très forte, mais j'estime qu'elle est suffisante pour fonder des motifs raisonnables de croire que le refus de vendre allégué de Symbol pourrait faire l'objet d'une ordonnance en vertu du paragraphe 75(1).

CONCLUSION

[30] Pour ces motifs, je rejetterais l'appel avec dépens.

LE JUGE EN CHEF RICHARD: Je souscris aux présents motifs.

LE JUGE LÉTOURNEAU, J.C.A.: Je souscris aux présents motifs.

25

Competition Tribunal Tribunal de la Concurrence

Reference: The Used Car Dealers Association of Ontario v. Insurance Bureau of Canada, 2011 Comp. Trib. 10
File No.: CT-2011-06
Registry Document No.: 29

IN THE MATTER of the Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, as amended;

AND IN THE MATTER of an Application by the Used Car Dealers Association of Ontario for an Order pursuant to section 103.1 granting leave to make application under sections 75 and 76 of the Competition Act.

B E T W E E N:

Used Car Dealers Association of Ontario
(applicant)

and

Insurance Bureau of Canada
(respondent)

Decided on the basis of the written record
Before Judicial Member: Simpson J. (Chairperson)
Date of Reasons and Order: September 9, 2011
Reasons and Order signed by: Madam Justice Sandra J. Simpson

REASONS FOR ORDER AND ORDER GRANTING THE APPLICANT LEAVE TO FILE AN APPLICATION PURSUANT TO SECTION 75 OF THE COMPETITION ACT

THE APPLICATION

[1] The Used Car Dealers Association of Ontario (the "UCDA") seeks leave from the Competition Tribunal (the "Tribunal") to commence an application pursuant to section 75 and subparagraph 76(1)(a)(ii) of the Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34 (the "Act"). The proposed application names the Insurance Bureau of Canada as the respondent.

THE DECISION

[2] For the following reasons leave has been granted to commence an application under section 75 of the Act. However, leave to proceed under section 76 has been denied.

THE APPLICANT

[3] The UCDA was founded in 1984. It is a not-for-profit trade association which represents more than 4500 motor vehicle dealers in Ontario. The UCDA provides a variety of services to its members including one called Auto Check™ ("Auto Check"). It provides dealers who are selling used cars with information about the accident history of the vehicles they intend to sell. Using a vehicle's VIN number, a dealer who is a member of the UCDA pays a fee of $7.00 (before taxes) to conduct an Auto Check vehicle accident history search.

[4] The UCDA's evidence for this application is found in an affidavit sworn by Robert G. Beattie on June 29, 2011 (the "Beattie Affidavit"). Mr. Beattie is the UCDA's Executive Director.

THE RESPONDENT AND ITS DATABASES

[5] The Insurance Bureau of Canada (the "IBC") is a national not-for-profit industry association which represents home, vehicle and business insurers. The IBC is, according to the UCDA, the only source of integrated industry wide data collected from all insurers who sell auto insurance as well as from independent adjusters and investigators. The data are located on a database which IBC describes as its Web Claims Search Application. However, that database does not include information about the dollar value of claims made when vehicles are in accidents. Those values are found in information provided to IBC by its members and collected in a second IBC database called the Automotive Statistical Plan ("ASP Database").

THE BACKGROUND

[6] In 1998, the UCDA became an Associate Member of the IBC primarily to gain access to the information in IBC's Web Claims Search Application. That information is a critical input into UCDA's Auto Check business.

OTHER PROVIDERS OF VEHICLE ACCIDENT SEARCHES

[7] 3823202 Canada Inc., carrying on business as CarProof ("CarProof"), began to provide vehicle accident searches in 2005. It is now the market leader and its searches cost $34.95 (Cdn) before taxes.

[8] In 2008, CARFAX, Inc. ("Carfax"), an American based provider of vehicle accident histories, began to sell them in Ontario. It charges $34.99 (U.S.) before taxes.

[9] Both CarProof and Carfax purchase IBC's data for their accident history searches and, according to the Beattie Affidavit, they are both able to provide the dollar value of claims as part of their search results.

[10] The relationship between Auto Check and CarProof has, from the UCDA's perspective, been troubled. The UCDA took CarProof to court to prevent it from misrepresenting the services offered by Auto Check. In the end, a settlement achieved Auto Check's objective. CarProof has also twice (in 2009 & 2010) tried to persuade the UCDA to enter into a partnership in which the Auto Check service would be terminated and CarProof would supply vehicle accident histories to UCDA's members. The UCDA refused to entertain these proposals because it believes that its members place a high value on their ability to purchase inexpensive vehicle accident histories through Auto Check.

REGULATORY CHANGES

[11] On January 1, 2010, changes to the regulations under the Ontario Motor Vehicle Dealers Act, 2002, S.O. 2002, c. 30, Schedule B, required motor vehicle dealers to disclose to potential purchasers whether a used vehicle had ever suffered damage which cost more than $3000.00 to repair.

[12] To assist its members to meet this new obligation, the UCDA decided to try to obtain additional information from IBC about the dollar value of insurance claims. IBC has that information on its ASP Database. The Beattie Affidavit describes the UCDA's early efforts to secure this information in paragraphs 21 and 25-28:

> In early June 2009, in anticipation of these [Regulatory] changes, Robert Pierce, the UCDA's Director of Member Services, contacted Marti Pehar, Manager, Business Partnerships, of IBC by telephone and requested that IBC expand the scope of the information it provided to Auto Check™ to include dollar value claims information.
>
> I understand from Mr. Pierce that he met with Ms. Pehar on June 16, 2009 to discuss Auto Check™'s request for dollar value claims information. Although UCDA had indicated its willingness to compensate IBC for the provision of this additional information, on June 24, 2009, Ms. Pehar informed Mr. Pierce that IBC had refused UCDA's request. I understand and believe that at that time IBC provided, and presently continues to provide, similar information directly or indirectly to CarProof.

On May 17, 2010 Warren Barnard, UCDA's Legal Services Director, and I met with Ralph Palumbo, IBC Vice-President - Ontario, and Randall Bundus, IBC Vice-President -Operations and General Counsel, and renewed Auto Check™'s request for dollar value claims information. Mr. Palumbo stated that he did not see any reason why IBC would not provide this information to UCDA. Mr. Bundus indicated that IBC would need to obtain authorization from its member insurers in order to provide the ASP information to UCDA.

The requirement to obtain insurer consents in respect of dollar claims data came as a surprise to UCDA because this has never been an issue with the Web Claims Search application. Nevertheless, on May 20, 2010, I wrote to Mr. Palumbo and formally requested that IBC seek the requisite authorization from its member insurers to provide the ASP dollar value claims information to Auto Check™.

In a letter dated May 26, 2010, Mr. Bundus wrote to me to state that IBC would not seek the authorization UCDA had requested to supply dollar claims data from its insurer members. Instead, Mr. Bundus indicated that UCDA should contact each insurer member of IBC in order to obtain individual consents for provision of dollar claims information.

[The emphasis is mine]

THE TERMINATION OF THE UCDA'S ACCESS TO IBC's WEB CLAIMS SEARCH APPLICATION

[13] The Beattie Affidavit deals with this subject and the UDCA's ongoing efforts to secure consents in paragraphs 28-37. There he says:

[In a letter dated May 26, 2010] …, without any prior warning, Mr. Bundus informed me that IBC was terminating UCDA's Associate Membership, thereby ending the 12-year relationship between the parties and Auto Check™'s ability to continue to obtain the claims data from the Web Claims Search application.

On June 2, 2010, my colleague Warren Barnard wrote to Mr. Bundus expressing the UCDA's shock over the unexplained and unforeseen termination of its Associate Membership, and requesting that the IBC reconsider its decision. In the alternative, Mr. Barnard requested an extension of the termination notice period to six months (i.e., to November 26,2010) in order to (i) allow the UCDA a reasonable opportunity to contact the individual insurers whose authorization would be required for UCDA to obtain ASP information from IBC, and (ii) continue using the Web Claims Search application.

In the absence of a reply to Mr. Barnard's letter, on June 9, 2010, McMillan LLP, external counsel to UCDA, wrote to Mr. Bundus expressing UCDA's concerns that IBC's conduct raised issues under the Competition Act and reiterating UCDA's request that IBC reconsider the termination of UCDA's membership and its ability to source vehicle claims data (or, alternatively, extend the notice period to six months).

On June 23, 2010, McMillan LLP again wrote to Mr. Bundus, requesting that IBC grant the six-month extension and, in the meantime, provide UCDA with further particulars as to the form and content of the insurer authorizations required by IBC in order to supply the ASP information to Auto Check™. Mr. Bundus replied on June 28, 2010 providing information about the form of authorization required, but refusing to reconsider IBC's termination of UCDA's membership and provision of the Web Claims Search application, or UCDA's request for an extension of the notice period.

After further discussions and emails, IBC reinstated UCDA's Associate Membership and ability to use the Web Claims Search application until November 26, 2010. UCDA also began a process of contacting numerous insurers to obtain consent for IBC to provide ASP information to UCDA, something that has never been required to use the Web Claims Search application.

Between July 2010 and May 2011, UCDA obtained consents from insurers in respect of ASP information, and was also dealing with IBC on a range of contractual, technical and logistical issues related to ASP information. UCDA's Associate Membership has continued on a month to month basis as did its ability to use the Web Claims Search application.

On April 18, 2011, UCDA signed a Service Provider Agreement with IBC for the provision of ASP information from consenting insurers. UCDA was then in a position to seek consent from three insurers who had apparently withdrawn their earlier consents. However, UCDA was not made aware until May 30, in an email from James Fordham, Director of Customer Service at IBC, to Neil Elgar, UCDA's Manager of Administrative Services, that several other insurers had withdrawn their consents in the period from January to March, 2011. Mr. Fordham did not explain how the withdrawals occurred or why UCDA was not informed about them many months earlier when the withdrawals took place.

On June 7, 2011, Mr. Fordham informed Mr. Elgar by email that IBC would be terminating use of the Web Claims Search application. IBC gave notice that termination would take place on June 10, 2011, although after subsequent correspondence between Messrs. Elgar and Fordham, the date was extended to June 17, 2011. Mr. Fordham did not give a reason for the termination or for the briefness of the notice period.

> On June 9, 2011, Mr. Barnard communicated with Mr. Bundus and requested continuing provision of the Web Claims Search application, for which insurer consents had never been required, while UCDA pursued consents from insurers for supply of the ASP information. On June 16, 2011, McMillan LLP reiterated Mr. Barnard's request in voicemail and email messages to Mr. Bundus.
>
> On June 16, 2011, UCDA advised its members that the Auto Check™ searches would be suspended effective June 17, 2011 until further notice due to the inability to obtain supply of sufficient data to provide vehicle accident history searches. On June 17, 2011 at 5:00 pm IBC terminated supply of the Web Claims Search application to UCDA.
>
> [The emphasis is mine]

THE EFFECT OF THE TERMINATION

[14] The termination on June 17, 2011 (the "Termination") ended a 13 year arrangement which had cost the UCDA $65,000.00 in annual dues plus $16,000.00 which the UCDA provided to IBC in June of 2007 to help finance upgrades to IBC's database. As well, in 2010, IBC added a fee for the information supplied to the UCDA from the Web Claims Search Application. The UCDA has always paid IBC as required.

[15] The Termination also caused the UCDA to suspend its Auto Check business.

THE FUTURE OF AUTO CHECK

[16] The UCDA takes the position that its Auto Check service would again be viable if it had the data from the Web Claims Search Application. In other words, although it would have been helpful, the UCDA's members do not need the dollar value claims information from the ASP Database because, according to the Beattie Affidavit, approximately 2/3 of the searches show that vehicles have not been in accidents. Further, where accidents have occurred, the UCDA's member dealers are free to exercise judgment about whether the damage would have cost below or above $3000.00 to repair. In other words, dealers don't usually need the dollar value of the claims. However, the Beattie Affidavit concedes that, in the small number of situations in which a precise dollar value is needed, dealers can purchase the more costly searches from CarProof or Carfax which include the dollar amounts.

PART I – SECTION 75 – REFUSAL TO SUPPLY

[17] Subsection 103.1(7) sets out the test for granting leave under section 75 of the Act. It reads:

| | |
|---|---|
| 103.1 (7) The Tribunal may grant leave to make an application under section 75 or 77 if it has reason to believe that the applicant is directly and substantially affected in the | 103.1 (7) Le Tribunal peut faire droit à une demande de permission de présenter une demande en vertu des articles 75 ou 77 s'il a des raisons de croire que l'auteur de la |

applicants' business by any practice referred to in one of those sections that could be subject to an order under that section.

demande est directement et sensiblement gêné dans son entreprise en raison de l'existence de l'une ou l'autre des pratiques qui pourraient faire l'objet d'une ordonnance en vertu de ces articles.

[18] The law is clear that there must be sufficient credible evidence to give rise to a bona fide belief (i) that an applicant is directly and substantially affected by the refusal to supply and (ii) that an order could be made under subsection 75(1)(a-e) of the Act (Symbol Technologies Canada ULC v. Barcode Systems Inc., 2004 FCA 339, at paragraph 16, and National Capital News Canada v. Milliken, 2002 Comp. Trib. 41, at paragraphs 14-15).

THE PRODUCT

[19] The UCDA says that the product is IBC's Web Claims Search Application and notes that it has the following distinguishing features:

- The data are available to the UCDA without the need to secure consents from the parties who provide the data.
- It includes integrated industry wide claims data.
- It is offered through IBC's web portal.
- It does not include information about the dollar value of claims.

[20] The UCDA says that the Web Claims Search Application is the product that has been refused, and that, for the reasons described above in paragraph 16, it is a viable product which meets the needs of the UCDA's members in almost all situations.

[21] The IBC takes a different view and says that the product at issue is the right to access IBC's Web Claims Search Application and that the product is therefore properly characterized as a license. IBC says that, because the Tribunal held in Canada (Director of Investigation and Research) v. Warner Music Canada Ltd., 78 C.P.R. (3d) 321, that licenses are not products for the purpose of section 75 of the Act, an order could not be made.

[22] However, I have not been persuaded by this submission. There is no evidence to suggest that IBC ever characterized its arrangements with the UCDA as a license. The evidence is that access to the Web Claims Search Application data was incidental to the UCDA's Associate Membership in IBC.

[23] In the alternative, IBC submits that the proper product market is "vehicle insurance claims data" and that data of that kind is available in both IBC's Web Claims Search Application and in its ASP Database.

[24] Evidence about the contents and attributes of the ASP Database is sparse but it does appear that the UCDA could use the ASP data to operate Auto Check if it were available. In this regard, the Beattie Affidavit says at paragraph 40:

> The Web Claims Search application will remain critical to the Auto Check™ business unless and until UCDA is able to obtain consents from individual insurers to access sufficient ASP information to offer a viable vehicle accident history search service.

[25] As noted above, the Beattie Affidavit shows that the UCDA initially approached IBC asking only for the dollar values of claims on the ASP Database and IBC refused. However, UCDA's request appears to have changed over time into one for access to all the ASP data. This change may have been motivated by IBC's first decision to terminate UCDA's access to the Web Claims Search Application in May 2010. In any event, IBC subsequently agreed to give the UDCA access to the ASP Database but said that consents were required from the insurance companies whose data are found therein (the "Consent(s)"). IBC initially offered to secure the Consents from its members.

[26] However, IBC changed its mind and, instead of providing the Consents itself, required the UCDA to approach each insurance company for its Consent. The UCDA undertook this exercise and, over a period of almost one year, from July 2010 to May 2011 it secured many Consents. On April 18, 2011, the UCDA signed a Service Provider Agreement with IBC for the provision of ASP information from consenting insurers. When the agreement was signed, the UCDA knew that three insurers who had consented had withdrawn their earlier Consents. However, it was not until the end of May 2011 that IBC told the UCDA that several other Consents had also been withdrawn earlier in the year. No reasons were provided. Without those Consents, the UCDA does not have access to sufficient ASP data to make the ASP Database a viable alternative for the data on IBC's Web Claims Search Application.

[27] Given these facts, I find that the Tribunal could conclude that the fact that access to the ASP Database requires Consents, which are not readily available, means that it is not in the same product market as the Web Claims Search Application data for which no Consents are required.

[28] For this reason, I have decided that the Tribunal could conclude that the vehicle insurance claims data from IBC's Web Claims Search Application is the product at issue in this application.

[29] IBC also says that, even if the data on the Web Claims Search Application is the product, leave should be denied because the UCDA fails to consistently describe the product it says is at issue. IBC notes that the data the UCDA received before the Termination is variously described as:

- Web Search claims data.
- Vehicle Insurance claims data
- Supply from the IBC Web Claims Search Application
- Vehicle Insurance Claims data

[30] In my view, there is no lack of clarity. In spite of the various descriptions provided, it is clear that the UCDA is speaking of the data it has received since 1998 using IBC's Web Claims Search Application.

DIRECTLY AND SUBSTANTIALLY AFFECTED – SUBSECTION 103.1(7)

[31] The Beattie Affidavit shows that Auto Check's business accounted for more than 50% of the UCDA's net income in the year ended December 31, 2010. As well, Mr. Beattie says that Auto Check is a service which the UCDA's members consider to be "critical" and that it has been suspended as a consequence of the Termination. In my view, this evidence is sufficient to show that, as a result of the Termination, the UCDA is directly and substantially affected in its business. While it may be useful to consider earnings over time as the Tribunal suggested in Nadeau Poultry Farm Ltd v. Groupe Westco Inc., 2009 Comp. Trib. 6, aff'd 2011 FCA 188, I do not accept IBC's submission that such data is required. Further, it is noteworthy that subsection 103.1(7) reads in the present tense and that the UCDA has provided current information.

THE MEANING OF "COULD"

[32] I now turn to the question of whether an order could be made under section 75 and I think it useful at this juncture to reflect on the meaning of the word "could". The context is important. The question of whether an order "could" be made is being considered in an application for leave which is not supported by a full evidentiary record. Parliament decreed that an applicant would file an affidavit and a respondent would file representations. This means that there will inevitably be incomplete information on some topics. As well, the process is to be expeditious and the burden of proof is lower than the ordinary civil burden which is "a balance of probabilities".

[33] In my view, the lower threshold means that the question is whether an order is "possible" and "could" is used in that sense.

[34] In deciding whether an order is possible the Tribunal must assess whether there is sufficient credible evidence to give rise to a bona fide belief that an order is possible. However, given the context described above, it is not reasonable to conclude that hard and fast evidence is required on every point. In my view, reasonable inferences may be drawn where the supporting grounds are given and circumstantial evidence may be considered.

THE UCDA'S INABILITY TO OBTAIN ADEQUATE SUPPLIES OF A PRODUCT ANYWHERE IN A MARKET ON USUAL TRADE TERMS 75(1)(a)

[35] The UCDA says that IBC is the only supplier of integrated insurance claims data. IBC disputes this saying that the UCDA could acquire the information it needs for its Auto Check business from CarProof and Carfax. However, in my view, the Tribunal could not conclude that the phrase "anywhere in a market" is intended to require the UCDA to purchase the data it needs from Auto Check's competitors.

[36] IBC also says that the UCDA has failed to define the geographic market. However, since the UCDA's members are in Ontario and, since the used vehicle accident histories are sought for their use, it is reasonable to conclude Ontario is the geographic market and that an order could therefore be made.

[37] Finally, with respect to usual trade terms, the evidence shows that the UCDA is willing to continue to pay IBC and since the Web Claims Search Application data is only available from IBC, this aspect of the test is met and an order could be made.

INSUFFICIENT COMPETITION AMONG SUPPLIERS – 75(1)(b)

[38] In my view, because IBC is the sole supplier, the Tribunal could conclude that the UCDA's inability to secure the data on IBC's Web Claims Search Application is due to insufficient competition.

THE PERSON REFERRED TO IN PARAGRAPH (A) IS WILLING AND ABLE TO MEET THE USUAL TRADE TERMS OF THE SUPPLIER OR SUPPLIERS OF THE PRODUCT – 75(1)(c)

[39] There is no question that the UCDA is prepared to continue to pay for the Web Claims Search Application data. In these circumstances, I find that the Tribunal could conclude that this test has been met.

THE PRODUCT IS IN AMPLE SUPPLY – 75(1)(d)

[40] The Beattie Affidavit shows that IBC was able to reinstate the UCDA's associate membership and its access to the Web Claims Search Application after the initial termination of the UCDA's membership on May 26, 2010. Thereafter, it continued supplying the data on a month to month basis until the Termination. Based on this evidence, the Tribunal could conclude that the product is in ample supply.

THE REFUSAL TO DEAL IS HAVING OR IS LIKE TO HAVE AN ADVERSE EFFECT ON COMPETITION IN A MARKET – 75(1)(e)

[41] In my view, the Tribunal could find that IBC's refusal to supply the Web Claims Search Application has caused Auto Check's exit from the market. Since Auto Check was the low cost provider of accident claims searches to approximately 4500 used car dealers and, since it is reasonable to conclude that these dealers will now be forced to purchase more expensive searches from CarProof or Carfax, the Tribunal could find that the test is met.

PART II – PRICE MAINTENANCE – 76(1)(a)(ii)

[42] The test for leave to bring applications under section 76 of the Act is found in subsection 103.1(7.1). It says that the Tribunal must have reason to believe that an applicant is directly affected by any conduct that could be the subject of an order.

[43] For the reasons given in paragraph 31 above, I have concluded that the UCDA is directly affected by the closure of its Auto Check business.

[44] The more difficult question is whether I can conclude that an order "could" be made under subparagraph 76(1)(a)(ii) in the absence of any direct evidence in the Beattie Affidavit showing that IBC's refusal to supply its Web Claims Search Application data to the UCDA is a result of Auto Check's low pricing. The only evidence before the Tribunal is circumstantial.

[45] Some of the circumstantial evidence described below relates to the actions and affiliations of two companies called CGI Group Inc. ("CGI") and i2iQ Inc. ("i2iQ")

[46] In its submissions the UCDA says at paragraph 25:

> UCDA is unable to establish definitively, without discovery pursuant to the Tribunal's rules, whether IBC's refusal to supply occurred because of concerns about Auto Check™'s low pricing policy. However, there is significant circumstantial evidence related to the large difference between Auto Check™ and CarProof prices, the actions of CarProof, connections between CarProof and i2iQ and communications between i2iQ and IBC, that provides reason to believe that IBC's refusal to supply occurred because of Auto Check™'s low pricing policy.

[47] Further in its reply submissions the UCDA said at paragraph 39:

> In this situation, the circumstantial evidence that IBC was acting to benefit CGI, with whom it has a preferred business relationship, and which in turn has a close business relationship with i2iQ and CarProof, is the only evidence on the record related to the reasons for IBC's refusal to supply. It is noteworthy that, as Mr. Beattie indicated in his affidavit, IBC did not provide reasons when it terminated supply to UCDA, and again in its Representations IBC has remained silent about any other reasons for the termination. UCDA submits that in such a situation an adverse inference should be drawn from IBC's silence and/or the "sufficient credible evidence" test should be applied in a manner which allows potentially viable claims to proceed and be tested on the merits rather than be frustrated by the Applicant's inability to access relevant evidence in the possession of the Respondent during the leave stage.

[48] While I accept that circumstantial evidence and reasonable inferences may be relied on, the question is whether the circumstantial evidence in this case meets the requirement that there be sufficient credible evidence to give rise to a bona fide belief that the conduct could be subject to an order.

[49] The UCDA relies on four pieces of circumstantial evidence to show that the Termination was because of UCDA's $7.00 price contrasted with CarProof's price of $34.95. I will deal with each in turn.

(i) The Price Difference

[50] The evidence shows that CarProof has twice approached the UCDA with a view to acquiring its dealers as its customers. These approaches failed because the UCDA believes that its members prefer Auto Check's low priced searches. Accordingly, CarProof's searches will only be attractive to the UCDA's members if Auto Check's low cost searches are no longer available.

[51] The evidence, which is said to suggest that the Termination was due to Auto Check's low price, is as follows:

- CarProof doesn't deal directly with IBC to obtain its ASP data. It deals through an intermediate company. Mr. Beattie speculates that that company is either i2iQ or CGI or perhaps both. CGI is contractually linked to IBC because CGI operates the ASP Database for IBC and provides other data services to IBC members. One service is called Auto Plus and it provides information to assist insurers when making decisions about coverages and premiums. Another service is Enhanced Auto Plus. It includes vehicle claim histories from CarProof.
- I2iQ's website also offers CarProof's vehicle claim history searches and says that i2iQ has a partnership or strategic alliances with CarProof and with a division of CGI called CGI Insurance Information Services. However, there is no evidence about whether i2iQ has a contractual relationship with IBC.

[52] If CGI is the intermediary between CarProof and IBC, the Tribunal is asked to speculate that, because CGI provides important data services to IBC, IBC will be inclined to do a favour for CGI by helping its customer, CarProof. This would be accomplished by refusing to supply data to its low cost competitor Auto Check.

[53] Regarding i2iQ, the evidence shows (i) that i2iQ's CEO is able to say to IBC that UCDA's dealers could purchase data from CarProof, (ii) that i2iQ and IBC were in prompt telephone contact about the UCDA's request for dollar claims information and (iii) that i2iQ has a partnership or strategic alliance with a division of CGI. This information suggests to me that i2iQ has a degree of control over CarProof and that i2iQ has a close relationship with IBC and may be the intermediary selling IBC's data to CarProof. If those facts were true, I must infer that IBC would be inclined to do a favour for i2iQ by, in turn, helping its customer CarProof. Again, this would involve refusing to supply the Web Claims Application Search data to Auto Check.

(ii) CarProof's Actions

[54] These are described in the following paragraphs taken from paragraphs 13-15 of the Beattie Affidavit:

> CarProof has grown substantially and is the market leader in the supply of vehicle accident history searches in Ontario. In 2004, CarProof began distributing false and misleading promotional materials to motor vehicle dealers in Canada, which misrepresented the nature and scope of UCDA's lien search and other services. Following written warnings from UCDA's legal counsel, CarProof abandoned this negative campaign. It again began distributing false and misleading promotional material in 2007 in connection with UCDA's services including its Auto Check™ service. I believe that this may have been motivated in whole or in > part by UCDA's position as the low-price supplier in the market. UCDA's efforts to resolve the situation out of court were unsuccessful, leading it to commence litigation against CarProof. That litigation was ultimately settled in 2009, with CarProof and UCDA issuing a joint statement in which CarProof acknowledged that UCDA provides accident claim information through its Auto Check™ service and undertook not to make misleading statements in the future.

>
> In early 2009, representatives of CarProof approached UCDA and proposed that UCDA partner with CarProof to provide CarProof vehicle accident histories to UCDA members rather than doing so directly through the Auto Check™ business. Such a proposal, if adopted, would have meant the end of the Auto Check™ business. Bearing in mind CarProof's aggressive business tactics and the significantly higher prices at which it provides vehicle accident history searches, UCDA concluded that a relationship with CarProof was not in the best interests of its members and declined the CarProof proposal.
>
> In early 2010, representatives of CarProof again approached UCDA and requested that UCDA partner with CarProof to provide CarProof vehicle accident histories to UCDA members, rather than doing so directly through the Auto Check™ business. UCDA's views on such a relationship had not changed, and we again rejected CarProof's overtures.

[55] In sum, the evidence indicates that CarProof appears to have misrepresented Auto Check's business and has suggested closing it down. However, these efforts have failed because of Auto Check's low price.

(iii) Connections Between CarProof and i2iQ

[56] This topic is dealt with above in paragraphs 51 and 53.

(iv) Communications Between i2iQ and IBC

[57] In June 2009, the UCDA contacted Ms. Pehar of IBC to ask for access to the dollar value claims information in the ASP Database. Shortly thereafter, the CEO of i2iQ spoke to Ms. Pehar and advised her that UCDA could purchase CarProof vehicle history reports and confirmed that he could be contacted if the UCDA wanted to pursue the idea. In the alternative, he suggested that the UCDA could speak directly to CarProof.

[58] The Beattie Affidavit speculates that IBC must have told i2iQ or CarProof of UCDA's request and that the only reason IBC, CarProof and i2iQ were in contact, after the UCDA asked for access to the dollar value claims information, was because they were concerned that, with this information, Auto Check would be a more effective low cost competitor.

CONCLUSIONS

[59] Against this background, it is clear that IBC has a close direct relationship with CGI (through its provision of services and maintenance of the ASP Database) and with i2iQ (it spoke to it about the UCDA's request for dollar value claims data). It is also clear that CGI and i2iQ have close ties to CarProof. Its searches are provided to IBC's members through CGI, and i2iQ appears to have some control over CarProof's operations and sells its searches through its website.

[60] Finally, it is reasonable to conclude based on its past conduct, that CarProof would like to see Auto Check's low cost business closed so that the UCDA's dealers could become potential customers for CarProof's searches.

[61] However, while I can conclude that it is possible that the Termination occurred as a result of IBC's wish to support CarProof's business objectives as a favour to either CGI or i2iQ, I cannot conclude that there is sufficient credible evidence to show the possibility that the Termination by IBC was due to Auto Check's low pricing policy. In these circumstances, an order could not be made.

ORDER

[62] The UCDA is hereby granted leave, pursuant to subsection 103.1(7) of the Act, to commence an application under section 75 of the Act. However, leave to apply under section 76 of the Act is denied.

[63] The UCDA is to have its costs fixed as a lump sum amount payable forthwith based on Column III of Tariff B of the Federal Courts Rules, SOR/98-106. The UCDA is to prepare a bill of costs for review by IBC and, if an amount cannot be agreed, the Registry may be contacted and I will fix the amount once a procedure has been agreed.

DIRECTION

[64] The parties are to consult to see if they can agree about whether an interim supply order can be made and, if so, on what terms. Failing agreement, the Registry may be contacted to discuss arrangements for the hearing of the UCDA's application for interim relief.

DATED at Ottawa, this 9th day of September, 2011

SIGNED on behalf of the Tribunal by the Chairperson.

(s) Sandra J. Simpson

COUNSEL:

For the applicant:

Used Car Dealers Association of Ontario

A. Neil Campbell
Casey W. Halladay

For the respondent:

Insurance Bureau of Canada

Peter Glossop
Graham Reynolds
Geoffrey Grove

26

COMPETITION LAW OF CANADA

General Editors:

Calvin S. Goldman, Q.C.

John D. Bodrug

COMPETITION LAW OF CANADA

RELEASE 25 • 2013

HIGHLIGHTS

Juris Publishing is pleased to present Release 25, 2013 of COMPETITION LAW OF CANADA. This release features significant revisions and updates to Chapter 8 on Conspiracy and Related Provisions and includes new legislation and guidelines to the appendices on the CD-ROM.

The following sections of Chapter 8 have been updated and revised:

- Overview of Section 45 and Related Provisions of the Competition Act
- Legislative History of Section 45
- Elements of the Section 45 Offence
- The Concept of "Competitor"
- The "Agreement" Requirement in the Section 45 Offence
- The Mens Rea Requirements of Section 45
- The Defense and Exceptions in Section 45
- Section 90.1
- Bid Rigging
- Foreign-Directed Conspiracies
- Specialization Agreements
- Agreements relating to Professional Sport
- Agreements between Federal Financial Institutions

Thus, the Tribunal left open the possibility that an industry norm of the vertical integration could be indicative of a larger product market or otherwise reflect circumstances in which a refusal to deal would not be subjected to an order under Section 75.

[iv]—The Geographic Market. Having defined the relevant product in the Chrysler case as Chrysler auto parts, the Tribunal then indicated that its task was to "determine the market in which [the complainant] buys Chrysler auto parts."[35] Thus, while the "product" was assessed with regard to the demands of the complainant's customers, the Tribunal assessed the geographic market with regard to the relationship between the supplier and the complainant.

The Tribunal determined in Chrysler that the appropriate geographic market was Canada rather than North America, as contended by Chrysler Canada. In reaching this conclusion, the Tribunal focused on the different market conditions in the United States and Canada and, in particular, the different prices charged by Chrysler for auto parts in the two countries. Although the Tribunal did not outline a general analytical framework for reaching its conclusion on the relevant geographic market in the same manner that it did with respect to its determination of the relevant "product," it did indicate that "[t]he existence of separate [Chrysler] price lists in the U.S. and Canada and the fact they are intended, according to the evidence of [Chrysler], to respond to different market conditions in the two countries strongly implies the existence of separate markets."[36] The Tribunal later added that "the critical difference between the two sources of supply is price."[37]

Chrysler Canada and Chrysler U.S. parts were physically identical; however; prices sometimes varied for a number of reasons, including slower turnover of inventory in Canada and fluctuations in exchange rates. The complainant's customers could and did buy Chrysler parts from Chrysler U.S. through other exporters when they were cheaper.

---

[35] Canada (Director of Investigation and Research) v. Chrysler Canada Ltd., n. 6, supra, at 12.

[36] Id. at 16.

[37] Id. at 15.

The Tribunal noted that "customers tended to buy exclusively or primarily from [the complainant] those parts that were cheaper to source through Chrysler Canada."[38]

In concluding that Canada and the United States were separate markets, the Tribunal also noted the fact that Chrysler Canada offered "price protection" against changes in price between the time of ordering and delivery, which was not available from Chrysler U.S. until February 1989, and Chrysler Canada provided "availability reports" identifying which parts were immediately available and the time within which other parts could be supplied. The complainant also claimed that Chrysler Canada provided better service by filling a higher percentage of orders immediately with complete and more accurate shipments than Chrysler U.S. However, the Tribunal commented that "whatever problems there might have been in sourcing from Chrysler U.S., they could be overcome by price concessions or other advantages that ... other exporters offered [the complainant's] customers. Insofar as [the complainant's] customers were concerned, he was a preferred source of supply primarily for parts that are cheaper to source in Canada."[39]

The geographic market in the Xerox case was not in issue. The Tribunal noted that "it was tacitly assumed to be Canada."[40]

Subsequent cases before the Tribunal have determined that the Tribunal will follow the same approach for the geographic market definition as it does for other sections of the Act.[41] The Merger Enforcement Guidelines state that a relevant geographic market consists of all supply points that are regarded as close substitutes by buyers.[42]

---

[38] Id. at 13.

[39] Id. at 14–15.

[40] Director of Investigation and Research v. Xerox Canada Inc., n. 6, supra, at 103.

[41] See Robinson Motorcycle Limited v. Fred Deeley Imports Ltd., 2005 Comp. Trib. 52 at para. 8, where the Tribunal states: "... a geographic market [could be found] on the basis that sales are linked to a need for convenient service."

[42] Canada, Competition Bureau, Merger Enforcement Guidelines (Ottawa: Industry Canada, 2004), section 3.19.

Although some commentators have suggested that it is not clear whether the geographic market can be larger than Canada in a Section 75 analysis,[43] the Tribunal in Chrysler appears to have been willing to find a North American market if the competitive factors had suggested that was appropriate. The Director has also indicated a willingness to consider the impact of foreign suppliers in the context of a Section 75 investigation.[44]

[c]—"Business." The Tribunal may make an order under Section 75 only if the complainant carries on a "business" and is substantially affected in, or is precluded from carrying on, that business. Subsection 2(1) of the Act defines a "business" to include "manufacturing, producing, transporting, acquiring, supplying, storing and otherwise dealing in articles," as well as "acquiring, supplying and otherwise dealing in services."

In Chrysler, a majority of the Tribunal adopted the general proposition "that the effect on the entire activity of which the refused supplies are a part should be used" for the purposes of Paragraph 75(1)(a).[45] In that case, the Tribunal accepted Chrysler Canada's submission that the business of the complainant should be viewed as "exporting automotive parts" and rejected the suggestion of the Director that the relevant business of the complainant was limited to "exporting Chrysler Canada auto parts." The Tribunal found the Director's definition unnecessarily restrictive because it "could preclude a proper understanding of the effects of the refusal to supply."[46] This decision, however, still appeared to leave open the possibility of the Tribunal treating different operating divisions within a single corporate entity as separate businesses for the purposes of Section 75.

The Tribunal in the Xerox case found that the complainant's business had three "overlapping aspects," namely, the purchase and

---

[43] Roberts, n. 2, supra, at 209.

[44] Annual Report of the Director of Investigation and Research for the Year Ended March 31, 1991 (Minister of Supply and Services, 1991) at 12–13.

[45] Canada (Director of Investigation and Research) v. Chrysler Canada Ltd., n. 6, supra, at 18.

[46] Id.

sale, refurbishing and servicing of photocopiers. As the Tribunal further held that "all three aspects of the business require access to Xerox copier parts for the business to survive,"[47] it was unnecessary for the Tribunal to decide whether each of the three activities constituted a separate business for the purposes of Paragraph 75(1)(a) of the Act.

[d]—"Substantially Affected"

Paragraph 75(1)(a) requires that the person refused supply be "substantially affected" in his business or "precluded from carrying on business" as a result of his inability to obtain adequate supplies.

Having adopted a broad definition of "business," the Tribunal in the Chrysler case went on to say that the effect of the refusal to supply will not necessarily be established by examining only the overall sales and profit figures of the entire business of the person being refused supply.[48] Rather, the Tribunal indicated[49] that to assess the effect of a refusal to supply, it is necessary to answer the following questions:

(1) Does the product in issue account for a large percentage of the complainant's overall business?

(2) Is the product easily replaced by other products sold by the business?

(3) Does the sale of the product use up capacity that could be devoted to other activities?

(4) Is the product used or sold in conjunction with other products and services so that the effect on the overall results of the business may be much greater than indicated by the volume of the product purchased?

---

[47] Director of Investigation and Research v. Xerox Canada Inc., n. 6, supra, at 102.

[48] The Tribunal did note that such evidence may be relevant to certain cases, saying "in some cases this type of evidence might be conclusive, but only where it is not possible to analyze how the separate parts of the business are related" (Canada (Director of Investigation and Research) v. Chrysler Canada Ltd., supra, n. 6, at 19).

[49] Id. at 18.

27

PRIVATE PARTY ACCESS TO THE COMPETITION TRIBUNAL: A CRITICAL EVALUATION OF THE SECTION 103.1 EXPERIEMENT

PAUL ERIK VEEL[†]

The author examines private access to the Competition Tribunal under section 103.1 of the Competition Act. After considering the proceedings of private parties that have taken place before the Tribunal, he analyzes the requirements that must be met in order to have access and the remedies available. Assessing these from a policy perspective, the author suggests two revisions to the Competition Act: lowering the standing requirement for individuals from having their businesses be "directly and substantially" affected to merely having their businesses be "directly and materially" affected, and expanding section 103.1 to include the possibility of bringing applications for reviewable practices falling under section 79.

[†] B.A. (McGill), J.D./M.A. (Economics) (Toronto). Following his graduation, the author will be clerking for the Honourable Madam Justice Louise Charron at the Supreme Court of Canada.

INTRODUCTION 1486

In contrast with the experience of many other jurisdictions, including the United States,[1] the enforcement of competition laws in Canada has historically been undertaken by governmental bodies. Prior to 1976, individuals in Canada had no standing before courts to enforce competition laws or to seek damages for breaches of competition laws. Legislative amendments introduced in 1976—and continued in section 36 of the current Competition Act—provided individuals with the right to sue for damages for losses caused by certain types of anti-competitive conduct, the most important of these being conspiracies.[2] Section 36 has seen significant use, especially since the introduction of class action legislation, and class actions dealing with anti-competitive conspiracies are now increasingly being litigated in Canadian courts.[3] However, the enforcement of many important provisions of the Competition Act, including the provisions outlined in Part VII prohibiting restrictive trade practices, remained exclusively in the hands of Competition Bureau.

Following a flurry of debate over allowing private enforcement,[4] this situation changed in 2002 with the passage of amendments to the Competition Act, which gave private parties the ability to access the Competition Tribunal to challenge certain restrictive trade practices

1 B.A. Facey & D.H. Assaf, Competition and Antitrust Law: Canada and the United States, 3rd ed. (Markham, Ont.: LexisNexis Canada Inc., 2006) at 489-90 [Facey & Assaf].

2 Competition Act, R.S.C., 1985, c. C-34, s. 36 [Competition Act]. Legislative amendments in 1976 provided individuals with the right under what is now section 36 of the Competition Act to recover damages for losses suffered in certain cases, but private actions under this section were limited by both a) the limitations on the type of offences for which parties could recover damages and b) the inability of parties to seek injunctive relief to prevent the wrong from occurring. See; also Michael Trebilcock, Ralph Winter, Paul Collins & Edward Iacobucci, The Law and Economics of Canadian Competition Policy (Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2003) at 765-75 [Trebilcock et al.].

3 The legal and policy considerations relating to competition class actions in Canada have been explored elsewhere at length. See, e.g., Vol. 3, No. 1, of The Canadian Class Action Review, which was devoted exclusively to issues surrounding competition class actions.

4 See, inter alia, N. Finkelstein & J. Quinn, "Reevaluating the Role of Private Enforcement and Private Party Access to the Competition Tribunal" (Paper presented at the University of Toronto Faculty of Law, 8 December 1995) [unpublished]; Trebilcock & Roach, infra note 7; Roach & Trebilcock Article, infra note 60; Rowley & Campbell, infra note 8.

in limited circumstances.[5] While these changes represented in some ways a substantial break with the traditional model of competition law enforcement in Canada, little academic attention has been paid to them since their introduction.[6] This article will seek to fill this gap by discussing two interrelated issues which have remained largely unaddressed. First, this article will provide a comprehensive overview of the legal framework for private party access. Second, this article will critically assess that legal framework by exploring why private party access is permitted under the Competition Act and whether the current framework optimally furthers the policy objectives of allowing private party access.

It is important to note that this article does not purport to provide a comprehensive theoretical analysis of the private enforcement of competition laws; nor does it attempt to provide an international comparative study of the framework governing private enforcement of competition laws; nor does it analyze in detail the substantive provisions in the Competition Act that are now enforceable by private litigants. While these are worthwhile research programs, these issues have already been examined elsewhere.[7] This paper will not avoid these topics entirely, but it will only engage with them to the extent necessary to effectively analyze the current provisions. Instead, this paper focuses directly on the Canadian provisions governing private access in order to highlight the current state of the law and assess whether the law actually furthers the policy goals of the Competition Act.

This paper will proceed as follows: Part I provides a brief overview of the private proceedings which have taken place before the Tribunal; Part II

5 An Act to Amend the Competition Act, S.C. 2002, c. 16.

6 A cursory overview of the provision and some of the cases is available in John Callaghan, Ian MacDonald & Blair McKechnie, "What about the flood of litigation?", online: (2005) Gowlings Lafleur Henderson LLP <http://www.gowlings.com/resources/PDFs/What%20about%20the%20flood%20of%20litigation.pdf>.

7 See Kent Roach & Michael Trebilcock, "Private Party Access to the Competition Tribunal" (Hull, Que.: 7 May 1996) [Trebilcock & Roach]; R. Jack Roberts, "International Comparative Analysis of Private Rights of Access (A Study Commissioned by Industry Canada; Competition Bureau)", online: (1999) <http://strategis.ic.gc.ca/SSI/ct/roberts-e.pdf>; see also Trebilcock et al., supra note 2 at Chapters 6, 7, 8 and 12.

examines the law of private party access to the Competition Tribunal, both outlining the thresholds that parties must meet in order to obtain access and examining the remedies available to parties; Part III proceeds to assess whether the current legal framework of private party access is effective from a policy standpoint, and it argues that certain changes to the Competition Act would better serve the underlying policy goals of private party access; and Part IV serves as a brief conclusion.

I. A BRIEF OVERVIEW OF PRIVATE PROCEEDINGS BEFORE THE COMPETITION TRIBUNAL

Prior to the amendments which enabled private parties to access the Tribunal, some commentators argued that allowing private access would have disastrous consequences. Rowley and Campbell predicted, inter alia, that procedural safeguards would not prevent the flood of unmeritorious litigation and that the high costs relating to private actions would have an overall negative effect on the Canadian economy.[8] Six years after the introduction of private party access, one can conclude that their predictions were incorrect. Between the coming into force of these provisions in 2002 and December 2008, the Tribunal has considered nineteen applications for leave to make an application under sections 75 or 77.[9] Of these nineteen applications, thirteen were dismissed and six were allowed. Of the six which were allowed, only one application has ultimately been adjudicated on its merits, where it failed, and a full hearing on one other is currently pending. Of the four which were allowed but never heard on their merits, settlements were achieved between the parties in two of 8 J. William Rowley & Neil Campbell, "Private Litigation Over Reviewable Practices: A Cost-Benefit Analysis" in Should Reviewable Practices be Turned into Competition Torts? (A Report prepared for the Competition Policy Group, October 2001) 21 at 117-166 [Rowley & Campbell].

9 Another application was filed in 2007 by London Drugs, but it was withdrawn before the Tribunal considered it; see Competition Tribunal, online: (2007) <http://www.ct-tc.gc.ca/CMFiles/CT-2007-002_0029_53PVI-582007-1463.pdf>.

the cases, one application was withdrawn, and in one leave was not granted under section 106.[10]

These figures, if taken alone, suggest mixed results from the Canadian experiment with private access. The anticipated flood of frivolous claims has not materialized, and with the possible exception of the two cases in which settlements were reached, private applications have not generally been successful, with the majority (68%) failing at the initial stage of seeking leave to bring an application.[11] This lack of success by private applicants at the initial stage could indicate either that the claims were genuinely unmeritorious or that the rules governing private access prevented genuinely meritorious claims from being heard. The following sections address precisely this question by outlining and critically assessing the law of private access.

II. THE LAW OF PRIVATE ACCESS TO THE COMPETITION TRIBUNAL

This Part explores the statutory provisions and case law surrounding private access to the Competition Tribunal. It begins with an extended examination of the conditions which an applicant must satisfy in order to be granted leave. It then briefly examines the remedies available to applicants.

10 Competition Act, supra note 2, s. 106.

11 Of course, there may be other measures of success than simply success by private applicants at the Tribunal. The increased possibility of a company being subject to an application under section 103(1) may have resulted in increased deterrence of reviewable practices which thus could not be the subject of any application, though this obviously cannot be properly assessed.

A. Obtaining Leave to Make an Application 1490

The starting point of an analysis of private access is its governing provisions. The foundational provision governing access to the Competition Tribunal is section 103.1(1), which, at the time of writing states:

> (1) Any person may apply to the Tribunal for leave to make an application under section 75 or 77. The application for leave must be accompanied by an affidavit setting out the facts in support of the person's application under section 75 or 77.[12]

There are three important aspects of this provision. First, there is no automatic right of access to the Tribunal; rather, a person must apply for leave. The conditions for obtaining leave are discussed in greater detail immediately below. Second, under the language of section 103.1 as it has stood from its introduction in 2002, an application can only be made under section 75 (refusal to deal) or 77 (exclusive dealing, tied selling, and market restriction), though amendments to the Competition Act included in Bill C-10 at the time of writing would allow applications to be made under an amended section 76 (price maintenance).[13] Third, the application is undertaken primarily on the basis of affidavit evidence. The application is to be judged summarily, primarily on the basis of affidavit evidence from both parties and without an oral hearing.[14]

12 Competition Act, supra note 2, s. 103.1(1). Bill C-10, the 2009 budget implementation bill, substantially amends the Competition Act. For the purposes of this paper, the most important modification is the amendment of section 103.1 of the Act to include an amended section 76 along with sections 75 and 77 as the provisions under which a person may seek leave to make an application. The amended section 76 introduces price maintenance as a reviewable practice. This change, coupled with the repeal of section 61 of the Competition Act, converts price maintenance from a criminal offence to a civil reviewable practice. Bill C-10, An Act to implement certain provisions of the budget tabled in Parliament on January 27, 2009 and related fiscal measures, 2nd Sess., 40th Parl., 2009 [Bill C-10].

13 Bill C-10, ibid.

14 Barcode Systems Inc. v. Symbol Technologies Canada ULC, 2004 FCA 339, [2004] F.C.J. No. 1657 at para. 24 [Barcode (FCA)]. Section 103.1(6) permits the party served by an application to respond to the application with written representations. The applicant may also be allowed to file a reply to the respondent's response. See Nadeau Poultry Farm Limited v. Groupe Westco Inc. et al., 2008 Comp. Trib. 6.

Various subsections govern the requirements for obtaining leave. Section 103.1(4) prohibits the Tribunal from considering an application for leave where the matter with respect to which leave is sought is the subject of an inquiry by the Commissioner, was the subject of an inquiry by the Commissioner which was discontinued because of a settlement, or has already been brought before the Tribunal by the Commissioner.[15] Section 103.1(8) specifies that leave cannot be obtained where the matter which is the subject of the application ceased more than one year prior.[16]

Beyond the above requirements, the general provision governing the granting of leave is section 103.1(7), which states:

> The Tribunal may grant leave to make an application under section 75 or 77 if it has reason to believe that the applicant is directly and substantially affected in the applicants' business by any practice referred to in one of those sections that could be subject to an order under that section.[17]

In the subsequent jurisprudence, the Tribunal has parsed this provision into two distinct elements: "(1) the applicant is directly and substantially affected in the applicant's business by any practice referred to in section 75

15 Competition Act, supra note 2, s. 103.1(3), (4). In order to enable the Tribunal to more easily decide this question, section 103.1(3) requires the Commissioner to certify within 48 hours of receiving a copy of the application for leave whether or not the matter which forms the subject of the application fits either of these conditions. Ibid. at s. 103.1(3).

16 Ibid., s. 103.1(8).

17 Ibid., s. 103.1(7). Under Bill C-10, the standard that would be applicable for granting leave for applications under section 76 of the Competition Act is not the standard outlined in section 103.1(7). Rather, Bill C-10 introduces a new section, section 103.1(7.1), which creates a modified standard which is solely applicable to granting leave for applications under section 76. This provision reads as follows: "The Tribunal may grant leave to make an application under section 76 if it has reason to believe that the applicant is directly affected by any conduct referred to in that section that could be subject to an order under that section." Bill C-10, supra note 12, s. 431(4). While similar in many ways to the standard in the current section 103.1(7), the standard in the proposed section 103.1(7.1) differs in two respects. First, it removes any reference to an applicant's business, thereby broadening the class of persons who can bring applications. Second, it only requires that an individual be "directly affected" rather than "directly and substantially affected," as is the requirement in section 103.1(7).

or 77 of the Act; and (2) the alleged practice could be subject to an order under that section".[18] The following sections thus first examine the content of these two requirements, before moving on to the required standard of proof.

1. "Directly and substantially affected" – The Standing Requirement

The first of the two requirements which the applicant must fulfill is to demonstrate that "the applicant is directly and substantially affected in the applicant's business by any practice referred to in section 75 or 77 of the Act."[19] This requirement has been exceptionally important in applications under section 103.1. Indeed, in the vast majority of decisions where leave was refused, the reason for refusal was that the applicant did not demonstrate that his business was "directly and substantially affected." It is also important to note that this requirement is effectively a test for standing. In order to be able to bring an application, an individual's business must be directly and substantially affected by the impugned conduct; this implies that neither unaffected businesses nor consumers have standing to bring an application under section 103.1(7).[20] Indeed, this interpretation of the purpose of this provision has been confirmed by the Federal Court of Appeal.[21]

18 National Capital News Canada v. Milliken, 2002 Comp. Trib. 41, at para. 8. [National Capital News].

19 Ibid.

20 The rigidity of this requirement is demonstrated by the Competition Tribunal's decision in Canadian Standard Travel Agency Registry v. International Air Transport Association, 2008 Comp. Trib. 14, in which it held that a trade association representing a large number of allegedly affected businesses did not having standing to bring an application, as the applicant itself was not affected. From a comparative perspective, the class of parties who can obtain standing in Canada under section 103 of the Competition Act is significantly more limited than the class of litigants in the United States that have antitrust standing under American antitrust statutes. For useful discussions of some of the contours of antitrust standing in the United States, see Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters et al., 459 U.S. 519 (1983); Novell, Inc. v. Microsoft Corp., 505 F.3d 302 (4th Cir. 2007).

21 Barcode (FCA), supra note 14 at para. 22.

In terms of the substance of what this provision requires, there has thus far not been any judicial consideration of the requirement that the business be "directly" affected. While the Tribunal has not yet had any reason to address this directness requirement, this language likely has the effect of denying standing to a downstream business whose business suffered from the anti-competitive practices taken against an upstream supplier. Thus, if a retailer's business is negatively impacted by a producer's decision to refuse to deal with a wholesaler who had been supplying that retailer, the directness requirement likely limits standing to the directly affected wholesaler rather than the indirectly affected retailer.[22]

In contrast to the lack of judicial interpretation of the directness requirement, the question of when a business has been "substantially affected" has been explored at length by the Competition Tribunal. The threshold for what has been considered "substantial" by the Tribunal has been quite high. Noting the similarity in wording between section 75(1)(a) and section 103.1(7), the Tribunal has effectively taken "substantial" to mean the same thing in the context of section 103.1(7) as it does in section 75(1)(a).[23] Under section 75(1)(a), "substantially affected" has been interpreted to require an examination of whether the business as a whole has been substantially affected rather than simply examining whether a particular product or product line of that business has been affected,[24] and this interpretation has been adopted into the meaning of substantial in section 103.1(7). Thus, in Broadview Pharmacy v. Wyeth Canada Inc., the Tribunal did not find a direct and substantial effect because the product which was the subject of the application only constituted 5% of the applicant's sales of pharmaceuticals.[25] Similarly, in Construx Engineering Corporation v. General Motors of Canada, evidence that a line of vehicles which was the subject of an alleged refusal to deal constituted 67% of the applicant's sales of new motor vehicles was not considered to be sufficient 22 This limitation is thus likely analogous to the limitation on recovery by indirect purchasers in American conspiracy class actions. For the classic case on this point, see Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720 (1977).

23 Competition Act, supra note 2, ss. 75, 103.1.

24 Chrysler Canada Ltd. v. Canada (Competition Tribunal) (1989), 1989 Carswell Nat 720, 27 C.P.R. (3d) 1, [1989] C.C.T.D. No.49, at 29-31.

25 2004 Comp. Trib. 22. [Broadview].

evidence of a company's business being substantially affected, where there was no indication what percentage of the company's total sales this represented.[26] Even more striking in this regard is the Tribunal's decision in Sears Canada Inc. v. Parfums Christian Dior Canada Inc. and Parfums Givenchy Canada Ltd, where a loss of $16 million was not considered a substantial impact to Sears because "it [was] insignificant in the context of Sears' $6 billion business overall".[27]

By contrast, cases where the Tribunal has found evidence of a substantial impact have been those where the business of the applicant has been virtually ruined by the impugned conduct. In B-Filer Inc. v. The Bank of Nova Scotia, the Tribunal found that the loss of 50% of the applicant's revenue constituted a substantial impact.[28] In Robinson Motorcycle Limited. v. Fred Deeley Imports Ltd., an applicant's business was substantially affected because it relied exclusively on the products which the respondent refused to supply.[29] In Barcode Systems Inc. v. Symbol Technologies Canada ULC, the alleged refusal to deal forced the company into receivership and caused it to lay off half of its workforce.[30] Thus, although there are not enough cases to make a definitive statement, it seems that the threshold of what constitutes a substantial impact is a high one.

2. "That could be the subject of an order" – Establishing the Elements of the Practice

The second requirement for being granted leave to make an application is that "the alleged practice could be subject to an order under that section." The initial interpretation of this section was muddled. In the first application under section 103.1, the applicant sought an order to compel the Speaker of Parliament to give him access to the parliamentary press gallery, alleging that the Speaker's failure to do so constituted 26 2005 Comp. Trib. 21 [Construx].

27 2007 Comp. Trib. 6, at para. 33 [Sears].
28 2005 Comp. Trib. 38 [B-Filer (2005)].
29 2005 Comp. Trib, 52, at para. 8 [Robinson].
30 2004 Comp. Trib. 1, para. 16-17 [Barcode (CT)].

a refusal to deal. The Tribunal disposed of this matter by concluding that parliamentary privilege gave the Speaker of the House the right to refuse access to Parliament to individuals and that the Tribunal had no jurisdiction to consider this privilege; the Tribunal did not discuss what, if anything, an applicant was required to demonstrate under this part of the provision.[31] In Barcode (CT), the second application to the Tribunal under section 103.1, the Tribunal removed this evidentiary burden altogether. The Tribunal ruled that in order to be granted leave to make an application to the Tribunal, applicants only had to demonstrate that their business was directly and substantially affected; in this case, the applicant did not have to provide any evidence of all of the statutory elements of the impugned practice.[32]

On appeal to the Federal Court of Appeal, the Competition Tribunal's conclusion on this point was reversed. The Court of Appeal concluded that in an application for leave, "there must be some evidence by the applicant and some consideration by the Tribunal" of all elements of the reviewable practice which is the subject of the application for leave.[33] This has remained the appropriate standard which has been applied by the Tribunal since Barcode (FCA).

To summarize, the current interpretation of section 103.1(7) requires that in order to be granted leave to make an application, applicants must adduce evidence of two things. First, they must establish that their business was directly and substantially affected by the conduct of the respondent. Second, applicants must give some evidence that the respondent's practice met all the statutory elements of reviewable practice with respect to which they are seeking leave.

31 National Capital News, supra note 18.
32 Barcode (CT), supra note 30 at para. 8.
33 Barcode (FCA), supra note 14.

3. "Reason to believe" – The Evidentiary Threshold

Having examined the elements which an applicant must demonstrate in an application for leave, it is also necessary to consider the question of the extent to which parties must demonstrate those elements.[34] Section 103.1(7) does not require that a claim be established on the balance of probabilities, but rather specifies that the Tribunal must have "reason to believe" that the elements could be made out.[35] The exact content of this standard has fluctuated somewhat. The initial test employed by the Tribunal in National Capital News was that the application would have to be "supported by sufficient credible evidence to give rise to a bona fide belief" that the elements of section 103.1(7) could be made out.[36] In Barcode (CT), the Tribunal held that this standard amounted to "less than a balance of probabilities" but more than a "mere possibility".[37] Some decisions have been decided simply on whether the Tribunal "could conclude" that the elements were made out,[38] a standard which necessarily seems to conflict with the fact that a mere possibility is not sufficient. Thankfully, most of the case law has applied the initial test formulated in National Capital News.

While the test to be employed has been fairly constant throughout the case law, the application of that test in determining what constitutes "sufficient evidence" has varied. In some cases, a relatively low requirement has been implemented, with the Tribunal accepting affidavit evidence and limited financial statements as sufficient credible evidence that the applicant's business would be directly and substantially harmed.[39] By contrast, where 34 Obviously, the burden of proof must be lower than a balance of probabilities, since such a high standard would negate many of the benefits of an initial application stage. Moreover, it would be unreasonable to require a demonstration of the elements on an overly onerous standard simply on the presentation of affidavit evidence.

35 Competition Act, supra note 2, s. 103.1(7).

36 National Capital News, supra note 18 at para. 14; approved of by the Federal Court of Appeal in Barcode, see Barcode (FCA), supra note 14 at para. 19; applied in B-Filer (2005), supra note 28 at para. 52.

37 Barcode (CT), supra note 30 at paras. 12-13.

38 Robinson, supra note 29; Quinlan's of Huntsville Inc. v. Fred Deeley Imports Ltd., 2004 Comp. Trib. 15 [Quinlan].

39 Allan Morgan and Sons Ltd. v. La-2-Boy Canada Ltd., 2004 Comp. Trib. 4 [Allan Morgan]. Note, however, that precise data is not required for every element. In Barcode, the no financial statements were given, the Tribunal has refused leave, stating that it would not rely on mere speculation;[40] similarly, where financial information was provided in an affidavit but the basis or manner of calculation of that information has not been provided, leave has been refused.[41] While these decisions seem reasonable, the more difficult ones to understand are those where some financial evidence has been adduced in support of the applicant's contention, but the Tribunal has rejected the evidence as being insufficient, as occurred in Construx.[42] These cases provide only minimal indication in terms of what the courts will accept as sufficient evidence, and the practical meaning of the test in National Capital News is somewhat ambiguous. All that can be said is that while the courts will certainly require some concrete evidence in support of the application, the amount of evidence which is required to constitute "sufficient credible evidence" is unclear.

One final evidentiary point which is worth noting is the impact of section 103.1(11). This section specifies that "in considering an application for leave, the Tribunal may not draw any inference from the fact that the Commissioner has or has not taken any action in respect of the matter raised by it".[43] While this provision has not been judicially considered, its inclusion in the statute is nonetheless important. If the Tribunal were allowed to draw inferences from the fact that the Competition Commissioner had not taken action, a significant additional hurdle would be placed in front of any potential applicants. Especially insofar as one of the policy aims of section 103.1 is to allow private parties to bring valid claims when the Bureau is for some reason unwilling or unable to do so—an idea which is discussed further below—the absence of an explicit provision such as section 103.1(11) might have the effect of completely

---

Federal Court of Appeal inferred that there could be a substantial lessening of competition based on certain facts of the case rather than being provided any evidence directly thereof. See Barcode (FCA), supra note 14.

40 Paradise Pharmacy Inc. and Rymal Pharmacy Inc. v. Novartis Pharmaceuticals Canada Inc., 2004 Comp. Trib. 21, at para. 23 [Paradise]. See also Annable v. Capital Sports and Entertainment Inc. 2008 Comp. Trib. 5 [Annable].

41 Sono Pro Inc. v. Sonotechnique P.J.L. Inc., 2007 Comp. Trib. 18.

42 Construx, supra note 26.

43 Competition Act, supra note 2, s. 103.1(11).

undercutting the policy aims of section 103.1(1). 1498

B. Remedies

The remedy available to parties who successfully bring an application under sections 75 or 77 is injunctive relief that prohibits the impugned practice.[44] In addition to final injunctive relief, interlocutory relief is also available.[45] Section 104(1) authorizes the Tribunal to grant interlocutory relief "having regard to the principles ordinarily considered by superior courts when granting interlocutory or injunctive relief."[46] The Tribunal has indicated that the governing test for interlocutory relief under section 104(1) is that found in RJR-MacDonald Inc. v. Canada (Attorney General).[47] Under this test, the applicant must establish:

1) that there is a serious issue to be tried;[48]

2) that not granting relief will cause irreparable harm to the applicant; and,

3) that the balance of convenience favours the grant of the injunction.[49]

44 Ibid., ss. 75, 77.

45 Interim relief orders may be available even before leave to bring an application has been granted. See Canadian Standard Travel Agency Registry v. International Air Transport Association, 2008 Comp. Trib. 12.

46 Competition Act, supra note 2, s. 104.

47 [1994] 1 S.C.R. 311 [RJR-MacDonald]; see B-Filer Inc. v. The Bank of Nova Scotia, 2005 Comp. Trib. 52 [B-Filer (Interim Relief Order)]; and Quinlan's of Huntsville Inc. v. Fred Deeley Imports Ltd., 2004 Comp. Trib. 28 [Quinlan (Interim Relief Order)].

48 Interestingly, in Quinlan (Interim Relief Order), ibid., the Tribunal rejected the suggestion that because the injunction sought was a mandatory interlocutory injunction, the standard should be the higher "strong prima facie case" standard. This is in tension with other mandatory interlocutory injunction cases which have employed a higher standard, though not necessarily the "strong prima facie case" standard. For example, see Dempster v. Mutual Life of Canada, [2000] I.L.R. I-3748, [1999] O.J. No. 3595 and the cases discussed therein; see also Parker v. Canadian Tire Corp., [1998] O.J. No. 1720.

49 RJR-MacDonald, supra note 47.

Although there have been few decisions which have considered interlocutory relief under section 104(1), the few decided cases thus far suggest that such injunctions will often be readily obtainable. The first factor above will most likely be met if the applicant obtains leave under section 103.1(7). With respect to the second requirement, the Tribunal in Quinlan (Interim Relief Order) held that there was no duty on the part of the applicant to mitigate by making alternative business arrangements and that the loss of sales and goodwill could constitute irreparable harm.[50] Finally, the Tribunal suggested that in a section 75 case, if the products are in ample supply—evidence of which is itself a requirement for obtaining leave—then the balance of convenience will favour the granting of an injunction.[51] Thus, this suggests that interlocutory relief will often be easily available once the applicant has been granted leave.

In contrast to the United States, a successful applicant cannot recover any damages. Section 103.1 has no provision for the awarding of damages; nor do sections 75 or 77. Moreover, section 77(3.1) explicitly states that there may be no award of damages under section 77 to an individual bringing an application under section 103.1.[52] While it is surprising that no analogous provision was inserted into section 75, this does not suggest that damages would be available under section 75 in an application under section 103.1, since injunctive relief is the only remedy contemplated in section 75.

50 Quinlan (Interim Relief Order), supra note 47. Interestingly, in B-Filer (Interim Relief Order), where interlocutory relief was refused, one of the reasons that no irreparable harm was found by the court was that B-Filer had made alternative business arrangements; see B-Filer (Interim Relief Order), supra note 47. Thus, it seems that there is no duty to mitigate, but if the party does mitigate, it will be denied interlocutory relief. This could potentially create a perverse incentive against mitigation.

51 Quinlan (Interim Relief Order), Ibid.

52 Competition Act, supra note 2 at s. 77.

III. THE POLICY AIMS OF PRIVATE ACCESS TO THE COMPETITION TRIBUNAL

Having outlined the law on private access as it currently stands, this section considers whether the law advances the policy aims of the Competition Act. To this end, this Part first considers what the policy goals are of allowing private party access to the Tribunal. It is important to clearly define these policy goals prior to evaluating the effectiveness or appropriateness of these particular provisions, because it is the realization of the underlying purposes which is the standard by which the current provisions must be measured. This Part then examines to what extent these goals are adequately reflected in the current legal framework by critically examining a) the criteria for being granted leave to bring an application, b) the remedies available to private litigants, and c) the substantive scope of private party access.

In order to elucidate the rationale underlying private party access, it is first necessary to remember the oft-stated maxim that the purpose of competition law is to protect competition, not competitors. Indeed, from an economic perspective, the harm of anti-competitive conduct is not that it harms competitors. Rather, the harm of anti-competitive conduct is the dead-weight social loss that occurs when markets are not operating efficiently.[53] Though for broader reasons rather than the more narrow welfare justifications provided by economic theory, the purpose of the Competition Act likewise seems to be the protection of competition. The purpose clause in section 1.1 begins by stating that "the purpose of the Act is to maintain and encourage competition in Canada," and it then proceeds to list a number of reasons why competition is protected.[54] While there are a number of goals fostered through the protection of competition—and there have been significant debates over how to balance those often-

53 Trebilcock et al., supra note 2 at 40. For an economic analysis of the harms of monopolistic situations, see Chapter 1 of Jean Tirole, The Theory of Industrial Organization (MIT Press, 1988).
54 Competition Act, supra note 2, s. 1.

competing goals[55]—the overarching objective is to protect competition itself rather than competitors.[56] This is further confirmed by the fact that the majority of the most important substantive provisions of the Competition Act only proscribe conduct which harms competitors when that conduct also has an anti-competitive effect, and not when it simply has a harmful effect on a competitor.[57]

This conception of the purpose of competition law has particularly important implications for the private enforcement of competition law. As Rothstein JA wrote in Barcode (FCA) with respect to private party access:

> the purpose of the Competition Act is to maintain and encourage competition in Canada. It is not to provide a statutory cause of action for the resolution of a dispute between a supplier and a customer that has no bearing on the maintenance or encouragement of competition.[58]

Thus, private party access is not justified on the basis that it can be used by parties to rectify private wrongs, but on the basis that it is instrumentally effective insofar as it serves the socially desirable end of promoting competition.[59]

The theoretical strengths and weaknesses of permitting private enforcement of law in favour of public ends are well-examined by

---

55 For the debate over how these goals are balanced, see Canada (Commissioner of Competition) v. Superior Propane Inc., 2000 Comp. Trib. 15, 7 C.P.R. (4th) 385 at para. 404-413; Canada (Commissioner of Competition) v. Superior Propane Inc., 2001 FCA 104, 199 D.L.R. (4th) 130, 269 N.R. 109, [2001] 3 F.C. 185, 2001 CarswellNat 2092, 3 F.C. 185, 11 C.P.R. (4th) 289.

56 For an introductory discussion relating to the historical debate over the purpose of competition law in Canada, see James Musgrove, "Introduction and Overview: The Purpose of Canadian Competition Law" in James Musgrove, ed., Fundamentals of Canadian Competition Law (Toronto: Thomson Carswell, 2007) 1.

57 See, inter alia, Competition Act, supra note 2, ss. 45, 75, 77, 79, 92.

58 Barcode (FCA), supra note 14 at para. 23.

59 Indeed, Tribunal decisions support this justification. In the cost order resulting from the litigation in Robinson v. Deeley cost order, para.31, the Tribunal wrote that "[p]rivate Competition Act litigation is an important enforcement procedure of the Act." See Robinson Motorcycle Limited v. Fred Deeley Imports Ltd., 2005 Comp. Trib. 40.

Trebilcock and Roach and bear reviewing here. On the one hand, there are significant benefits which can flow from allowing private parties to enforce public laws: private enforcement can supplement public enforcement with additional resources, which is particularly important if the public enforcer has limited resources; private enforcers may be in a better position to detect breaches of the law; and private enforcement is an efficient means of holding public enforcers accountable for their decisions not to take action.[60] These considerations certainly apply in the competition context, as the Bureau is resource-constrained and the cost of litigating complex competition cases can be high.[61] Private party access to the Tribunal can thus play an important role in relieving the Competition Bureau of some of its responsibilities, rectifying any perceived under-enforcement, and ensuring effective competition. However, as Trebilcock and Roach note, there are also harms which can result from private enforcement of the law: private enforcement can result in over-deterrence; private enforcers can engage in strategic enforcement or bring frivolous claims;[62] and private enforcement can undermine a coherent plan of public enforcement.[63] Put broadly, this implies that while private enforcers may play a useful role in achieving a public end, because their incentives structure differs from that of a public enforcer, allowing private enforcement of the law may also result in certain societal harms. This suggests that private enforcement should be allowed, but the rules which govern that private enforcement should be structured in such a way as to attempt to bring private incentives

60 Kent Roach & Michael Trebilcock, "Private Enforcement of Competition Laws" (1996) 34 Osgoode Hall L.J. 461 [Roach & Trebilcock Article] at 488; see also the "Interim Report on the Competition Act" (Report of the Standing Committee on Industry, June 2000) at Chapter Six, online: (2000) <http://cmte.parl.gc.ca/Content/HOC/committee/362/indu/reports/rp1031742/indu01/13-ch6-e.html>, 61 "Study of the Historical Cost of Proceedings Before the Competition Tribunal", Report Prepared for the Competition Bureau, online: (1999) <http://strategis.ic.gc.ca/pics/ct/wiserep-e.pdf> [Cost Study].

62 Indeed, the potential for frivolous litigation is quite substantial. One study reported that between 1992 and 2000, only 1% of reviewable complaints were found by the Bureau to be meritorious of action on their part, suggesting that there may be a large pool of unsatisfied complainants. See Rowley & Campbell, supra note 8 at 56.

63 Roach & Trebilcock Article, supra note 60 at 488-89; this final concern is less of an issue in Canadian competition law since the Commissioner has a right under section 103.2 to intervene in a private application.

in line with public aims, i.e., encouraging parties to bring meritorious litigation and dissuading parties from bringing frivolous or strategic litigation.

It is important to note that this conception of private party access is one in which private party access is instrumentally effective as a mechanism for fostering competition. Contrary to what Trebilcock and Roach suggest,[64] allowing this type of private party access to the Tribunal should not be—and has not been, as evidenced by Rothstein JA's comment cited above—justified on grounds of corrective justice. Corrective justice would require the vindication of an applicant's rights where they have been infringed or violated.[65] However, as noted above, the general conception of competition law is that it protects competition rather than competitors; a corrective-justice framework of private access would necessarily imply that a primary goal is protecting competitors. Moreover, it seems difficult to argue that any type of private right belonging to competitors is explicitly protected by competition law. This is because the Competition Act only prohibits actions when they have an anti-competitive effect and not simply when a business is harmed. For example, a refusal to deal which ruins a business only runs afoul of section 75 if it has an "adverse effect" on competition.[66] However, whether there has been an adverse effect on competition or not, the business itself has been affected in the exact same manner by the refusal to deal. If corrective justice was a legitimate rationale, the law would protect the business whether or not the practice caused an adverse effect on competition, while the law in fact only prohibits the practice if it results in reduced competition. Thus, although certain types of private actions not considered here, such as those permitting recovery by consumers under section 36, might be justified in part by theories of corrective justice, it is important to bear in mind that the private party access to the Tribunal considered by this article is justified by the social benefit such access brings in terms of protecting competition. With this 64 Roach & Trebilcock Article, Ibid. at 488.

65 For a general overview of corrective justice, see E.J. Weinrib, The Idea of Private Law (Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1995).
66 Competition Act, supra note 2, s. 75.

in mind, the following sections examine the extent to which the current framework of private party access appropriately structures the incentives of private parties to bring them in line with the public goal of fostering competition.

A. Obtaining Leave to Make an Application

As discussed above, section 103.1(7) requires an applicant seeking leave to establish 1) that his business is directly and substantially affected by the practice, and 2) that the alleged practice could be subject to an order under sections 75 or 77. While much of the current mechanism for bringing an application is appropriate from a policy standpoint, the policy considerations discussed above would justify a different standard for the first requirement, i.e., the standing test.

Both a) the requirement to seek leave to make an application, and b) the requirement to give some evidence in support of each statutory element of a reviewable practice are reasonable from a policy standpoint. There are a number of reasons for this. First, an initial application stage provides an opportunity for frivolous or vexatious claims to be dismissed without exposing the respondent to long and costly litigation.[67] Second, it provides an opportunity for novel legal claims to be tested at lower cost to the applicants, thereby actually increasing the possibility of a genuinely meritorious, though novel, claim being brought. Third, by providing a low-cost forum for the adjudication of novel claims, the jurisprudence on the legal meaning of certain statutory provisions can be expanded relatively easily. Indeed, the applications brought under section 103.1 have provided at least some additional definition to certain provisions.[68] This clarity is

67 This goal has been successfully accomplished by the current provisions. While the merits of many of the cases are debatable, at the very least it seems clear that the applicant in National Capital News would have failed in an application under section 75. See National Capital News, supra note 18. A seemingly frivolous claim was also dismissed in Annable, supra note 40

68 At the very least, the applications under section 103.1(1) have helped define some of the outer contours of the requirements of section 75. Perhaps the best example of this is that especially important in Canadian competition law, where few cases have been litigated and the contours of many statutory provisions are unclear.

By contrast, the current test for standing—which requires that the applicant's business be directly and substantially affected—is overly onerous. On the one hand, it does make sense to have some type of standing requirement. It is desirable that the applicant actually has some genuine interest in the outcome of the application in order to ensure that the applicant has an incentive to properly litigate what could be, if the application for leave is allowed, a long and costly process. On the other hand, there should not be an overly arduous threshold for standing which arbitrarily bars genuinely interested applicants who have a sufficient incentive to properly litigate a claim.[69]

The particularly problematic aspect of this requirement from a policy perspective is the notion that what is "substantial" is to be assessed in the context of the entire business. There are two problems with this. First, as noted above, in terms of the rationale for having a standing requirement in order simply to give standing to applicants who will take proper steps to effectively litigate the application, there seems to be no justification for denying standing to applicants whose companies have only had one product line of their business impacted; this is particularly the case if the degree to which the firm has been affected is still relatively substantial in absolute terms, even if it is not substantial in proportion to the total size of the business.

Second, and more importantly, it should be remembered that the purpose of competition law is to protect competition rather than competitors. From the perspective of protecting competition, the assessment for impact should be with respect to the product in question rather than the firm. To give a concrete example, whether Givenchy refuses to supply its perfumes the meaning of "substantially affected" in section 75(1)(a) has been given some additional precision by certain decisions, e.g., Broadview, supra note 25; Paradise, supra note 40.

69 Perhaps the most obvious example of this is in Sears, supra note 27. Given that they stood to lose about $16 million, it seems surprising to suggest that they did not have a sufficient interest to bring an application.

to Sears or to a small retailer which exclusively sells Givenchy perfume, the anti-competitive effect is equivalent, as the competition in the sale of Givenchy's perfume has been reduced.[70] If the purpose of competition law is to protect competition rather than competitors, then it seems arbitrary that the small retailer should be given standing but Sears should not.[71] The focus should be on the anti-competitive effects on the particular product market rather than on the producer or retailer of that product.

Given the policy considerations listed above, it seems that a better requirement for standing would be a provision that requires that the business be "directly and materially" affected rather than "directly and substantially" affected.[72] The former term would still ensure that the applicant has a sufficient interest to effectively litigate the action, but it

70 While a discussion of the anti-competitive effects of vertical restraints are outside the scope of this paper, for an overview of the economics of vertical restraints, see Doris Hildebrand, Economic Analyses of Vertical Agreements – A Self-Assessment (The Hague: Kluwer Law International, 2005) at 11-23 [Hildebrand].

71 On a related point, this also suggests that the tribunal looking to section 75.(1)(a) in order to inform the meaning of "substantial" in section 103.1(7) may have been somewhat misguided. In the context of section 75(1)(a), the requirement of the business being "substantially affected" was a substantive statutory element of the reviewable practice, since, as Trebilcock et al. write, the history of this provision was that it was, atypically in the Competition Act, one that was—but no longer following the introduction of section 75(1)(e) in 2002—concerned with the protection of downstream businesses rather than protecting competition per se. See Trebilcock et al., supra note 2 at 420-21. By contrast, "substantially affected" in section 103.1(7) is not a substantive element of the reviewable practice but rather a provision which limits standing. Thus, the purpose of the term is different in the two sections, and the Tribunal should have considered this when interpreting "substantially affected" in the statutory context of section 103.1(7).

72 This point may appear somewhat academic, since applicants under section 75 would still have to establish that they were substantially affected under the second element of the section 103.1(7) test. However, an overly onerous standing requirement should not restrict the availability of standing to bring a section 77 application. Moreover, the second argument above also speaks to a modification of the meaning of "substantial" in section 75(1)(a), so there may be reasons to change the wording in both sections. Note also that "materially" is the term favoured by Roach and Trebilcock, though they too would not have included the directness requirement. See Roach & Trebilcock Article, supra note 60. By contrast, the standing requirement which would be introduced by Bill C-10 for private applications challenging price maintenance is, as noted above in footnote , that a person be "directly affected." The absence of the requirement that the person be "substantially" affected suggests an even lower threshold for standing than the "directly and materially" standard suggested here.

would not preclude a large firm from bringing an application merely because the effect on its business was relatively small. While this might seem to expand the number of successful applications—especially given the number of applicants that failed to clear the hurdle of being substantially affected—it should be remembered that applicants would still have to establish the elements of underlying reviewable practice including some type of harm to competition.[73] Many of the frivolous applicants which were dismissed by the Tribunal for want of a substantial effect on the applicant's business would still likely be dismissed for lack of an adverse effect on competition. The only difference is that meritorious applicants that could show an adverse effect on competition would not be prevented from accessing the Tribunal merely because their businesses were not completely annihilated.

B. Remedies

As examined above, while the current statutory framework allows parties to seek both interlocutory and permanent injunctive relief, it does not allow parties to recover damages. This section will consider whether there are policy arguments for allowing private parties to recover damages, as some have argued.[74] It will conclude that although there may be some benefits in terms of deterrence from allowing parties to recover damages, there are stronger arguments to limit parties' available remedies to injunctive relief.

There are two potential ways in which allowing successful applicants to recover damages could structure private incentives in line with the socially desirable outcome. First, the potential for recovery of damages gives the aggrieved applicant a greater incentive to bring an application before the Tribunal. Second, the prospect of having to pay damages deters a potential offender from engaging in the anti-competitive conduct in the first place.[75]

73 Competition Act, supra note 2, s. 103.1.

74 For example, see Trebilcock et al., supra note 2 at 82-89, 91.

75 Both these points are noted in a 2002 House of Commons Committee report on

Although both of these arguments seem plausible, they are much weaker upon closer inspection.

With respect to the first mechanism, it should first be noted that it is not immediately clear that an award of damages is actually necessary in order to provide parties with a sufficient incentive to bring applications. Between the introduction of section 103.1 in 2002 and December 2008, 17 applications were brought by private parties under section 103.1 alleging reviewable practices under section 75. By contrast, since the introduction of the Competition Act in 1986, only five applications have been brought by the Bureau to the Tribunal under section 75. There has thus been a significant increase in the number of applications. Second, while the availability of damages awards might increase the number of meritorious applications, it might also increase the incidence of those that are frivolous or merely strategic. Furthermore, the potential for large damage awards might deter sufficiently risk-averse corporations from defending frivolous claims and instead compel them to settle. This could put excessive power in the hands of unscrupulous applicants. Third, even if in some cases the unavailability of damages provided no incentive for a party to bring an application under section 103.1, they could still either make a complaint to the Bureau about the practice in question or apply to the Commissioner to begin an inquiry under section 9.[76] The fact that private parties do not necessarily have sufficient incentives to challenge every reviewable practice does not mean that the private party mechanism is ineffective. Rather, it merely highlights the fact that the Bureau and the existence of a private right of access are not alternatives, but are instead complementary, with the Bureau having a role in bringing certain applications which private parties do not have sufficient incentives to bring.

---

competition law, which argued in favour of the availability of damages for successful private litigants. Standing Committee on Industry, Science and Technology, "A Plan to Modernize Canada's Competition Regime" (April 2002) at 46-48 [Committee Report]. For theory and evidence on the deterrent effect of damages for violation of antitrust laws, see Michael Block, Frederick Nold & Joseph Gregory Sidak, "The Deterrent Effect of Antitrust Enforcement" (1981) 89 J. Pol.'l Econ□□'y.□ 429.

76 Competition Act, supra note 2, s. 9. For a discussion of some of the Commissioner's duties under section 9, see Charette v. Canada (Commissioner of Competition), 2003 FCA 426, 2003] F.C.J. No. 1697.

With respect to the second mechanism discussed above, although awarding damages to successful applicants would likely deter corporations from undertaking reviewable practices, there are two additional considerations which speak against permitting damage awards. First, there is always the possibility of over-deterrence. From a practical standpoint, it is exceptionally difficult to set awards in such a way as to provide the optimal level of deterrence.[77] Moreover, the reviewable practices which can form the basis of an application under section 103.1 can in many circumstances have benign or pro-competitive effects. The possibility of high damage awards might thus deter corporations from engaging in such conduct even when it is not anti-competitive.[78] Second, the possibility of significant cost awards being granted to successful parties may already provide sufficient deterrence against the most egregious practices. In B-Filer Inc. et al. v. The Bank of Nova Scotia, the only application under section 103.1 which was litigated to conclusion, the Tribunal awarded costs to the respondent of almost $900,000.[79] Because of the complexity of competition litigation, the potential for large cost awards being made against the losing party is high. Thus, at least some measure of anti-competitive conduct may already be deterred without the need for significant damage awards.

These observations provide preliminary support for the conclusion that damages should not be available to successful litigants in private actions under section 103.1. However, this paper should not be taken to endorse the proposition that damages should not be awarded. The desirability of damage awards is, using the framework developed above, a question of striking the optimal balance between the benefit of deterring anti-competitive conduct and the harm of frivolous or strategic litigation. While the discussion above suggests that, at the moment, the appropriate balance is already being achieved without the availability of damage awards, a comprehensive assessment of this issue requires significant empirical 77 For a discussion of various theories of optimal deterrence and the difficulties in assessing that optimal level, see William Breit & Kenneth G. Elzinga, "Private Antitrust Enforcement: The New Learning" (1985) 28 J.L. & Econ. 405 at 407-413.

78 For a discussion of some of the benign or even efficiency-enhancing effects of reviewable practices, see Hildebrand, supra note 70 at 16-18; see also Trebilcock et al., supra note 2 at 424, 468-73.

79 B-Filer Inc. et al. v. The Bank of Nova Scotia, 2007 Comp. Trib. 29.

work that is beyond the scope of this paper. It is sufficient for this moment to remark that damage awards should not be made available without the existence of evidence which contradicts the observations and arguments developed above, and any move to introduce damage awards should thus be based on a demonstrable rather than a hypothesized need to deter anti-competitive conduct.

As a final point on this issue, in accordance with the framework developed above, this paper now notes one argument that should not be taken to support the availability of damages for successful litigants. In addition to the instrumental deterrence-based rationales examined above, some have argued in favour of the availability of damages in such actions on somewhat correctivist grounds, suggesting that parties have a right to be compensated for harms suffered as a result of another's anti-competitive conduct.[80] However, for the reasons examined above, this justification has and ought to have limited application in the context of section 103.1, as the purpose of this provision and the Competition Act generally relates to the protection of competitive markets as an objective in and of itself, rather than the protection or provision of any non-instrumental right to individual competitors. Thus, any justification for awarding damages in actions under section 103.1 should be based on instrumental considerations rather than on the notion that competitors possess any inherent right not to be harmed by anti-competitive conduct that section 103.1 allows them to vindicate.

C. The Substantive Scope of Private Access

The final issue which this paper addresses is whether it is appropriate to expand the scope of private access to the Tribunal to allow private parties to bring applications under sections other than sections 75 or 77, or, if Bill

80 For example, in "A Plan to Modernize Canada's Competition Regime," the Standing Committee on Industry, Science and Technology noted that "[t]he right to sue for damages is a fundamental right accorded to plaintiffs in civil proceedings throughout the world. It is an injustice that applicants in Tribunal proceedings should be denied the same fundamental right as any other litigant to claim restitution for the losses they have sustained as a result of another person's anticompetitive conduct." Committee Report, supra note 75 at 47.

C-10 becomes law, under an amended section 76. In questioning what applications private parties should be permitted to bring, the fundamental policy issue remains the same as above; the potential for more effective enforcement of competition laws must be balanced against the potential harm of strategic or frivolous litigation. Based on these considerations, this paper argues that there is a strong case for allowing private parties to bring applications under section 79.[81]

Section 79, which prohibits abuse of a party's dominant position in the market, is a broad provision which can capture a wide cross-section of anti-competitive acts.[82] Section 79(1) states that:

> (1) Where, on application by the Commissioner, the Tribunal finds that
>
> (a) one or more persons substantially or completely control, throughout Canada or any area thereof, a class or species of business,
>
> (b) that person or those persons have engaged in or are engaging in a practice of anti-competitive acts, and
>
> (c) the practice has had, is having or is likely to have the effect of preventing or lessening competition substantially in a market,
>
> the Tribunal may make an order prohibiting all or any of those persons from engaging in that practice.[83]

---

81 This proposal is by no means unprecedented. A 2002 House of Commons committee report recommended expanding the private right of access to include actions under section 79 of the Competition Act. Committee Report, supra note 75 at 50. In its response to this proposal, the government indicated that it preferred to wait until the effect of private party access under section 75 and section 77 could be assessed before making a decision as to whether to expand it to section 79. See Government Response to the Report of the House of Commons Standing Committee on Industry, Science and Technology "A Plan to Modernize Canada's Competition Regime" (October 2002) at 9.

82 For an overview of the law relating to abuse of dominance, see Trebilcock et al., supra note 2 at Chapter 8.

83 Competition Act, supra note 2, s. 79.

The breadth of this provision stems from the scope of the term "anti-competitive act," which is defined in section 78(1) by reference to a non-exhaustive list of eleven examples of anti-competitive acts, and which was held in Canada (Director of Investigation and Research) v. Nutrasweet Co. to include any acts with an anti-competitive purpose.[84]

It seems likely that private applications under section 79 would provide more effective enforcement of the Competition Act. As with all reviewable practices, the private applicants may have better information about the impugned practice than would the Bureau, as well as a greater incentive to bring the application. Given the breadth of section 79, the fact that only nine applications have been brought under its aegis by the Bureau since 1986 suggests that the Bureau may be overly conservative in enforcing the provision.[85] Indeed, the high success rate of the Bureau in section 79 applications suggests that they will only bring an application under section 79 if they are very likely to be successful.[86] This suggests that there may be a role for private parties to play in enforcing the provision in borderline cases. Moreover, if private applicants were to appropriate some of the Bureau's role in enforcing section 79, this would provide the Bureau with more resources to devote to effectively enforcing those areas of competition law where private enforcement would be especially problematic, such as in the merger review process. Finally, given the breadth of the statutory provision and the scant judicial consideration it has received, there may be significant benefits from increased litigation which can adequately define the contours of these provisions.

By contrast, there are not significant concerns over the potential for a flood of strategic or frivolous litigation if private applications can be brought 84 Ibid., s. 78; Canada (Director of Investigation and Research) v. Nutrasweet Co. (1990), 32 C.P.R. (3d) 1 (Comp. Trib) [Nutrasweet].

85 Mark Katz, "Abuse of Dominance" in James Musgrove, ed., Fundamentals of Canadian Competition Law (Toronto: Thomson Carswell, 2007) 147 at 149.

86 The high cost of abuse of dominance applications may explain the limited number of applications brought by the Bureau. One study estimated the costs to the Bureau of investigating and prosecuting NutraSweet at $1,449,195 and Tele-Direct at $2,726,888; see Cost Study, supra note 61 at 19. Nutrasweet, supra note 84; Canada (Director of Investigation and Research) v. Tele-Direct (Publications) Inc. (1997), 73 C.P.R. (3d) 1 (Comp. Trib.).

under section 79. There are two reasons for this. First, the statutory terms of section 79 provide an internal check on the number of potentially meritorious suits which the Tribunal could allow. Section 79(1)(a) limits the provision to situations where "one or more persons substantially or completely control, throughout Canada or any area thereof, a class or species of business." The Tribunal has stated that there will not be a prima facie finding of dominance if the respondent's market share is lower than 50%.[87] This means that the class of businesses to which section 79 could potentially apply is much smaller than that to which sections 75 or 77 could apply. Moreover, the Federal Court of Appeal recently held that section 79(1)(b) requires some aspect of an anti-competitive intent, though subjective intent need not be demonstrated.[88] Furthermore, the court held that "proof of a valid business justification for the conduct in question can overcome the deemed intention arising from the actual or foreseeable effects of the conduct, by showing that such anti-competitive effects are not in fact the overriding purpose of the conduct in question".[89] This can provide respondents with a strong defence to an action under section 79. Finally, unlike section 75(1)(e) which only requires an "adverse effect on competition", section 79(1)(c) requires the prevention or substantial lessening of the competition.[90] Thus, this overview of the statutory requirements of section 79(1) suggests that the difficulties in establishing that a violation of section 79 occurred may significantly dissuade private litigants from bringing unmeritorious claims.

Second, the incentive to bring frivolous litigation is further dampened by the high costs that losing applicants may have to bear. This effect may be especially pronounced in abuse of dominance cases, where the factual and legal issues can be more complex and the costs of litigating even higher than in other types of competition actions.[91] Thus, the difficulties

87 Canada (Director of Investigation & Research) v. Laidlaw Waste Systems Ltd., [1992] C.C.T.D. No. 1, 40 C.P.R. (3d) 289, at para. 68.
88 Canada (Commissioner of Competition) v. Canada Pipe Co., 2006 FCA 233, 49 C.P.R. (4th) 241, 268 D.L.R. (4th) 193, 350 N.R. 291, [2007] 2 F.C.R. 3.
89 Ibid., at para. 73.
90 Competition Act, supra note 2, ss. 75, 79.
91 See Cost Study, supra note 61 at 19.

in establishing an offence, combined with the possibility of a high adverse cost order, will likely provide a deterrent to the bringing of frivolous or strategic actions under section 79.

IV. CONCLUSION

This paper has explored and critically assessed the current framework of private access to the Competition Tribunal. First, it has provided a systematic overview of some of the provisions governing private party access to the Tribunal. This discussion suggests that while the case law on private party access is slowly starting to flesh out the content of section 103.1, there remain some ambiguities, particularly with respect to what constitutes "sufficient credible evidence" to justify granting leave. Applicants should have an understanding of exactly what is required of them at the initial stage of seeking leave, and clarity from the Tribunal on this point would be a welcome development.

Second, this paper has evaluated these provisions from a policy perspective in order to determine whether the current regime is an optimal one in furthering the goals and purposes of competition law in Canada. This was based on a consideration of the degree to which the current framework of private party access appropriately structures the incentives of private parties to align them with the public goal of fostering competition by providing incentives to bring meritorious litigation while still deterring frivolous or strategic litigation. Based on this analysis, two modest revisions to the Competition Act were proposed: lowering the standing requirement for individuals from having their businesses be "directly and substantially" affected to merely having their businesses be "directly and materially" affected; and expanding section 103.1 to include the possibility of bringing applications for reviewable practices falling under section 79.

While there are legitimate concerns that the expansion of a private right of access to the Tribunal could result in an explosion of costly competition litigation, the above analysis suggests that these concerns are limited with respect to the changes proposed. While both the lowering of the standing requirement and the expansion of private access to section 79 would increase the amount of litigation, frivolous and strategic litigation would still be a) dismissed at the Tribunal stage, thereby minimizing social costs, and b) deterred by the power of the Tribunal to award costs to the successful party. Thus, the proposed revisions represent incremental changes which would not open the floodgates to unmeritorious litigation, but which would rationalize the structure of private party access to align it with the underlying policies of permitting that access.

28

Litigating Competition Law in Canada

Second Edition

Editor
Nikiforos Iatrou

LexisNexis

Litigating Competition Law in Canada, Second Edition

November 2023

Library and Archives Canada Cataloguing in Publication

Title: Litigating competition law in Canada / editor, Nikiforos Iatrou ; contributors, Donald Houston & Erich Schultze, Linda Plumpton & James Gotowiec, W. David Rankin, Randal Hughes, Emrys Davis & Kolding Larson, Danielle Royal & David Feldman, Katherine L. Kay & Mark Walli, Scott McGrath & Erin Keogh, Randall Hofley, Kate McNeece & Joseph Osborne, Neil Campbell & Samantha Gordon, Susan Wortzman, Lauren Fishman & Gideon Kwinter.

Names: Iatrou, N. (Nikiforos), 1975- editor.

Description: Second edition. | Includes bibliographical references and index.

Identifiers: Canadiana (print) 20230548741 | Canadiana (ebook) 20230548776 | ISBN 9780433530350 (hardcover) | ISBN 9780433530367 (EPUB)

Subjects: LCSH: Canada. Competition Act. | LCSH: Antitrust law—Canada. Classification: LCC KE1639 .L58 2023 | DDC 343.71/0721—dc23

Published by LexisNexis Canada, a member of the LexisNexis Group

LexisNexis Canada Inc.
111 Gordon Baker Road, Suite 900
Toronto, Ontario
M2H 3R1

Customer Service

Telephone: (905) 479-2665 • Fax: (905) 479-2826
Toll-Free Phone: 1-800-668-6481 • Toll-Free Fax: 1-800-461-3275
Email: customerservice@lexisnexis.ca
Web Site: www.lexisnexis.ca

Printed and bound in Canada.

(11/2023–Pub.8604)

under section 75, 77 or 79 if it "has reason to believe that the applicant is directly and substantially affected in the applicants' business by any practice referred to in one of those sections that could be subject to an order under that section."[22]

There is somewhat different wording vis-à-vis an application for leave to commence an application pursuant to section 76. There, the Act states that the Tribunal may grant leave "if it has reason to believe that the applicant is directly affected by any conduct referred to in [section 76] that could be subject to an order under that section".[23] Thus, an applicant for leave under section 75, 77 or 79 has the extra burden (when compared with section 76) to satisfy the Tribunal that it has been "substantially" affected by the conduct it is complaining about. Otherwise, the Tribunal has formulated the applicable test in an identical fashion:

> ... whether the leave application is supported by sufficient credible evidence to give rise to a bona fide belief that the applicant may have been directly [and substantially] affected in the applicant's business by a reviewable practice, and that the practice in question could be subject to an order.[24]

[2] Sufficient Credible Evidence

[a] Entire Business

The substantial effect on business that must be shown refers to the "entire business" of the applicant, and not to just one particular segment or line of the applicant's overall business. This requirement was dispositive of a number of applications for leave by pharmacies, which sought leave to commence applications against pharmaceutical suppliers who had refused to deal with them. While the lost sales may have constituted a large portion of the pharmacies' pharmaceutical sales business, they did not (or there was no evidence that they did) represent a substantial portion of the pharmacies' overall sales.[25] It is not just a narrow product line that is the Tribunal's focus in assessing leave — it is the entirety of the business.

This was made clear in an application brought by Sears Canada Inc. against

---

[22] Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, s. 103.1(7).

[23] Competition Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-34, s. 103.1(7.1).

[24] National Capital News Canada v. Canada (Speaker, House of Commons), [2002] C.C.T.D. No. 38, 2002 Comp. Trib. 41 at para. 14 (Comp. Trib.), affd [2004] F.C.J. No. 83, 2004 FCA 27, 29 C.P.R. (4th) 421 (F.C.A.); Symbol Technologies Canada ULC v. Barcode Systems Inc., [2004] F.C.J. No. 1657, 2004 FCA 339, 34 C.P.R. (4th) 481 (F.C.A.); Safa Enterprises Inc. v. Imperial Tobacco Co., [2013] C.C.T.D. No. 19, 2013 Comp. Trib. 19 at paras. 12-15 (Comp. Trib.).

[25] 1177057 Ontario Inc. (c.o.b. Broadview Pharmacy) v. Wyeth Canada Inc., [2004] C.C.T.D. No. 24, 2004 Comp. Trib. 22 (Comp. Trib.); Broadview Pharmacy v. Pfizer Canada Inc., [2004] C.C.T.D. No. 23, 2004 Comp. Trib. 23 (Comp. Trib.); Mrs. O's Pharmacy Inc. v. Pfizer Canada Inc., [2004] C.C.T.D. No. 21, 2004 Comp. Trib. 24 (Comp. Trib.); Paradise Pharmacy Inc. v. Novartis Pharmaceuticals Canada Inc., [2004] C.C.T.D. No. 22, 2004 Comp. Trib. 21 (Comp. Trib.).

Christian Dior in response to Christian Dior's decision to terminate its supply agreement with Sears.[26] Sales of Christian Dior products constituted $14 million in revenue for Sears — not an insubstantial amount — but the entirety of Sears' business generated $6 billion in revenue. The lost sales from Christian Dior were small, on a relative basis, and therefore the lost revenue could not constitute a "substantial" effect on Sears.

The result can appear harsh. A consequence of this definition of "substantial" effect may be that large, multi-line companies, such as department stores, could never avail themselves of section 103.1 because the loss of the supply of any one product would never rise to the level of "substantial" to its bottom line. One can question the wisdom of this approach. Perhaps, in keeping with the low burden on the applicant at the leave stage, the Tribunal should broaden its definition of a "substantial effect". For example, the loss of the supply of one product may have qualitative effects on a business, such as having a negative effect on the business's reputation or prestige. A product may generate additional, add-on sales. The profit margin for a particular product may mean its importance is understated by only looking at gross sales numbers.

It must be remembered, however, that the Tribunal can only analyze the evidence that is put before it. If applicants are not making creative arguments, backed by data, with respect to the "substantial" effect on their business, then the Tribunal is prevented from doing the same. For example, the Tribunal, in a line of leave decisions in applications brought by pharmacies, was willing to consider an argument that the loss of a particular line of pharmaceuticals could have cascading effects if customers stopped doing business at the pharmacy altogether in favour of a pharmacy that could fill all of their prescriptions. However, the applicants could not substantiate their fears with any data-based evidence, and thus these arguments were not successful.[27]

[b] Effect of Multiple Proposed Defendants

One potential way to avoid the effects of the broad definition of the applicant's business is to include a number of respondents in the application, putting into issue their cumulative or collective impact on the applicant. Thus, while a department store may never be substantially impacted by just one product, if it can raise concerns about a number of products and manufacturers together, it may be possible to demonstrate a substantial effect.

This situation arose in Nadeau Poultry Farm Ltd. v. Groupe Westco Inc.,[28] where a

---

[26] Sears Canada Inc. v. Parfums Christian Dior Canada Inc., [2007] C.C.T.D. No. 3, 2007 Comp. Trib. 6 (Comp. Trib.).

[27] For example, see Mrs. O's Pharmacy Inc. v. Pfizer Canada Inc., [2004] C.C.T.D. No. 21, 2004 Comp. Trib. 24 at para. 24 (Comp. Trib.).

[28] Nadeau Poultry Farm Ltd. v. Groupe Westco Inc., [2008] C.C.T.D. No. 7, 2008 Comp. Trib. 7 (Comp. Trib.).

chicken processor sought leave to bring an application against a number of respondent chicken producers. The Tribunal considered the collective effect of the respondents' refusal to deal with the applicant. The circumstances of that case were somewhat unique, though, as there was evidence of ties between the various respondents, which allowed the Tribunal to consider them collectively.[29]

A similar issue could have arisen in Stargrove Entertainment Inc. v. Universal Music Publishing Group Canada,[30] a case where the applicant alleged that the respondents, which included both large music labels and smaller ones, were improperly refusing to grant the applicant licenses to reproduce music that was to be sold via low-price CDs, in an effort to maintain high prices for the respondents' own products. The Tribunal was ultimately not convinced that Stargrove's evidence established a "substantial effect", but did not explicitly consider whether that effect had to be separated out to look at the effect caused by each individual respondent (rather, it appears as though the Tribunal was prepared to consider the effect of all of the respondents, collectively).[31] However, in Stargrove there was evidence adduced that the respondents may have acted together in concert to shut out the applicant, and had the Tribunal turned its mind to the issue, this may have been enough to justify treating the respondents collectively.[32] As is discussed below, the Tribunal did grant leave to Stargrove to pursue all of the respondents under section 76 of the Act.

[3] Standard of Proof

The standard of proof applicable on an application for leave is lower than when the application is considered on its merits, and is lower than the ordinary civil burden of balance of probabilities.[33]

However, despite this professed low bar, the Tribunal has required rigorous evidence from an applicant, and has not accepted bald statements as persuasive enough to meet an applicant's evidentiary burden. Where an applicant states that its sales have dropped, or have failed to meet expectations, the Tribunal has demanded backup sales figures and data to support these statements.[34]

---

[29] Nadeau Poultry Farm Ltd. v. Groupe Westco Inc., [2008] C.C.T.D. No. 7, 2008 Comp. Trib. 7 at para. 23 (Comp. Trib.).

[30] Stargrove Entertainment Inc. v. Universal Music Publishing Group Canada, [2015] C.C.T.D. No. 26, 2015 Comp. Trib. 26 (Comp. Trib.).

[31] Stargrove Entertainment Inc. v. Universal Music Publishing Group Canada, [2015] C.C.T.D. No. 26, 2015 Comp. Trib. 26 at paras. 27-28 (Comp. Trib.).

[32] Stargrove Entertainment Inc. v. Universal Music Publishing Group Canada, [2015] C.C.T.D. No. 26, 2015 Comp. Trib. 26 at para. 43 (Comp. Trib.).

[33] Barcode Systems Inc. v. Symbol Technologies Canada ULC, [2004] F.C.J. No. 1657 at para. 17, 2004 FCA 339, [2005] 2 F.C.R. 254 (F.C.A.).

[34] See CarGurus, Inc. v. Trader Corp., [2016] C.C.T.D. No. 15, 2016 Comp. Trib. 15 at paras. 79-87 (Comp. Trib.), affd [2017] F.C.J. No. 842, 2017 FCA 181 (F.C.A.).

29

Stanford Law Review

Volume 72 March 2020

NOTE

Antitrust and Authorized Generics: A New Predation Analysis

Natalie Peelish*

Abstract. Much attention in the antitrust world has been focused on efforts by brand drug manufacturers to delay or deter generic entry into the pharmaceutical markets following these brand drugs' loss of patent exclusivity. Scholars have recounted and criticized recent exclusionary techniques by brand drug manufacturers, including pay-for-delay (or reverse-payment settlement) agreements, noncash pay-for-delay agreements, and product hopping. These efforts, while successful in stymieing generic entry into the prescription drug market, have largely been struck down by courts as anticompetitive in a series of recent decisions. In light of these decisions, a key, but underanalyzed, concern now is that in order to keep generics out of the market, or at least delay their entry, brand manufacturers will turn to a new tactic: predatory pricing using authorized generics. While some scholarly attention was paid to authorized generics in the early 2000s, almost none has been given since the Supreme Court held unlawful brand drug manufacturers' other main exclusionary tactics, despite the fact that the time is now ripe for the launch of authorized generics. Given that courts have already permitted a brand manufacturer's launch of an authorized generic during a first-filer generic's exclusivity period, brand manufacturers could deter generic entry by launching an authorized generic upon the start of the first filer's exclusivity period but pricing the authorized generic below the generic's costs, thereby preventing the generic from recouping its substantial entry costs. Eventually, if generics see a pattern of brands launching authorized generics during the first filer's period of exclusivity, generics may be deterred from entering the market at all before patent expiration, thereby depriving consumers of price competition in the pharmaceutical market, resulting in higher drug prices overall.

* Law Clerk to the Honorable Thomas Ambro, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit; J.D., Stanford Law School, 2019. Many thanks to Mark Lemley for his support and guidance in developing this piece. Thank you also to Barbara Fried and Bernie Meyler, as well as the students in the Stanford Legal Studies Workshop, for their astute feedback. A special thank you to the editors of the Stanford Law Review for their many hours spent improving the quality of this Note, especially Nathan Lange, Thomas Schubert, Lori Ding, Ethan Amaker, Nicole Collins, and my editing team—Will Spelder, Nitisha Baronia, Sam Gorsche, Heather Hedges, and Rob Meyer. This Note reflects only my personal views and not the views of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit or any member thereof.

Antitrust and Authorized Generics
72 STAN. L. REV. 791 (2020)

The problem, however, is that if brand manufacturers are in fact pricing their authorized generics below the generic manufacturers' costs in order to deter generic entry, it is unduly difficult to hold the brand manufacturers accountable under the Supreme Court's current predatory pricing doctrine. Its test, as enunciated in Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., only imposes liability if a predator prices below some measure of its own costs and if there is a reasonable probability that the predator will recoup its initial investment in low prices. This Note provides a new analysis that better accounts for the unique regulatory structure and patent protection of the prescription drug market. It argues that a test based on limit pricing, or pricing below the entrant's costs, would more effectively address this exclusionary conduct that harms consumers.

Antitrust and Authorized Generics
72 STAN. L. REV. 791 (2020)

Table of Contents

Antitrust and Authorized Generics
72 STAN. L. REV. 791 (2020)

Introduction

Brand drug prices continue to rise at high rates and to increasingly high levels. In 2018, prices for 267 commonly used brand-name drugs rose by 5.8%—over twice the rate of inflation.[1] While the rate at which prices increased over the past several years peaked at a whopping 15.9% in 2014,[2] the still-lofty rate of rising drug prices means that Americans will pay more for their healthcare—through their own insurance plans or ultimately, as government spending on healthcare increases, through higher taxes.[3] Examples of exorbitantly priced brand-name prescription drugs have dominated headlines recently—Humira, an immunosuppressant, costs $3,000 per month,[4] while Zytiga, which treats prostate cancer, costs $10,000 per month.[5] Even common drugs such as insulin can now cost over $300 for a single vial (triple what the price was in 2002).[6]

Patients lose when drug prices are high, especially as "cost-containment strategies" by insurance companies have shifted a greater share of prescription drug costs to patients themselves.[7] In a recent poll, 29% of adults reported that cost prevented them from taking their medicine as prescribed at some point in the past year, and 8% reported that their condition worsened because of this.[8]

The main reason that prescription drugs cost so much is that "branded products [are] protected by market exclusivity provisions granted by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and the Food and Drug Administration (FDA)."[9] While generic manufacturers have come under criticism as well for price

1. AARP Pub. Policy Inst., Brand Name Drug Prices Increase More Than Twice as Fast as Inflation in 2018, at 1 (2019), https://perma.cc/NLG5-D5SK. The AARP report notes that 2018 had the "slowest average annual price increase for widely used brand name prescription drugs since at least 2006." Id. (emphasis added). But, as the report makes clear, "in the absence of meaningful legislative change," it is "difficult to determine whether the trend will continue." See id.

2. Id. at 2.

3. Id. at 1.

4. Siena Ruggeri, Exorbitant Drug Pricing: A Moral Issue, NETWORK LOBBY FOR CATH. SOC. JUST. (Mar. 5, 2019), https://perma.cc/E8AH-RYEE.

5. Ezekiel J. Emanuel, Big Pharma's Go-To Defense of Soaring Drug Prices Doesn't Add Up, ATLANTIC (Mar. 23, 2019), https://perma.cc/F7KF-VA3D.

6. See Audrey Farley, Perspective, Drug Prices Are Killing Diabetics. "Walmart Insulin" Isn't the Solution., WASH. POST (Feb. 19, 2019, 3:00 AM PST), https://perma.cc/A3T5-ANGF.

7. Aaron S. Kesselheim et al., The High Cost of Prescription Drugs in the United States: Origins and Prospects for Reform, 316 JAMA 858, 864 (2016).

8. Ashley Kirzinger et al., KFF Health Tracking Poll—February 2019: Prescription Drugs, KFF: POLLING (Mar. 1, 2019), https://perma.cc/WB4R-JVC3.

9. See Kesselheim et al., supra note 7, at 860.

spikes in certain generic drugs,[10] generics are nonetheless critical to providing a low-cost drug option for consumers. Yet efforts by brand drug manufacturers to delay or deter generic entry can have a severely negative impact on consumer welfare in the form of higher drug prices.[11]

Competition between brand and generic drugs in the pharmaceutical industry has long been a topic of discussion for antitrust commentators. The unique nature of the regulatory environment and the patent protection afforded to most brand drug manufacturers makes the pharmaceutical market ripe for antitrust concerns. And indeed, antitrust violations have materialized across the industry as brand drug manufacturers seek to maintain their market exclusivity by delaying or deterring generic entry even after their patents have expired or have been invalidated.[12]

Recently, brand manufacturers have engaged in a more insidious form of exclusionary conduct: launching authorized, or branded, generics to compete with potential generic entrants. There is nothing inherently problematic under the antitrust laws with a brand drug manufacturer launching another product line—after all, antitrust laws encourage competition to lower prices for consumers, and an authorized generic may be just another competitor.[13] An antitrust problem, however, begins to emerge when authorized generics are launched as a means to deter generics from entering the market before patent expiration. If authorized generics are priced in such a way as to effectively deter generics, this may be a form of predation meant to exclude generics from the market in order to maintain the brand manufacturer's patent-induced monopoly. This monopolistic conduct harms consumers because it eliminates generic competitors with lower-priced drug options from the market, leaving consumers with a supracompetitively priced brand drug and an authorized generic that may be only temporarily available at a low price. And harm to consumer welfare is the exact problem the antitrust laws are meant to remedy.

10. See, e.g., Stephen Barlas, Generic Prices Take Flight: The FDA Is Struggling to Ground Them, 39 PHARMACY & THERAPEUTICS 833, 843-45 (2014).

11. See FTC, AUTHORIZED GENERIC DRUGS: SHORT-TERM EFFECTS AND LONG-TERM IMPACT 4 (2011), https://perma.cc/4A4M-6NZP (considering whether and by how much authorized generics may "delay generic entry, diminish generic competition, and reduce consumer benefits from lower-priced generic products"); see also Letter from Rep. Henry A. Waxman to Deborah Majoras, Chairman, FTC (Sept. 13, 2005), reprinted in FTC, supra, at B-2 ("If the rise in authorized generics causes generic drug manufacturers to stop challenging patents for certain products, generic competition will be significantly delayed, and consumers, businesses, and governments will unnecessarily pay monopoly drug prices for much longer periods.").

12. See, e.g., New York ex rel. Schneiderman v. Actavis PLC, 787 F.3d 638, 649 (2d Cir. 2015) (discussing findings that the manufacturer of prescription drug Namenda appeared to have engaged in anticompetitive conduct, thereby violating the antitrust laws, in order "to impede generic competition and to avoid the patent cliff").

13. See infra Part II.D.

As other efforts by brand drug manufacturers to maintain their patent-protected monopolies over drug markets have faced increasing scrutiny by the courts,[14] brand drug manufacturers may now rely more heavily on launching authorized generics in an effort to thwart generic entry and extend the length of their patent and market exclusivity, making this tactic a pressing problem for the antitrust laws.

This Note argues that current antitrust doctrine is ill equipped to account for such practices and advocates for a new predation test using limit pricing, rather than below-cost pricing, as a mechanism for determining whether the launch of an authorized generic during a generic's exclusivity period is anticompetitive.

Part I provides an overview of the various competitors in the pharmaceutical market and the federal regulatory framework that governs the market, particularly the Hatch-Waxman Act. Part II describes competition within the Hatch-Waxman regulatory framework. Part III explains how the launch of authorized generics may be a form of price predation if certain conditions are met, but argues that the Supreme Court's current predatory pricing doctrine is ill equipped to impose liability on this type of exclusionary action. Finally, Part IV puts forth a theory of limit pricing and argues that a limit-pricing test is better suited than the Court's current below-cost test to account for predation by authorized generics.

I. Regulation and Competition in the Pharmaceutical Market

This Part introduces the main cast of characters competing in the pharmaceutical market and the unique regulatory framework in which they act.

A. Primary Actors

As a preliminary matter, significant competition in the pharmaceutical market occurs between brand drugs and generic drugs.[15] Brand drugs are those which are protected by patents. These patents enable brand manufacturers to exclude other competitors during the patent term, thereby allowing them to maintain a legal monopoly over the market for the patent-protected drug.[16] A generic drug is one "created to be the same as an already marketed brand-name drug in dosage form, safety, strength, route of administration, quality, performance characteristics, and intended use."[17] Generics may differ in their inactive ingredients, colors, or flavors, since trademark laws prohibit generic drugs from looking identical to brand drugs.[18] The advantage of generic drugs is that they are priced much lower than brand drugs because, at least under the current legal framework, the generic manufacturers need not conduct the same costly clinical trials on generic drugs or spend "huge sums [on] advertising, marketing, and lobbying."[19] Authorized generics add another element to this competitive framework, discussed further in Part II below.

14. See FTC v. Actavis, Inc., 570 U.S. 136, 141, 158 (2013) (holding that pay-for-delay agreements may constitute antitrust violations); In re Loestrin 24 Fe Antitrust Litig., 814 F.3d 538, 549 (1st Cir. 2016) (holding that noncash pay-for-delay agreements are governed by Actavis); King Drug Co. of Florence v. Smithkline Beecham Corp., 791 F.3d 388, 394 (3d Cir. 2015) (same); see also Schneiderman, 787 F.3d at 654 (holding that product hopping, a practice whereby brand drug manufacturers reformulate their drugs and thereby extend patent exclusivity in order to delay generic entry, violates the Sherman Act).

15. See Richard G. Frank & Raymond S. Hartman, The Nature of Pharmaceutical Competition: Implications for Antitrust Analysis, 22 INT'L J. ECON. BUS. 301, 304 (2015).

The nature of this competition between the brands and generics in the pharmaceutical market is due in large part to this market's unique regulatory structure, which determines which drugs may enter, when they may enter, and how long they may stay.

B. The Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act

The Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (FDCA)[20] governs the manufacturing and marketing of all pharmaceuticals in the United States. The FDCA requires that any pharmaceutical company wishing to market a new drug first submit a New Drug Application (NDA).[21] The application must set forth "full reports of investigations" showing whether the drug is safe and 16. See Allan N. Littman, Monopoly, Competition and Other Factors in Determining Patent Infringement Damages, 38 IDEA 1, 6 (1997) (noting that "patents are legal monopolies the value of which depends on the marketplace" (capitalization altered)).

17. Generic Drugs: Questions & Answers, U.S. FOOD & DRUG ADMIN., https://perma.cc/4PJL-FUSM (last updated June 1, 2018).

18. Melissa Stoppler, Generic Drugs, Are They as Good as Brand Names?, MEDICINENET, https://perma.cc/2SV6-RHU7 (archived Jan. 16, 2020). While brand drugs and generic drugs are, in the vast majority of cases, interchangeable products (and the FDA treats them as such, see Generic Drug Facts, U.S. FOOD & DRUG ADMIN., https://perma.cc/XMN2-8Z5N (last updated June 1, 2018)), the minor differences between brands and generics may affect certain people such that they cannot substitute the products, see, e.g., Beth Levine, The Truth About Generic vs. Brand-Name Medications, HUFFPOST (Feb. 22, 2015, 9:11 AM ET), https://perma.cc/JPV4-5PLS. For the purposes of this Note's analysis, however, I treat the drugs as equivalent and perfectly substitutable as that is nearly always the case.

19. ASS'N FOR ACCESSIBLE MEDS., GENERIC DRUG ACCESS & SAVINGS IN THE U.S. 24 (2017), https://perma.cc/4C3Q-X3NX.

20. 21 U.S.C. §§ 301-399i (2018).

21. Id. § 355(a).

effective and "a full list of the articles used as components of such drug."[22] The FDA must approve the NDA before the new drug may be marketed.[23]

Even before the FDCA underwent significant changes in 1984,[24] the FDA permitted the marketing of generic copies without requiring generic manufacturers to submit an NDA, at least for drugs whose brand-name equivalents were approved and had been in use "to a material extent or for a material time."[25] In a 1970 rulemaking, the FDA established the Abbreviated New Drug Application (ANDA) for generic manufacturers wishing to enter the market,[26] whereby the generic manufacturers needed only to confirm that the generic drug had the same therapeutic effect and active ingredient as the brand drug.[27]

However, there were still significant limitations on the ability of generic manufacturers to take advantage of the abbreviated approval process. Critically, "the FDA's initial ANDA process applied only to generic forms of drugs approved by the FDA prior to 1962."[28] For any drug approved after 1962, the FDA kept confidential the reports attached to the brand drug's NDA.[29] Section 301(j) of the original FDCA "prohibited the public disclosure or use of any method or process obtained by FDA . . . where such information was entitled to protection as a trade secret."[30] This prevented generic manufacturers from leveraging the brand manufacturer's existing information and research in order to bring a drug to market without having to incur the same, often highly expensive, start-up costs. As a result, before the Hatch-Waxman Act amended the FDCA, generics did not have a large presence in the pharmaceutical market.[31]

C. The Hatch-Waxman Act

While the FDCA has been amended several times, the most influential changes came in 1984. Concerned about rising drug prices, Congress enacted

22. Id. § 355(b).

23. Id. § 355(a).

24. See infra Part I.C (describing the 1984 Hatch-Waxman Act's amendments to the FDCA).

25. See Ellen J. Flannery & Peter Barton Hutt, Balancing Competition and Patent Protection in the Drug Industry: The Drug Price Competition and Patent Term Restoration Act of 1984, 40 FOOD DRUG COSM. L.J. 269, 272 (1985).

26. See 21 C.F.R. §§ 314.92-.99 (2019); see also Approval of Certain New-Drug Applications and Supplements, 35 Fed. Reg. 6574, 6574-75 (Apr. 24, 1970).

27. Flannery & Hutt, supra note 25, at 274.

28. See Elizabeth Stotland Weiswasser & Scott D. Danzis, The Hatch-Waxman Act: History, Structure, and Legacy, 71 ANTITRUST L.J. 585, 587, 589 (2003).

29. Id. at 589-90.

30. Flannery & Hutt, supra note 25, at 272.

31. Weiswasser & Danzis, supra note 28, at 590.

the Drug Price Competition and Patent Term Restoration Act of 1984,[32] otherwise known as the Hatch-Waxman Act, which governs the approval of brand and generic drugs today. The Act emerged as a balance between the competing interests of making lower-cost generic drugs more available while still incentivizing brand manufacturers to innovate and to develop new drugs. In so doing, the Act enables brand manufacturers to "enforce and protect their patent rights prior to generic entry," while also facilitating generic entry by "substantially relaxing the testing requirements imposed on generic manufacturers" and allowing them to take advantage of the safety and effectiveness data already submitted by the brand manufacturers as part of their NDAs.[33] The Act made several key changes to the FDCA in order to effectuate these goals.

First, the Hatch-Waxman Act adopted "bioequivalence" as the new standard for approval of a generic ANDA. For a generic to be bioequivalent, it must use the same active ingredient; be absorbed by the body at approximately the same rate and to the same extent; and contain the same conditions of use, route of administration, dosage form, strength, and labeling as the brand drug.[34] If the generic manufacturer can prove as much, the Act allows it to use the safety and efficacy studies already submitted by the brand drug manufacturer as part of its original NDA[35]—avoiding the costly submission of replicated scientific studies and data and better facilitating entry of generics into the pharmaceutical market.

Second, the Act created an "experimental use exception" that "insulates ANDA-related clinical research from patent-infringement liability."[36] This exception enables generic drug manufacturers to begin bioequivalence testing before the expiration of the patent on the relevant brand drug.[37]

Third, the Act incentivizes generic manufacturers to enter the market by granting the first ANDA filer a 180-day exclusivity period, during which only that generic and the brand drug can be marketed.[38] This 180-day exclusivity period is immensely profitable for the first-filer generic because it effectively

32. Pub L. No. 98-417, 98 Stat. 1585 (codified as amended in scattered sections of the U.S. Code) (enacting the Hatch-Waxman Act in its original form); see also Medicare Prescription Drug, Improvement, and Modernization Act of 2003, Pub. L. No. 108-173, §§ 1101-1104, 117 Stat. 2066, 2448-61 (codified as amended at 21 U.S.C. §§ 355(j), 355a; and 35 U.S.C. § 271(e) (2018)) (amending the Hatch-Waxman provisions).

33. Weiswasser & Danzis, supra note 28, at 590.

34. 21 U.S.C. § 355(j)(2)(A), 355(j)(8)(B).

35. See id. § 355(j)(2)(A)(iv), (vi).

36. Thomas Chen, Note, Authorized Generics: A Prescription for Hatch-Waxman Reform, 93 VA. L. REV. 459, 464 (2007).

37. Id.; see also 35 U.S.C. § 271(e)(1).

38. 21 U.S.C. § 355(j)(5)(B)(iv)(I), (II)(aa)-(bb).

grants a temporary monopoly over the generic market, a prospect that induces generics to enter the market to reap a higher profit.[39]

At the same time, the Act protects the brand manufacturers by restoring part of the patent term that elapses while the brand manufacturer awaits FDA approval of its NDA. The extension period is capped at five years, for a total effective patent term of no more than fourteen years.[40] The purpose of the patent term restoration is to enable brand manufacturers to recoup the costs expended during the lengthy NDA approval process while also compensating the brand manufacturers for the generic drug industry's use of the proprietary reports and studies that they generate as part of their NDA applications.[41]

Additionally, the Act created a new mechanism for the resolution of patent disputes. The Act requires the generic manufacturer to certify that it has met one of the following criteria with respect to each patent listed in the Orange Book[42]:

- Paragraph I: "[P]atent information has not been filed" by the brand manufacturer.[43]
- Paragraph II: The patent has expired.[44]
- Paragraph III: The generic manufacturer indicates "the date on which the patent will expire."[45]
- Paragraph IV: The "patent is invalid or will not be infringed by the manufacture, use, or sale of the new drug for which the [ANDA] is submitted."[46]

---

39. See, e.g., FTC, supra note 11, at i ("During that period, because of the absence of competition, both the generic drug price and the first-filer's revenues are significantly higher than they would be when there are additional generic competitors. Congress created this exclusivity as an incentive for generic companies to enter as soon as possible by challenging invalid patents or patents that are not infringed.").

40. See 35 U.S.C. § 156(a)(4), (c), (g).

41. See JOHN R. THOMAS, CONG. RESEARCH SERV., R44643, THE HATCH-WAXMAN ACT: A PRIMER 5 (2016), https://perma.cc/CYT2-YLN9 ("[O]bservers have frequently noted that [the Act] presents a fundamental trade-off: In exchange for permitting manufacturers of generic drugs to gain FDA marketing approval by relying on safety and efficacy data from the brand-name firm's NDA, the brand-name firms receive a period of regulatory exclusivity and patent term extension.").

42. The "Orange Book," or the Approved Drug Products with Therapeutic Equivalence Evaluations, is the compilation of all approved pharmaceuticals and associated patent information. Approved Drug Products with Therapeutic Equivalence Evaluations (Orange Book), U.S. FOOD & DRUG ADMIN., https://perma.cc/S2N5-4HL8 (last updated Oct. 18, 2019).

43. 21 U.S.C. § 355(j)(2)(A)(vii).

44. Id.

45. Id.

46. Id.

If an applicant makes a certification under Paragraph I or II, so long as the other regulatory requirements are met, "approval may be made effective immediately."[47] An ANDA bearing a certification under Paragraph III, however, may not be approved "until the [brand] drug's listed patent expires."[48]

If an ANDA makes a Paragraph IV certification attesting to noninfringement or patent invalidity on the part of the brand drug, the generic manufacturer must notify the brand manufacturer that holds the patents at issue.[49] The brand manufacturer may then file a patent infringement suit within forty-five days of receiving the required notice from the generic manufacturer that submitted the Paragraph IV ANDA; this filing triggers an automatic thirty-month stay on FDA approval of the ANDA unless a court decision that the patent is invalid or not infringed is made earlier.[50] Then, so long as the generic has not been held to infringe the brand drug's patent, the FDA allows the generic drug to be marketed and must grant the first filer of the ANDA the 180-day exclusivity period.[51]

Along with the Hatch-Waxman Act, states have further facilitated generic accessibility through substitution laws and regulations.[52] These substitution rules often provide, with certain exceptions, that a pharmacist may fill a prescription by substituting a generic drug in for a brand drug if a generic drug is available.[53] "Currently, all States have some form of generic substitution law."[54]

The Hatch-Waxman Act has significantly increased "both the speed and success of generic entry."[55] According to an FTC report, "[i]n 2009, 74 percent of all U.S. prescriptions . . . were filled by generics, up from 43 percent in 1996

47. Id. § 355(j)(5)(B)(i).

48. THOMAS, supra note 41, at 7; see also 21 U.S.C. § 355(j)(5)(B)(ii).

49. Id. § 355(j)(2)(B).

50. Id. § 355(j)(5)(B)(iii).

51. Id. § 355(j)(5)(B)(iii)-(iv).

52. For example, California authorizes a pharmacist to substitute a generic for a brand drug (or biological product) if certain conditions are met, such as the generic having the same active ingredients and dosage and the prescriber not having indicated that substitution is not permissible. See CAL. BUS. & PROF. CODE §§ 4073, 4073.5(a) (West 2019). Georgia similarly authorizes a pharmacist to substitute a "pharmaceutically equivalent" generic drug or "an interchangeable biological product" for "the express purpose of making available to the consumer the lowest retail priced" equivalent drug or interchangeable biological product in stock. GA. CODE ANN. § 26-4-81 (2019).

53. See Richard Cauchi, State Laws and Legislation Related to Biologic Medications and Substitution of Biosimilars, NAT'L CONF. ST. LEGISLATURES (May 3, 2019), https://perma.cc/Z7C4-3PQ9.

54. PLIVA, Inc. v. Mensing, 564 U.S. 604, 628 (2011) (Sotomayor, J., dissenting).

55. Saami Zain, Sword or Shield? An Overview and Competitive Analysis of the Marketing of "Authorized Generics," 62 FOOD & DRUG L.J. 739, 742 (2007).

and only 19 percent in 1984."[56] As of 2016, "[g]enerics account for 89% of prescriptions dispensed" in the United States, but "only 26% of total drug costs."[57] The Generic Pharmaceutical Association credits much of the success of generic marketing efforts to the 180-day exclusivity period promised by the Act, stating that "[t]he vast majority of potential profits for a generic drug manufacturer materialize during the 180-day exclusivity period."[58] This exclusivity period is so important to generic drug manufacturers because once the exclusivity period expires and other generics may enter the market, the resulting price competition will "drive[] prices to the competitive level," which can be "as little as 20% of the pre-generic-entry prices," thus "making immediate entry by multiple firms unpromising" for the profit-seeking generic.[59]

D. Authorized Generics and Hatch-Waxman

While not explicitly addressed by the Hatch-Waxman Act, authorized generics have come to play a major role in the pharmaceutical market by taking advantage of the regulatory framework established by the Act. Authorized generics are "pharmaceutical products that are approved as brand-name drugs but marketed as generic drugs."[60] Authorized generics may be launched by the brand drug manufacturer itself (or an authorized third-party distributor) via the brand drug's NDA, rather than by a separate manufacturer via an ANDA.[61]

Authorized generics first achieved popularity and profitability in the early 2000s as a result of greater generic adoption by pharmacists in general,[62] but they have continued to grow in prominence more recently.[63] The price of an authorized generic is usually lower than that of the corresponding brand-name drug, making it competitive with other generics on the market.[64] The FTC

56. FTC, supra note 11, at 3.

57. ASS'N FOR ACCESSIBLE MEDS., supra note 19, at 16.

58. FTC, supra note 11, at 4 (alteration in original) (quoting Generic Pharm. Ass'n, Comment Letter on Authorized Generic Drug Study: FTC Project No. P062105, at 2 (2006), https://perma.cc/CV8M-58FX).

59. See Herbert Hovenkamp, Antitrust and the Patent System: A Reexamination, 76 OHIO ST. L.J. 467, 491 (2015).

60. FTC, supra note 11, at i.

61. See JOHN R. THOMAS, CONG. RESEARCH SERV., RL33605, AUTHORIZED GENERIC PHARMACEUTICALS: EFFECTS ON INNOVATION 6 (2013), https://perma.cc/PT2V-9C6Z.

62. See id.

63. See Carol Forster, The Value of Authorized Generics, U.S. NEWS & WORLD REP. (May 19, 2016, 6:00 AM), https://perma.cc/9XND-KYUQ ("[A]uthorized generics have steadily increased in popularity. By 2014, more than one-third of brand drugs had a matching authorized generic.").

64. See THOMAS, supra note 61, at 1.

found that authorized generics were present in 61% of first-filer exclusivity periods from 2003 to 2008.[65] And this percentage likely would have been higher but for agreements between brand manufacturers and generic manufacturers not to launch an authorized generic during the first-filer generic's exclusivity period in exchange for delayed first-filer entry.[66]

Because the FDA maintains that a brand manufacturer need not file an ANDA or an NDA in order to market its drug as an authorized generic,[67] it is relatively easy for brand manufacturers to launch authorized generics since they do not have to pay any of the startup costs associated with a new drug such as clinical trials and regulatory reports.[68] And because the Hatch-Waxman Act's 180-day exclusivity period does not cover drugs that do not require some form of application, authorized generics may enter the market during the first filer's exclusivity period.[69]

Courts have agreed with the FDA. In Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd. v. Crawford, the D.C. Circuit held that the Hatch-Waxman Act "clearly does not prohibit" authorized generics from being sold during the 180-day exclusivity period.[70] Further, in Mylan Pharmaceuticals, Inc. v. U.S. FDA, the Fourth Circuit held that the Hatch-Waxman Act did not prohibit a brand drug manufacturer from marketing an authorized generic through a third-party manufacturer during the first-filer generic's exclusivity period.[71] As a result, brand drug manufacturers have continued to launch authorized generics at the beginning of or during the first-filer exclusivity period.

65. FTC, supra note 11, at 26. The prevalence of authorized generics during exclusivity periods may suggest that, in some cases, brand manufacturers found it profitable to launch authorized generics in order to compete with generics even without using them as a means of predation, but rather to preserve some of their market share that would have otherwise been lost to generic manufacturers. What this 61% does not capture, however, is how frequently the authorized generics were in fact used as a form of predation to deter generic entry. See infra Part IV.C.

66. See FTC, supra note 11, at 26-27.

67. See THOMAS, supra note 61, at 10-11.

68. See generally Thomas J. Moore et al., Estimated Costs of Pivotal Trials for Novel Therapeutic Agents Approved by the US Food and Drug Administration, 2015-2016, 178 JAMA INTERNAL MED. 1451, 1454 (2018) (finding that the median cost of clinical trials for new drugs from 2015 to 2016 was $19 million).

69. FTC, supra note 11, at 4; THOMAS, supra note 61, at 10-11.

70. 410 F.3d 51, 55 (D.C. Cir. 2005).

71. See 454 F.3d 270, 276 (4th Cir. 2006).

II. Competition Within the Hatch-Waxman Act's Regulatory Framework

This Part describes how the Hatch-Waxman Act both impedes and facilitates competition among these various actors in the pharmaceutical market, as well as the potential antitrust concerns posed by authorized generics.

A. Price Competition

The Hatch-Waxman Act, insofar as the competition regarding the generic first filer's exclusivity period is concerned, created three distinct periods of competition within the pharmaceutical market: pre-exclusivity, exclusivity, and post-exclusivity. In the pre-exclusivity period—during the patent term and before first-filer generic entry—a brand manufacturer can price its brand drug at whatever price the market will sustain because patent protection grants the brand drug a legal monopoly.[72] And this monopoly period can last for years: "[T]he median length of [post-patent-approval] market exclusivity is 12.5 years for widely used drugs . . . and 14.5 years for highly innovative, first-in-class drugs . . . ."[73]

Any competing brand drugs have different molecules as their active ingredients and compete primarily on quality and clinical profile rather than on price. For example, Bystolic is a brand drug that treats hypertension with the patented nebivolol molecule as its active ingredient,[74] meaning that during the patent term, no other drug can compete directly by producing a drug with the nebivolol molecule as its active ingredient. However, there are numerous other drugs, with different molecules as their active ingredients, that also treat hypertension.[75] Bystolic may have tried to market itself as a better or more appropriate hypertension drug than others in order to acquire customers. But, for those patients who needed or wanted Bystolic in particular, its manufacturer had a monopoly over the market for the nebivolol molecule, forcing consumers to buy brand-name Bystolic and pay whatever monopoly price Bystolic's seller charged. Thus, in practice, "competition between 2 or more

72. Indeed, this market exclusivity is the "most important factor that allows brand manufacturers to set high drug prices for brand-name drugs." Kesselheim et al., supra note 7, at 861.

73. Id.

74. See Allergan, Inc., Drug Label Information: Bystolic—Nebivolol Hydrochloride Tablet, DAILYMED (updated Jan. 9, 2019), https://perma.cc/X39Q-XG9V.

75. See Jim Morelli, High Blood Pressure (Hypertension) Medications, RXLIST, https://perma.cc/6CDZ-3W8V (archived Jan. 17, 2020) (describing various categories of hypertension drugs with different active ingredients).

brand-name manufacturers selling drugs in the same class does not usually result in substantial price reductions."[76]

The end of patent protection and the entry of the first-filer generic drug transforms the market from a legal monopoly to a duopoly of sorts during the exclusivity period. The brand manufacturer still has a legal monopoly over its precise formulation of the drug, but the first-filer generic manufacturer can produce a product with the same active ingredient; absorbed by the body at the same rate and to the same extent; and with the same conditions of use, route of administration, dosage form, strength, and labeling.[77] Importantly, the first filer is afforded a legal monopoly over the generic market during the 180-day exclusivity period. And because the first filer has a monopoly over the generic version of the drug, the FTC found that, in the absence of authorized generic competition, the generic drug is priced, on average, at 86% of the brand price before generic entry.[78] Thus, consumers may choose between the high-priced brand drug and the modestly lower-priced generic drug.

The exclusivity period granted to the first filer is a critical incentive for the generic manufacturer to challenge the brand drug manufacturer's patents through a Paragraph IV certification because it enables the generic manufacturer to recoup its expenses, including research and development and litigation. This recoupment occurs through the generic's higher price (compared to its eventual post-exclusivity price) and the greater market share promised by exclusivity.

After the first-filer generic's exclusivity period ends and other generics enter the market, competition increases. There is typically a significant decrease in generic drug prices, with the added competition "driving prices down to as little as 20% of pre-generic-entry prices."[79] As a result, the brand drug loses on average 90% of its market share within the first year of generic entry.[80] This drop in prices is great for consumer welfare—according to one study, savings attributable to generic competition totaled $253 billion in 2016 alone.[81] Scott Hemphill and Mark Lemley illustrate the dramatic fall in drug prices after the entry of multiple generics with the case of simvastatin, a drug 76. Kesselheim et al., supra note 7, at 861.

77. See supra text accompanying note 34.

78. FTC, supra note 11, at ii-iii. With authorized generic competition, the first-filer generic drug is priced on average at 82% of the brand drug's pre-generic-entry price. Id.

79. Hovenkamp, supra note 59, at 491; see also Zain, supra note 55, at 754 ("[S]tudies using different data sets have found that the average price of generics decrease[s] as more generics enter a market.").

80. FTC, PAY-FOR-DELAY: HOW DRUG COMPANY PAY-OFFS COST CONSUMERS BILLIONS 8 (2010), https://perma.cc/UCH6-7ZWK.

81. ASS'N FOR ACCESSIBLE MEDS., supra note 19, at 39.

treating high cholesterol sold in brand form as Zocor.[82] In that case, around six months after the first generic entered the market, the brand drug sold for around $150 for a one-month supply while the generic sold for as low as $7 for the same quantity.[83] However, "after the first few entrants, the marginal effect of each new entrant on generic prices and shares tends to be negligible"; specifically, the generic price stops significantly decreasing after four or five entrants.[84]

As the price of the generic drug declines, the price of the brand drug either increases or stays the same because of the brand manufacturer's ability to price discriminate—that is, to target those customers for whom the demand for the precise brand formulation is inelastic and charge them a higher cost. But because of the rapid loss in market share, the brand drug is unable to profit to the same extent it did before generic entry.

B. Brand Manufacturers' Response to Generic Competition

Because generic entry can eviscerate a brand manufacturer's market share—sometimes capturing "as much as 80-90 percent [of drug sales] in a matter of weeks"—the vigorous price competition resulting from the increased entry of generics has negatively affected the profits of brand manufacturers.[85] As a result, brand manufacturers have engaged in various efforts—the subject of much discussion and controversy among regulators and academics alike—to protect their profits.[86]

---

82. See C. Scott Hemphill & Mark A. Lemley, Earning Exclusivity: Generic Drug Incentives and the Hatch-Waxman Act, 77 ANTITRUST L.J. 947, 952 (2011).

83. Id.

84. Ernst R. Berndt et al., Authorized Generic Drugs, Price Competition, and Consumers' Welfare, 26 HEALTH AFF. 790, 792 (2007); see also id. at 795 ("Any changes in the long-run number of generics are unlikely to affect generic price and share for the many drugs with more than four or five generic entrants . . . .").

85. See Zain, supra note 55, at 739; see also Frank & Hartman, supra note 15, at 304 ("Rapid market penetration by generic drugs leads to substantial loss of market share by the branded manufacturer and a dramatic decrease in generic and market prices.").

86. See, e.g., FTC, supra note 80, at 1-2 ("Brand-name pharmaceutical companies can delay generic competition that lowers prices by agreeing to pay a generic competitor to hold its competing product off the market for a certain period of time."); Frank & Hartman, supra note 15, at 309 ("The recent and continued trend toward greater generic price discounts and increased generic penetration rates has had a fundamental impact upon the pricing strategies of innovator drug manufacturers."); Kesselheim et al., supra note 7, at 861 ("For pharmaceutical manufacturers, 'product life-cycle management' involves preventing generic competition and maintaining high prices by extending a drug's market exclusivity.").

A popular practice in recent years has been "pay-for-delay" agreements.[87] Pay-for-delay, or reverse-payment settlement, agreements occur when a brand manufacturer agrees to pay a potential generic entrant challenging its patents to stay out of the market for a specified period of time, often a duration shorter than the patent term but longer than the generic manufacturer would have waited if it had prevailed in litigation.[88] These agreements occur within the context of the Hatch-Waxman framework: A generic manufacturer submits an ANDA with a Paragraph IV certification, attesting that its generic product does not infringe any of the brand manufacturer's patents or that the patents are invalid. The brand manufacturer then challenges the generic manufacturer's declaration and files a patent infringement suit against the generic manufacturer, triggering the thirty-month stay. "Given the costs and potential uncertainty of patent litigation," the parties often settle their litigation by allowing the generic to enter at some point before patent expiration but later than when the generic would have entered had it prevailed in the patent litigation.[89] These agreements are also called reverse-payment settlement agreements because the patent holder is paying the patent infringer to stay out of the market, so the payment is "moving in the opposite direction than what would be ordinarily expected in patent litigation."[90] And these payments do not just affect the first-filer generic: Because of the Hatch-Waxman framework, "[b]y paying the generic to delay entering the market, the brand can prevent entry by not only that generic, but also all other generics" since no other generic may challenge the patent after the first filer.[91] These agreements raise antitrust concerns because they enable brand manufacturers to maintain monopoly power over the market for their drug for longer than they ordinarily would if a generic filed a Paragraph IV certification. The FTC has estimated that these settlements cost consumers, taxpayers, and insurance companies approximately $3.5 billion per year.[92]

87. See "Pay-for-Delay" Settlements: Antitrust Violation or Proper Exercise of Pharmaceutical Patent Rights?, A.B.A. (Jan. 31, 2011), https://perma.cc/8S5U-EYKY ("In recent years, there has been a surge of agreements between pharmaceutical patent holders and generic drug manufacturers in which the market entry of competing generic drugs is delayed by agreement, effectively extending the patent holder's market exclusivity and profit."); see also Herbert Hovenkamp, Sensible Antitrust Rules for Pharmaceutical Competition, 39 U.S.F. L. REV. 11, 24 (2004) ("Exit or non-entry payment cases are a novelty in antitrust. They became popular after the Hatch-Waxman Act took effect because of the unique effect that the statute has had on generic entry.").

88. See FTC, supra note 80, at 1-3.

89. Id. at 3.

90. See Gregory H. Jones et al., Strategies That Delay or Prevent the Timely Availability of Affordable Generic Drugs in the United States, 127 BLOOD 1398, 1398-99 (2016).

91. See Michael A. Carrier, Payment After Actavis, 100 IOWA L. REV. 7, 15 (2014).

92. See FTC, supra note 80, at 8.

In FTC v. Actavis, Inc., the Supreme Court held that such pay-for-delay settlements "can sometimes violate the antitrust laws" because they have the "'potential for genuine adverse effects on competition.'"[93] The Court was concerned that, as opposed to a typical settlement, the "payment may . . . provide strong evidence that the patentee seeks to induce the generic challenger to abandon its claim with a share of its monopoly profits that would otherwise be lost in the competitive market."[94] The Court thus held that these agreements are subject to the rule of reason analysis to determine if they violate section 1 of the Sherman Act.[95]

While the Actavis decision clearly subjected pay-for-delay agreements in the form of cash settlements to heightened scrutiny, its effect on noncash exclusionary payments was less clear.[96] As a result, instead of paying generic manufacturers to stay out of the market, brand manufacturers have continued to engage in a variety of exclusionary practices, such as paying generic manufacturers "for IP licenses, for supplying raw materials or finished products, and for helping to promote products."[97] Additionally, brand manufacturers have begun to include no-authorized-generic provisions in these settlement agreements, whereby the brand promises to refrain from launching an authorized generic, forgoing significant profits during the first-filer generic's exclusivity period, in exchange for delayed generic entry.[98] Some courts of appeals have held these noncash pay-for-delay agreements to be subject to antitrust scrutiny under the Actavis decision,[99] but not all courts have weighed in on the issue.

---

93. 570 U.S. 136, 141, 153 (2013) (quoting FTC v. Ind. Fed'n of Dentists, 476 U.S. 447, 460 (1986)). The decision also held that pay-for-delay agreements must be subjected to the rule of reason analysis, rather than making them per se unlawful. See id. at 159. In the rule of reason analysis, the anticompetitive effects of an agreement are weighed against its procompetitive justifications to determine if the agreement is an unreasonable restraint of trade. See 1 WILLIAM C. HOLMES, INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY AND ANTITRUST LAW § 5:7 (West 2019).

94. Actavis, 570 U.S. at 154.

95. Id. at 141, 158-60. Section 1 of the Sherman Act governs horizontal agreements between competitors and prohibits "[e]very contract, combination . . . [,] or conspiracy, in restraint of trade." See 15 U.S.C. § 1 (2018).

96. See Carrier, supra note 91, at 34-35 (comparing cash and noncash pay-for-delay settlements).

97. See Michael A. Carrier, Eight Reasons Why "No-Authorized-Generic" Promises Constitute Payment, 67 RUTGERS U. L. REV. 697, 700 (2015).

98. See id. at 701.

99. See In re Loestrin 24 Fe Antitrust Litig., 814 F.3d 538, 549, 552 (1st Cir. 2016) (holding that noncash reverse payments fall within the scope of Actavis); King Drug Co. of Florence v. Smithkline Beecham Corp., 791 F.3d 388, 394 (3d Cir. 2015) (holding that a "no-[authorized-generic] agreement falls under Actavis's rule because it may represent an unusual, unexplained reverse transfer of considerable value from the patentee to the

footnote continued on next page

The FTC has made combating these agreements "one of [its] top priorities."[100] The reason for such ardent enforcement against pay-for-delay agreements is that they have deleterious effects on consumer welfare, which antitrust laws are designed to prevent.[101] For example, one study analyzing twenty pay-for-delay settlements involving monetary payment found that these settlements represented a $12 billion transfer of wealth from consumers to producers after only one year of delay.[102]

Given that courts and antitrust enforcers have imposed increased scrutiny on both cash and noncash pay-for-delay agreements, there is reason to believe that brand manufacturers will instead turn to authorized generics in order to protect their profits from generic competition, especially as no-authorized-generic provisions have become common terms in noncash pay-for-delay agreements. And, in fact, there was a spike in authorized generic launches in 2014, the year after Actavis was decided.[103] While the number of explicit no-authorized-generic provisions in settlement agreements seems to have decreased in recent years, brand manufacturers have continued to include, in their patent settlements, agreements regarding authorized generics that may have the same effect as explicit no-authorized-generic provisions.[104] For example, in the FTC's most recent report on drug-patent settlement agreements, the FTC noted that the "most common form of possible compensation" in final settlements without explicit compensation is a promise by the brand manufacturer to refrain from using a third party to distribute an authorized generic, which "could have the same effect as an explicit no-[authorized-generic] commitment."[105] Additionally, the FTC remarked that "[a]nother alleged infringer and may therefore give rise to the inference that it is a payment to eliminate the risk of competition").

100. See Prepared Statement of Markus H. Meier, Acting Dir., Bureau of Competition, FTC, to the House of Representatives Comm. on the Judiciary, Subcomm. on Regulatory Reform, Commercial & Antitrust Law 1, 14 (July 27, 2017), https://perma.cc/33FH-XERB.

101. See id. at 14.

102. C. Scott Hemphill, An Aggregate Approach to Antitrust: Using New Data and Rulemaking to Preserve Drug Competition, 109 COLUM. L. REV. 629, 650 (2009).

103. According to the FDA's list of authorized generic launches, there were only 80 launches in 2013, but 156 launches in 2014. See FDA, FDA Listing of Authorized Generics as of December 19, 2019 (2019), https://perma.cc/C4P8-V3HQ. This is consistent with the argument that brand manufacturers have begun to rely upon authorized generics as a substitute anticompetitive strategy. It is important to note that, at least for some of these launches, exogenous factors (such as date of patent expiration) could also have affected the timing of the launch. See infra note 253.

104. See FTC, Agreements Filed with the Federal Trade Commission Under the Medicare Prescription Drug, Improvement, and Modernization Act of 2003: Overview of Agreements Filed in FY 2016, at 1-2, 4 tbl. (2019), https://perma.cc/FK5R-6Z4D.

105. Id. at 1-2.

common form of possible compensation" is a "declining royalty structure, in which the generic's obligation to pay royalties is reduced or eliminated if the brand launches an authorized generic product."[106] This type of agreement, too, may "achieve the same effect as an explicit no-[authorized-generic] commitment."[107]

C. The Effects of Authorized Generics

When a brand manufacturer launches an authorized generic at the beginning of the first-filer generic's exclusivity period, price competition begins much sooner. After the launch, the first-filer generic no longer reaps the benefits of a high drug price during exclusivity, but must now compete with an authorized generic on price in order to acquire customers, thereby driving down the price.[108] On average, the presence of an authorized generic decreases the generic price by 7% to 14%.[109] Additionally, the presence of an authorized generic reduces revenues to the first-filer generic by as much as 40% to 52% during the exclusivity period, and by 53% to 62% during the thirty months following exclusivity.[110] This represents a significant decrease in profits for the first-filer generic. Importantly, FTC economists found that the presence of an additional competitor lowers generic drug prices by a greater incremental amount during the exclusivity period than outside of it, meaning that authorized generics have an outsized effect on the price of the first-filer generic.[111]

A key element in assessing the effects of authorized generics on competition is the interaction between market size—defined as the total revenues generated by a drug—and competition. The literature demonstrates that because market size is a key determinant of the number of entrants, the level of competition varies depending on the size of the drug market. FTC economists studied a large sample of drugs, including those with and without exclusivity periods, and found that drugs in the highest deciles of sales—large drug markets—"clearly face more competitors than lower sales decile drugs."[112] Another study found that there were, on average, 5.8 generic manufacturers present in large markets (outside of the exclusivity period), compared to only 2.7 in smaller

106. Id. at 2.

107. Id.

108. See Berndt et al., supra note 84, at 792.

109. FTC, supra note 11, at ii.

110. Id. at iii.

111. Luke M. Olson & Brett W. Wendling, The Effect of Generic Drug Competition on Generic Drug Prices During the Hatch-Waxman 180-Day Exclusivity Period 29 (FTC, Working Paper No. 317, 2013), https://perma.cc/Q29K-5CC9.

112. Id. at 16.

markets.[113] The study further found that "the incumbent in smaller drug markets lowers price in response to an increase in potential competition, and this price reduction is an effective entry deterrent."[114] This makes sense because as the number of entrants increases over time, the average price of a drug declines;[115] thus, the sales from a drug must be large enough to make entry profitable even when there are additional competitors driving down the unit price.

This trend holds true for Paragraph IV challenges to brand drugs, which, again, are the method of market entry for generic drugs before patent expiration. Paragraph IV challenges were found to "involve a disproportionate number of the highest revenue brand drugs."[116] For example, the top 40% of drugs by revenue with Paragraph IV decisions had annual retail sales "greater than the average cost of brand drug development up to the point [of] FDA marketing approval"—around $970.83 million (in 2007 dollars).[117] In contrast, there were far fewer Paragraph IV challenges for smaller drug markets. For example, one study found that, based on a ranking of drugs in terms of retail sales, only 19.4% of Paragraph IV decisions concerned drugs that were ranked greater than 200th in terms of revenues.[118] By contrast, 33.9% were ranked in the top twenty-five drugs by revenue.[119] Thus, more generics are incentivized to enter drug markets with larger sales than those with relatively smaller sales lest the smaller markets become unprofitable—not only because the price would be driven down, but also because there would be a larger number of players with which to split sales. Insofar as authorized generics are concerned, studies "indicate that the marketing of an authorized generic prior to patent expiration will likely only have a direct impact on drug prices in smaller 113. See Steven Tenn & Brett W. Wendling, Entry Threats and Pricing in the Generic Drug Industry, 96 REV. ECON. & STAT. 214, 216 (2014).

114. Id. at 227.

115. See Ernst R. Berndt & Murray L. Aitken, Brand Loyalty, Generic Entry and Price Competition in Pharmaceuticals in the Quarter Century After the 1984 Waxman-Hatch Legislation, 18 INT'L J. ECON. BUS. 177, 186 & fig.3 (2011). One study found that drug prices decline to approximately 55% of the brand price when only two generics are present, 33% with five generics, and 13% with fifteen generics. See Kesselheim et al., supra note 7, at 861.

116. Laura E. Panattoni, The Effect of Paragraph IV Decisions and Generic Entry Before Patent Expiration on Brand Pharmaceutical Firms, 30 J. HEALTH ECON. 126, 127, 144 (2011) (constructing a novel dataset of seventy-two Paragraph IV decisions and finding that such decisions "included a non-trivial portion of all brand drugs that face generic entry, a disproportionate number of high revenue drugs, and cases where the period of exclusivity at issue was a large portion of the average length of patent protection").

117. Id. at 127.

118. Id. at 138.

119. Id.

markets; whereas in larger markets it may (at most) only delay entry."[120] In larger markets, the revenues are such that the market can sustain a greater number of competitors without meaningful impact on price. But in smaller markets, where competitors are vying for a share of a smaller revenue pool, "studies seem to indicate that an authorized generic would result in higher prices, and possibly the elimination of all entry."[121]

D. Potential Antitrust Concerns with Authorized Generics

Given that authorized generics can enter the market during the first-filer generic's exclusivity period, they have been the subject of controversy among scholars and drug manufacturers alike. Generic drug manufacturers argue that the introduction of authorized generics during the exclusivity period is anticompetitive because it undermines generic drug manufacturers' incentives under the Hatch-Waxman Act to enter the market before patent expiration.[122] This is because, they argue, the higher exclusivity pricing is needed to recoup the costs of the Paragraph IV challenge and ensuing patent litigation.[123] The costs of a Paragraph IV challenge include research and development in formulating the generic version of the drug as well as the litigation expenses of defending against the likely patent infringement suit initiated by the brand drug manufacturer.[124] Though there is a wide range of cost estimates for a Paragraph IV challenge, in 2011, the FTC found that the mean cost of a challenge was $5 million.[125]

Moreover, generic manufacturers rely on this exclusivity period to make "60% to 80% of their potential profit."[126] If they cannot hope to recoup their costs, so the argument goes, generics will not enter the market during the patent term, thereby depriving consumers of a lower-priced drug option.[127] At the same time, it can also be argued that there are significant procompetitive benefits of authorized generics launched during the exclusivity period, namely

120. Zain, supra note 55, at 756.

121. Id. at 756-57.

122. See FTC, supra note 11, at ii.

123. See id.

124. See Hemphill & Lemley, supra note 82, at 951-52.

125. See FTC, supra note 11, at 111. Litigation has been found to increase the cost of a Paragraph IV challenge to at least $10 million. Hemphill & Lemley, supra note 82, at 952.

126. Carrier, supra note 97, at 710 (quoting Daniel F. Coughlin & Rochelle A. Dede, Hatch-Waxman Game-Playing from a Generic Manufacturer Perspective: From Ticlid® to Pravachol®, Apotex Has Difficulty Telling Who's on First, 25 BIOTECHNOLOGY L. REP. 525, 525-26 (2006)); see also id. (indicating that generic pharmaceuticals make the "vast majority of potential profits" during the exclusivity period (quoting FTC v. Actavis, Inc., 570 U.S. 136, 144 (2013))).

127. See FTC, supra note 11, at 4.

that they create competition among generics sooner, thereby driving down the price of generic drugs for consumers during the exclusivity period by as much as 14%.[128]

Nothing would stop a brand manufacturer from lowering the price of its own brand drug to compete with the generics.[129] But the concern unique to authorized generics is that a brand manufacturer can leverage its patent-induced monopoly over a brand drug to deter generic competitors by introducing a nominally differentiated product, in the form of an authorized generic, into the market for generic drugs. The authorized generic can then avail itself of state generic substitution laws, giving it an advantage in competing with the generics that the brand drug lacks. Moreover, brand drug manufacturers launch authorized generics only when facing the threat of generic competition, lest they cannibalize their own market, indicating that this is an anticompetitive tactic aimed at deterring or delaying generic competition.

These concerns accompanying the launch of an authorized generic sit at the intersection of antitrust and intellectual property (IP) law. On the one hand, the purpose of antitrust law is to increase consumer welfare by facilitating robust competition that results in lower prices, better products, and a healthy supply chain. On the other hand, IP law permits and encourages the exclusion of competitors in order to protect and promote innovation. The strategic use of IP to create a less competitive environment does not itself violate the antitrust laws, but antitrust concerns are implicated in the IP context when "one firm possesses [IP-based] market power and uses it in exclusionary ways."[130] More specifically, "the lawful holder of IP giving substantial power in a market might exploit that IP in a manner that expands or protects the power by injuring competitors in a manner not efficiency justified."[131] This would amount to a manipulation of the IP laws that violates the antitrust laws.

III. Authorized Generics as Price Predation

Brand manufacturers that leverage their IP rights in an exclusionary manner have already faced antitrust liability for certain exclusionary tactics—namely, cash and noncash pay-for-delay agreements.[132] This Note focuses on

128. See id. at 33.

129. Unless, of course, the price of the brand drug was so low as to constitute predatory pricing, but this would be an irrational strategy for the brand. And there appears to be no evidence that brand manufacturers are lowering the prices of their branded drugs at all, let alone to predatory levels.

130. See LAWRENCE A. SULLIVAN ET AL., THE LAW OF ANTITRUST: AN INTEGRATED HANDBOOK § 12.6 (3d ed. 2016).

131. Id. § 12.8.

132. See supra Part II.B.

another theory of antitrust liability for authorized generics: price predation. Specifically, brand manufacturers should face antitrust liability if they launch an authorized generic during the first filer's exclusivity period, price it at a predatory level, and thus deter generic manufacturers from entering during the patent term—thereby enabling the brand manufacturers to maintain (unjustifiably) their monopoly for a longer period of time. Liability for this price predation will be more likely to attach in smaller markets in which the profits to be made by a drug are sufficiently low so as to deter entry by generics when an authorized generic is present and priced below the first filer's costs.

Delaying or deterring generic entry harms consumer welfare by lengthening the time during which consumers can buy only the higher-priced drug option. Targeting behavior that is harmful to consumer welfare is the very purpose of the antitrust laws. The problem, however, is that the Court's current predatory pricing doctrine is insufficient to hold liable predatory actors with monopoly power in certain markets that lack fluid entry and exit. The remaining Parts of this Note will discuss the theory of predation, the current predation doctrine as espoused by the Supreme Court in Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp.,[133] and how a limit-pricing test would provide a better alternative to the Brooke Group analysis for penalizing anticompetitive behavior, especially in the unique regulatory environment in which authorized generics exist.

A. The Theory of Predatory Pricing

Broadly speaking, predatory pricing "occurs when a firm with market power [sets] prices below a competitive level for the purpose of, or with the effect of, deterring or eliminating price competition from current or future rivals."[134] It has been described as a "tactic used by highly capitalized firms to bankrupt rivals and destroy competition."[135] The basic theory of predatory pricing is that it is a two-step process whereby a firm strategizes to earn monopoly profits.[136] First, a firm sacrifices short-term profits by engaging in "abnormally low pric[ing] in order to drive rivals from the market," as the rival cannot match such low prices.[137] But "[t]hese low prices do not reflect competition on the merits," as "they will only be available temporarily."[138]

133. 509 U.S. 209 (1993).

134. SULLIVAN ET AL., supra note 130, § 4.1.

135. Lina M. Khan, Note, Amazon's Antitrust Paradox, 126 YALE L.J. 710, 722 (2017).

136. See Aaron S. Edlin, Essay, Stopping Above-Cost Predatory Pricing, 111 YALE L.J. 941, 952 (2002).

137. See id.

138. Id.

Then, once its rivals have been driven out, the predatory firm will raise its prices to a supracompetitive level in order to recoup its investment in charging the initial abnormally low prices and eventually earn an outsized profit.[139] For predatory pricing to be rational, the recoupment gains must be greater than the losses from the initial, predatorily low pricing.[140] Importantly, an incumbent may derive more benefits from a predatory pricing strategy than merely defeating the direct competitor at issue: For example, the predatory regime may send a warning signal to other potential entrants of what they will face upon entry.[141] In this sense, the "predatory behavior can deter future competition before it occurs."[142]

The basic theory of predation using authorized generics is as follows. The brand drug manufacturer, BM, has a patent on drug B. During the term of the patent, or at least until a generic manufacturer enters, BM can charge a supracompetitive monopoly price because the patent prevents any rivals from entering the market until an ANDA has been filed and approved. The first-filer generic manufacturer, GM, submits an ANDA to enter the market with a generic drug, G, that is bioequivalent to B, and makes a Paragraph IV certification attesting either that its drug would not infringe BM's patent or that the patent is invalid. As a result, BM commences patent litigation against GM, triggering the thirty-month stay. Let us assume that the parties do not settle and the thirty-month stay ends without a court decision either way. The FDA then approves the entry of the generic drug into the market, and GM enjoys the 180-day exclusivity period promised by the Hatch-Waxman Act as an incentive for being the first to file and challenge BM's patents.[143] This 180-day exclusivity period enables GM to recoup the costs of the Paragraph IV challenge to B because G has no other generic competitors, meaning that GM can charge a price high enough to make a profit but still lower than the price of B, thereby drawing customers away from BM.

Now assume that BM introduces an authorized generic, AG, into the market at the beginning of G's exclusivity period. If AG is priced lower than G, then GM will be forced to lower its prices in order to compete with AG. If AG is priced below G's marginal costs such that GM is unable to recover its costs of entry and production, then GM will be unable to sustain this low price and will be forced to operate at a loss—especially once the exclusivity period ends and

139. See id.

140. See PHILLIP E. AREEDA & HERBERT HOVENKAMP, ANTITRUST LAW: AN ANALYSIS OF ANTITRUST PRINCIPLES AND THEIR APPLICATION ¶ 723a (CCH 2019).

141. See id. ¶ 726d5.

142. Id.

143. See supra Part I.C.

other generics enter the market, driving down the price even further. GM will eventually be forced to raise its price, exit the market completely, or both.

But the real problem here is not driving GM out of this particular market; rather, it is the deterrence of future Paragraph IV challenges and resultant generic entry. Assuming brand drug manufacturers engage in a pattern of launching authorized generics, which many have already been shown to do,[144] they will gain a reputation for being predatory, and generic manufacturers as a whole will be deterred ex ante from challenging the brand drug's patents given concerns over inability to recoup their initial investment.[145] This will enable a brand drug manufacturer to charge a monopoly price throughout the entire term of the patent as generic manufacturers would be unable to recoup the costs of patent litigation via the exclusivity period. This deterrence of generic entrants is the crux of the problem.

On its face, this conduct poses anticompetitive concerns: A monopolist brand manufacturer takes advantage of a regulatory framework in order to exclude rivals—the very rivals that the regulations were meant to protect. Because "the anticipation of an authorized generic entrant reduces the expected profitability during the exclusivity period," patent challenges by prospective generic manufacturers may thereby be deterred.[146] Yet "[i]f some of those forgone challenges had been successful, then independent generic entry might be delayed in the absence of the challenge, harming consumers."[147]

The problem, as the following Subpart will explain, is that the current legal framework for predatory pricing is insufficient to penalize brand drug manufacturers that launch authorized generics in order to deter generic entry before patent expiration.

B. The Current Framework: The Brooke Group Test

Antitrust law has been concerned with predatory pricing ever since the Supreme Court's decision to break up Standard Oil in 1911.[148] Predatory pricing implicates section 2 of the Sherman Act, which prohibits monopolization and attempted monopolization when a firm "has deliberately followed a course

144. "[B]eginning in 2003 there was a substantial increase in the number of [authorized generic] launches for drugs that were subject to a Paragraph IV certification, and by 2007-2008 most [authorized generics] were versions of drugs for which there had been a Paragraph IV certification." FTC, supra note 11, at 31.

145. See id. at 38 ("[I]n the long-run, the expectation of an [authorized generic] may deter ANDA-generic firms from challenging questionable patents using a Paragraph IV certification.").

146. Berndt et al., supra note 84, at 792.

147. Id.

148. See Standard Oil Co. of N.J. v. United States, 221 U.S. 1, 42-43 (1911).

of market conduct through which it has obtained or maintained power to control price or exclude competition."[149] Here, predatory pricing enables a firm to do both by utilizing its incumbency and cost advantages to squeeze out rivals by pricing at abnormally low levels. Predatory pricing may also implicate the Robinson-Patman Act, which "condemns certain forms of price discrimination," such as when a firm cross-subsidizes its predatory pricing in one market by its actions in another market.[150]

The challenge for courts in predatory pricing cases has been to distinguish between low prices that are part of meritorious competition and low prices that are not. In a series of harsh decisions for would-be predators, such as Utah Pie Co. v. Continental Baking Co.,[151] the Supreme Court's early antitrust case law "reinforced the illegitimacy of predatory pricing."[152] But the Court, influenced by Robert Bork and the Chicago School, subsequently changed course and formulated a new test for predatory pricing in Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp.,[153] premised on the notion not only that competitors would be reluctant to attempt a predatory pricing regime but also that they would rarely be successful in doing so.[154]

The central claim in Brooke Group was made by generic cigarette manufacturer Liggett, which alleged that its competitor Brown & Williamson, which had previously only operated in the brand-name cigarette market, "cut prices on generic cigarettes below cost and offered discriminatory volume rebates to wholesalers to force Liggett to raise its own generic cigarette prices and introduce oligopoly pricing" into the generic cigarette market.[155] When Brown & Williamson entered the generic market, it undercut Liggett's generic prices for wholesale distribution, which instigated a "price war" in the form of rebates between the two manufacturers, during which Brown & Williamson

149. See SULLIVAN ET AL., supra note 130, § 3.1(a); see also United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-71 (1966). See generally 15 U.S.C. §§ 1-7 (2018).

150. See Christopher R. Leslie, Predatory Pricing and Recoupment, 113 COLUM. L. REV. 1695, 1698 (2013); see also 15 U.S.C. § 13(a) ("It shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce . . . to discriminate in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality . . . where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition . . . .").

151. 386 U.S. 685, 703 (1967).

152. See Khan, supra note 135, at 725.

153. See 509 U.S. 209, 222-24 (1993).

154. See Khan, supra note 135, at 726, 729-30 ("[T]he Court adopted the Chicago School's narrow conception of what constitutes this harm (higher prices) and how this harm comes about—namely, through the alleged predator raising prices on the previously discounted good.").

155. See Brooke Grp., 509 U.S. at 212.

"maintained a real advantage over Liggett's prices."[156] After the price war, Brown & Williamson was selling its generic cigarettes "at a loss."[157]

Liggett thus "alleged that Brown & Williamson's volume rebates to wholesalers amounted to price discrimination that had a reasonable possibility of injuring competition," because they were "integral to a scheme of predatory pricing."[158] To effectuate this scheme, Liggett argued, "Brown & Williamson reduced its net prices for generic cigarettes below average variable costs" with the "inten[t] to pressure [Liggett] to raise its list prices on generic cigarettes, so that the percentage price difference between generic and branded cigarettes would narrow."[159] According to Liggett, it would have been impossible to further "reduce its wholesale rebates without losing substantial market share to Brown & Williamson," so it was forced to raise its retail prices.[160] This "resulting reduction in the list price gap" would thus "restrain the growth of the [generic] segment and preserve Brown & Williamson's supracompetitive profits on its branded cigarettes."[161] Thus, the crux of Liggett's claim was that Brown & Williamson would be able to recoup its losses on the generic cigarettes by raising prices on its branded cigarettes.

In analyzing Liggett's claims, the Court made clear that under either the Robinson-Patman Act or section 2 of the Sherman Act, a successful predatory price claim must allege that "[a] business rival has priced its products in an unfair manner with an object to eliminate or retard competition and thereby gain and exercise control over prices in the relevant market."[162] Specifically, the Court required a plaintiff prove two key elements.

First, a plaintiff must demonstrate that the predator reduced its prices to a level "below an appropriate measure of its [own] costs."[163] The Court rejected arguments that an antitrust claim could rest on prices being above cost but "below general market levels or the costs of a firm's competitors," reasoning that "the exclusionary effect of prices above a relevant measure of cost either reflects the lower cost structure of the alleged predator, and so represents competition on the merits, or is beyond the practical ability of a judicial tribunal to control without courting intolerable risks of chilling legitimate price cutting."[164]

156. See id. at 215-16.

157. Id. at 216.

158. Id. at 216-17.

159. Id. at 217.

160. Id.

161. Id. (emphasis added).

162. Id. at 222.

163. Id. (emphasis added).

164. See id. at 223.

Second, a plaintiff must demonstrate that the competitor had "a reasonable prospect," for claims brought under the Robinson-Patman Act, or a "dangerous probability," for claims brought under section 2 of the Sherman Act, "of recouping its investment in below-cost prices."[165] For the Court, "[r]ecoupment is the ultimate object of an unlawful predatory pricing scheme; it is the means by which a predator profits from predation" because "[w]ithout it, predatory pricing produces lower aggregate prices in the market, and consumer welfare is enhanced."[166] Thus, "unsuccessful predation is in general a boon to consumers."[167] The Court emphasized the fact that "below-cost pricing may impose painful losses on its target is of no moment to the antitrust laws if competition is not injured: It is axiomatic that the antitrust laws were passed for 'the protection of competition, not competitors.'"[168] To that end, the plaintiff must show that ultimately "there is a likelihood that the predatory scheme alleged would cause a rise in prices above a competitive level that would be sufficient to compensate for the amounts expended on the predation, including the time value of the money invested in it."[169] In essence, the predator must be able to "obtain enough market power to set higher than competitive prices, and then must sustain those prices long enough to earn in excess profits what they earlier gave up in below-cost prices."[170]

Recognizing that it would be difficult for plaintiffs to meet this test, the Court explained that its rationale for imposing such rigid obstacles to liability for predation was its concern for false positives, which could chill legitimately competitive price cuts that would benefit consumers.[171]

Applying its newly formulated test to the facts at hand, the Court found that Liggett failed to meet the second requirement for showing predatory pricing. While the Court found that Brown & Williamson's prices on its generic cigarettes were indeed below its costs, it held that Liggett had failed to satisfy the recoupment prong.[172] Specifically, Liggett was unable to show that

165. Id. at 224.

166. Id.

167. Id.

168. Id. (quoting Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U.S. 294, 320 (1962)).

169. Id. at 225; see also C. Scott Hemphill & Philip J. Weiser, Beyond Brooke Group*: Bringing Reality to the Law of Predatory Pricing*, 127 YALE L.J. 2048, 2052 (2018) ("As the Court saw it, a price cut—at least as long as the price remains above cost—is unambiguously desirable because it increases output, thereby raising total and consumer welfare.").

170. Brooke Grp., 509 U.S. at 225-26 (quoting Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 590-91 (1986)).

171. See id. at 226-27 ("It would be ironic indeed if the standards for predatory pricing liability were so low that antitrust suits themselves became a tool for keeping prices high.").

172. See id. at 231.

"Brown & Williamson had a reasonable prospect of recovering its losses from below-cost pricing through slowing the growth of generics."[173] It is important to note that much of this analysis turned on facts particular to this case—specifically that the key means of recoupment would be through oligopolistic, supracompetitive price coordination among rival branded cigarette firms, which the Court reasoned Brown & Williamson would be unlikely to achieve and sustain.[174]

The Brooke Group test reflects the Court's narrow view of predatory pricing whereby liability attaches only if a predatory firm prices below some measure of its own costs with a reasonable probability that any losses it incurs will be recouped—this is referred to as a "negative-profit" standard.[175] The result of this narrower view is that far fewer predatory pricing claims are brought,[176] and almost none have been successful,[177] demonstrating how difficult such claims are for plaintiffs to prove—despite the antitrust concerns posed by such pricing.[178]

The Court's test in Brooke Group has been the subject of heavy criticism and may ultimately be more harmful to consumers than a stricter test that penalizes more predatory conduct but eliminates temporary, predatorily low prices for consumers.[179] Much of the criticism has focused on the below-cost pricing prong of the Brooke Group test. Many worry that this requirement will "ignore strategies that are legitimately anticompetitive but that can be accomplished at fully profitable prices," meaning that predators who can avoid pricing below their own costs while still driving out competition will escape liability.[180] This is particularly worrisome because in "cases of monopolization

173. Id.

174. See id. at 227-28; see also Hemphill & Weiser, supra note 169, at 2050 ("The Court's unusually detailed review of particular case facts in Brooke Group provides a further reason to confine Brooke Group's dicta that predation is implausible.").

175. See Steven C. Salop, Exclusionary Conduct, Effect on Consumers, and the Flawed Profit-Sacrifice Standard, 73 ANTITRUST L.J. 311, 326 (2006). The Court failed to define which measure of costs should be used (and the correct cost measure remains disputed), but many lower courts and commentators use average variable costs. See, e.g., SULLIVAN ET AL., supra note 130, §§ 4.3(a), 4.4; Phillip Areeda & Donald F. Turner, Predatory Pricing and Related Practices Under Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 88 HARV. L. REV. 697, 704 (1975).

176. See Hemphill & Weiser, supra note 169, at 2049 ("Over the past twenty-five years, antitrust claims alleging a predatory price cut have fallen into disuse.").

177. See id. at 2062 & n.65 (noting that as of November 2017, "no predatory pricing case . . . has been litigated to a final judgment for plaintiffs").

178. See, e.g., Kenneth L. Glazer, Predatory Pricing and Beyond: Life After Brooke Group, 62 ANTITRUST L.J. 605, 606 (1994) ("[P]redatory pricing will be virtually a dead letter in federal antitrust cases.").

179. See, e.g., Hemphill & Weiser, supra note 169, at 2053.

180. See AREEDA & HOVENKAMP, supra note 140, ¶ 736a.

or attempted monopolization, such 'above-cost predation' may be more plausible and prevalent than below-cost predation,"[181] yet would not face liability under Brooke Group. The Court's reluctance to penalize predatory price cuts that still remain above a predator's costs reflects its fear of false positives.[182] But this reluctance leads to false negatives—failing to penalize true exclusionary conduct—that have a detrimental effect on consumer welfare. Quite problematically, "the long-run welfare costs of exclusion from predatory price cutting could be much greater than the short-run benefits of lower prices."[183]

Moreover, the Court in Brooke Group seemed to think that even if a predator were to price below its costs, recoupment of those costs would be unlikely to occur. Yet scholars have levied criticism against the recoupment prong as well. Christopher Leslie argues that as a fundamental matter, successful recoupment is unnecessary for predation to harm consumer welfare. He argues that this is because it is the predatorily low pricing that comes in the first phase of a predatory pricing strategy, not the recoupment that comes later, that actually drives out rivals, leaving a monopoly for the predator in the second phase.[184]

Others have criticized the recoupment prong for failing to take into account explicitly the reputational benefits that often accompany predation, arguing that "[m]easuring recoupment solely by reference to [a single] product ignores any benefits that result because the defendant's reputation for predatory responses carries to all . . . of its products."[185] Specifically, the predator's reputation for aggressive pricing may deter or drive out rivals in other markets in which it competes, even without the predator actually having to engage in the low-cost pricing. Many courts and scholars, however, have interpreted the recoupment prong to include recoupment in other markets by reputational effects.[186] Relatedly, many criticize the Brooke Group test for also failing to

181. Edlin, supra note 136, at 942.

182. Hemphill & Weiser, supra note 169, at 2052 ("The Court's approach accepts some false negatives—anticompetitive above-cost price cuts—in order to avoid the chilling effect of false positives.").

183. Hemphill & Weiser, supra note 169, at 2053. Another criticism of the Court's greater concern about false positives over false negatives targets its assumption that false negatives are rare. See id. (observing that the Court offered "this famous dictum . . . without adequate empirical support").

184. See Leslie, supra note 150, at 1741-42 ("The sad irony of the repeated judicial misapplication of the recoupment requirement in the predatory pricing cases is the fact that this element is unnecessary and inappropriate. Whether a monopolist recoups the money it has spent to acquire monopoly power does not determine whether its anticompetitive conduct has harmed consumer welfare.").

185. AREEDA & HOVENKAMP, supra note 140, ¶ 727g.

186. See, e.g., Hemphill & Weiser, supra note 169, at 2050 ("[A] plaintiff is free, even under Brooke Group, to show that the defendant successfully recouped by acquiring a

footnote continued on next page

account for explicitly the deterrence effect of aggressive price cuts on potential new entrants against which the cuts were not directed.[187] This failure, in turn, incentivizes predatory behavior because the predator, if successful in excluding one rival, will more likely be successful in excluding other rivals without even having to engage in the predatory scheme again.

Despite these criticisms, the Brooke Group test has persisted. Yet it is particularly inappropriate for scrutinizing conduct in markets in which there is an incumbent monopolist who can employ predatory above-cost pricing and entry barriers, making recoupment all the more likely. The airline industry has been cited as one such market.[188] The predatory use of authorized generics in the pharmaceutical market is another example that underscores fundamental flaws of the Brooke Group test that allow certain predators to escape liability while damaging consumer welfare in the long-term. The remainder of this Note will use the example of authorized generics to highlight the problems with the Brooke Group test and demonstrate how using a limit-pricing test would better capture the antitrust concerns posed by authorized generics. Given the recent epidemic of rising drug prices, it is critical that predation analysis effectively penalize conduct that directly harms consumers.

C. Authorized Generics as a Price-Predation Strategy

In an effort to maintain monopolistic power, some brand drug manufacturers use authorized generics as a form of price predation in order to deter other generics from entering the market before patent expiration. The problem with authorized generics is that, "in the long-run, the expectation of an [authorized generic] may deter ANDA-generic firms from challenging questionable patents using a Paragraph IV certification."[189] As one treatise put it, "[a]rguably, the development of authorized generics is intended by pharmaceutical patent owners as a form of predation, making patent challenges by generics uneconomic by squeezing out the profits associated with a successful patent challenge."[190] And some documents by brand manufacturers reputation for predation in other markets."); Leslie, supra note 150, at 1720-21 (noting that "[c]ourts apparently do not appreciate the prospect of recoupment in another market" but "recoupment can happen in markets for complements, substitutes, and replacement goods").

187. See, e.g., Hemphill & Weiser, supra note 169, at 2053.

188. See Edlin, supra note 136, at 980-87.

189. FTC, supra note 11, at 38.

190. HERBERT HOVENKAMP ET AL., IP AND ANTITRUST: AN ANALYSIS OF ANTITRUST PRINCIPLES APPLIED TO INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY LAW § 16.02[A] (CCH 2019); see also FTC, supra note 11, at 57-59 (noting that an "ANDA-generic product usually takes a larger share of the market when it does not face an [authorized generic] competitor," themselves reflect such an intention. One internal document by a brand drug manufacturer cited in an FTC report states that "[f]inancially speaking," launching an authorized generic is "not a particularly attractive proposition," but "strategically we may want to send a message" that the brand manufacturer "will launch authorized generics" and thus "hopefully reduce future [generic] competition for subsequent . . . products coming off patent."[191]
footnote continued on next page

In the unique regulatory framework set up by the Hatch-Waxman Act, as opposed to in markets closer to perfect competition, predatory pricing may be far more successful because of the barriers to entry and the patent protection afforded to brand drug manufacturers.[192]

First, the first-filer generic will be forced to bear significant costs resulting from the Paragraph IV challenge but without the benefit of charging a higher price during the exclusivity period.[193] These costs are far greater than those of a generic wishing to enter after patent exclusivity because they include not only the research and development costs to create the generic version of the brand drug but also the litigation expenses involved in defending against the likely patent infringement suit initiated by the brand manufacturer that triggers the thirty-month stay.[194] Thus, the first filer requires the opportunity to recoup its expenses in the form of higher drug profits, which are most easily obtained during the 180-day exclusivity period.

Second, it is very inexpensive for a brand manufacturer to launch an authorized generic. The brand manufacturer need only incur the minimal marginal costs of manufacturing additional units of a drug for which it has already built and scaled the production mechanism. This enables the brand manufacturer to cheaply produce a new drug and then price it at a low rate without having to incur a profit sacrifice.

Again, the FTC found that the presence of an authorized generic during the exclusivity period "reduces the first-filer generic's revenues by 40 to 52 percent."[195] As a result, the generic manufacturer may be forced to exit the market because it cannot compete with the low prices of the authorized generic. And, seeing this predatory conduct by the brand manufacturer, other but "introducing an [authorized generic] has a large and negative effect on ANDA revenues").

191. FTC, supra note 11, at 71-72 (third alteration in original) (quoting an internal company document).

192. Cf. Janusz A. Ordover & Robert D. Willig, An Economic Definition of Predation: Pricing and Product Innovation, 91 YALE L.J. 8, 13 (1981) ("In markets in which structural factors permit successful predation, a firm may rationally attempt to induce the exit of a rival in order to gain additional monopoly profits.").

193. See supra notes 122-26 and accompanying text.

194. See supra text accompanying notes 49-51.

195. FTC, supra note 11, at iii.

generic manufacturers would be deterred from entering the market altogether during the patent term because the threat of an authorized generic would make their entry unprofitable.[196] Thus, brand drug manufacturers would be able to avoid Paragraph IV challenges to their patents and the resultant exclusivity period, enabling them to charge monopoly prices for much longer, giving them a windfall and harming consumers. That is the very type of conduct the Hatch-Waxman Act meant to eliminate by making it easier, not harder, for generics to enter the market so that consumers could pay lower prices for drugs.

Importantly, this conduct would most likely occur in smaller drug markets and would likely be unsuccessful if attempted in larger markets given the economics of these respective markets: "Studies indicate that the marketing of an authorized generic prior to patent expiration will likely only have a direct impact on drug prices in smaller markets; whereas in larger markets, it may (at most) only delay entry."[197] This suggests that for larger markets, "to the extent that [an] authorized generic deters or delays entry, it will be insufficient to permit a branded drug company to increase generic prices" in the long run.[198] This is because larger markets are profitable enough to sustain a number of competitors. In larger markets, the benefits in the form of broad sales past the exclusivity period would outweigh the first-filer generic's costs of litigation and of being forced to price-match the authorized generic during exclusivity. In smaller markets, however, sales would not be large enough for the first-filer generic to recoup the cost of being forced to compete with the authorized generic during exclusivity, thereby deterring entry.[199] Moreover, there are often multiple first-filer generics in certain large markets precisely because there are greater profits to be reaped. Thus, if generics in these markets are not deterred from filing an ANDA and Paragraph IV certification—even knowing that they may have to split the exclusivity period with another first-filer generic—an authorized generic would be unlikely to deter their entry, in contrast to smaller markets where the authorized generic would have a greater effect.[200]

196. See supra notes 144-47 and accompanying text.

197. Zain, supra note 55, at 756.

198. Id.

199. See FTC, supra note 11, at 117-18, 118 fig.6-6 (modeling the decision whether a generic files a Paragraph IV challenge in a smaller drug market and showing that generic manufacturers are more likely to break even in larger markets).

200. See David Reiffen & Michael R. Ward, "Branded Generics" as a Strategy to Limit Cannibalization of Pharmaceutical Markets, 28 MANAGERIAL & DECISION ECON. 251, 263 (2007) ("[O]ur estimates suggest that the price changes resulting from branded generic entry are largest in relatively small markets.").

Empirical data are consistent with this hypothesis. In 2011, the FTC issued a report on the short-term and long-term effects of authorized generics.[201] In so doing, it analyzed information from "more than 100 brand-name and generic manufacturers [along] with price and sales data acquired from commercial sources and information gleaned from FDA databases to assess [authorized generics'] competitive effects."[202] The report found that any "disincentive effects" stemming from the introduction of an authorized generic during the exclusivity period "would likely be experienced in small markets or in situations where the generic had little chance of winning the patent suit anyway."[203] Specifically, the report found that the generic manufacturer's lost revenue when facing an authorized generic would be "most likely to affect decisions to challenge patents on products with small sales."[204] For example, the FTC, using its break-even analysis with higher estimates of generic manufacturers' entry costs, found that the presence of an authorized generic in the market for drugs with sales below $27.3 million was likely to deter a Paragraph IV challenge, and that using lower cost estimates, an authorized generic would have the same effect in a market below $15 million.[205] Another study analyzing drug pricing and entry data found that "[i]t is likely that entry deterrence is more costly in large markets due to their greater profitability. Consequently, an entry-deterring pricing strategy may not be profit maximizing in these markets."[206] But this same study found that "the 201. In 2009, the FTC issued an interim report that "focused on the short-term effects of [authorized generics] during the 180-day exclusivity period." FTC, supra note 11, at ii. The 2011 final report "refine[d]" the FTC's short-term analysis and "expand[ed] the analysis to consider long-term effects." Id.

202. Id.

203. Id. at iii. The FTC report demonstrates that "[i]f a challenger anticipates a 50 percent chance of success, an expectation of [authorized generic] competition could tilt the balance against bringing a patent challenge in markets with brand sales between $12 million and $27 million, a range that accounts for 13 percent of drugs." Id.

204. Id. The FTC also noted that brand manufacturers would be less likely to launch authorized generics in small markets anyway. See id. However, such an assumption may not hold true if the brand manufacturers recognize that engaging in a successful predation strategy can deter entry across other product lines by gaining a predatory reputation. Further, at the time the report was authored, brand manufacturers were frequently engaged in other methods to delay generic entry, including making settlements with generic manufacturers whereby they agreed not to launch an authorized generic in exchange for the generic manufacturer delaying its entry into the market. See supra notes 87-92 and accompanying text. As a result, brand manufacturers may not have been as focused on launching authorized generics in all drug markets.

205. FTC, supra note 11, at 115.

206. Tenn & Wendling, supra note 113, at 221. This study also found that > [f]or small drug markets, where it is easier to deter entry due to lower expected profits, we find that price falls in response to an increase in competition. Few manufacturers enter these

footnote continued on next page

incumbent in smaller drug markets lowers price in response to an increase in potential competition, and this price reduction is an effective entry deterrent."[207] Thus, it would seem that authorized generics launched in smaller drug markets could effectively deter generic entry.

D. The Failure of Current Predation Doctrine

The problem, however, is that under the current predatory pricing doctrine, it would be very difficult for plaintiffs to challenge the launch and aggressively low pricing of authorized generics because they would likely not meet the below-cost prong of Brooke Group,[208] allowing brand drug manufacturers to charge supracompetitive prices unscathed.

It would be nearly impossible for the authorized generics to meet this requirement because "the economics of patents rarely lend themselves to pricing that is truly below marginal cost."[209] Rather, a brand manufacturer would take advantage of the structural barriers to entry imposed by the patent and the regulatory regime, and price the authorized generic below some measure of the true generic's costs, instead of the authorized generic's costs, so that it could still maximize profits in the short term while simultaneously driving out a rival in the long term. It makes little to no economic sense for a patent holder to price below its own (lower) costs since it gains no incremental competitive benefit from doing so and is thus cutting into its own profits, when it could achieve the same effect by merely pricing below the generic markets following expiration of the Hatch-Waxman exclusivity period, indicating this price reduction is an effective deterrent. In contrast, in larger drug markets where entry deterrence is less likely to be successful, the incumbent maintains a high price until forced to respond to actual competition.

---

Id. at 214.

207. Id. at 227; see also Reiffen & Ward, supra note 200, at 263 (finding that branded generic entry is most influential in small drug markets).

208. See HOVENKAMP ET AL., supra note 190, § 16.02[A] ("[A] pure predatory pricing claim may be even harder to prove in the authorized generic context. Even where a predatory pricing claim involves patented goods rather than licenses themselves, the economics of patents rarely lend themselves to pricing that is truly below marginal cost."); see also Edlin, supra note 136, at 955 ("[I]n a market where a monopoly has cost or other advantages over entrants, the Brooke Group rule could lead to adverse welfare consequences. At worst, it could allow a monopoly to charge high prices perpetually, never facing an entrant."); Bryan A. Liang, The Anticompetitive Nature of Brand-Name Firm Introduction of Generics Before Patent Expiration, 41 ANTITRUST BULL. 599, 619 (1996) (finding that, "in the [authorized] generics case, in a monopoly market maximum profit is gained at monopoly prices; rational firms will only price below this level . . . in expectation of future returns as a result of a reduction of future competition," where the monopoly price is above the monopolist's cost).

209. HOVENKAMP ET AL., supra note 190, § 16.02[A].

manufacturer's costs. As a result, plaintiffs would virtually never be able to meet the pricing-below-cost prong of the test.

As for the second prong of the test, monopolist brand manufacturers would have a far easier time recouping their investment than did the oligopolistic competitors in Brooke Group.[210] To play this out more clearly, the major concern with authorized generics is that the predatory pricing in one market would be cross-subsidized by supracompetitive prices charged in another market in which generics were deterred from entering because of the predatory reputation gained by the launch of authorized generics in the first market by a brand that has multiple differentiated drug products.[211] For example, if B successfully launched an authorized generic in market $M_1$ and priced it below cost such that the first-filer generic suffered a great loss, and B thereby gained a predatory reputation, then B's reputation for predatory pricing would have an in terrorem effect on competitors contemplating entering market $M_2$, in which B also had a brand drug. Thus, B would recoup its costs from market $M_1$ by charging supracompetitive prices in market $M_2$.[212] Given that the major pharmaceutical companies simultaneously have products in a large number of markets, it is entirely conceivable, even likely, that they would gain such predatory reputations.

The particular regulatory structure of the pharmaceutical industry lends itself more easily than the oligopolistic situation in Brooke Group to recoupment success for two reasons. First, because a brand drug is patent protected, the patent serves as a barrier to entry, meaning that any other drug manufacturer, generic or otherwise, wishing to enter the market must engage in patent litigation to do so. Litigation has a high cost (often raising the price of Paragraph IV certification to at least $10 million[213]) that generic manufacturers would be unwilling to bear unless they could recoup it through the exclusivity period, which the presence of the authorized generic would prevent. Thus, generic entry would be delayed until after the patent term expires, since generic manufacturers would be deterred from attempting to invalidate the

210. Insofar as the recoupment prong of the Brooke Group test is read to include recoupment in other markets via reputational effects, the use of authorized generics satisfies this prong. If a court (arguably erroneously) read the prong to exclude such reputational benefits, then I would advocate for a modification to the test that accounts for the reputational benefits of predation.

211. Cf. AREEDA & HOVENKAMP, supra note 140, ¶ 723c ("[W]e presume that losses incurred through predation could be regained in at least some markets with high barriers to entry."). And again, pharmaceutical markets have high barriers to entry. See supra note 192 and accompanying text.

212. In this sense, the situation somewhat parallels that in Brooke Group, where Brown & Williamson would have recouped its costs from predatory pricing in the market for generic cigarettes by charging a higher price in the market for brand cigarettes.

213. Hemphill & Lemley, supra note 82, at 952.

patent via a Paragraph IV certification, giving the brand manufacturer ample time to recoup its initial investment. This stands in stark contrast to Brooke Group, in which the Court assumed that entry by other competitors would be easy once the predator raised its prices because the oligopoly pricing in that case was difficult to police.[214] It is important to note that "[p]rofitable recoupment does not require that all entry be deterred indefinitely, it requires entry only sufficiently [deterred] to make the predation investment profitable."[215] Thus, even though other generics may enter after the patent has expired, once they can avoid the costs associated with making a Paragraph IV certification, the fact that entry will be deterred in the interim would, in most cases, be enough to facilitate successful recoupment.

Second, once the generic manufacturers are disincentivized from entering the market before the patent term's expiration, brand drug manufacturers that still launch an authorized generic can benefit from a "first-mover advantage."[216] This advantage enables them to keep customers even after other generics enter the market once the patent has expired.[217] Authorized generics can "target[] the irrational brand loyalties of patients and physicians" who may be reluctant to use an unauthorized generic, but who would feel comfortable using a generic launched by the brand manufacturer, believing it to be the same product as the actual brand drug.[218] In so doing, authorized generics can "lock in consumers and thereby create substantial switching costs that deter later entrants."[219] These switching costs "can deter subsequent entry by forcing later entrants to invest extra resources to attract customers away from the first-mover firm."[220]

Third, any other drug manufacturer wishing to enter the market with a substitute drug (that is, a drug with a different active ingredient) would be unable to take advantage of the Hatch-Waxman framework and would instead have to file an NDA, which is a lengthy and expensive process.[221] This means that, in many cases, the patent holder would maintain a monopoly while the

214. See Brooke Grp. Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 509 U.S. 209, 238-40 (1993).

215. AREEDA & HOVENKAMP, supra note 140, ¶ 729a.

216. See Chen, supra note 36, at 480.

217. See id.

218. See id.

219. Id.

220. Id.; accord Robert E. Hall, Potential Competition, Limit Pricing, and Price Elevation from Exclusionary Conduct, in 1 ISSUES IN COMPETITION LAW AND POLICY 433, 437 (ABA Section of Antitrust Law ed., 2008) ("Getting as many users as possible to adopt a product means that the rival entering in the future has to persuade people to incur switching costs as well as pay the price of the new product.").

221. See supra Part I.B.

potential rival attempted to enter the market. Either way, the ability of authorized generics to deter generic entry into the market would enable the brand to maintain supracompetitive prices in order to recoup its initial investment in lowering the price of the authorized generic.

Additionally, the Court's concern in Brooke Group regarding the recoupment prong was that it would be difficult to implement and sustain supracompetitive pricing because that would require coordination among multiple actors.[222] Here, however, recoupment would be more easily obtained because only a single actor—the brand manufacturer—would be imposing the supracompetitive pricing, thereby eliminating the coordination problems at issue in Brooke Group.[223]

Thus, we are left with a situation in which a challenge to predatory pricing would most likely fail the Brooke Group test because the brand manufacturers are not engaging in below-cost pricing, even though their pricing is still entry deterrent, and even though the recoupment prong is easily proven. This, in turn, incentivizes brand drug manufacturers to pursue predatory pricing strategies more aggressively. After all, "[w]hat might maximize consumer welfare in the short run does not necessarily do so in the long run."[224] To limit losses to consumer welfare from authorized generics' predatory pricing schemes, we need a different line of attack.

IV. Limit Pricing: A Better Measure of Predation for Authorized Generics

Some scholars have argued that the Brooke Group test's requirements for a predatory pricing claim of below-cost pricing and reasonable probability of recoupment "may be sufficient to make out a predatory pricing case, but they should not be necessary."[225] This means that there are other ways in which firms can engage in predatory pricing that ultimately harms consumer welfare. But, as demonstrated above, authorized generics will likely fail the below-cost element of the Brooke Group test given the patent context and regulatory framework of the pharmaceutical industry. Nonetheless, this framework enables the brand drug manufacturer to achieve the same goal (ensuring supracompetitive pricing by driving out rivals) without pricing

222. See Brooke Grp. Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 509 U.S. 209, 227-28 (1993).

223. See Hemphill & Weiser, supra note 169, at 2065 ("One source of flexibility arises where a monopoly, rather than oligopoly, is concerned. If recoupment is undertaken by a monopoly protected by high barriers to entry, we are far from the oligopoly considered in Brooke Group.").

224. AREEDA & HOVENKAMP, supra note 140, ¶ 723d2.

225. Edlin, supra note 136, at 943; see also supra Part III.B.

below its own costs. Rather, a brand manufacturer need only employ limit pricing, or pricing below the cost necessary for a generic manufacturer to recoup its initial investment in the Paragraph IV certification and the resulting patent litigation. Thus, one solution to policing the predatory launch of authorized generics is through a limit-pricing test that penalizes authorized generics when they are priced below the first-filer generic's entry costs.

A. Theory

Limit pricing describes the setting of a price "at a level just below that which a prospective entrant to the market would need to charge in order to sustain a successful entry."[226] Limit pricing occurs when an incumbent firm prices "below the short-run profit-maximizing price but above the competitive level" in order to deter or prevent would-be entrants.[227] The limit price is "intended by the monopolist to impair the opportunities of rivals, and, if successful, it does prevent competition from arising."[228] While a monopolist without the fear of entrants can charge whatever price will maximize its immediate profit, monopolists facing potential entry threats are constrained in how they may price if they want to maintain at least some of their monopoly profits. For example, say a brand manufacturer's profit-maximizing price for an authorized generic is $10 per unit, but this is high enough that it would encourage entry by other generics. If the brand manufacturer's costs for producing the drug were only $7 per unit, but the generic entrant's costs were $9 per unit, then the brand manufacturer could price the authorized generic at $8 in order to deter generic entry and sustain its monopoly because the generic manufacturer, if it matches the $8 price, would not be able to make a profit since its higher costs exceed the price charged.[229] So long as the long-term profits from pricing at the lower price exceed those from pricing at the higher price, even while a brand manufacturer accepts an entrant and the resulting market share dilution, the brand manufacturer would rationally choose the lower price.[230]

---

226. Leslie, supra note 150, at 1716 (quoting Phototron Corp. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 842 F.2d 95, 101 (5th Cir. 1988)).

227. Glossary of Statistical Terms: Limit Pricing, OECD, https://perma.cc/D3QC-J8CL (last updated Mar. 16, 2002).

228. AREEDA & HOVENKAMP, supra note 140, ¶ 736b1(A).

229. Cf. id. (providing a numerical example of how, while the limit price is the long-term profit-maximizing price, it is below the short-term profit-maximizing price).

230. See Hall, supra note 220, at 441 ("[T]he present value calculated from the incumbent's profits from a limit-pricing strategy applied over the remainder of the product life should exceed the present value of the incumbent's revenue from the duopoly. If not, limit pricing is not profitable and would not have been undertaken.").

The pharmaceutical market is an ideal market for brand manufacturers to engage in limit pricing because "the classical limit-pricing strategy is directed at potential entrants whose costs are higher than those of the incumbent,"[231] making limit pricing a better test of predation. Limit pricing would trigger liability when a brand drug manufacturer prices its authorized generic below a reasonable measure of the generic manufacturer's costs to enter the market,[232] which would include the fixed costs of Paragraph IV certification, resultant patent litigation, and manufacturing. Using limit pricing, rather than below-cost pricing, as a measure of predation would more effectively penalize the type of conduct we want to deter as harmful to consumers, while still serving as an effective screen for those cases in which low costs truly represent competition on the merits. That is because predators who employ limit pricing would raise their prices once entry had been deterred, making the price cuts only temporary. Additionally, limit pricing offers courts a practicable and objective way to distinguish between legitimate and illegitimate pricing strategies by comparing the price charged per unit to the fixed costs of entry plus the marginal cost of each additional unit sold. Of course, expert economic analysis would be needed, as it is in nearly all antitrust cases, in order to determine the limit price and the brand manufacturer's likelihood of recoupment in other markets. However, once that information was provided to the courts, they would have an objective metric of judging when an incumbent brand manufacturer was pricing below the generic manufacturer's costs in a real attempt to deter generic entry in its other markets.[233]

There are several ways in which a monopolist can leverage its dominant position to introduce limit pricing to deter potential rivals.[234] Incumbent

231. See AREEDA & HOVENKAMP, supra note 140, ¶ 736b1(A).

232. I do not propose a specific measure of the generic manufacturer's costs in this Note, but whatever measure is used must include the fixed costs necessary for market entry.

233. Aaron Edlin, in a similar attempt to revise the Brooke Group test in order to better penalize above-cost predatory pricing, offers a "'dynamic' standard for adjudicating predation" cases. Edlin, supra note 136, at 945. Specifically, Edlin argues:

> In markets where an incumbent monopoly enjoys significant advantages over potential entrants, but another firm enters and provides buyers with a substantial discount, the monopoly should be prevented from responding with substantial price cuts or significant product enhancements until the entrant has had a reasonable time to recover its entry costs and become viable, or until the entrant's share grows enough so that the monopoly loses its dominance.

Id. While this approach certainly has merit and would curb above-cost predatory pricing in the pharmaceutical market, it is much better suited for a legislative solution, see infra Part IV.C, given that it does far more than merely tweak the measure of cost used in Brooke Group, and instead advocates for an entirely new paradigm under which to evaluate predatory pricing.

234. As part of Edlin's proposal for a new category of predation, whereby "[m]onopolization under Sherman Act section 2 [would] include[] price reductions or quality improvements by an incumbent monopoly in response to a substantial entry before the entrant has

footnote continued on next page

monopolists that have a "significant cost or noncost advantage over entrants"[235] can utilize these advantages to deter competitors from entering the market. Importantly, and distinct from predatory pricing as contemplated in the classic case such as Brooke Group, predation in this model does not require the predator to give up all of its monopoly profits in the short-term. Because "the predator's cost is below the entrant's at the margin, [if] the goods are homogeneous" and "competition is over prices" rather than quality, then "the incumbent's short-run [profit-]maximizing response" is to deter competitors from entering the market altogether.[236]

For the limit-pricing theory to hold, then, it must be the case that the monopolist incumbent has cost or noncost advantages over the rival such that it can price below the rival's costs but above its own. Incumbent monopolists typically have several cost advantages. First, the monopolist has the sunk cost of its initial expenditure that has already been recovered from the sales of the monopoly-priced product and that, unlike the potential entrant, it need not incur again.[237] If barriers to entry are high, then the one-time costs of entry matter even more because, while the monopolist was able to recoup its investment in entry by charging monopoly profits when it had the market to itself (before the entry of the first-filer generic), any potential entrants will necessarily lack the possibility of recoupment through supracompetitive pricing as they will still face the incumbent brand (and likely its authorized generic) as competitors. Second, the monopolist will frequently have lower variable costs than the entrant.[238] This will continue to be the case so long as the marginal costs of the monopolist do not increase significantly, which would threaten to destroy any of its cost advantages.[239] had a reasonable time to recover its entry costs and become viable," he discusses at length how monopolists can use the inherent advantages in their dominant position to drive out competitors. See Edlin, supra note 136, at 966-70.

---

235. Id. at 944.

236. See id. at 958.

237. Id. at 959; see also Ordover & Willig, supra note 192, at 11-12 ("These [entry] hurdles exist whenever the prospective entrant is cost-disadvantaged relative to the incumbent solely because the incumbent is already functioning as a going concern, and the entrant has not yet committed the requisite resources. In general, entry hurdles arise when investments are not fully reversible. The need to incur the irreversible portion of the investment, and thereby to put that amount at risk, confronts the prospective entrant with a cost disadvantage relative to the incumbent whose resources are already committed. Thus, an incumbent may have an incentive to induce the exit of an entrant, who would then face an entry hurdle afresh." (footnotes omitted)).

238. Edlin, supra note 136, at 959.

239. Id.

Additionally, there are several noncost advantages an incumbent monopolist may have over the potential entrant, such as brand loyalty and network effects.[240] The upshot of this is that "incumbents with cost advantages may find predation rational and even short-run maximizing, even in a full information setting."[241]

Another key factor that makes this scenario different from that in Brooke Group is that once a monopolist has gained a reputation for predatory pricing, potential rivals will be deterred ex ante from entering the market because the incumbent monopolist is signaling to the potential entrant that entry would be futile.[242] At that point, an incumbent monopolist may not need to engage in limit pricing at all, since these rivals will be deterred from entering the market altogether, knowing that the monopolist may at any point again engage in such limit pricing to deter entry.

B. Application

The patent and regulatory framework of the pharmaceutical market puts the brand manufacturer, as the incumbent monopolist, in an excellent position to launch authorized generics using a strategy of limit pricing to deter potential generic rivals ex ante.

As described above, at least two factors must be present for limit pricing to be a successful predation strategy: (1) an incumbent monopolist and (2) cost or noncost advantages of the monopolist over the potential entrants.

First, brand drug manufacturers are incumbent monopolists by virtue of their patents, which give them a legal monopoly over a particular drug market until the patent expires or a first-filer generic launches a successful Paragraph IV challenge triggering the exclusivity period.

Second, brand manufacturers have significant cost advantages over potential generic entrants. The brand manufacturer has already expended the sunk cost of obtaining the patent and conducting the clinical trials and research necessary for NDA approval by the FDA. Thus, the marginal cost of creating and marketing an authorized generic is substantially lower for the brand manufacturer because it need only increase the quantity of its current output. Because authorized generics can take advantage of state generic substitution laws,[243] the brand manufacturers need not invest in marketing

240. Id.

241. Id. at 958.

242. See Hemphill & Weiser, supra note 169, at 2067; see also Greg LeBlanc, Signalling Strength: Limit Pricing and Predatory Pricing, 23 RAND J. ECON. 493, 494 (1992) (noting that this ex ante deterrence stands in contrast to the predatory pricing model in which a firm, perceiving a low risk of entry by competitors, will wait until a rival enters the market before engaging in the predatory price-cutting).

243. See supra notes 52-54 and accompanying text.

and product placement as they would for a brand drug. Here, the brand manufacturer has greater financial staying power because it already has one successful product—the brand drug—on the market that will continue to attract a customer base. While the generic manufacturers need not incur the same initial costs of conducting research and clinical trials (after all, avoiding these costs is the entire point of the ANDA), they must still invest in the research and testing necessary to prove bioequivalence, along with the infrastructure and supplies necessary to create and scale a new drug product.

Additionally, there are significant barriers to entry for first-filer generics that do not exist for the brand drug because the litigation costs associated with a first filer's Paragraph IV certification erect a significant entry hurdle for the first-filer generic.[244] What is more, while the first-filer generic cannot sell its product during the thirty-month stay triggered by the patent litigation, the brand manufacturer will continue reaping a profit.

The brand drug manufacturer also possesses significant noncost advantages over the potential generic entrants. These noncost advantages include brand loyalty, mistrust of generic drugs by consumers, and in certain instances high switching costs, whereby once a consumer begins taking a brand drug, it is difficult to incentivize that same consumer to switch to the generic version of the drug.[245] Additionally, studies "suggest that to the extent that a generic market has first mover advantages, an authorized generic would be particularly well positioned to obtain those advantages."[246]

With these requisite factors met, exploring two hypothetical scenarios demonstrates when a brand manufacturer would face liability under a limit-pricing test for launching an authorized generic and when it would not.

In the unlawful scenario, assume that brand manufacturer BM is a major pharmaceutical company with numerous patent-protected drugs spread across various markets. BM is facing generic competition in the market for its brand drug $B_1$—a first-filer generic has already made a Paragraph IV certification and is about to enjoy its exclusivity period. BM launches an authorized generic, $AG_1$, for $B_1$ at the start of the first filer's exclusivity period and prices it below the first filer's costs. The first filer is unable to recoup its entry and other costs given the steep price competition with $AG_1$ and suffers significant losses.

244. See supra note 123 and accompanying text.

245. See generally Kathleen Iacocca et al., Why Brand Drugs Priced Higher Than Generic Equivalents, 9 INT'L J. PHARMACEUTICAL & HEALTHCARE MARKETING 3, 16-17 (2015) (finding that brand loyalty, personal preferences, and price insensitivity lead brand manufacturers to maintain the high price of their drugs even after generics have entered the market).

246. Zain, supra note 55, at 757. But see FTC, supra note 11, at 12 (noting that "many brand-name companies . . . contract with ANDA-generic companies to market their [authorized generics]").

Seeing this behavior in the market for $B_1$, another generic manufacturer wishing to challenge the patents for BM's $B_2$, a smaller market, changes course and decides to wait until the patent for $B_2$ expires, knowing that it would not be able to recoup the entry costs of a Paragraph IV certification if BM were to launch an authorized generic in the market for $B_2$. Because BM, a monopolist brand manufacturer, launched an authorized generic priced below its competitor's costs and deterred generic entry in $B_2$, BM's launch of $AG_1$ would satisfy the limit-pricing test. Assuming BM recouped its investment in launching $AG_1$ by the deterrence in the market for $B_2$, this conduct would also satisfy the recoupment prong, and thus BM should be liable under section 2 of the Sherman Act for predatory pricing.[247]

Now, assume the same facts except that BM's other drugs were all in large markets in which a generic's entry costs constituted only a small portion of its total profits. Even seeing the launch of $AG_1$, the authorized generic in the market for $B_1$, generic manufacturers are not deterred from filing Paragraph IV certifications in the other drug markets because they know that even if BM launches an authorized generic priced below their costs in these markets, the resultant profit they would make even after exclusivity would still be enough to recoup their investment. Thus, because there is no entry deterrence, this would fail the predation test, and BM would not be held liable under the antitrust laws.

C. Potential Limitations

While a limit-pricing theory of liability would lend itself more readily to penalizing predatory pricing via authorized generics, such liability would be premised on brand manufacturers actually engaging in this strategy. In 2011, the FTC analyzed short-term and long-term competitive effects of authorized generics and concluded that, while authorized generics reduced the first-filer generic's revenues during the exclusivity period, the presence of an authorized generic during this period "has not affected the generic's incentives in a way that has measurably reduced the number of patent challenges by generic firms."[248] But the FTC clarified that "[a]ny disincentive effects would likely be experienced in small markets or in situations where the generic had little chance of winning the patent suit anyway."[249]

The FTC's analysis, however, is not fatal to a limit-pricing theory of liability for several reasons. First, the FTC failed to analyze whether the authorized generics were being priced below the first filer's entry costs. If not, 247. See 15 U.S.C. § 2 (2018).

248. FTC, supra note 11, at iii.

249. Id.

then the fact that the generic manufacturers were not deterred from entering the market makes sense because they would still presumably be generating enough revenue, even though forced to split these revenues with an authorized generic, to recoup their investment. And if the brand manufacturers began to engage in a limit-pricing strategy and generics were deterred, then liability under this theory would attach.

Second, the FTC report considered data only from 2001 to 2008.[250] During this time period, which was before the Actavis decision scrutinizing pay-for-delay agreements, drug manufacturers were busy entering into these pay-for-delay agreements to deter generic entry, including ones in which brand manufacturers promised not to launch an authorized generic in exchange for later generic entry. These agreements were brand manufacturers' dominant exclusionary strategies before Actavis, indicating that they were likely less concerned with engaging in predatory efforts with regard to authorized generics. In this same report, the FTC found that from 2003 to 2008, authorized generics were present in 61% of first-filer exclusivity periods, and indicated that this percentage might have been higher but for agreements between brand and generic manufacturers not to launch an authorized generic in exchange for delayed generic entry.[251]

An analysis of the launches of authorized generics from an official FDA database demonstrates that there were 156 authorized generics launched in 2014 alone, one year after the Actavis decision came out—up from only 82 launched in 2012, and 80 launched in 2013.[252] While not conclusive, this analysis indicates that brand manufacturers may have been switching tactics upon learning that their main strategy of delaying generic entry was subject to increased scrutiny.[253]

Now that cash—and, in several circuits, noncash—pay-for-delay agreements are subject to increased scrutiny by the courts, there is reason to believe that brand manufacturers will engage in other exclusionary strategies, including predatory pricing via authorized generics.[254] And if so, a limit-pricing theory should be utilized to determine price predation claims.

---

250. Id. at 7.

251. Id. at 6, 32.

252. See FDA, supra note 103.

253. Other exogenous factors, such as patent expiration, may also have contributed to the uptick in launches of authorized generics in 2014. See, e.g., Big Pharma's Patent Cliff: Tallying Up the Fallout from Patent Expirations, BLOOMBERG (Nov. 14, 2013, 8:27 PM PST), https://perma.cc/JH6L-HQQ5; Dan Carroll, The Biggest Victims of the Patent Cliff in 2014, MOTLEY FOOL (Dec. 15, 2013, 2:28 PM), https://perma.cc/ZH68-LCS2.

254. For example, a 2015 survey by Cutting Edge Information, a research firm, found that 42% of brand-name drug companies "have used [authorized generics] as a competitive tactic." Doug Bartholomew, In Defense of the Anti-Generic: Authorized Generics Are the Controversial Hero of Post-Patent Profitability, PHARMA MANUFACTURING (May 4, 2017),

footnote continued on next page

Beyond the question whether brand manufacturers are engaging in limit pricing in practice, there are several theoretical considerations raised by a limit-pricing theory of predation.

One argument that critics of a new theory of predation may make is that pricing below a generic manufacturer's costs is nothing more than competition on the merits via robust competition on pricing. However, United States v. Grinnell Corp.—the seminal case defining the test for monopolization—defines a monopoly that violates section 2 of the Sherman Act as "willful acquisition or maintenance of . . . [monopoly] power as distinguished from growth or development as a consequence of a superior product, business acumen, or historic accident."[255] And brand manufacturers are not launching authorized generics sua sponte to provide a low-cost option for consumers; rather, they are launching authorized generics in response to generic entry. The FTC found that the launch of authorized generics "simultaneously with or shortly after ANDA-generic entry" is consistent with "strategies based on retaining revenues and with strategies premised on deterring patent challenges."[256] Moreover, we must take these actions in the context of the other exclusionary strategies aimed at driving out generic manufacturers in which brand manufacturers have recently engaged, such as cost and noncost pay-for-delay agreements and product hopping. And when considered in that light, it seems much clearer that launching authorized generics is a tactic to drive out rivals rather than to engage in robust price competition. After all, "a firm that preserves its monopoly by charging low prices only when its rivals make the mistake of entering the market, and only until they exit, denies consumers the benefits from competition on the merits,"[257] and the firm should be held liable for that conduct.[258] https://perma.cc/Y83X-7W5W; see also Silvia Appelt, Authorized Generic Entry Prior to Patent Expiry: Reassessing Incentives for Independent Generic Entry, 97 REV. ECON. & STAT. 654, 659 (2015) ("Industry experts assert that generic firms must expect authorized generic entry in large drug markets in particular.").

---

255. United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-71 (1966).

256. FTC, supra note 11, at 72. Moreover, the FTC analyzed documents from brand drug manufacturers and found that the brand manufacturers clearly understood that the launch of authorized generics during the 180-day exclusivity period could "reduce the revenues of generic rivals and could deter future generic entry." Id. at iv. While this Note does not advocate for adding an "intent" prong to the predatory pricing test, this analysis demonstrates that the brand manufacturers were in fact engaging in strategic conduct.

257. Edlin, supra note 136, at 966.

258. Additionally, under a limit-pricing theory, the brand manufacturer is still pricing below its short-term profit-maximizing price, meaning that it is leaving money on the table. Such a strategy is rational (and we assume firms are rational actors) only if there is a reasonable probability that the firm will recoup this lost profit in some other way. And here, that way is by deterring generics from entering before the end of exclusivity in the brand manufacturer's other drug markets, enabling the brand to continue charging monopoly prices, and making a monopoly profit, for longer in those markets.

Relatedly, an incumbent monopolist may try to justify its actions by making a "meeting competition" defense.[259] However, meeting the price of the competitor may still be anticompetitive if its effect is to drive rivals out of the market or deter their entry in the long term, thereby harming consumers when the predator raises the price.[260] This could occur, for example, if more consumers stay with the authorized generic because of switching costs, or if the generic manufacturer is unable to sustain charging such a low price because it is losing part of the market to the monopolist so its output is lower. In this case, "the ability to match prices may be the source of the anticompetitive problem."[261]

Finally, some may argue that a legislative solution prohibiting authorized generic entry during the exclusivity period would be better tailored to solve this anticompetitive problem than a judicial test created by courts. While that may be true, until it happens, courts have a duty under the Sherman Act to police anticompetitive conduct as it occurs and thus should modify their predation analysis to capture the anticompetitive concerns posed by authorized generics. After all, "[a]ntitrust analysis must sensitively recognize and reflect the distinctive economic and legal setting of the regulated industry to which it applies."[262] And the pharmaceutical market is no different.

Conclusion

There is good reason for courts to be skeptical of price predation claims since they are often very difficult to evaluate successfully. But Brooke Group's concern for false positives has the perverse effect of insulating certain predatory pricing schemes that do not meet its specific criteria but that nonetheless harm consumer welfare in the long term. Specifically, Brooke Group shields monopolists in markets with cost advantages and high barriers to entry

259. Often used as an express defense against unlawful price discrimination under the Robinson-Patman Act, see generally Note, Meeting Competition Under the Robinson-Patman Act, 90 HARV. L. REV. 1476 (1977), the meeting competition defense provides that it is not unlawful for a seller to lower its price "in good faith to meet an equally low price of a competitor," 15 U.S.C. § 13(b) (2018). The seller has the burden of proof to "demonstrate that a 'reasonable and prudent' person would have believed that the granting of the lower price to the allegedly favored customer or customers 'would in fact meet the equally low price of a competitor,' and that he acted in 'good faith' on this belief." WILLIAM C. HOLMES & MELISSA H. MANGIARACINA, ANTITRUST LAW HANDBOOK: 2018-2019 EDITION § 4:4, at 658-59 (2018) (quoting Falls City Indus., Inc. v. Vanco Beverage, Inc., 460 U.S. 428, 438, 451 (1983)).

260. See Edlin, supra note 136, at 971-72.

261. Id. at 972.

262. Verizon Commc'ns Inc. v. Law Offices of Curtis V. Trinko, LLP, 540 U.S. 398, 411-12 (2004) (quoting Town of Concord v. Bos. Edison Co., 915 F.2d 17, 22 (1st Cir. 1990)) (refusing, based on antitrust principles, to create a new exception for the telecommunications industry to the rule that businesses have "no duty to aid competitors").

from liability if they decide to price their products below their rivals' costs in order to deter entry. This Note argues that in these situations, a new test for predatory pricing—limit pricing—is better suited to penalize this very conduct that is detrimental to consumer welfare.

The pharmaceutical market exemplifies these concerns about predatory pricing under the current test, as brand manufacturers can launch authorized generics in order to deter generic entry. While these brands would escape liability under the Brooke Group test because they would rarely price the authorized generics below some measure of their own costs, a limit-pricing test would hold brands accountable when they price their authorized generics below a generic entrant's costs in order to deter generic entry.

If courts continue to analyze predation solely under the Brooke Group test, drug manufacturers will be free to charge high prices without the constraint of competition, which will have obvious detrimental effects on consumer welfare.[263] "[I]t makes little sense for the law to focus exclusively on the failures of incumbents to short-run-maximize, or, indeed, on extreme failures that involve losing money and pricing below appropriate measures of cost, as required by Brooke Group."[264] Moreover, "a rule that favors granting a powerful firm maximum pricing freedom, such as would be the probable result under the below-cost and recoupment-screening tests in Brooke Group, may bring a few short-term welfare benefits that are more than offset by welfare losses from long-term higher prices."[265] In the specific context of the pharmaceutical market, when brand manufacturers engage in tactics that successfully deter generic competition, consumers lack "the opportunity to choose the generic alternative until the (potentially invalid or not-infringed) patent of the brand had expired,"[266] which could take years. When these tactics come within the purview of the antitrust laws, courts should analyze them in a way that better maximizes consumer welfare.[267]

Brand drug manufacturers that engage in exclusionary tactics designed to delay and deter generic entry violate the spirit of both antitrust law, which protects consumer welfare, and intellectual property law, which protects only valid innovation for a specified period of time. While more empirical research is needed to determine the extent of this problem as it currently stands, this Note lays out the theoretical foundation for how best to penalize this exclusionary conduct.

---

263. See Edlin, supra note 136, at 955.

264. Id. at 958-59.

265. SULLIVAN ET AL., supra note 130, at 158 (footnote omitted).

266. FTC, supra note 11, at 38.

267. See Kesselheim et al., supra note 7, at 864-65 (summarizing alternatives).

30

First Session, Forty-fourth Parliament,
70-71 Elizabeth II, 2021-2022

STATUTES OF CANADA 2022

CHAPTER 10

An Act to implement certain provisions of the budget tabled in Parliament on April 7, 2022 and other measures

ASSENTED TO

JUNE 23, 2022

BILL C-19

Première session, quarante-quatrième législature,
70-71 Elizabeth II, 2021-2022

LOIS DU CANADA (2022)

CHAPITRE 10

Loi portant exécution de certaines dispositions du budget déposé au Parlement le 7 avril 2022 et mettant en œuvre d'autres mesures

SANCTIONNÉE

LE 23 JUIN 2022

PROJET DE LOI C-19

RECOMMENDATION

Her Excellency the Governor General recommends to the House of Commons the appropriation of public revenue under the circumstances, in the manner and for the purposes set out in a measure entitled "An Act to implement certain provisions of the budget tabled in Parliament on April 7, 2022 and other measures".

SUMMARY

Part 1 implements certain income tax measures by

(a) providing a Labour Mobility Deduction for the temporary relocation of tradespeople to a work location;

(b) allowing for the immediate expensing of eligible property by certain Canadian businesses;

(c) allowing the Children's Special Allowance to be paid in respect of a child who is maintained by an Indigenous governing body and providing consistent tax treatment of kinship care providers and foster parents receiving financial assistance from an Indigenous governing body and those receiving such assistance from a provincial government;

(d) doubling the allowable qualifying expense limit under the Home Accessibility Tax Credit;

(e) expanding the criteria for the mental functions impairment eligibility as well as the life-sustaining therapy category eligibility for the Disability Tax Credit;

(f) providing clarity in respect of the determination of the one-time additional payment under the GST/HST tax credit for the period 2019-2020;

(g) changing the delivery of Climate Action Incentive payments from a refundable credit claimed annually to a credit that is paid quarterly;

(h) temporarily extending the period for incurring eligible expenses and other deadlines under film or video production tax credits;

(i) providing a tax incentive for specified zero-emission technology manufacturing activities;

(j) providing the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) the discretion to accept late applications for the Canada Emergency Wage Subsidy, the Canada Emergency Rent Subsidy and the Canada Recovery Hiring Program;

(k) including postdoctoral fellowship income in the definition of "earned income" for RRSP purposes;

(l) enabling registered charities to enter into charitable partnerships with organizations other than qualified donees under certain conditions;

RECOMMANDATION

Son Excellence la gouverneure générale recommande à la Chambre des communes l'affectation de deniers publics dans les circonstances, de la manière et aux fins prévues dans une mesure intitulée « Loi portant exécution de certaines dispositions du budget déposé au Parlement le 7 avril 2022 et mettant en œuvre d'autres mesures ».

SOMMAIRE

La partie 1 met en œuvre certaines mesures relatives à l'impôt sur le revenu afin de :

a) accorder une Déduction pour la mobilité de la main-d'œuvre pour la réinstallation temporaire de gens de métier à un lieu de travail;

b) permettre la passation en charges immédiate de biens admissibles par certaines entreprises canadiennes;

c) permettre le paiement de l'Allocation spéciale pour enfants relativement à un enfant dont un corps dirigeant autochtone a la charge et assurer un traitement uniforme entre les prestataires de soins des programmes de parenté et les familles d'accueil qui reçoivent de l'aide financière d'un corps dirigeant autochtone et ceux qui reçoivent cette assistance d'un gouvernement provincial;

d) multiplier par deux la limite de dépenses admissibles permise en vertu du Crédit d'impôt pour l'accessibilité domiciliaire;

e) élargir les critères d'admissibilité par rapport à la déficience des fonctions mentales ainsi qu'à la catégorie des règles relatives aux soins thérapeutiques essentiels du Crédit d'impôt pour personnes handicapées;

f) clarifier l'application de la détermination du versement unique supplémentaire du crédit d'impôt pour la TPS/TVH pour la période 2019-2020;

g) modifier les modalités de paiement de l'Incitatif à agir pour le climat d'un crédit d'impôt remboursable à chaque année à un crédit versé tous les trois mois;

h) accorder une période supplémentaire pour engager des dépenses admissibles et prolonger certaines dates d'échéance relatives aux crédits d'impôt pour production cinématographique ou magnétoscopique;

i) accorder un incitatif fiscal pour certaines activités déterminées de fabrication de technologies à zéro émission;

j) permettre à l'Agence du revenu du Canada (ARC) d'accepter les demandes tardives de Subvention salariale d'urgence du Canada, de Subvention d'urgence pour le loyer du Canada et du Programme d'embauche pour la relance économique du Canada sur une base discrétionnaire;

Available on the House of Commons website at the following address:
www.ourcommons.ca

Disponible sur le site Web de la Chambre des communes à l'adresse suivante :
www.noscommunes.ca

(m) allowing automatic and immediate revocation of the registration of an organization as a charity where that organization is listed as a terrorist entity under the Criminal Code;

(n) enabling the CRA to use taxpayer information to assist in the collection of Canada Emergency Business Account loans; and

(o) expanding capital cost allowance deductions to include new clean energy equipment.

It also makes related and consequential amendments to the Excise Tax Act, the Children's Special Allowances Act, the Excise Act, 2001, the Income Tax Regulations and the Children's Special Allowance Regulations.

Part 2 implements certain Goods and Services Tax/Harmonized Sales Tax (GST/HST) measures by

(a) ensuring that all assignment sales in respect of newly constructed or substantially renovated residential housing are taxable supplies for GST/HST purposes; and

(b) extending eligibility for the expanded hospital rebate to health care services supplied by charities or non-profit organizations with the active involvement of, or on the recommendation of, either a physician or a nurse practitioner, irrespective of their geographic location.

Part 3 amends the Excise Act, 2001, the Excise Act and other related texts in order to implement three measures.

Division 1 of Part 3 implements a new federal excise duty framework for vaping products by, among other things,

(a) requiring that manufacturers of vaping products obtain a vaping licence from the CRA;

(b) requiring that all vaping products that are removed from the premises of a vaping licensee to be entered into the Canadian market for retail sale be affixed with an excise stamp;

(c) imposing excise duties on vaping products to be paid by vaping product licensees;

(d) providing for administration and enforcement rules related to the excise duty framework on vaping products;

(e) providing the Governor in Council with authority to provide for an additional excise duty in respect of provinces and territories that enter into a coordinated vaping product taxation agreement with Canada; and

(f) making related amendments to other legislative texts, including to allow for a coordinated federal/provincial-territorial vaping product taxation system and to ensure that the excise duty framework applies properly to imported vaping products.

k) inclure le revenu d'une bourse de perfectionnement postdoctoral à la définition de "revenu gagné" pour les fins d'un RÉER;

l) permettre aux organismes de bienfaisance enregistrés de conclure sous certaines conditions des partenariats pour des fins charitables avec des organismes qui ne sont pas des donataires reconnus;

m) permettre la révocation automatique et immédiate de l'enregistrement d'un organisme de bienfaisance dans les situations où cet organisme est une entité terroriste énumérée sur la liste prévue par le Code criminel;

n) permettre à l'ARC d'utiliser des renseignements confidentiels de contribuables afin d'aider au recouvrement de prêts sous le Compte d'urgence pour les entreprises canadiennes;

o) élargir la déduction pour l'allocation du coût en capital pour y inclure le nouveau matériel de production d'énergie propre.

Elle apporte également des modifications connexes et corrélatives à la Loi sur la taxe d'accise, la Loi sur les allocations spéciales pour enfants, la Loi de 2001 sur l'accise, au Règlement de l'impôt sur le revenu et au Règlement sur les allocations spéciales pour enfants.

La partie 2 met en œuvre certaines mesures relatives à la taxe sur les produits et services/taxe de vente harmonisée (TPS/TVH) afin de :

a) s'assurer que toutes cessions de contrats de vente relatives aux habitations résidentielles nouvellement construites ou ayant fait l'objet de rénovations majeures soient des fournitures taxables aux fins de la TPS/TVH;

b) assouplir les règles d'admissibilité pour le remboursement élargi pour les hôpitaux afin d'inclure les services de soins de santé fournis par un organisme de bienfaisance ou un organisme à but non lucratif avec la participation active, ou sur la recommandation, d'un médecin ou d'une infirmière praticienne ou d'un infirmier praticien, peu importe leur emplacement géographique.

La partie 3 modifie la Loi de 2001 sur l'accise, la Loi sur l'accise et des textes connexes afin de mettre en œuvre trois mesures.

La section 1 de la partie 3 met en œuvre un nouveau cadre fédéral de droits d'accise pour les produits de vapotage pour, notamment :

a) obliger les fabricants de produits de vapotage à obtenir une licence de produits de vapotage auprès de l'ARC;

b) exiger qu'un timbre d'accise soit apposé sur tous les produits de vapotage qui sont sortis des locaux d'un titulaire de licence de produits de vapotage pour entrer dans le marché canadien pour la vente au détail;

c) imposer, sur les produits de vapotage, des droits d'accise qui seront à payer par les titulaires de licence de produits de vapotage;

d) prévoir des règles d'administration et d'exécution liées au cadre de droit d'accise sur les produits de vapotage;

e) conférer au gouverneur en conseil le pouvoir de mettre en place un droit d'accise additionnel relativement aux provinces et aux territoires qui concluent un accord de coordination de la taxation des produits de vapotage avec le Canada;

f) apporter des modifications connexes à d'autres textes, y compris pour permettre un régime fiscal sur les produits de vapotage coordonné entre le gouvernement fédéral et les gouvernements provinciaux et territoriaux et pour s'assurer que le cadre du droit d'accise s'applique de façon appropriée aux produits de vapotage importés.

Division 2 of Part 3 amends the excise duty exemption under the Excise Act, 2001 for wine produced in Canada and composed wholly of agricultural or plant product grown in Canada.

Division 3 of Part 3 amends the Excise Act to eliminate excise duty for beer containing no more than 0.5% alcohol by volume.

Part 4 enacts the Select Luxury Items Tax Act. That Act creates a new taxation regime for domestic sales, and importations into Canada, of certain new motor vehicles and aircraft priced over $100,000 and certain new boats priced over $250,000. It provides that the tax applies if the total price or value of the subject select luxury item at the time of sale or importation exceeds the relevant price threshold. It provides that the tax is to be calculated at the lesser of 10% of the total price of the item and 20% of the total price of the item that exceeds the relevant price threshold. To promote compliance with the new taxation regime, that Act includes modern elements of administration and enforcement aligned with those found in other taxation statutes. Finally, this Part also makes related and consequential amendments to other texts to ensure proper implementation of the new tax and to ensure a cohesive and efficient administration by the CRA.

Division 1 of Part 5 retroactively renders a provision of the contract that is set out in the schedule to An Act respecting the Canadian Pacific Railway, chapter 1 of the Statutes of Canada, 1881, to be of no force or effect. It retroactively extinguishes any obligations and liabilities of Her Majesty in right of Canada and any rights and privileges of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company arising out of or acquired under that provision.

Division 2 of Part 5 amends the Nisga'a Final Agreement Act to give force of law to the entire Nisga'a Nation Taxation Agreement during the period that that Taxation Agreement is, by its terms, in force.

Division 3 of Part 5 repeals the Safe Drinking Water for First Nations Act.

It also amends the Income Tax Act to exempt from taxation under that Act any income earned by the Safe Drinking Water Trust in accordance with the Settlement Agreement entered into on September 15, 2021 relating to long-term drinking water quality for impacted First Nations.

Division 4 of Part 5 authorizes payments to be made out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund for the purpose of addressing transit shortfalls and needs and improving housing supply and affordability.

Division 5 of Part 5 amends the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation Act by adding the President and Chief Executive Officer of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation and one other member to that Corporation's Board of Directors.

Division 6 of Part 5 amends the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act to authorize additional payments to the provinces and territories.

Division 7 of Part 5 amends the Borrowing Authority Act to, among other things, count previously excluded borrowings made in the spring of 2021 in the calculation of the maximum amount that may be borrowed. It also amends the Financial Administration Act to change certain reporting requirements in relation to amounts borrowed under orders made under paragraph 46.1(c) of that Act.

La section 2 de la partie 3 modifie l'exonération des droits d'accise en vertu de la Loi de 2001 sur l'accise sur le vin qui est produit au Canada et composé entièrement de produits agricoles ou végétaux cultivés au Canada.

La section 3 de la partie 3 modifie la Loi sur l'accise afin d'éliminer les droits d'accise sur la bière ne contenant pas plus de 0,5 % d'alcool par volume.

La partie 4 édicte la Loi sur la taxe sur certains biens de luxe. Cette loi instaure un nouveau régime fiscal pour les ventes au Canada et les importations au Canada de certains véhicules automobiles et aéronefs neufs dont le prix dépasse 100 000 $ et certaines embarcations neuves dont le prix dépasse 250 000 $. Cette loi prévoit que la taxe sur les biens de luxe s'applique lorsque le prix total ou la valeur de l'article en cause au moment de la vente ou de l'importation dépasse le seuil de prix pertinent. Elle calcule la taxe de luxe selon le moins élevé des deux montants suivants : 10 % du prix total de l'article en cause et 20 % du prix total de l'article en cause qui dépasse le seuil de prix pertinent. Pour favoriser la conformité au nouveau régime fiscal, cette loi comporte des éléments modernes d'application et d'exécution qui se trouvent également dans d'autres lois fiscales. Enfin, cette partie apporte des modifications corrélatives et connexes à d'autres textes afin d'assurer la mise en œuvre adéquate de la nouvelle taxe et afin de permettre à l'ARC de les appliquer de façon cohérente et efficace.

La section 1 de la partie 5 rend inopérante, rétroactivement, une disposition du contrat figurant à l'annexe de l'Acte concernant le chemin de fer Canadien du Pacifique, chapitre 1 des Statuts du Canada (1881). Elle éteint, rétroactivement, toutes les obligations et responsabilités de Sa Majesté du chef du Canada ainsi que tous les droits et privilèges conférés à la Compagnie de chemin de fer Canadien Pacifique qui découlent de cette disposition.

La section 2 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur l'Accord définitif nisga'a afin de donner force de loi à tout l'accord nisga'a sur la fiscalité, et ce pour la durée stipulée par celui-ci.

La section 3 de la partie 5 abroge la Loi sur la salubrité de l'eau potable des Premières Nations.

De plus, elle modifie la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu pour exonérer de l'impôt prévu par cette loi tout revenu gagné par la Fiducie pour de l'eau potable salubre, conformément à l'entente de règlement conclue le 15 septembre 2021 concernant la qualité à long terme de l'eau potable des premières nations touchées.

La section 4 de la partie 5 autorise des paiements sur le Trésor pour faire face aux déficits et besoins en matière de transport en commun et améliorer l'offre de logements et l'accès à des logements abordables.

La section 5 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur la Société d'assurance-dépôts du Canada afin d'ajouter le président et premier dirigeant de la Société d'assurance-dépôts du Canada ainsi qu'un autre administrateur à la composition du conseil d'administration de cette Société.

La section 6 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur les arrangements fiscaux entre le gouvernement fédéral et les provinces afin d'autoriser des versements supplémentaires aux provinces et territoires.

La section 7 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi autorisant certains emprunts pour, entre autres, inclure dans le calcul du montant maximum de certains emprunts des emprunts qui en étaient auparavant exclus et qui ont été contractés pendant le printemps 2021. Elle modifie également la Loi sur la gestion des finances publiques afin de modifier certaines exigences en matière de reddition de compte relativement à des sommes empruntées au titre d'un décret pris en vertu de l'alinéa 46.1c) de cette loi.

Division 8 of Part 5 amends the Pension Benefits Standards Act, 1985 to, among other things, permit the establishment of a solvency reserve account in the pension fund of certain defined benefit plans and require the establishment of governance policies for all pension plans.

Division 9 of Part 5 amends the Special Import Measures Act to, among other things,

(a) provide that assessments of injury are to take into account impacts on workers;

(b) require the Canadian International Trade Tribunal to make inquiries with respect to massive importations when it is acting under section 42 of that Act;

(c) require that Tribunal to initiate expiry reviews of certain orders and findings;

(d) modify the deadline for notifying the government of the country of export of properly documented complaints;

(e) modify the criteria for imposing duties in cases of massive importations;

(f) modify the criteria for initiating anti-circumvention investigations; and

(g) remove the requirement that, in order to find circumvention, the principal cause of the change in a pattern of trade must be the imposition of anti-dumping or countervailing duties.

It also amends the Canadian International Trade Tribunal Act to provide that trade unions may, with the support of domestic producers, file global safeguard complaints.

Division 10 of Part 5 amends the Trust and Loan Companies Act and the Insurance Companies Act to, among other things, modernize corporate governance communications of financial institutions.

Division 11 of Part 5 amends the Insurance Companies Act to permit property and casualty companies and marine companies to not include the value of certain debt obligations when calculating their borrowing limit.

Division 12 of Part 5 enacts the Prohibition on the Purchase of Residential Property by Non-Canadians Act. The Act prohibits the purchase of residential property in Canada by non-Canadians unless they are exempted by the Act or its regulations or the purchase is made in certain circumstances specified in the regulations.

Division 13 of Part 5 amends the Parliament of Canada Act and makes consequential and related amendments to other Acts to, among other things,

(a) change the additional annual allowances that are paid to senators who occupy certain positions so that the government's representatives and the Opposition in the Senate are eligible for the allowances for five positions each and the three other recognized parties or parliamentary groups in the Senate with the greatest number of members are eligible for the allowances for four positions each;

(b) provide that the Leader of the Government in the Senate or Government Representative in the Senate, the Leader of the Opposition in the Senate and the Leader or Facilitator of every other recognized party or parliamentary group in the Senate are to be consulted on the appointment of certain officers and agents of Parliament; and

(c) provide that the Leader of the Government in the Senate or Government Representative in the Senate, the Leader of La section 8 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi de 1985 sur les normes de prestation de pension afin, notamment, de prévoir l'institution d'un compte de réserve de solvabilité du fonds de pension de certains régimes à prestations déterminées et d'exiger l'établissement de politiques sur la gouvernance pour tous les régimes de pension.

La section 9 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur les mesures spéciales d'importation afin, notamment :

a) de prévoir que l'évaluation du dommage tienne compte de l'incidence sur les travailleurs;

b) d'exiger du Tribunal canadien du commerce extérieur qu'il enquête sur les importations massives lorsqu'il agit au titre de l'article 42 de cette loi;

c) d'exiger de ce tribunal qu'il procède à un réexamen relatif à l'expiration de certaines ordonnances ou conclusions;

d) de modifier le délai à l'intérieur duquel le gouvernement du pays d'exportation est avisé de l'existence d'un dossier complet; e) de modifier les critères permettant l'imposition de droits lors d'une importation massive;

f) de modifier les critères permettant d'ouvrir des enquêtes sur le contournement;

g) de retirer l'exigence selon laquelle la principale cause du changement à la configuration des échanges doit être l'imposition de droits antidumping ou compensateurs.

Elle modifie également la Loi sur le Tribunal canadien du commerce extérieur afin de permettre aux syndicats de déposer, avec l'appui des producteurs nationaux, des plaintes relatives aux mesures de sauvegarde globales.

La section 10 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur les sociétés de fiducie et de prêt et la Loi sur les sociétés d'assurances afin, notamment de moderniser les communications relatives à la gouvernance des institutions financières.

La section 11 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur les sociétés d'assurances afin de permettre aux sociétés d'assurances multirisques et aux sociétés d'assurance maritime de ne pas inclure la valeur de certains titres de créance dans le calcul de leur limite d'emprunt.

La section 12 de la partie 5 édicte la Loi sur l'interdiction d'achat d'immeubles résidentiels par des non-Canadiens. La loi interdit l'achat d'immeubles résidentiels au Canada par des non-Canadiens, à moins qu'ils ne soient exemptés par la loi ou ses règlements ou que l'achat soit effectué dans certaines situations précisées dans les règlements.

La section 13 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur le Parlement du Canada et apporte des modifications corrélative et connexes à d'autres lois afin, notamment :

a) de modifier les indemnités annuelles supplémentaires que reçoivent les sénateurs occupant certains postes de sorte qu'elles soient versées à l'égard de cinq postes occupés par les représentants du gouvernement au Sénat et de cinq postes occupés par l'opposition et, s'agissant des trois autres partis ou groupes parlementaires reconnus au Sénat qui comptent le plus grand nombre de sénateurs, à l'égard de quatre postes chacun;

b) de prévoir l'obligation de consulter le leader ou représentant du gouvernement au Sénat, le leader de l'opposition au Sénat et le leader ou facilitateur de chacun des autres partis ou groupes parlementaires reconnus au Sénat au sujet des nominations de certains hauts fonctionnaires et agents du Parlement;

the Opposition in the Senate and the Leader or Facilitator of every other recognized party or parliamentary group in the Senate may change the membership of the Standing Senate Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration.

Division 14 of Part 5 amends the Financial Administration Act in order to, among other things, allow the Treasury Board to provide certain services to certain entities.

Division 15 of Part 5 amends the Competition Act to enhance the Commissioner of Competition's investigative powers, criminalize wage fixing and related agreements, increase maximum fines and administrative monetary penalties, clarify that incomplete price disclosure is a false or misleading representation, expand the definition of anti-competitive conduct, allow private access to the Competition Tribunal to remedy an abuse of dominance and improve the effectiveness of the merger notification requirements and other provisions.

Division 16 of Part 5 amends the Copyright Act to extend certain terms of copyright protection, including the general term, from 50 to 70 years after the life of the author and, in doing so, implements one of Canada's obligations under the Canada–United States–Mexico Agreement.

Division 17 of Part 5 amends the College of Patent Agents and Trademark Agents Act to, among other things,

(a) ensure that the College has sufficient independence and flexibility to exercise its corporate functions;

(b) provide statutory immunity to certain persons involved in the regulatory activities of the College; and

(c) grant powers to the Registrar and Investigations Committee that will allow for improved efficiency in the complaints and discipline process.

Division 18 of Part 5 enacts the Civil Lunar Gateway Agreement Implementation Act to implement Canada's obligations under the Memorandum of Understanding between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America concerning Cooperation on the Civil Lunar Gateway. It provides for powers to protect confidential information provided under the Memorandum. It also makes related amendments to the Criminal Code to extend its application to activities related to the Lunar Gateway and to the Government Employees Compensation Act to address the cross-waiver of liability set out in the Memorandum.

Division 19 of Part 5 amends the Corrections and Conditional Release Act to restrict the use of detention in dry cells to cases where the institutional head has reasonable grounds to believe that an inmate has ingested contraband or that contraband is being carried in the inmate's rectum.

Division 20 of Part 5 amends the Customs Act in order to authorize its administration and enforcement by electronic means and to provide that the importer of record of goods is jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable to pay duties on the goods under section 17 of that Act with the importer or person authorized to account for the goods, as the case may be, and the owner of the goods.

c) d'autoriser le leader ou représentant du gouvernement au Sénat, le leader de l'opposition au Sénat et le leader ou facilitateur de chacun des autres partis ou groupes parlementaires reconnus au Sénat à apporter des changements à la composition du Comité sénatorial permanent de la régie interne, des budgets et de l'administration.

La section 14 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur la gestion des finances publiques afin notamment de permettre au Conseil du Trésor de fournir certains services à certaines entités.

La section 15 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur la concurrence afin de renforcer les pouvoirs d'enquête du commissaire de la concurrence, d'ériger en infraction criminelle la fixation des salaires et les accords connexes, d'augmenter les amendes maximales et les sanctions administratives pécuniaires, de préciser que la divulgation incomplète des prix est une indication fausse ou trompeuse, d'élargir la définition d'agissement anti-concurrentiel, de permettre l'accès privé au Tribunal de la concurrence pour remédier à un abus de position dominante et d'améliorer l'efficacité des exigences en matière de transactions devant faire l'objet d'un préavis et d'autres dispositions.

La section 16 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur le droit d'auteur afin de prolonger la durée du droit d'auteur qui s'applique dans certains cas, notamment celle qui s'applique de manière générale, de la cinquantième à la soixante-dixième année suivant le décès de l'auteur et, ce faisant, met en œuvre une des obligations du Canada prévues par l'Accord Canada–États-Unis–Mexique.

La section 17 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur le Collège des agents de brevets et des agents de marques de commerce afin, notamment :

a) de faire en sorte que le Collège jouisse de l'indépendance et de la flexibilité nécessaires pour exercer ses fonctions corporatives;

b) d'accorder l'immunité par voie législative à certaines personnes impliquées dans les activités réglementaires du Collège;

c) de conférer au registraire et au comité d'enquête des pouvoirs qui permettront d'améliorer l'efficacité du processus de plaintes et de discipline.

La section 18 de la partie 5 édicte la Loi de mise en œuvre de l'Accord sur la station lunaire civile Gateway afin de mettre en œuvre les obligations du Canada découlant du Mémorandum d'accord entre le Gouvernement du Canada et le Gouvernement des États-Unis d'Amérique concernant la coopération relative à la station lunaire civile Gateway. Elle prévoit des pouvoirs permettant la protection des renseignements confidentiels communiqués aux termes du mémorandum. Elle apporte aussi des modifications connexes au Code criminel afin d'étendre la portée de son application aux activités relatives à la station lunaire Gateway et des modifications connexes à la Loi sur l'indemnisation des agents de l'État pour tenir compte de la renonciation mutuelle aux recours énoncée dans le mémorandum.

La section 19 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur le système correctionnel et la mise en liberté sous condition pour restreindre la détention en cellule nue aux cas où le directeur du pénitencier est convaincu qu'il existe des motifs raisonnables de croire qu'un détenu a dissimulé un objet interdit dans son rectum ou qu'il l'a ingéré.

La section 20 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur les douanes pour autoriser l'exécution et le contrôle d'application de cette loi par voie électronique et prévoir que l'importateur officiel de marchandises soit solidaire du paiement des droits, au même titre que l'importateur ou la personne autorisée à faire une déclaration en détail ou provisoire de marchandises, selon le cas, et le

Division 21 of Part 5 amends the Criminal Code to create an offence of wilfully promoting antisemitism by condoning, denying or downplaying the Holocaust through statements communicated other than in private conversation.

Division 22 of Part 5 amends the Judges Act, the Federal Courts Act, the Tax Court of Canada Act and certain other acts to, among other things,

(a) implement the Government of Canada's response to the report of the sixth Judicial Compensation and Benefits Commission regarding salaries and benefits and to create the office of supernumerary prothonotary of the Federal Court;

(b) increase the number of judges for certain superior courts and include the new offices of Associate Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench of New Brunswick and Associate Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench for Saskatchewan;

(c) create the offices of prothonotary and supernumerary prothonotary of the Tax Court of Canada; and

(d) replace the term "prothonotary" with "associate judge".

Division 23 of Part 5 amends the Immigration and Refugee Protection Act to, among other things,

(a) authorize the Minister of Citizenship and Immigration to give instructions establishing categories of foreign nationals for the purposes of determining to whom an invitation to make an application for permanent residence is to be issued, as well as instructions setting out the economic goal that that Minister seeks to support in establishing the category;

(b) prevent an officer from issuing a visa or other document to a foreign national invited in respect of an established category if the foreign national is not in fact eligible to be a member of that category;

(c) require that the annual report to Parliament on the operation of that Act include a description of any instructions that establish a category of foreign nationals, the economic goal sought to be supported in establishing the category and the number of foreign nationals invited to make an application for permanent residence in respect of the category; and

(d) authorize that Minister to give instructions respecting the class of permanent residents in respect of which a foreign national must apply after being issued an invitation, if the foreign national is eligible to be a member of more than one class.

Division 24 of Part 5 amends the Old Age Security Act to correct a cross-reference in that Act to the Budget Implementation Act, 2021, No. 1.

Division 25 of Part 5

(a) amends the Canada Emergency Response Benefit Act to set out the consequences that apply in respect of a worker who received, for a four-week period, an income support payment and who received, for any week during the four-week period, any benefit, allowance or money referred to in subparagraph 6(1)(b)(ii) or (iii) of that Act;

(b) amends the Canada Emergency Student Benefit Act to set out the consequences that apply in respect of a student who received, for a four-week period, a Canada emergency student benefit and who received, for any week during the La section 21 de la partie 5 modifie le Code criminel afin de créer l'infraction de fomenter volontairement l'antisémitisme en cautionnant, en niant ou en minimisant l'Holocauste, par la communication de déclarations autrement que dans une conversation privée.

La section 22 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur les juges, la Loi sur les Cours fédérales, la Loi sur la Cour canadienne de l'impôt et certaines autres loi afin notamment :

a) de mettre en œuvre la réponse du gouvernement du Canada au rapport de la sixième Commission d'examen de la rémunération des juges concernant les salaires et les avantages sociaux et de créer le poste de protonotaire surnuméraire de la Cour fédérale;

b) d'augmenter le nombre de juges pour certaines cours supérieures et d'inclure les nouveaux postes de juge en chef adjoint de la Cour du Banc de la Reine du Nouveau-Brunswick et de juge en chef adjoint de la Cour du Banc de la Reine de la Saskatchewan;

c) de créer les postes de protonotaire et de protonotaire surnuméraire de la Cour canadienne de l'impôt;

d) de remplacer le terme « protonotaire » par celui de « juge adjoint ».

La section 23 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur l'immigration et la protection des réfugiés pour, notamment :

a) autoriser le ministre de la Citoyenneté et de l'Immigration à donner des instructions établissant des ensembles d'étrangers dans le but de déterminer les étrangers qui peuvent recevoir une invitation à présenter une demande de résidence permanente ainsi que les objectifs économiques dont le ministre cherche, en établissant les ensembles, à favoriser l'atteinte;

b) interdire aux agents de délivrer un visa ou autre document à un étranger à qui une invitation à présenter une demande a été formulée relativement à un ensemble établi s'il ne pouvait pas en fait être membre de l'ensemble en question;

c) exiger que le rapport annuel au Parlement sur l'application de cette loi contienne une description des instructions établissant des ensembles d'étrangers, des objectifs économiques dont le ministre cherche, en établissant les ensembles, à favoriser l'atteinte et du nombre d'étrangers qui ont été invités à présenter une demande de résidence permanente sur la base du fait qu'ils pouvaient être membres d'un ensemble établi;

d) autoriser le ministre à donner des instructions sur la catégorie de résidents permanents à l'égard de laquelle un étranger qui peut être invité à présenter une demande doit le faire, s'il peut être membre de plus d'une catégorie.

La section 24 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur la sécurité de la vieillesse afin d'y corriger un renvoi à la Loi nº 1 d'exécution du budget de 2021.

La section 25 de la partie 5, à la fois :

a) modifie la Loi sur la prestation canadienne d'urgence afin de prévoir les conséquences qui s'appliquent à l'égard d'un travailleur ayant reçu une allocation de soutien du revenu pour toute période de quatre semaines et une prestation, allocation ou autre somme visée aux sous-alinéas 6(1)b)(ii) ou (iii) de cette loi pour toute semaine comprise dans cette période;

b) modifie la Loi sur la prestation canadienne d'urgence pour étudiants afin de prévoir les conséquences qui s'appliquent à l'égard d'un étudiant ayant reçu une prestation canadienne four-week period, any benefit, allowance or money referred to in subparagraph 6(1)(b)(ii) or (iii) of that Act; and

(c) amends the Employment Insurance Act to set out the consequences that apply in respect of a claimant who received, for any week, an employment insurance emergency response benefit and who received, for that week, any payment or benefit referred to in paragraph 153.9(2)(c) or (d) of that Act.

Division 26 of Part 5 amends the Employment Insurance Act to, among other things,

(a) replace employment benefits and support measures set out in Part II of that Act with employment support measures that are intended to help insured participants and other workers — including workers in groups underrepresented in the labour market — to obtain and keep employment; and

(b) allow the Canada Employment Insurance Commission to enter into agreements to provide for the payment of contributions to organizations for the costs of measures that they implement and that are consistent with the purpose and guidelines set out in Part II of that Act.

It also makes a consequential amendment to the Income Tax Act.

Division 27 of Part 5 amends the Employment Insurance Act to specify the maximum number of weeks for which benefits may be paid in a benefit period to certain seasonal workers and to extend, until October 28, 2023, the increase in the maximum number of weeks for which those benefits may be paid. It also amends the Budget Implementation Act, 2021, No. 1 to add a transitional measure in relation to amendments to the Employment Insurance Regulations that are found in that Act.

Division 28 of Part 5 amends the Canada Pension Plan to make corrections respecting

(a) the calculation of the minimum qualifying period and the contributory period for the purposes of the post-retirement disability benefit;

(b) the determination of values for contributors who have periods excluded from their contributory periods by reason of disability; and

(c) the attribution of amounts for contributors who have periods excluded from their contributory periods because they were family allowance recipients.

Division 29 of Part 5 amends An Act to amend the Criminal Code and the Canada Labour Code to, among other things,

(a) shorten the period before which an employee begins to earn one day of medical leave of absence with pay per month;

(b) standardize the conditions related to the requirement to provide a medical certificate following a medical leave of absence, regardless of whether the leave is paid or unpaid;

(c) authorize the Governor in Council to make regulations in certain circumstances, including to modify certain provisions respecting medical leave of absence with pay;

(d) ensure that, for the purposes of medical leave of absence, an employee who changes employers due to the lease or transfer of a work, undertaking or business or due to a contract being awarded through a retendering process is deemed to be continuously employed with one employer; and d'urgence pour étudiants pour toute période de quatre semaines et une prestation, allocation ou autre somme visée aux sous-alinéas 6(1)b)(ii) ou (iii) de cette loi pour toute semaine comprise dans cette période;

c) modifie la Loi sur l'assurance-emploi afin de prévoir les conséquences qui s'appliquent à l'égard d'un prestataire ayant reçu la prestation d'assurance-emploi d'urgence et l'allocation ou la prestation visée aux alinéas 153.9(2)c) ou d) de cette loi pour toute semaine.

La section 26 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur l'assurance-emploi afin, notamment :

a) de remplacer les prestations d'emploi et les mesures de soutien prévues par la partie II de cette loi par des mesures de soutien à l'emploi qui visent à aider les participants et autres travailleurs — notamment les membres des groupes sous-représentés sur le marché du travail — à obtenir ou à conserver un emploi;

b) de permettre à la Commission de l'assurance-emploi du Canada de conclure des accords prévoyant le versement à des organismes de contributions relatives aux frais liés à des mesures qui sont mises en œuvre par ces derniers et qui correspondent à l'objet et aux lignes directrices prévues par la partie II de cette loi.

Elle apporte également une modification corrélative à la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu.

La section 27 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur l'assurance-emploi afin de préciser le nombre maximal de semaines pour lesquelles des prestations peuvent être versées à certains travailleurs saisonniers au cours d'une période de prestations et de prolonger, jusqu'au 28 octobre 2023, l'augmentation du nombre maximal de semaines pour lesquelles ces prestations peuvent être versées. Elle modifie également la Loi nº 1 d'exécution du budget de 2021 pour ajouter une mesure transitoire relative aux modifications du Règlement sur l'assurance-emploi incluses dans cette loi.

La section 28 de la partie 5 modifie le Régime de pensions du Canada pour apporter des corrections concernant :

a) le calcul de la période minimale d'admissibilité et de la période cotisable qui s'appliquent à la prestation d'invalidité après-retraite;

b) la détermination de valeurs à l'égard du cotisant pour les périodes exclues de sa période cotisable en raison d'une invalidité;

c) l'attribution de sommes au cotisant pour les périodes exclues de sa période cotisable parce qu'il était bénéficiaire d'allocations familiales.

La section 29 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi modifiant le Code criminel et le Code canadien du travail afin, notamment :

a) de réduire pour l'employé le délai préalable à l'acquisition d'un jour de congé payé pour raisons médicales par mois;

b) d'uniformiser les conditions relatives à l'exigence de présentation d'un certificat médical à la suite d'un congé pour raisons médicales, que le congé soit payé ou non;

c) de conférer au gouverneur en conseil le pouvoir de prendre des règlements dans certaines circonstances, notamment pour adapter certaines dispositions concernant le congé payé pour raisons médicales;

d) de prévoir qu'aux fins du congé pour raisons médicales, l'employé dont l'employeur change à la suite de la location ou du transfert d'une installation, d'un ouvrage ou d'une entreprise ou à la suite d'un appel d'offres menant à l'octroi d'un contrat est réputé avoir travaillé sans interruption pour un seul employeur;

(e) provide that the provisions relating to medical leave of absence come into force no later than December 1, 2022.

Division 30 of Part 5 amends the Canada Business Corporations Act to, among other things,

(a) require certain corporations to send to the Director appointed under that Act information on individuals with significant control on an annual basis or when a change occurs;

(b) allow that Director to provide all or part of that information to an investigative body, the Financial Transactions and Reports Analysis Centre of Canada or any prescribed entity; and

(c) clarify that, for the purposes of subsection 21.1(7) of that Act, it is the securities of a corporation, not the corporation itself, that are listed and posted for trading on a designated stock exchange.

Division 31 of Part 5 amends the Special Economic Measures Act and the Justice for Victims of Corrupt Foreign Officials Act (Sergei Magnitsky Law) to, among other things,

(a) create regimes allowing for the forfeiture of property that has been seized or restrained under those Acts;

(b) specify that the proceeds resulting from the disposition of those properties are to be used for certain purposes; and

(c) allow for the sharing of information between certain persons in certain circumstances.

It also makes amendments to the Seized Property Management Act in relation to those forfeiture of property regimes.

e) de prévoir que les dispositions portant sur le congé pour raisons médicales entrent en vigueur au plus tard le 1er décembre 2022.

La section 30 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi canadienne sur les sociétés par actions afin, notamment :

a) d'obliger certaines sociétés à remettre au directeur nommé en vertu de cette loi les renseignements à l'égard des particuliers ayant un contrôle important de celles-ci, et ce annuellement ou à la suite d'un changement;

b) de permettre au directeur de fournir tout ou partie de ces renseignements à certains organismes d'enquête, au Centre d'analyse des opérations et déclarations financières du Canada ou à une entité réglementaire;

c) de préciser que, pour l'application du paragraphe 21.1(7) de cette loi, ce sont des valeurs mobilières de la société qui sont cotées et négociables à une bourse de valeurs désignée, et non la société elle-même qui est inscrite comme bourse de valeurs désignée.

La section 31 de la partie 5 modifie la Loi sur les mesures économiques spéciales et la Loi sur la justice pour les victimes de dirigeants étrangers corrompus (loi de Sergueï Magnitski) pour, notamment :

a) créer des régimes permettant la confiscation de biens saisis ou bloqués aux termes de ces lois;

b) préciser que le produit de la disposition de ces biens doit être utilisé à certaines fins;

c) permettre la communication de renseignements entre certaines personnes dans certaines circonstances.

Elle modifie aussi la Loi sur l'administration des biens saisis relativement à ces régimes de confiscation de biens.

TABLE OF PROVISIONS

An Act to implement certain provisions of the budget tabled in Parliament on April 7, 2022 and other measures

TABLE ANALYTIQUE

Loi portant exécution de certaines dispositions du budget déposé au Parlement le 7 avril 2022 et mettant en œuvre d'autres mesures

An Act to implement the Memorandum of Understanding between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America concerning Cooperation on the Civil Lunar Gateway and to make related amendments to other Acts

Loi portant sur la mise en œuvre du Mémorandum d'accord entre le Gouvernement du Canada et le Gouvernement des États-Unis d'Amérique sur la coopération relative à la station lunaire civile Gateway et apportant des modifications connexes à d'autres lois

70-71 ELIZABETH II

CHAPTER 10

An Act to implement certain provisions of the budget tabled in Parliament on April 7, 2022 and other measures

[Assented to 23rd June, 2022]

Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, enacts as follows:

Short Title

Short title

1 This Act may be cited as the Budget Implementation Act, 2022, No. 1.

PART 1

Amendments to the Income Tax Act and Other Legislation

R.S., c. 1 (5th Supp.)

Income Tax Act

2 (1) Subsection 8(1) of the Income Tax Act is amended by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (r), by adding "and" at the end of paragraph (s) and by adding the following after paragraph (s):

Labour mobility deduction

(t) if the taxpayer is an eligible tradesperson for the year, an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) $4,000, and

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is a temporary relocation deduction of the taxpayer for the year in respect of an eligible temporary relocation of the taxpayer.

70-71 ELIZABETH II

CHAPITRE 10

Loi portant exécution de certaines dispositions du budget déposé au Parlement le 7 avril 2022 et mettant en œuvre d'autres mesures

[Sanctionnée le 23 juin 2022]

Sa Majesté, sur l'avis et avec le consentement du Sénat et de la Chambre des communes du Canada, édicte :

Titre abrégé

Titre abrégé

1 Loi nº 1 d'exécution du budget de 2022.

PARTIE 1

Modification de la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu et de textes connexes

L.R., ch. 1 (5e suppl.)

Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu

2 (1) Le paragraphe 8(1) de la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu est modifié par adjonction, après l'alinéa s), de ce qui suit :

Déduction pour mobilité de la main-d'œuvre

t) si le contribuable est une personne de métier admissible pour l'année, une somme égale à la moins élevée des sommes suivantes :

(i) 4 000 $,

(ii) le total des sommes représentant chacune une déduction pour réinstallation temporaire du

(2) Section 8 of the Act is amended by adding the following after subsection (13):

Labour mobility deduction — interpretation

(14) For the purposes of this subsection and paragraph (1)(t),

(a) a taxpayer is an eligible tradesperson for a taxation year if, in the taxation year, the taxpayer has income from employment as a tradesperson or apprentice and performs their duties of employment in construction activities described in subsection 238(1) of the Income Tax Regulations;

(b) a temporary work location of a taxpayer is a location in Canada

(i) at which the taxpayer performs their duties of employment under a temporary employment contract, and

(ii) that is not situated in the locality where the taxpayer is ordinarily employed or carrying on business;

(c) an eligible temporary relocation of a taxpayer is a temporary relocation that meets the following conditions:

(i) the relocation is undertaken by the taxpayer to enable the taxpayer to perform their duties of employment as an eligible tradesperson at one or more temporary work locations of the taxpayer within the same locality,

(ii) prior to the relocation, the taxpayer ordinarily resided at a residence in Canada (in this subsection referred to as the "ordinary residence"),

(iii) the taxpayer was required by their duties of employment referred to in subparagraph (i) to be away from the ordinary residence for a period of not less than 36 hours,

(iv) during the temporary relocation, the taxpayer temporarily resided at one or more lodgings in Canada (in this subsection referred to as the "temporary lodging"), and

(v) the distance between the ordinary residence and each temporary work location of the taxpayer referred to in subparagraph (i) is not less than 150 kilometres greater than the distance between each temporary lodging referred in subparagraph (iv) contribuable pour l'année relativement à une réinstallation temporaire admissible du contribuable.

(2) L'article 8 de la même loi est modifié par adjonction, après le paragraphe (13), de ce qui suit :

Déduction pour mobilité de la main-d'œuvre

(14) Les règles ci-après s'appliquent dans le cadre du présent paragraphe et de l'alinéa (1)t) :

a) un contribuable est une personne de métier admissible pour une année d'imposition si, au cours de l'année, le contribuable gagne un revenu tiré d'un emploi en tant que personne de métier ou apprenti pour l'accomplissement des fonctions dans les activités de construction visées au paragraphe 238(1) du Règlement de l'impôt sur le revenu;

b) un lieu de travail temporaire d'un contribuable s'entend d'un endroit au Canada :

(i) où le contribuable accomplit les fonctions de son emploi en vertu d'un contrat de travail temporaire,

(ii) qui n'est pas situé dans la localité où le contribuable est habituellement employé ou exploite une entreprise;

c) une réinstallation temporaire admissible d'un contribuable est une réinstallation temporaire qui remplit les conditions suivantes :

(i) la réinstallation à un ou plusieurs lieux de travail temporaires du contribuable dans la même localité est entreprise par celui-ci afin de lui permettre d'accomplir ses fonctions d'un emploi en tant que personne de métier admissible,

(ii) avant la réinstallation, il habitait ordinairement dans une résidence au Canada (appelée « résidence habituelle » au présent paragraphe),

(iii) les fonctions de son emploi visées au sous-alinéa (i) l'ont obligé à s'absenter de sa résidence habituelle pendant une période d'au moins 36 heures,

(iv) au cours de la période de réinstallation temporaire, il a habité temporairement à un ou plusieurs logements au Canada (appelés « logement temporaire » au présent paragraphe),

(v) la distance entre la résidence habituelle et chaque lieu de travail temporaire du contribuable visé au sous-alinéa (i) est supérieure d'au moins 150 kilomètres à la distance entre chaque logement temporaire visé au sous-alinéa (iv) et chaque lieu de and each temporary work location of the taxpayer referred to in subparagraph (i);

(d) subject to paragraph (e), an eligible temporary relocation expense of a taxpayer for a taxation year is a reasonable expense incurred by the taxpayer during the taxation year, the previous taxation year or prior to February 1 of the following taxation year, in respect of

(i) transportation for one round trip per eligible temporary relocation by the taxpayer between the ordinary residence and the temporary lodging,

(ii) meals consumed by the taxpayer during the round trip described in subparagraph (i), and

(iii) the taxpayer's temporary lodging if, throughout the period of the taxpayer's temporary relocation,

(A) the taxpayer maintains their ordinary residence as their principal place of residence, and

(B) the ordinary residence remains available for the taxpayer's occupancy and is not rented to any other person;

(e) an eligible temporary relocation expense described in paragraph (d) does not include an expense incurred by the taxpayer to the extent that

(i) the expense is deducted (other than under paragraph (1)(t)) in computing the taxpayer's income for any taxation year,

(ii) the expense was deductible under paragraph (1)(t) by the taxpayer for the immediately preceding taxation year, or

(iii) the taxpayer is entitled to receive a reimbursement, allowance or any other form of assistance (other than an amount that is included in computing the income for any taxation year of the taxpayer and that is not deductible in computing the income of the taxpayer) in respect of the expense; and

(f) a taxpayer's temporary relocation deduction for a taxation year in respect of an eligible temporary relocation of the taxpayer is the lesser of

(i) the total eligible temporary relocation expenses of the taxpayer for the taxation year incurred in respect of the eligible temporary relocation, and

(ii) half of the taxpayer's total income for the taxation year from employment as an eligible travail temporaire du contribuable visé au sous-alinéa (i);

d) sous réserve de l'alinéa e), les frais de réinstallation temporaire admissibles d'un contribuable pour une année d'imposition constituent des dépenses raisonnables engagées par le contribuable au cours de l'année d'imposition, de l'année d'imposition antérieure ou avant le 1er février de l'année d'imposition suivante, pour :

(i) le transport du contribuable pour un aller-retour par réinstallation temporaire admissible entre la résidence habituelle et le logement temporaire,

(ii) les repas consommés par le contribuable pendant l'aller-retour visé au sous-alinéa (i),

(iii) le logement temporaire du contribuable si, tout au long de sa période de réinstallation temporaire, à la fois :

(A) le contribuable maintient sa résidence habituelle comme lieu principal de résidence,

(B) la résidence habituelle demeure à la disposition du contribuable et n'est pas louée à une autre personne;

e) les frais de réinstallation temporaire admissibles visés à l'alinéa d) ne comprennent pas une dépense engagée par le contribuable dans la mesure où, selon le cas :

(i) les frais sont déduits (sauf ceux visés à l'alinéa (1)t)) dans le calcul du revenu du contribuable pour une année d'imposition, (ii) les frais étaient déductibles en application de l'alinéa (1)t) par le contribuable pour l'année d'imposition précédente,

(iii) le contribuable a le droit de recevoir un remboursement, une allocation ou toute autre forme d'aide (sauf une somme qui est incluse dans le calcul de son revenu pour une année d'imposition et qui n'est pas déductible dans le calcul de son revenu) au titre des frais;

f) la déduction pour réinstallation temporaire d'un contribuable pour une année d'imposition relativement à une réinstallation temporaire admissible du contribuable est la moins élevée des sommes suivantes :

(i) le total des frais de réinstallation temporaire admissibles du contribuable pour l'année tradesperson at all temporary work locations referred to in subparagraph (c)(i) in respect of the eligible temporary relocation (computed without reference to this section).

(3) Subsections (1) and (2) apply to the 2022 and subsequent taxation years.

3 (1) Subsection 13(2) of the Act is replaced by the following:

Recapture — Class 10.1 Passenger Vehicle

(2) Notwithstanding subsection 13(1), where an excess amount is determined under that subsection at the end of a taxation year in respect of a passenger vehicle having a cost to a taxpayer in excess of $20,000 or such other amount as may be prescribed, unless it was, at any time, designated immediate expensing property as defined in subsection 1104(3.1) of the Income Tax Regulations, that excess amount shall not be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the year but shall be deemed, for the purposes of B in the definition undepreciated capital cost in subsection 13(21), to be an amount included in the taxpayer's income for the year by reason of this section.

(2) The portion of paragraph 13(7)(i) of the Act before subparagraph (ii) is replaced by the following:

(i) if the cost to a taxpayer of a zero-emission passenger vehicle exceeds the prescribed amount in subsection 7307(1.1) of the Income Tax Regulations, or if the cost of a passenger vehicle that was, at any time, designated immediate expensing property as defined in subsection 1104(3.1) of the Income Tax Regulations exceeds the prescribed amount in subsection 7307(1) of the Income Tax Regulations,

(i) the capital cost to the taxpayer of the vehicle is deemed to be equal to the prescribed amount under subsection 7307(1) or (1.1), as the case may be, and

(3) Subsections (1) and (2) are deemed to have come into force for taxation years ending on or after April 19, 2021.

d'imposition engagés relativement à la réinstallation temporaire admissible, (ii) la moitié du revenu total du contribuable pour l'année provenant de son emploi à titre de personne de métier admissible à tous les lieux de travail temporaires visés au sous-alinéa c)(i) relativement à la réinstallation temporaire admissible (calculé compte non tenu du présent article).

(3) Les paragraphes (1) et (2) s'appliquent aux années d'imposition 2022 et suivantes.

3 (1) Le paragraphe 13(2) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Récupération — Voitures de tourisme appartenant à la catégorie 10.1

(2) Malgré le paragraphe 13(1), l'excédent — calculé à la fin d'une année d'imposition en application de ce paragraphe — qui concerne une voiture de tourisme dont le coût pour un contribuable dépasse 20 000 $ ou tout autre montant qui peut être fixé par règlement, sauf si elle était, à un moment donné, un bien relatif à la passation en charges immédiate désigné au sens du paragraphe 1104(3.1) du Règlement de l'impôt sur le revenu, cet excédent n'est pas inclus dans le calcul du revenu du contribuable pour l'année. Il est toutefois réputé, pour l'application de l'élément B de la formule figurant à la définition de fraction non amortie du coût en capital au paragraphe 13(21), y être inclus par application du présent article.

(2) Le passage de l'alinéa 13(7)i) de la même loi précédant le sous-alinéa (ii) est remplacé par ce qui suit :

i) si le coût d'une voiture de tourisme zéro émission pour un contribuable est supérieur au montant fixé au paragraphe 7307(1.1) du Règlement de l'impôt sur le revenu ou si le coût, pour un contribuable, d'une voiture de tourisme qui était, à un moment donné, un bien relatif à la passation en charges immédiate désigné au sens du paragraphe 1104(3.1) du même règlement est supérieur au montant fixé au paragraphe 7307(1) de ce règlement,

(i) le coût en capital de la voiture pour le contribuable est réputé être égal au montant fixé en application des paragraphes 7307(1) ou (1.1), selon le cas,

(3) Les paragraphes (1) et (2) sont réputés être entrés en vigueur pour les années d'imposition se terminant au plus tôt le 19 avril 2021.

4 (1) The portion of paragraph 81(1)(h) before subparagraph (i) of the Act is replaced by the following:

Social assistance

(h) where the taxpayer is an individual (other than a trust), a social assistance payment (other than a prescribed payment) ordinarily made on the basis of a means, needs or income test under a program provided for by an Act of Parliament, a law of a province or a law of an Indigenous governing body (as defined in section 2 of the Children's Special Allowances Act), to the extent that it is received directly or indirectly by the taxpayer for the benefit of another individual (other than the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner or a person who is related to the taxpayer or to the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner), if

(2) The portion of paragraph 81(1)(h.1) before subparagraph (i) of the Act is replaced by the following:

Social assistance for informal care programs

(h.1) if the taxpayer is an individual (other than a trust), a social assistance payment ordinarily made on the basis of a means, needs or income test provided for under a program of the Government of Canada, the government of a province or of an Indigenous governing body (as defined in section 2 of the Children's Special Allowances Act), to the extent that it is received directly or indirectly by the taxpayer for the benefit of a particular individual, if

(3) Subsections (1) and (2) are deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2020.

5 (1) Paragraph (a) of the description of B in subsection 118.041(3) of the Act is replaced by the following:

(a) $20,000, and

(2) Paragraphs 118.041(5)(a) and (b) of the Act are replaced by the following:

(a) a maximum of $20,000 of qualifying expenditures for a taxation year in respect of a qualifying individual can be claimed under subsection (3) by the qualifying individual and all eligible individuals in respect of the qualifying individual;

(b) if there is more than one qualifying individual in respect of an eligible dwelling, a maximum of $20,000 of qualifying expenditures for a taxation year in respect of the eligible dwelling can be claimed under

4 (1) Le passage de l'alinéa 81(1)h) de la même loi précédant le sous-alinéa (i) est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Assistance sociale

h) la prestation d'assistance sociale, sauf une prestation visée par règlement, qui est habituellement payée à un particulier, à l'exclusion d'une fiducie, dans le cadre d'un programme prévu par une loi fédérale, provinciale ou d'un corps dirigeant autochtone, au sens de l'article 2 de la Loi sur les allocations spéciales pour enfants, après examen des ressources, de besoins et du revenu — dans la mesure où il la reçoit, directement ou indirectement, au profit d'un autre particulier, à l'exception de son époux ou conjoint de fait ou d'une personne qui lui est liée ou qui est liée à son époux ou conjoint de fait — si, à la fois :

(2) Le passage de l'alinéa 81(1)h.1) de la même loi précédant le sous-alinéa (i) est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Assistance sociale pour programmes de soins informels

h.1) si le contribuable est un particulier (sauf une fiducie), une prestation d'assistance sociale versée habituellement après examen des ressources, des besoins et du revenu en vertu d'un programme fédéral, provincial ou d'un corps dirigeant autochtone, au sens de l'article 2 de la Loi sur les allocations spéciales pour enfants dans la mesure où elle est reçue directement ou indirectement par le contribuable au profit d'un particulier donné, si les conditions ci-après sont réunies :

(3) Les paragraphes (1) et (2) sont réputés être entrés en vigueur le 1er janvier 2020.

5 (1) L'alinéa a) de l'élément B de la formule figurant au paragraphe 118.041(3) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

a) 20 000 $,

(2) Les alinéas 118.041(5)a) et b) de la même loi sont remplacés par ce qui suit :

a) un maximum de 20 000 $ en dépenses admissibles pour une année d'imposition relativement à un particulier déterminé peut être demandé en application du paragraphe (3) par le particulier déterminé et tous les particuliers admissibles relativement au particulier déterminé;

b) s'il existe plus d'un particulier déterminé relativement au même logement admissible, un maximum de 20 000 $ en dépenses admissibles pour une année subsection (3) by the qualifying individuals and all eligible individuals in respect of the qualifying individuals; and

(3) Subsections (1) and (2) apply to the 2022 and subsequent taxation years.

6 (1) Subparagraph 118.3(1)(a.1)(ii) of the Act is replaced by the following:

(ii) is required to be administered at least two times each week for a total duration averaging not less than 14 hours a week, and

(2) The portion of subsection 118.3(1.1) of the Act before paragraph (a) is replaced by the following:

Time spent on therapy

(1.1) For the purpose of paragraph 118.3(1)(a.1), in determining whether therapy is required to be administered at least two times each week for a total duration averaging not less than an average of 14 hours a week, the time spent on administering therapy

(3) Paragraphs 118.3(1.1)(b) to (d) of the Act are replaced by the following:

(b) in the case of therapy that requires

(i) a regular dosage of medication that is required to be adjusted on a daily basis, includes time spent on activities that are directly related to the determination of the dosage of the medication, and

(ii) the daily consumption of a medical food or medical formula to limit intake of a particular compound to levels required for the proper development or functioning of the body, includes the time spent on activities that are directly related to the determination of the amount of the compound that can be safely consumed;

(c) in the case of

(i) a child who is unable to perform the activities related to the administration of the therapy as a result of the child's age, includes the time spent by another person to perform or supervise those activities for the child, and

(ii) an individual who is unable to perform the activities related to the administration of the therapy because of the effects of an impairment or impairments in physical or mental functions, includes the d'imposition relativement au logement admissible peut être demandé en application du paragraphe (3) par les particuliers déterminés et tous les particuliers admissibles relativement aux particuliers déterminés;

(3) Les paragraphes (1) et (2) s'appliquent aux années d'imposition 2022 et suivantes.

6 (1) Le sous-alinéa 118.3(1)a.1)(ii) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(ii) doivent être administrés au moins deux fois par semaine pendant une durée totale moyenne d'au moins 14 heures par semaine,

(2) Le passage du paragraphe 118.3(1.1) de la même loi précédant l'alinéa a) est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Temps consacré aux soins thérapeutiques

(1.1) Pour l'application de l'alinéa 118.3(1)a.1), lorsqu'il s'agit d'établir si des soins thérapeutiques sont donnés au moins deux fois par semaine pendant une durée totale moyenne d'au moins 14 heures par semaine, le temps consacré à donner les soins est calculé selon les critères suivants :

(3) Les alinéas 118.3(1.1)b) à d) de la même loi sont remplacés par ce qui suit :

b) s'il s'agit de soins :

(i) dans le cadre desquels il est nécessaire de déterminer un dosage régulier de médicaments qui doit être ajusté quotidiennement, est compté le temps consacré aux activités entourant directement la détermination de ce dosage,

(ii) qui exigent la consommation quotidienne d'une formule médicale ou d'un aliment médical afin de limiter l'apport d'un composé particulier aux niveaux nécessaires au bon développement ou fonctionnement du corps, est compté le temps consacré aux activités qui sont directement liées au calcul de la quantité de composés qui peut être consommée sans danger;

c) dans le cas :

(i) d'un enfant qui n'est pas en mesure d'accomplir les activités liées aux soins en raison de son âge, est compté le temps que consacre une autre personne à accomplir ou à superviser ces activités pour l'enfant,

(ii) d'une personne qui n'est pas en mesure d'accomplir les activités liées aux soins en raison des time required to be spent by another person to assist the individual in performing those activities; and

(d) does not include time spent on

(i) activities (other than activities described in paragraph (b)) related to dietary or exercise restrictions or regimes,

(ii) travel time,

(iii) medical appointments (other than medical appointments to receive therapy or to determine the daily dosage of medication, medical food or medical formula),

(iv) shopping for medication, or

(v) recuperation after therapy (other than medically required recuperation).

effets d'une déficience ou des déficiences des fonctions physiques ou mentales, est compté le temps que doit consacrer une autre personne à aider la personne à accomplir ces activités;

d) n'est pas compté le temps consacré aux activités suivantes :

(i) les activités (sauf celles visées à l'alinéa b)) liées au respect d'un régime ou de restrictions alimentaires ou d'un programme d'exercices,

(ii) les déplacements,

(iii) les rendez-vous médicaux (sauf les rendez-vous médicaux pour recevoir des soins thérapeutiques ou pour calculer le dosage quotidien de médicaments, d'une formule médicale ou d'un aliment médical),

(iv) l'achat de médicaments,

(v) la récupération après les soins (sauf la récupération nécessaire du point de vue médical).

(3.1) Section 118.3 of the Act is amended by adding the following after subsection (1.1):

(3.1) L'article 118.3 de la même loi est modifié par adjonction, après le paragraphe (1.1), de ce qui suit :

Deeming

(1.2) Despite subsection (1.1), an individual who is diagnosed with type 1 diabetes mellitus is deemed to require therapy to be administered at least two times each week for a total duration averaging not less than 14 hours a week.

Présomption

(1.2) Malgré le paragraphe (1.1), le particulier atteint de diabète sucré de type 1 est réputé devoir se faire administrer des soins thérapeutiques au moins deux fois par semaine pendant une durée totale moyenne d'au moins 14 heures par semaine.

(4) Subsections (1) to (3.1) apply to the 2021 and subsequent taxation years in respect of certificates described in paragraph 118.3(1)(a.2) or (a.3) of the Income Tax Act that are filed with the Minister of National Revenue after this Act receives royal assent.

(4) Les paragraphes (1) à (3.1) s'appliquent aux années d'imposition 2021 et suivantes relativement aux certificats visés aux alinéas 118.3(1)a.2) ou a.3) de la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu qui sont présentés au ministre du Revenu national après la sanction royale de la présente loi.

7 (1) Subparagraphs 118.4(1)(c.1)(i) to (iii) of the Act are replaced by the following:

7 (1) Les sous-alinéas 118.4(1)c.1)(i) à (iii) de la même loi sont remplacés par ce qui suit :

(i) attention,

(ii) concentration,

(iii) memory,

(iv) judgement,

(v) perception of reality,

(vi) problem solving,

(i) l'attention,

(ii) la concentration,

(iii) la mémoire,

(iv) le jugement,

(v) la perception de la réalité,

(vi) la résolution de problèmes,

(vii) goal setting,

(viii) regulation of behaviour and emotions,

(ix) verbal and non-verbal comprehension, and

(x) adaptive functioning;

(2) Subsection (1) applies to the 2021 and subsequent taxation years in respect of certificates described in paragraph 118.3(1)(a.2) or (a.3) of the Income Tax Act that are filed with the Minister of National Revenue after this Act receives royal assent.

8 (1) Subsection 122.5(3.001) of the Act is replaced by the following:

COVID-19 — additional deemed payment

(3.001) An eligible individual in relation to a month specified for a taxation year who files a return of income for the taxation year is deemed to have paid during the specified month on account of their tax payable under this Part for the taxation year an amount determined by the formula

A – B – C

where

A is the total of

(a) $580,

(b) $580 for the qualified relation, if any, of the individual in relation to the specified month,

(c) if the individual has no qualified relation in relation to the specified month and is entitled to deduct an amount for the taxation year under subsection 118(1) because of paragraph (b) of the description of B in that subsection in respect of a qualified dependant of the individual in relation to the specified month, $580,

(d) $306 times the number of qualified dependants of the individual in relation to the specified month, other than a qualified dependant in respect of whom an amount is included under paragraph (c) in computing the total for the specified month,

(e) if the individual has no qualified relation and has one or more qualified dependants, in relation to the specified month, $306, and

(f) if the individual has no qualified relation and no qualified dependant, in relation to the specified month, the lesser of $306 and 2% of the amount, if any, by which the individual's income for the taxation year exceeds $9,412;

(vii) l'atteinte d'objectifs,

(viii) le contrôle du comportement et des émotions,

(ix) la compréhension verbale et non verbale,

(x) l'apprentissage fonctionnel à l'indépendance;

(2) Le paragraphe (1) s'applique aux années d'imposition 2021 et suivantes relativement aux certificats visés aux alinéas 118.3(1)a.2) ou a.3) de la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu qui sont présentés au ministre du Revenu national après la sanction royale de la présente loi.

8 (1) Le paragraphe 122.5(3.001) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

COVID-19 — montant additionnel réputé versé

(3.001) Le particulier admissible par rapport à un mois déterminé d'une année d'imposition qui produit une déclaration de revenu pour l'année est réputé avoir payé au cours de ce mois, au titre de son impôt payable en vertu de la présente partie pour l'année, le montant obtenu par la formule suivante :

A – B – C

où :

A représente la somme des montants suivants :

a) 580 $,

b) 580 $ pour son proche admissible par rapport à ce mois,

c) 580 $, s'il n'a pas de proche admissible par rapport à ce mois, mais peut déduire un montant pour l'année en application du paragraphe 118(1), par l'effet de l'alinéa 118(1)b), pour une de ses personnes à charge admissibles par rapport à ce mois, d) le produit de la multiplication de 306 $ par le nombre de ses personnes à charge admissibles par rapport à ce mois, à l'exclusion d'une telle personne pour laquelle un montant est inclus par application de l'alinéa c) dans le calcul du total pour le mois déterminé, e) si, par rapport à ce mois, il n'a pas de proche admissible, mais a une ou plusieurs personnes à charge admissibles, 306 $,

f) si, par rapport à ce mois, il n'a ni proche admissible ni personne à charge admissible, 306 $ ou, s'il est moins élevé, le montant représentant 2 % de l'excédent éventuel de son revenu pour l'année sur 9 412 $;

B is 5% of the amount, if any, by which the individual's adjusted income for the taxation year in relation to the specified month exceeds $37,789; and

C is the total amount that the eligible individual is deemed to have paid under subsection (3) on account of their tax payable for the specified months of July 2019, October 2019, January 2020 and April 2020.

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into effect on March 25, 2020.

9 (1) Paragraph (i) of the definition eligible individual in section 122.6 of the Act is replaced by the following:

(i) an individual shall not fail to qualify as a parent (within the meaning assigned by section 252) of another individual solely because of the receipt of a social assistance amount that is payable under a program of the Government of Canada, the government of a province or an Indigenous governing body (as defined in section 2 of the Children's Special Allowances Act) for the benefit of the other individual; (particulier admissible)

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2020.

10 (1) Subsection 122.7(1.2) of the Act is replaced by the following:

Receipt of social assistance

(1.2) For the purposes of applying the definitions eligible dependant and eligible individual in subsection (1) for a taxation year, an individual shall not fail to qualify as a parent (within the meaning assigned by section 252) of another individual solely because of the receipt of a social assistance amount that is payable under a program of the Government of Canada, the government of a province or an Indigenous governing body (as defined in section 2 of the Children's Special Allowances Act) for the benefit of the other individual, unless the amount is a special allowance under the Children's Special Allowances Act in respect of the other individual in the taxation year.

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2020.

11 (1) The definitions eligible individual, qualified dependant and qualified relation in subsection 122.8(1) of the Act are replaced by the following:

B 5 % de l'excédent éventuel de son revenu rajusté pour l'année par rapport à ce mois sur 37 789 $;

C le montant total que la personne admissible est réputée avoir payé en vertu du paragraphe (3), au titre de son impôt payable pour les mois déterminés de juillet 2019, d'octobre 2019, de janvier 2020 et d'avril 2020.

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 25 mars 2020.

9 (1) L'alinéa i) de la définition de particulier admissible, à l'article 122.6 de la même loi, est remplacé par ce qui suit :

i) un particulier demeure le père ou la mère (au sens de l'article 252) d'un autre particulier même si une prestation d'assistance sociale est versée dans le cadre d'un programme fédéral, provincial ou d'un corps dirigeant autochtone, au sens de l'article 2 de la Loi sur les allocations spéciales pour enfants au profit de l'autre particulier. (eligible individual)

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 1er janvier 2020.

10 (1) Le paragraphe 122.7(1.2) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Réception de prestations d'assistance sociale

(1.2) Pour l'application des définitions de personne à charge admissible et particulier admissible au paragraphe (1) pour une année d'imposition, un particulier demeure le père ou la mère (au sens de l'article 252) d'un autre particulier même si une prestation d'assistance sociale est versée dans le cadre d'un programme fédéral, provincial ou d'un corps dirigeant autochtone, au sens de l'article 2 de la Loi sur les allocations spéciales pour enfants au profit de l'autre particulier, sauf s'il s'agit d'une allocation spéciale en vertu de la Loi sur les allocations spéciales pour enfants relativement à l'autre particulier au cours de l'année d'imposition.

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 1er janvier 2020.

11 (1) Les définitions de particulier admissible, personne à charge admissible et proche admissible, au paragraphe 122.8(1) de la même loi, sont respectivement remplacées par ce qui suit :

eligible individual, in relation to a month specified for a taxation year, means an individual (other than a trust) who

(a) has, before the specified month, attained the age of 19 years; or

(b) was, at any time before the specified month,

(i) a parent who resided with their child, or

(ii) married or in a common-law partnership. (particulier admissible)

qualified dependant, of an individual in relation to a month specified for a taxation year, means a person who at the beginning of the specified month

(a) is the individual's child or is dependent for support on the individual or on the individual's cohabiting spouse or common-law partner;

(b) resides with the individual;

(c) is under the age of 19 years;

(d) is not an eligible individual in relation to the specified month; and

(e) is not a qualified relation of any individual in relation to the specified month. (personne à charge admissible)

qualified relation, of an individual in relation to a month specified for a taxation year, means the person, if any, who, at the beginning of the specified month, is the individual's cohabiting spouse or common-law partner. (proche admissible) particulier admissible Par rapport à un mois déterminé d'une année d'imposition, particulier, à l'exception d'une fiducie, qui, selon le cas :

a) avait atteint l'âge de 19 ans avant le mois déterminé;

b) à un moment antérieur à ce mois :

(i) résidait avec un enfant dont il est le père ou la mère,

(ii) était marié ou vivait en union de fait. (eligible individual) personne à charge admissible Est une personne à charge admissible d'un particulier par rapport à un mois déterminé d'une année d'imposition, la personne qui, au début du mois déterminé, répond aux conditions suivantes :

a) elle est l'enfant du particulier ou est à sa charge ou à la charge de l'époux ou conjoint de fait visé du particulier;

b) elle vit avec le particulier;

c) elle est âgée de moins de 19 ans;

d) elle n'est pas un particulier admissible par rapport au mois déterminé;

e) elle n'est pas le proche admissible d'un particulier par rapport au mois déterminé. (qualified dependant)

proche admissible Est un proche admissible d'un particulier par rapport à un mois déterminé d'une année d'imposition la personne qui, au début du mois déterminé, est l'époux ou conjoint de fait visé du particulier*. (qualified relation)*

(2) Subsection 122.8(2) of the Act is replaced by the following:

Persons not eligible or qualified

(2) Despite subsection (1), a person is not an eligible individual, is not a qualified relation and is not a qualified dependant, in relation to a month specified for a taxation year, if the person

(a) died before the specified month;

(b) is confined to a prison or similar institution for a period of at least 90 days that includes the first day of the specified month;

(2) Le paragraphe 122.8(2) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Personnes non admissibles

(2) Malgré le paragraphe (1), n'est ni un particulier admissible, ni un proche admissible, ni une personne à charge admissible, par rapport au mois déterminé d'une année d'imposition, la personne qui, selon le cas :

a) est décédée avant ce mois;

b) est détenue dans une prison ou dans un établissement semblable pendant une période d'au moins 90 jours qui comprend le premier jour de ce mois;

(c) is at the beginning of the specified month a non-resident person, other than a non-resident person who

(i) is at that time the cohabiting spouse or common-law partner of a person who is deemed under subsection 250(1) to be resident in Canada throughout the taxation year that includes the first day of the specified month, and

(ii) was resident in Canada at any time before the specified month;

(d) is at the beginning of the specified month a person described in paragraph 149(1)(a) or (b); or (e) is a person in respect of whom a special allowance under the Children's Special Allowances Act is payable for the specified month.

(3) Subsections 122.8(4) to (8) of the Act are replaced by the following:

Deemed payment on account of tax

(4) An eligible individual in relation to a month specified for a taxation year who files a return of income for the taxation year is deemed to have paid, during the specified month, on account of their tax payable under this Part for the taxation year, an amount equal to the amount, if any, determined by the formula

(A + B + C × D) × E

where

A is the amount specified by the Minister of Finance for an eligible individual in relation to the specified month for the province (in this subsection and subsection (6) referred to as the "relevant province") in which the eligible individual resides at the beginning of the specified month;

B is

(a) the amount specified by the Minister of Finance for a qualified relation in relation to the specified month for the relevant province, if

(i) the eligible individual has a qualified relation at the beginning of the specified month, or

(ii) subparagraph (i) does not apply and the eligible individual has a qualified dependant at the beginning of the specified month, and

(b) in any other case, nil;

C is the amount specified by the Minister of Finance for a qualified dependant in relation to the specified month for the relevant province;

c) est une personne non-résidente au début de ce mois, à l'exception d'une personne non-résidente qui, à la fois :

(i) est, à ce moment, l'époux ou le conjoint de fait visé d'une personne qui est réputée, par le paragraphe 250(1), résider au Canada tout au long de l'année d'imposition qui comprend le premier jour de ce mois,

(ii) a résidé au Canada à un moment antérieur à ce mois;

d) est, au début de ce mois, une personne visée aux alinéas 149(1)a) ou b); e) est quelqu'un pour qui une allocation spéciale prévue par la Loi sur les allocations spéciales pour enfants est payable pour ce mois.

(3) Les paragraphes (4) à (8) de l'article 122.8 de la même loi sont remplacés par ce qui suit :

Montant réputé versé au titre de l'impôt

(4) Le particulier admissible par rapport à un mois déterminé d'une année d'imposition qui produit une déclaration de revenu pour l'année est réputé avoir payé, au cours de ce mois, au titre de son impôt payable en vertu de la présente partie pour l'année, une somme égale à la somme obtenue par la formule suivante :

(A + B + C × D) × E

où :

A représente le montant fixé par le ministre des Finances à l'égard d'un particulier admissible par rapport au mois déterminé relativement à la province (appelée « province visée » au présent paragraphe et au paragraphe (6)) où réside le particulier admissible au début de ce mois;

B :

a) le montant fixé par le ministre des Finances à l'égard d'un proche admissible par rapport au mois déterminé relativement à la province visée, si :

(i) le particulier admissible a un proche admissible au début de ce mois,

(ii) le sous-alinéa (i) ne s'applique pas et le particulier admissible a une personne à charge admissible au début de ce mois,

b) dans les autres cas, zéro;

C le montant fixé par le ministre des Finances à l'égard d'une personne à charge admissible par rapport au mois déterminé relativement à la province visée;

D is the number of qualified dependants of the eligible individual at the beginning of the specified month, other than a qualified dependant in respect of whom an amount is included because of subparagraph (a)(ii) of the description of B in relation to the specified month; and

E is

(a) 1.1, if there is a census metropolitan area, as determined in the last census published by Statistics Canada before the taxation year, in the relevant province and the individual does not reside in a census metropolitan area at the beginning of the specified month, and

(b) 1, in any other case.

D le nombre de personnes à charge admissibles du particulier admissible au début du mois déterminé, sauf une personne à charge admissible à l'égard de laquelle un montant est inclus par l'effet du sous-alinéa a)(ii) de l'élément B par rapport à ce mois;

E :

a) si la province visée compte une région métropolitaine de recensement, selon le dernier recensement publié par Statistique Canada avant l'année d'imposition, et que le particulier ne réside pas dans une telle région au début du mois déterminé, 1,1, b) sinon, 1.

Shared-custody parent

(4.1) Despite subsection (4), if an eligible individual is a shared-custody parent (as defined in section 122.6, but the definition qualified dependent in that section having the meaning assigned by subsection (1)) in respect of one or more qualified dependants at the beginning of a month, the amount deemed by subsection (4) to have been paid during a specified month is equal to the amount determined by the formula

0.5(A + B)

where

A is the amount determined under subsection (4), calculated without reference to this subsection; and

B is the amount determined under subsection (4), calculated without reference to this subsection and subparagraph (b)(ii) of the definition eligible individual in section 122.6.

Parent ayant la garde partagée

(4.1) Malgré le paragraphe (4), si un particulier admissible est un parent ayant la garde partagée (au sens de l'article 122.6, la définition de personne à charge admissible à cet article étant toutefois entendue au sens du paragraphe (1)) à l'égard d'une ou de plusieurs personnes à charge admissibles au début d'un mois, la somme qui est réputée, en vertu du paragraphe (4), avoir été payée au cours d'un mois déterminé correspond à la somme obtenue par la formule suivante :

0,5(A + B)

où :

A représente la somme obtenue par la formule figurant au paragraphe (4), compte non tenu du présent paragraphe,

B la somme obtenue par la formule figurant au paragraphe (4), compte non tenu du présent paragraphe ni du sous-alinéa b)(ii) de la définition de particulier admissible à l'article 122.6.

Months specified

(4.2) For the purposes of this section, the months specified for a taxation year are April, July and October of the immediately following taxation year and January of the second immediately following taxation year.

Mois déterminés

(4.2) Pour l'application du présent article, les mois déterminés d'une année d'imposition sont avril, juillet et octobre de l'année d'imposition suivante et janvier de la deuxième année d'imposition suivante.

Authority to specify amounts

(5) The Minister of Finance may specify amounts for a province in relation to a month specified for a taxation year for the purposes of this section. If the Minister of Finance does not specify a particular amount that is relevant for the purposes of this section, that particular amount is deemed to be nil for the purpose of applying this section.

Montants fixés par le ministre

(5) Le ministre des Finances peut fixer des montants relativement à une province par rapport à un mois déterminé d'une année d'imposition pour l'application du présent article. S'il ne fixe pas un montant particulier se rapportant à l'application du présent article, ce montant est réputé être zéro pour l'application du présent article.

Deemed rebate in respect of fuel charges

(6) The amount deemed by this section to have been paid during a specified month on account of tax payable for a taxation year is deemed to have been paid during the specified month as a rebate in respect of charges levied under Part 1 of the Greenhouse Gas Pollution Pricing Act in respect of the relevant province.

Only one eligible individual

(7) If an individual is a qualified relation of another individual in relation to a month specified for a taxation year and both those individuals would be, but for this subsection, eligible individuals in relation to the specified month, only the individual that the Minister designates is the eligible individual in relation to the specified month.

Exception — qualified dependant

(8) If a person would, if this Act were read without reference to this subsection, be the qualified dependant of two or more individuals, in relation to a month specified for a taxation year,

(a) the person is deemed to be a qualified dependant, in relation to that month, of the one of those individuals on whom those individuals agree;

(b) in the absence of an agreement referred to in paragraph (a), the person is deemed to be, in relation to that month, a qualified dependant of the individuals, if any, who are, at the beginning of that month, eligible individuals (as defined in section 122.6, but the definition qualified dependant in that section having the meaning assigned by subsection (1)) in respect of that person; and

(c) in any other case, the person is deemed to be, in relation to that month, a qualified dependant only of the individual that the Minister designates.

Notification to Minister

(8.1) An individual shall notify the Minister of the occurrence of any of the following events before the end of the month following the month in which the event occurs:

(a) the individual ceases to be an eligible individual;

(b) a person becomes or ceases to be the individual's qualified relation; and

(c) a person ceases to be a qualified dependant of the individual, otherwise than because of attaining the age of 19 years.

Présomption de remboursement — redevances sur les combustibles

(6) Le montant qui est réputé, par le présent article, avoir été payé au cours d'un mois déterminé au titre de l'impôt payable pour une année d'imposition est réputé être un remboursement effectué au cours de ce mois relativement aux redevances prélevées en vertu de la partie 1 de la Loi sur la tarification de la pollution causée par les gaz à effet de serre à l'égard de la province visée.

Un seul particulier admissible

(7) Dans le cas où un particulier est le proche admissible d'un autre particulier par rapport à un mois déterminé d'une année d'imposition et où les deux particuliers seraient, en l'absence du présent paragraphe, des particuliers admissibles relativement à ce mois, seul le particulier désigné par le ministre est le particulier admissible relativement à ce mois.

Personne à charge admissible d'un seul particulier

(8) La personne qui, en l'absence du présent paragraphe, serait la personne à charge admissible de plusieurs particuliers par rapport à un mois déterminé d'une année d'imposition est réputée être la personne à charge admissible par rapport au mois déterminé :

a) soit de celui parmi ces particuliers sur lequel ceux-ci se sont mis d'accord;

b) soit, en l'absence d'accord, des particuliers qui, au début de ce mois, sont des particuliers admissibles (au sens de l'article 122.6, la définition de personne à charge admissible à cet article étant toutefois entendue au sens du paragraphe (1)) à son égard;

c) soit, dans les autres cas, de nul autre que le particulier désigné par le ministre.

Avis au ministre

(8.1) Un particulier est tenu d'aviser le ministre des événements ci-après avant la fin du mois suivant celui où l'événement se produit :

a) le particulier cesse d'être un particulier admissible;

b) une personne devient le proche admissible du particulier ou cesse de l'être;

c) une personne cesse d'être une personne à charge admissible du particulier pour une autre raison que celle d'avoir atteint l'âge de 19 ans.

(4) Subsections (1) to (3) apply to payments made after June 2022 in respect of the 2021 and subsequent taxation years.

12 (1) The Act is amended by adding the following after section 125.1:

Definitions

125.2 (1) The following definitions apply in this section.

adjusted business income, of a corporation for a taxation year, has the same meaning as in Part LII of the Income Tax Regulations. (revenu rajusté tiré d'une entreprise)

cost of capital, of a corporation for a taxation year, has the same meaning as in Part LII of the Income Tax Regulations. (coût en capital)

cost of labour, of a corporation for a taxation year, has the same meaning as in Part LII of the Income Tax Regulations. (coût en main-d'œuvre)

zero-emission technology manufacturing profits, of a corporation for a taxation year, means the amount determined by the formula

A × B × C

where

A is the corporation's adjusted business income for the taxation year;

B is the fraction determined by the formula

D ÷ E

where

D is the total of the corporation's ZETM cost of capital and ZETM cost of labour for the taxation year, and

E is the total of the corporation's cost of capital and cost of labour for the taxation year; and

C is

(a) if the fraction determined for B is at least 0.9, the fraction determined by the formula

F ÷ G

where

F is the amount determined for E, and

G is the amount determined for D; and

(b) 1, in any other case. (bénéfices de fabrication de technologies à zéro émission)

(4) Les paragraphes (1) à (3) s'appliquent aux paiements effectués après juin 2022 pour les années d'imposition 2021 et suivantes.

12 (1) La même loi est modifiée par adjonction, après l'article 125.1, de ce qui suit :

Définitions

125.2 (1) Les définitions qui suivent s'appliquent au présent article.

bénéfices de fabrication de technologies à zéro émission En ce qui concerne une société pour une année d'imposition, la somme correspondant à la somme obtenue par la formule suivante :

A × B × C

où :

A représente le revenu rajusté tiré d'une entreprise de la société pour l'année d'imposition;

B la fraction obtenue par la formule suivante :

D ÷ E

où :

D représente le total du coût en capital de FTZE et du coût en main-d'œuvre de FTZE de la société pour l'année d'imposition,

E le total du coût en capital et du coût en main-d'œuvre de la société pour l'année d'imposition;

C :

a) si l'élément B correspond à au moins 0,9, la fraction obtenue par la formule suivante :

F ÷ G

où :

F représente le montant déterminé pour l'élément E,

G le montant déterminé pour l'élément D;

b) 1, dans les autres cas. (zero-emission technology manufacturing profits)

coût en capital En ce qui concerne une société pour une année d'imposition, s'entend au sens de la partie LII du Règlement de l'impôt sur le revenu. (cost of capital)

coût en capital de FTZE En ce qui concerne une société pour une année d'imposition, s'entend au sens de la partie LII du Règlement de l'impôt sur le revenu. (ZETM cost of capital)

coût en main-d'œuvre En ce qui concerne une société pour une année d'imposition, s'entend au sens de la

ZETM cost of capital, of a corporation for a taxation year, has the same meaning as in Part LII of the Income Tax Regulations. (coût en capital de FTZE)

ZETM cost of labour, of a corporation for a taxation year, has the same meaning as in Part LII of the Income Tax Regulations. (coût en main-d'œuvre de FTZE)

Zero-emission technology manufacturing

(2) There may be deducted from the tax otherwise payable under this Part by a corporation for a taxation year the amount determined by the formula

(A × B) + (C × D)

where

A is

(a) 0.075, if the taxation year begins after 2021 and before 2029,

(b) 0.05625, if the taxation year begins after 2028 and before 2030,

(c) 0.0375, if the taxation year begins after 2029 and before 2031,

(d) 0.01875, if the taxation year begins after 2030 and before 2032, and

(e) nil, in any other case;

B is the least of

(a) the corporation's zero-emission technology manufacturing profits for the taxation year,

(b) the amount of the corporation's adjusted business income for the taxation year (determined without reference to section 5203 of the Income Tax Regulations) less

(i) if the corporation was a Canadian-controlled private corporation throughout the taxation year, the least of the amounts, if any, determined under paragraphs 125(1)(a) to (c) in respect of the corporation for the taxation year, and

(ii) in any other case, nil, and

(c) the amount, if any, by which the corporation's taxable income for the taxation year exceeds the total of

(i) if the corporation was a Canadian-controlled private corporation throughout the taxation year, the least of the amounts, if any, partie LII du Règlement de l'impôt sur le revenu. (cost of labour)

coût en main-d'œuvre de FTZE En ce qui concerne une société pour une année d'imposition, s'entend au sens de la partie LII du Règlement de l'impôt sur le revenu. (ZETM cost of labour)

revenu rajusté tiré d'une entreprise En ce qui concerne une société pour une année d'imposition, s'entend au sens de la partie LII du Règlement de l'impôt sur le revenu. (adjusted business income)

Fabrication de technologies à zéro émission

(2) Il peut être déduit de l'impôt payable par ailleurs d'une société pour une année d'imposition en vertu de la présente partie la somme obtenue par la formule suivante :

(A × B) + (C × D)

où :

A représente :

a) 0,075, si l'année d'imposition commence après 2021 et avant 2029,

b) 0,05625, si l'année d'imposition commence après 2028 et avant 2030,

c) 0,0375, si l'année d'imposition commence après 2029 et avant 2031,

d) 0,01875, si l'année d'imposition commence après 2030 et avant 2032,

e) zéro, dans les autres cas;

B le moins élevé des montants suivants :

a) les bénéfices de fabrication de technologies à zéro émission réalisés par la société pour l'année d'imposition, b) le montant du revenu rajusté tiré d'une entreprise pour l'année d'imposition (déterminé compte non tenu de l'article 5203 du Règlement de l'impôt sur le revenu) moins, selon le cas :

(i) si la société est tout au long de l'année une société privée sous contrôle canadien, le moins élevé des montants déterminés aux alinéas 125(1)a) à c) relativement à la société pour l'année d'imposition,

(ii) dans les autres cas, zéro,

c) l'excédent éventuel du revenu imposable de la société pour l'année d'imposition sur le total des sommes suivantes :

(i) si la société est tout au long de l'année une société privée sous contrôle canadien, le moins determined under paragraphs 125(1)(a) to (c) in respect of the corporation for the taxation year,

(ii) the corporation's aggregate investment income (as defined in subsection 129(4)) for the taxation year, and

(iii) the amount determined by multiplying the total of the amounts deducted under subsection 126(2) from its tax for the taxation year otherwise payable under this Part, by the relevant factor for the taxation year;

C is

(a) 0.045, if the taxation year begins after 2021 and before 2029,

(b) 0.03375, if the taxation year begins after 2028 and before 2030,

(c) 0.0225, if the taxation year begins after 2029 and before 2031,

(d) 0.01125, if the taxation year begins after 2030 and before 2032, and

(e) nil, in any other case; and

D is

(a) if the corporation was a Canadian-controlled private corporation throughout the taxation year, the lesser of

(i) the least of the amounts, if any, determined under paragraphs 125(1)(a) to (c) in respect of the corporation for the taxation year, and

(ii) the amount determined by the formula

E – F

where

E is the corporation's zero-emission technology manufacturing profits for the taxation year, and

F is the amount determined for B, and (b) nil, in any other case.

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2022.

13 Section 125.4 of the Act is amended by adding the following after subsection (1):

COVID-19 — production commencement time

(1.1) The reference to "two years" in subparagraph (b)(iii) of the definition production commencement élevé des montants déterminés aux alinéas 125(1)a) à c) en ce qui concerne la société pour l'année d'imposition,

(ii) le revenu de placement total (au sens du paragraphe 129(4)) de la société pour l'année d'imposition,

(iii) le produit de la multiplication du total des sommes déduites en application du paragraphe 126(2) de son impôt payable par ailleurs pour l'année d'imposition en vertu de la présente partie, par le facteur de référence pour l'année d'imposition;

C :

a) 0,045, si l'année d'imposition commence après 2021 et avant 2029,

b) 0,03375, si l'année d'imposition commence après 2028 et avant 2030,

c) 0,0225, si l'année d'imposition commence après 2029 et avant 2031,

d) 0,01125, si l'année d'imposition commence après 2030 et avant 2032,

e) zéro, dans les autres cas;

D :

a) si la société est tout au long de l'année une société privée sous contrôle canadien, le moins élevé des montants suivants :

(i) le moins élevé des montants déterminés aux alinéas 125(1)a) à c) relativement à la société pour l'année d'imposition,

(ii) la somme obtenue par la formule suivante :

E – F

où :

E représente les bénéfices de fabrication de technologies à zéro émission réalisés par la société pour l'année d'imposition,

F le montant déterminé à l'élément B;

b) zéro, dans les autres cas.

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 1er janvier 2022.

13 L'article 125.4 de la même loi est modifié par adjonction, après le paragraphe (1), de ce qui suit :

COVID-19 — début de la production

(1.1) La mention de « deux ans » au sous-alinéa b)(iii) de la définition de début de la production au time in subsection (1) is to be read as a reference to "three years" in respect of film or video productions for which the labour expenditure of the corporation in respect of the production for the taxation year ending in 2020 or 2021 was greater than nil.

14 (1) Section 125.7 of the Act is amended by adding the following after subsection (15):

Extension of time by Minister

(16) For the purposes of determining whether an eligible entity is a qualifying entity, a qualifying recovery entity or a qualifying renter, the Minister may, at any time, extend the time for filing an application under this section.

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on April 11, 2020.

15 (1) The definition earned income in subsection 146(1) of the Act is amended by adding the following after paragraph (b):

(b.01) an amount included under paragraph 56(1)(n) in computing the taxpayer's income for a period in the year throughout which the taxpayer was resident in Canada in connection with a program that consists primarily of research and does not lead to a diploma from a college or a collège d'enseignement général et professionnel, or a bachelor, masters, doctoral or equivalent degree,

(2) Subject to subsection (3), subsection (1) applies in respect of income received in the 2021 and subsequent taxation years.

(3) Before 2026, the taxpayer may file an election with the Minister of National Revenue to include income that is described in paragraph (b.01) of the definition earned income in subsection 146(1) of the Act, and received by the taxpayer after 2010 and before 2021, for the purposes of computing the taxpayer's RRSP deduction limit (as defined in that subsection) on or after the date the election is filed.

16 (1) The definition charitable purposes in subsection 149.1(1) of the Act is replaced by the following:

charitable purposes includes making qualifying disbursements; (fins de bienfaisance) paragraphe (1) vaut mention de « trois ans » relativement aux productions cinématographiques ou magnétoscopiques pour lesquelles la dépense de main-d'œuvre de la société relativement à la production pour les années d'imposition se terminant en 2020 ou 2021 était supérieure à zéro.

14 (1) L'article 125.7 de la même loi est modifié par adjonction, après le paragraphe (15), de ce qui suit :

Prorogation du délai par le ministre

(16) Afin de déterminer si une entité déterminée est une entité admissible, une entité de relance admissible ou un locataire admissible, le ministre peut, à tout moment, proroger le délai pour faire une demande en vertu du présent article.

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 11 avril 2020.

15 (1) La définition de revenu gagné, au paragraphe 146(1) de la même loi, est modifiée par adjonction, après l'alinéa b), de ce qui suit :

b.01) soit un montant inclus en application de l'alinéa 56(1)n) dans le calcul de son revenu pour une période de l'année tout au long de laquelle il a résidé au Canada relativement à un programme qui consiste principalement à faire de la recherche et qui ne mène pas à un diplôme décerné par un collège ou un collège d'enseignement général et professionnel ou à un baccalauréat, une maîtrise, un doctorat ou à un grade équivalent;

(2) Sous réserve du paragraphe (3), le paragraphe (1) s'applique relativement au revenu reçu au cours des années d'imposition 2021 et suivantes.

(3) Avant 2026, le contribuable peut faire un choix dans un document présenté au ministre du Revenu national d'inclure le revenu visé à l'alinéa b.01) de la définition de revenu gagné au paragraphe 146(1) de la même loi, et que le contribuable a reçu après 2010 et avant 2021, pour le calcul du maximum déductible aux titres des REER, au sens de ce paragraphe, à partir de la date où le choix est présenté.

16 (1) La définition de fins de bienfaisance, au paragraphe 149.1(1) de la même loi, est remplacée par ce qui suit :

fins de bienfaisance Comprend des versements admissibles. (charitable purposes)

(2) Paragraph (a.1) of the definition charitable organization in subsection 149.1(1) of the Act is replaced by the following:

(a.1) all the resources of which are devoted to charitable activities carried on by the organization itself or to making qualifying disbursements,

(3) Subsection 149.1(1) of the Act is amended by adding the following in alphabetical order:

grantee organization includes a person, club, society, association or organization or prescribed entity, but does not include a qualified donee; (organisation donataire) qualifying disbursement means a disbursement by a charity, by way of a gift or by otherwise making resources available,

(a) subject to subsection (6.001), to a qualified donee, or

(b) to a grantee organization, if

(i) the disbursement is in furtherance of a charitable purpose (determined without reference to the definition charitable purposes in this subsection) of the charity,

(ii) the charity ensures that the disbursement is exclusively applied to charitable activities in furtherance of a charitable purpose of the charity, and

(iii) the charity maintains documentation sufficient to demonstrate

(A) the purpose for which the disbursement is made, and

(B) that the disbursement is exclusively applied by the grantee organization to charitable activities in furtherance of a charitable purpose of the charity; (versement admissible)

(4) Paragraphs 149.1(2)(b) and (c) of the Act are replaced by the following:

(b) fails to expend in any taxation year, on charitable activities carried on by it and by way of gifts made by it that are qualifying disbursements, amounts the total of which is at least equal to the organization's disbursement quota for that year; or

(2) L'alinéa a.1) de la définition de œuvre de bienfaisance, au paragraphe 149.1(1) de la même loi, est remplacé par ce qui suit :

a.1) dont la totalité des ressources est consacrée à des activités de bienfaisance qu'elle mène elle-même ou à des versements admissibles;

(3) Le paragraphe 149.1(1) de la même loi est modifié par adjonction, selon l'ordre alphabétique, de ce qui suit :

organisation donataire Comprend une personne, un club, un cercle, une association, une organisation ou une entité visée par règlement à l'exclusion d'un donataire reconnu. (grantee organization)

versement admissible S'entend d'un versement par un organisme de bienfaisance, sous forme de dons ou par la mise à disposition de ressources :

a) sous réserve du paragraphe (6.001), à un donataire reconnu;

b) à une organisation donataire si, à la fois :

(i) le versement est effectué en vue de la réalisation de fins de bienfaisance (déterminées compte non tenu de la définition de fins de bienfaisance au présent paragraphe) de l'organisme de bienfaisance,

(ii) l'organisme de bienfaisance veille à ce que le versement s'applique exclusivement à des activités de bienfaisance en vue de la réalisation de fins de bienfaisance de celui-ci,

(iii) l'organisme de bienfaisance tient des documents qui permettent de montrer :

(A) d'une part, le but du versement effectué,

(B) d'autre part, le fait que l'organisation donataire applique exclusivement le versement à des activités de bienfaisance en vue de la réalisation de fins de bienfaisance de l'organisme. (qualifying disbursement)

(4) Les alinéas 149.1(2)b) et c) de la même loi sont remplacés par ce qui suit :

b) soit ne dépense pas au cours d'une année d'imposition, pour les activités de bienfaisance qu'elle mène elle-même ou par des dons sous forme de versements admissibles, des sommes dont le total est au moins égal à son contingent des versements pour l'année;

(c) makes a disbursement, other than

(i) a disbursement made in the course of charitable activities carried on by it, or

(ii) a qualifying disbursement.

(5) Paragraphs 149.1(3)(b) and (b.1) of the Act are replaced by the following:

(b) fails to expend in any taxation year, on charitable activities carried on by it and by way of gifts made by it that are qualifying disbursements, amounts the total of which is at least equal to the foundation's disbursement quota for that year;

(b.1) makes a disbursement, other than

(i) a disbursement made in the course of charitable activities carried on by it, or

(ii) a qualifying disbursement;

(6) Paragraphs 149.1(4)(b) and (b.1) of the Act are replaced by the following:

(b) fails to expend in any taxation year, on charitable activities carried on by it and by way of gifts made by it that are qualifying disbursements, amounts the total of which is at least equal to the foundation's disbursement quota for that year;

(b.1) makes a disbursement, other than

(i) a disbursement made in the course of charitable activities carried on by it, or

(ii) a qualifying disbursement;

(7) Paragraph 149.1(4.1)(d) of the Act is replaced by the following:

(d) of a registered charity, if it has in a taxation year received a gift of property (other than a designated gift) from another registered charity with which it does not deal at arm's length and it has expended, before the end of the next taxation year, in addition to its disbursement quota for each of those taxation years, an amount that is less than the fair market value of the property, on charitable activities carried on by it or by way of gifts that are qualified disbursements to qualified donees or grantee organizations, with which it deals at arm's length;

c) soit fait un versement, sauf s'il s'agit :

(i) d'un versement fait dans le cadre de ses activités de bienfaisance,

(ii) d'un versement admissible.

(5) Les alinéas 149.1(3)b) et b.1) de la même loi sont remplacés par ce qui suit :

b) ne dépense pas au cours d'une année d'imposition, pour les activités de bienfaisance qu'elle mène elle-même ou par des dons sous forme de versements admissibles, des sommes dont le total est au moins égal à son contingent des versements pour cette année;

b.1) fait un versement, sauf s'il s'agit :

(i) d'un versement fait dans le cadre de ses activités de bienfaisance,

(ii) d'un versement admissible.

(6) Les alinéas 149.1(4)b) et b.1) de la même loi sont remplacés par ce qui suit :

b) ne dépense pas au cours d'une année d'imposition, pour les activités de bienfaisance qu'elle mène elle-même ou par des dons sous forme de versements admissibles, des sommes dont le total est au moins égal à son contingent des versements pour cette année;

b.1) fait un versement, sauf s'il s'agit :

(i) d'un versement fait dans le cadre de ses activités de bienfaisance,

(ii) d'un versement admissible.

(7) L'alinéa 149.1(4.1)d) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

d) de tout organisme de bienfaisance enregistré qui a reçu au cours d'une année d'imposition un don de biens, sauf un don déterminé, d'un autre organisme de bienfaisance enregistré avec lequel il a un lien de dépendance et qui a dépensé avant la fin de l'année d'imposition subséquente — en plus d'une somme égale à son contingent des versements pour chacune de ces années — une somme inférieure à la juste valeur marchande des biens pour des activités de bienfaisance qu'il mène ou de dons sous forme de versements admissibles à des donataires reconnus ou à des organisations donataires, avec lesquels il n'a aucun lien de dépendance;

(8) Subsection 149.1(6) of the Act is replaced by the following:

Devotion of resources — charitable activity

(6) A charitable organization shall be considered to be devoting its resources to charitable activities carried on by it to the extent that it uses those resources in carrying on a related business.

Qualifying disbursement limit — charitable organizations

(6.001) In any taxation year, disbursements of income of a charitable organization by way of gifts to a qualified donee (other than disbursements of income to a registered charity that the Minister has designated in writing as a charity associated with the charitable organization) in excess of 50% of the charitable organization's income for that year are not qualifying disbursements.

(9) Subsection 149.1(10) of the Act is repealed.

(10) Subsections 149.1(20) and (21) of the Act are replaced by the following:

Rule regarding disbursement excess

(20) Where a registered charity has expended a disbursement excess for a taxation year, the charity may, for the purpose of determining whether it complies with the requirements of paragraph (2)(b), (3)(b) or (4)(b), as the case may be, for the immediately preceding taxation year of the charity and five or less of its immediately subsequent taxation years, include in the computation of the amounts expended on charitable activities carried on by it and by way of gifts made by it that are qualifying disbursements, such portion of that disbursement excess as was not so included under this subsection for any preceding taxation year.

Definition of *disbursement excess

(21) For the purpose of subsection (20), disbursement excess, for a taxation year of a charity, means the amount, if any, by which the total of amounts expended in the year by the charity on charitable activities carried on by it and by way of gifts made by it that are qualifying disbursements exceeds its disbursement quota for the year.

17 (1) Paragraph 152(1.2)(d) of the Act is replaced by the following:

(8) Le paragraphe 149.1(6) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Affectation des ressources — activité de bienfaisance

(6) Une œuvre de bienfaisance est considérée comme consacrant ses ressources à des activités de bienfaisance qu'elle mène elle-même dans la mesure où elle utilise ces ressources pour exercer une activité commerciale complémentaire.

Plafond de versement admissible — organisme de bienfaisance

(6.001) Les versements de revenu d'une œuvre de bienfaisance sous forme de dons à un donataire reconnu au cours d'une année d'imposition (à l'exception des versements de revenu à un organisme de bienfaisance enregistré que le ministre a désigné par écrit comme étant un organisme de bienfaisance associé à l'œuvre de bienfaisance) supérieurs à 50 % du revenu de l'œuvre de bienfaisance pour l'année ne sont pas des versements admissibles.

(9) Le paragraphe 149.1(10) de la même loi est abrogé.

(10) Les paragraphes 149.1(20) et (21) de la même loi sont remplacés par ce qui suit :

Dépenses excédentaires

(20) L'organisme de bienfaisance enregistré qui a fait des dépenses excédentaires pour une année d'imposition peut, pour déterminer s'il se conforme aux alinéas (2)b), (3)b) ou (4)b) pour son année d'imposition précédente et pour au plus ses cinq années d'imposition ultérieures, inclure dans le calcul des montants affectés, soit aux activités de bienfaisance qu'il mène, soit aux dons sous forme de versements admissibles, la partie de ces dépenses excédentaires qui n'a pas été incluse au titre du présent paragraphe pour une année d'imposition antérieure.

Définition de *dépenses excédentaires

(21) Pour l'application du paragraphe (20), les dépenses excédentaires d'un organisme de bienfaisance pour une année d'imposition correspondent à l'excédent éventuel du total des sommes qu'il a dépensées au cours de l'année pour ses activités de bienfaisance ou en faisant des dons sous forme de versements admissibles, sur son contingent des versements pour l'année.

17 (1) L'alinéa 152(1.2)d) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(d) if the Minister determines the amount deemed by subsection 122.5(3), (3.001) or 122.8(4) to have been paid by an individual for a taxation year to be nil, subsection (2) does not apply to the determination unless the individual requests a notice of determination from the Minister.

(2) Subsection (1) applies to payments made after June 2022 in respect of the 2021 and subsequent taxation years.

18 (1) Paragraph 160.1(1)(b) of the Act is replaced by the following:

(b) the taxpayer shall pay to the Receiver General interest at the prescribed rate on the excess (other than any portion thereof that can reasonably be considered to arise as a consequence of the operation of section 122.5, 122.61 or 122.8) from the day it became payable to the date of payment.

(2) Section 160.1 of the Act is amended by adding the following after subsection (1.1):

Liability for refund — Climate Action Incentive

(1.2) If a person is a qualified relation of an individual (within the meaning assigned by subsection 122.8(1)), in relation to one or more months specified for a taxation year, the person and the individual are jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable to pay the lesser of

(a) any excess described in subsection (1) that was refunded in respect of the taxation year to, or applied to a liability of, the individual as a consequence of the operation of section 122.8; and

(b) the total of the amounts deemed by subsection 122.8(4) to have been paid by the individual during those specified months.

(3) Subsection 160.1(2) of the Act is replaced by the following:

Liability under other provisions

(2) Subsections (1.1) and (1.2) do not limit a person's liability under any other provision of this Act.

(4) Subsection 160.1(3) of the Act is replaced by the following:

d) si le ministre établit que le montant qui est réputé, en vertu des paragraphes 122.5(3) ou (3.001) ou 122.8(4), avoir été payé par un particulier pour une année d'imposition est nul, le paragraphe (2) ne s'applique pas à la décision, à moins que le particulier ne demande un avis de décision au ministre.

(2) Le paragraphe (1) s'applique aux paiements effectués après juin 2022 relativement aux années d'imposition 2021 et suivantes.

18 (1) L'alinéa 160.1(1)b) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

b) le contribuable doit payer au receveur général des intérêts sur l'excédent, sauf toute partie de l'excédent qu'il est raisonnable de considérer comme découlant de l'application des articles 122.5, 122.61 ou 122.8, calculés au taux prescrit, pour la période allant du jour où cet excédent est devenu payable jusqu'à la date du paiement.

(2) L'article 160.1 de la même loi est modifié par adjonction, après le paragraphe (1.1), de ce qui suit :

Responsabilité en cas de remboursement — incitatif à agir pour le climat

(1.2) Le particulier et la personne qui est son proche admissible (au sens du paragraphe 122.8(1)), par rapport à un ou plusieurs mois déterminés d'une année d'imposition sont débiteurs solidaires du moins élevé des montants suivants :

a) l'excédent visé au paragraphe (1) qui a été remboursé au particulier pour l'année, ou imputé sur un autre montant dont il est redevable, par application de l'article 122.8;

b) le total des montants réputés, par le paragraphe 122.8(4), avoir été payés par le particulier au cours des mois en question.

(3) Le paragraphe 160.1(2) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Responsabilité

(2) Les paragraphes (1.1) et (1.2) ne limitent en rien la responsabilité de quiconque découlant d'une autre disposition de la présente loi.

(4) Le paragraphe 160.1(3) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Assessment

(3) The Minister may at any time assess a taxpayer in respect of any amount payable by the taxpayer because of any of subsections (1) to (1.2) or for which the taxpayer is liable because of subsection (2.1) or (2.2), and the provisions of this Division (including, for greater certainty, the provisions in respect of interest payable) apply, with any modifications that the circumstances require, in respect of an assessment made under this section, as though it were made under section 152 in respect of taxes payable under this Part, except that no interest is payable on an amount assessed in respect of an excess referred to in subsection (1) that can reasonably be considered to arise as a consequence of the operation of section 122.5, 122.61 or 122.8.

(5) Subsections (1) to (4) apply to payments made after June 2022 in respect of the 2021 and subsequent taxation years.

19 (1) Paragraph 163(2)(c.4) of the Act is replaced by the following:

(c.4) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that would be deemed by section 122.8 to be paid by that person during a month specified for the year or, where that person is the qualified relation of an individual in relation to that specified month (within the meaning assigned by subsection 122.8(1)), by that individual, if that total were calculated by reference to the information provided in the person's return of income (within the meaning assigned by subsection 122.8(1)) for the year exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that is deemed by section 122.8 to be paid by that person or by an individual of whom the person is the qualified relation in relation to a month specified for the year (within the meaning assigned by subsection 122.8(1)),

(2) Subsection (1) applies to payments made after June 2022 in respect of the 2021 and subsequent taxation years.

20 (1) Section 164 of the Act is amended by adding the following after subsection (2.2):

Cotisation

(3) Le ministre peut, à tout moment, établir à l'égard d'un contribuable une cotisation pour toute somme que celui-ci doit payer en application des paragraphes (1) à (1.2) ou dont il est débiteur par l'effet des paragraphes (2.1) ou (2.2). Les dispositions de la présente section, notamment celles portant sur les intérêts à payer, s'appliquent, avec les adaptations nécessaires, aux cotisations établies en vertu du présent article comme si elles étaient établies en vertu de l'article 152 relativement aux impôts à payer en vertu de la présente partie. Toutefois, aucun intérêt n'est à payer sur une cotisation établie à l'égard de l'excédent visé au paragraphe (1) s'il est raisonnable de considérer qu'il découle de l'application des articles 122.5, 122.61 ou 122.8.

(5) Les paragraphes (1) à (4) s'appliquent aux paiements effectués après juin 2022 relativement aux années d'imposition 2021 et suivantes.

19 (1) L'alinéa 163(2)c.4) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

c.4) l'excédent du total visé au sous-alinéa (i) sur le total visé au sous-alinéa (ii) :

(i) le total des sommes représentant chacune une somme qui serait réputée, en vertu de l'article 122.8, être payée par cette personne au cours d'un mois déterminé pour l'année ou, si cette personne est le proche admissible (au sens du paragraphe 122.8(1)) d'un particulier par rapport à ce mois, par ce particulier, si ce total était calculé d'après les renseignements fournis dans la déclaration de revenu (au sens du paragraphe 122.8(1)) de la personne pour l'année,

(ii) le total des sommes représentant chacune une somme qui serait réputée, en vertu de l'article 122.8, être payée par cette personne ou par un particulier dont la personne est le proche admissible (au sens du paragraphe 122.8(1)) par rapport à un mois déterminé de l'année;

(2) Le paragraphe (1) s'applique aux paiements effectués après juin 2022 relativement aux années d'imposition 2021 et suivantes.

20 (1) L'article 164 de la même loi est modifié par adjonction, après le paragraphe (2.2), de ce qui suit :

Application respecting refunds — Climate Action Incentive

(2.21) Where an amount deemed under section 122.8 to be paid by an individual during a month specified for a taxation year is applied under subsection (2) to a liability of the individual and the individual's return of income for the year is filed on or before the individual's balance-due day for the year, the amount is deemed to have been so applied on the day on which the amount would have been refunded if the individual were not liable to make a payment to Her Majesty in right of Canada.

(2) The portion of subsection 164(3) of the Act before paragraph (a) is replaced by the following:

Interest on refunds and repayments

(3) If, under this section, an amount in respect of a taxation year (other than an amount, or a portion of the amount, that can reasonably be considered to arise from the operation of section 122.5, 122.61, 122.8 or 125.7) is refunded or repaid to a taxpayer or applied to another liability of the taxpayer, the Minister shall pay or apply interest on it at the prescribed rate for the period that begins on the day that is the latest of the days referred to in the following paragraphs and that ends on the day on which the amount is refunded, repaid or applied:

(3) Subsections (1) and (2) apply to payments made after June 2022 in respect of the 2021 and subsequent taxation years.

21 Paragraph 168(1)(f) of the Act is replaced by the following:

(f) in the case of a registered charity, registered Canadian amateur athletic association or registered journalism organization, accepts a gift the granting of which was expressly or implicitly conditional on the charity, association or organization making a gift to another person, club, society, association or organization other than a qualified donee.

22 (1) Subsection 188(1.2) of the Act is replaced by the following:

Winding-up period

(1.2) In this Part, the winding-up period of a charity is the period

(a) that begins immediately after the earliest of the days on which

Imputation d'un remboursement — incitatif à agir pour le climat

(2.21) Le montant qui est réputé, par l'article 122.8, être payé par un particulier au cours d'un mois déterminé pour une année d'imposition et qui est imputé, en application du paragraphe (2), sur un autre montant dont le particulier est redevable est réputé avoir été ainsi imputé le jour où il aurait été remboursé si le particulier n'avait pas été redevable d'un montant à Sa Majesté du chef du Canada, à condition que la déclaration de revenu du particulier pour l'année soit produite au plus tard à la date d'exigibilité du solde qui lui est applicable pour l'année.

(2) Le passage du paragraphe 164(3) de la même loi précédant l'alinéa a) est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Intérêts sur les sommes remboursées

(3) Si, en vertu du présent article, une somme à l'égard d'une année d'imposition est remboursée à un contribuable ou imputée sur tout autre montant dont il est redevable, à l'exception de tout ou partie de la somme qu'il est raisonnable de considérer comme découlant de l'application des articles 122.5, 122.61, 122.8 ou 125.7, le ministre paie au contribuable les intérêts afférents à cette somme au taux prescrit ou les impute sur cet autre montant, pour la période commençant au dernier en date des jours visés aux alinéas ci-après et se terminant le jour où la somme est remboursée ou imputée :

(3) Les paragraphes (1) et (2) s'appliquent aux paiements effectués après juin 2022 relativement aux années d'imposition 2021 et suivantes.

21 L'alinéa 168(1)f) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

f) dans le cas d'un organisme de bienfaisance enregistré, d'une association canadienne enregistrée de sport amateur ou d'une organisation journalistique enregistrée, accepte un don fait explicitement ou implicitement à la condition que l'organisme, l'association ou l'organisation fasse un don à une autre personne, à un autre club, à un cercle, à une autre association ou à une autre organisation, à l'exception d'un donataire reconnu.

22 (1) Le paragraphe 188(1.2) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Période de liquidation

(1.2) Pour l'application de la présente partie, la période de liquidation d'un organisme de bienfaisance correspond à la période qui :

(i) the Minister issues a notice of intention to revoke the registration of the charity under any of subsections 149.1(2) to (4.1) and 168(1),

(ii) the charity becomes a listed terrorist entity, and

(iii) it is determined, under subsection 7(1) of the Charities Registration (Security Information) Act, that a certificate served in respect of the charity under subsection 5(1) of that Act is reasonable on the basis of information and evidence available, and

(b) that ends on the day that is the latest of

(i) the day, if any, on which the charity files a return under subsection 189(6.1) for the taxation year deemed by subsection (1) to have ended, but not later than the day on which the charity is required to file that return,

(ii) the day on which the Minister last issues a notice of assessment of tax payable under subsection (1.1) for that taxation year by the charity, and

(iii) if the charity has filed a notice of objection or appeal in respect of that assessment, the day on which the Minister may take a collection action under section 225.1 in respect of that tax payable.

a) d'une part, commence le lendemain du premier jour en date où :

(i) le ministre délivre un avis d'intention de révoquer l'enregistrement de l'organisme enregistré en vertu de l'un des paragraphes 149.1(2) à (4.1) et 168(1),

(ii) l'organisme devient une entité terroriste inscrite,

(iii) un certificat signifié à l'égard de l'organisme en vertu du paragraphe 5(1) de la Loi sur l'enregistrement des organismes de bienfaisance (renseignements de sécurité) est jugé raisonnable au titre du paragraphe 7(1) de cette loi, compte tenu des renseignements et des autres éléments de preuve disponibles;

b) d'autre part, se termine au dernier en date des jours suivants :

(i) le jour où l'organisme produit une déclaration de revenu en vertu du paragraphe 189(6.1) pour l'année d'imposition qui est réputée, par le paragraphe (1), avoir pris fin, mais au plus tard le jour où l'organisme est tenu de produire cette déclaration,

(ii) le jour où le ministre délivre le dernier avis de cotisation concernant l'impôt payable par l'organisme pour l'année en vertu du paragraphe (1.1),

(iii) si l'organisme a produit un avis d'opposition ou d'appel relativement à cette cotisation, le jour où le ministre peut prendre une mesure de recouvrement en vertu de l'article 225.1 relativement à cet impôt payable.

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on June 29, 2021.

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 29 juin 2021.

23 (1) Paragraph 188.1(5)(c) of the Act is replaced by the following:

(c) a qualifying disbursement.

23 (1) L'alinéa 188.1(5)c) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

c) en un versement admissible.

(2) Subsection 188.1(12) of the Act is replaced by the following:

(2) Le paragraphe 188.1(12) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Gifts not at arm's length

(12) If a registered charity has in a taxation year received a gift of property (other than a designated gift) from another registered charity with which it does not deal at arm's length and it has expended, before the end of the next taxation year — in addition to its disbursement quota for each of those taxation years — an amount that is less than the fair market value of the property on charitable activities carried on by it or by way of gifts made by it that are qualifying disbursements to qualified donees or grantee organizations, with which it deals at arm's length, the registered charity is liable to a penalty under this Act for that subsequent taxation year equal to 110% of the difference between the fair market value of the property and the additional amount expended.

Don à un organisme avec lien de dépendance

(12) L'organisme de bienfaisance enregistré qui a reçu au cours d'une année d'imposition un don de biens (sauf un don déterminé) d'un autre organisme de bienfaisance enregistré avec lequel il a un lien de dépendance et qui a dépensé avant la fin de l'année d'imposition subséquente — en plus d'une somme égale à son contingent des

24 Paragraph 241(4)(d) of the Act is amended by striking out "or" at the end of subparagraph (xvii), by adding "or" at the end of subparagraph (xviii) and by adding the following after subparagraph (xviii):

(xix) to an official of the Canada Revenue Agency solely for the purpose of the collection of amounts owing to Her Majesty in right of Canada under the Canada Emergency Business Account program established by Export Development Canada in accordance with an authorization made under subsection 23(1) of the Export Development Act; versements pour chacune de ces années — une somme inférieure à la juste valeur marchande des biens pour des activités de bienfaisance qu'il mène ou de dons sous forme de versements admissibles à des donataires reconnus ou à des organisations donataires, avec lesquels il n'a aucun lien de dépendance, est passible, sous le régime de la présente loi pour l'année subséquente, d'une pénalité égale à 110 % de la différence entre la juste valeur marchande des biens et la somme additionnelle dépensée.

24 L'alinéa 241(4)d) de la même loi est modifié par adjonction, après le sous-alinéa (xviii), de ce qui suit :

(xix) à un fonctionnaire de l'Agence du revenu du Canada, mais uniquement en vue de la perception d'une somme due à Sa Majesté du chef du Canada au titre du programme Compte d'urgence pour les entreprises canadiennes établi par Exportation et développement Canada aux termes d'une autorisation accordée au titre du paragraphe 23(1) de la Loi sur le développement des exportations;

R.S., c. E-15

Excise Tax Act

25 Paragraph 295(5)(d) of the Excise Tax Act is amended by striking out "or" at the end of subparagraph (viii), by adding "or" at the end of subparagraph (ix) and by adding the following after subparagraph (ix):

(x) to an official of the Canada Revenue Agency solely for the purpose of the collection of amounts owing to Her Majesty in right of Canada under the Canada Emergency Business Account program established by Export Development Canada in accordance with an authorization made under subsection 23(1) of the Export Development Act;

L.R., ch. E-15

Loi sur la taxe d'accise

25 L'alinéa 295(5)d) de la Loi sur la taxe d'accise est modifié par adjonction, après le sous-alinéa (ix), de ce qui suit :

(x) à un fonctionnaire de l'Agence du revenu du Canada, mais uniquement en vue de la perception d'une somme due à Sa Majesté du chef du Canada au titre du programme Compte d'urgence pour les entreprises canadiennes établi par Exportation et développement Canada aux termes d'une autorisation accordée au titre du paragraphe 23(1) de la Loi sur le développement des exportations;

1992, c. 48, Sch.

Children's Special Allowances Act

26 (1) Section 2 of the Children's Special Allowances Act is amended by adding the following in alphabetical order:

Indigenous governing body means an Indigenous governing body (as defined in section 1 of An Act respecting First Nations, Inuit and Métis children, youth and families) that 1992, ch. 48, ann.

Loi sur les allocations spéciales pour enfants

26 (1) L'article 2 de la Loi sur les allocations spéciales pour enfants est modifié par adjonction, selon l'ordre alphabétique, de ce qui suit :

corps dirigeant autochtone S'entend d'un corps dirigeant autochtone (au sens de l'article 1 de la Loi concernant les enfants, les jeunes et les familles des Premières Nations, des Inuits et des Métis) qui, selon le cas :

(a) has given notice under subsection 20(1) of that Act;

(b) has requested a coordination agreement under subsection 20(2) of that Act; or

(c) meets prescribed conditions. (corps dirigeant autochtone)

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2020.

27 (1) Paragraphs 3(1)(a) and (b) of the Act are replaced by the following:

(a) resides in an institution, a group foster home, the private home of foster parents or in the private home of a guardian, tutor or other individual occupying a similar role for the month, under a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal and is maintained by

(i) a department or agency of the government of Canada or a province, or

(ii) an agency appointed by a province, including an authority established under the laws of a province, or by an agency appointed by such an authority, for the purpose of administering any law of the province for the protection and care of children;

(b) is maintained by an institution licensed or otherwise authorized under the law of the province to have the custody or care of children; or

(c) resides in an institution, a group foster home, the private home of foster parents or in the private home of a guardian, tutor or other individual occupying a similar role for the month, under the laws of an Indigenous governing body and is maintained by

(i) the Indigenous governing body,

(ii) a department or agency of the Indigenous governing body, or

(iii) an agency appointed by the Indigenous governing body, including an authority established under the laws of the Indigenous governing body, or by an agency appointed by such an authority, for the purpose of administering any law of the Indigenous governing body for the protection and care of children.

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2020.

a) a donné un avis en vertu du paragraphe 20(1) de cette loi;

b) a demandé un accord de coordination en vertu du paragraphe 20(2) de cette loi;

c) remplit les conditions réglementaires. (Indigenous governing body)

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 1er janvier 2020.

27 (1) Le paragraphe 3(1) de la même loi est modifié par adjonction, après l'alinéa b), de ce qui suit :

c) qui, résidant pendant un mois donné dans un établissement spécialisé, dans un foyer de placement familial, chez des parents nourriciers ou chez un tuteur ou toute autre personne physique exerçant des fonctions similaires, nommé en vertu des lois d'un corps dirigeant autochtone, est à la charge :

(i) soit d'un tel corps dirigeant,

(ii) soit d'un ministère ou d'un organisme d'un tel corps dirigeant,

(iii) soit d'un organisme chargé par un tel corps dirigeant — y compris une régie constituée en vertu des lois de ce corps dirigeant — d'appliquer sa législation visant la protection et le soin des enfants (ou d'un organisme, y compris un office, chargé par une telle régie d'appliquer cette législation).

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 1er janvier 2020.

28 (1) Paragraph 4(1)(a) of the Act is replaced by the following:

(a) an application therefor has been made in the prescribed manner by the department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body referred to in subsection 3(1) that maintains the child; and

(2) Subsection 4(3) of the Act is replaced by the following:

No allowance payable

(3) No special allowance is payable for the month in which the child in respect of whom the special allowance is payable commences to be maintained by a department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body, and no special allowance is payable in respect of a child for the month in which the child is born or commences to reside in Canada.

(3) Paragraph 4(4)(a) of the Act is replaced by the following:

(a) ceases to be maintained by the department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body;

(4) Subsections (1) to (3) are deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2020.

29 (1) Sections 5 and 6 of the Act are replaced by the following:

Recipient of special allowance

5 Where payment of a special allowance is approved in respect of a child, the special allowance shall, in such manner and at such times as are determined by the Minister, be paid to the department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body referred to in subsection 3(1) that maintains the child or, in the prescribed circumstances, to a foster parent.

Report

6 Where a special allowance ceases to be payable in respect of a child for a reason referred to in paragraph 4(4)(a), (b) or (c), the chief executive officer of the department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body that made the application under paragraph 4(1)(a) in respect of the child shall, as soon as possible after the special allowance ceases to be payable in respect of the child, notify the Minister in the prescribed form and manner.

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2020.

28 (1) L'alinéa 4(1)a) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

a) le ministère, l'organisme, l'établissement ou le corps dirigeant autochtone visé au paragraphe 3(1) qui a la charge de l'enfant a présenté la demande réglementaire prévue à cet effet;

(2) Le paragraphe 4(3) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Réserve

(3) L'allocation spéciale n'est versée ni pour le mois au cours duquel l'enfant commence à être à la charge du ministère, de l'organisme, de l'établissement ou du corps dirigeant autochtone, selon le cas, ni pour celui au cours duquel il naît ou commence à résider au Canada.

(3) L'alinéa 4(4)a) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

a) cesse d'être à la charge du ministère, de l'organisme, de l'établissement ou du corps dirigeant autochtone;

(4) Les paragraphes (1) à (3) sont réputés être entrés en vigueur le 1er janvier 2020.

29 (1) Les articles 5 et 6 de la même loi sont remplacés par ce qui suit :

Nature de l'allocataire

5 L'allocation spéciale est versée, selon les modalités et aux intervalles fixés par le ministre, au ministère, à l'organisme, à l'établissement ou au corps dirigeant autochtone visé au paragraphe 3(1) qui a la charge de l'enfant y ouvrant droit ou, dans les circonstances déterminées par règlement, au parent nourricier.

Obligation de l'allocataire

6 Lorsque l'allocation spéciale cesse d'être due pour l'un des motifs prévus aux alinéas 4(4)a) à c), le premier dirigeant du ministère, de l'organisme, de l'établissement ou du corps dirigeant autochtone qui avait la charge de l'enfant en avise dès que possible le ministre selon les modalités réglementaires.

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 1er janvier 2020.

30 (1) Subsections 9(1) and (2) of the English version of the Act are replaced by the following:

Return of special allowance

9 (1) Any person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body that has received or obtained by cheque or otherwise payment of a special allowance under this Act to which the person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body is not entitled, or payment in excess of the amount to which the person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body is entitled, shall, as soon as possible, return the cheque or the amount of the payment, or the excess amount, as the case may be.

Recovery of amount of payment

(2) Where a person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body has received or obtained payment of a special allowance under this Act to which the person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body is not entitled, or payment in excess of the amount to which the person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body is entitled, the amount of the special allowance or the amount of the excess, as the case may be, constitutes a debt due to Her Majesty.

(2) Subsection 9(3) of the Act is replaced by the following:

Deduction from subsequent special allowance

(3) Where any person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body has received or obtained payment of a special allowance under this Act to which the person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body is not entitled, or payment in excess of the amount to which the person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body is entitled, the amount of the special allowance or the amount of the excess, as the case may be, may be deducted and retained in such manner as is prescribed out of any special allowance to which the person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body is or subsequently becomes entitled under this Act.

(3) Subsections (1) and (2) are deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2020.

31 (1) Section 11 of the Act is replaced by the following:

Agreements for exchange of information

11 The Minister may enter into an agreement with the government of any province, or an Indigenous governing

30 (1) Les paragraphes 9(1) et (2) de la version anglaise de la même loi sont remplacés par ce qui suit :

Return of special allowance

9 (1) Any person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body that has received or obtained by cheque or otherwise payment of a special allowance under this Act to which the person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body is not entitled, or payment in excess of the amount to which the person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body is entitled, shall, as soon as possible, return the cheque or the amount of the payment, or the excess amount, as the case may be.

Recovery of amount of payment

(2) Where a person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body has received or obtained payment of a special allowance under this Act to which the person, department, agency, institution, or Indigenous governing body is not entitled, or payment in excess of the amount to which the person, department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body is entitled, the amount of the special allowance or the amount of the excess, as the case may be, constitutes a debt due to Her Majesty.

(2) Le paragraphe 9(3) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Recouvrement par déduction

(3) Les montants versés indûment ou en excédent à un ministère, un organisme, un établissement ou un corps dirigeant autochtone peuvent, selon les modalités réglementaires, être déduits des allocations spéciales qui leur sont ultérieurement dues.

(3) Les paragraphes (1) et (2) sont réputés être entrés en vigueur le 1er janvier 2020.

31 (1) L'article 11 de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

Accords d'échange de renseignements

11 Le ministre peut conclure un accord avec le gouvernement d'une province ou d'un corps dirigeant body, for the purpose of obtaining information in connection with the administration or enforcement of this Act or the regulations and of furnishing to that government, or Indigenous governing body, under prescribed conditions, any information obtained by or on behalf of the Minister in the course of the administration or enforcement of this Act or the regulations, if the Minister is satisfied that the information to be furnished to that government, or Indigenous governing body, under the agreement is to be used for the purpose of the administration of a social program, income assistance program or health insurance program in the province or of the Indigenous governing body.

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2020.

32 (1) Paragraph 13(a) of the English version of the Act is replaced by the following:

(a) providing for the suspension of payment of a special allowance during any investigation respecting the eligibility of a department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body to receive the special allowance and specifying the circumstances in which payment of a special allowance, the payment of which has been suspended, may be resumed;

(2) Paragraph 13(c) of the Act is replaced by the following:

(c) specifying for the purposes of this Act the circumstances in which a child shall be considered to be maintained by a department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body; and

(3) Subsections (1) and (2) are deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2020.

2002, c. 22

Excise Act, 2001

33 Paragraph 211(6)(e) of the Excise Act, 2001 is amended by striking out "or" at the end of subparagraph (ix), by adding "or" at the end of subparagraph (x) and by adding the following after subparagraph (x):

(xi) to an official of the Agency solely for the purpose of the collection of amounts owing to Her Majesty in right of Canada under the Canada Emergency Business Account program established by Export Development Canada in accordance with an authorization made under subsection 23(1) of the Export Development Act; autochtone en vue de recueillir des renseignements liés à l'application ou à l'exécution de la présente loi ou de ses règlements et de fournir à celui-ci, aux conditions réglementaires, des renseignements recueillis par lui ou pour son compte dans le cadre de l'application ou de l'exécution de la présente loi ou de ses règlements s'il est convaincu que ces renseignements seront utilisés pour l'application des programmes sociaux, de sécurité du revenu ou d'assurance-santé de la province ou du corps dirigeant autochtone.

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 1er janvier 2020.

32 (1) L'alinéa 13a) de la version anglaise de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(a) providing for the suspension of payment of a special allowance during any investigation respecting the eligibility of a department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body to receive the special allowance and specifying the circumstances in which payment of a special allowance, the payment of which has been suspended, may be resumed;

(2) L'alinéa 13c) de la même loi est remplacé par ce qui suit :

c) spécifier les cas où, dans le cadre de la présente loi, un enfant doit être considéré comme étant à la charge d'un ministère, d'un organisme, d'un établissement ou d'un corps dirigeant autochtone;

(3) Les paragraphes (1) et (2) sont réputés être entrés en vigueur le 1er janvier 2020.

2002, ch. 22

Loi de 2001 sur l'accise

33 L'alinéa 211(6)e) de la Loi de 2001 sur l'accise est modifié par adjonction, après le sous-alinéa (x), de ce qui suit :

(xi) à un fonctionnaire de l'Agence, mais uniquement en vue de la perception d'une somme due à Sa Majesté du chef du Canada au titre du programme Compte d'urgence pour les entreprises canadiennes établi par Exportation et développement Canada aux termes d'une autorisation accordée au titre du paragraphe 23(1) de la Loi sur le développement des exportations;

C.R.C., c. 945

Income Tax Regulations

34 (1) Section 1100 of the Income Tax Regulations is amended by adding the following before subsection (1):

Immediate expensing

(0.1) For the purposes of paragraph 20(1)(a) of the Act, a deduction is allowed in computing an eligible person or partnership's income for each taxation year equal to the lesser of

(a) the eligible person or partnership's immediate expensing limit for the taxation year,

(b) the undepreciated capital cost to the eligible person or partnership as of the end of the taxation year (before making any deduction under this Part for the taxation year) of property that is designated immediate expensing property for the taxation year, and

(c) if the eligible person or partnership is not a Canadian-controlled private corporation, the amount of income, if any, earned from the source of income that is a business or property (computed without regard to paragraph 20(1)(a) of the Act) in which the relevant designated immediate expensing property is used for the eligible person or partnership's taxation year.

Undepreciated capital cost — immediate expensing

(0.2) Before computing any other deduction permitted under this Part and Schedules II to VI, the amount of any deduction made under subsection (0.1) by an eligible person or partnership in respect of a designated immediate expensing property of a prescribed class shall be deducted from the undepreciated capital cost of the particular class to which the property belongs.

Expenditures excluded from paragraph (0.1)(b)

(0.3) For the purposes of paragraph (0.1)(b), in respect of property of a class in Schedule II that is immediate expensing property of an eligible person or partnership solely because of subparagraph (c)(i) of the definition immediate expensing property in subsection 1104(3.1), amounts incurred by any person or partnership in respect of the property are not to be included in

C.R.C., ch. 945

Règlement de l'impôt sur le revenu

34 (1) L'article 1100 du Règlement de l'impôt sur le revenu est modifié par adjonction, avant le paragraphe (1), de ce qui suit :

Passation en charges immédiate

(0.1) Pour l'application de l'alinéa 20(1)a) de la Loi, une personne ou société de personnes admissible peut déduire dans le calcul de son revenu pour chaque année d'imposition un montant correspondant au moins élevé des montants suivants :

a) le plafond de passation en charges immédiate de la personne ou société de personnes admissible pour l'année d'imposition;

b) la fraction non amortie du coût en capital, pour la personne ou société de personnes admissible à la fin de l'année d'imposition (avant toute déduction en vertu de la présente partie pour l'année d'imposition) des biens qui sont des biens relatifs à la passation en charges immédiate désignés pour l'année d'imposition;

c) si la personne ou société de personnes admissible n'est pas une société privée sous contrôle canadien, le montant du revenu éventuel (calculé compte non tenu de l'alinéa 20(1)a) de la Loi) provenant de la source de revenus qui est une entreprise ou des biens dans laquelle les biens relatifs à la passation en charges immédiate désignés pertinents sont utilisés pour l'année d'imposition de la personne ou société de personnes admissible.

Fraction non amortie du coût en capital — passation en charges immédiate

(0.2) Avant le calcul de toute autre déduction permise en vertu de la présente partie et des annexes II à VI, tout montant qu'une personne ou société de personnes admissible a déduit en application du paragraphe (0.1) relativement à un bien relatif à la passation en charges immédiate désigné d'une catégorie prescrite est déduit de la fraction non amortie du coût en capital de la catégorie donnée à laquelle le bien appartient.

Dépenses exclues de l'alinéa (0.1)b)

(0.3) Pour l'application de l'alinéa (0.1)b), quant à un bien d'une catégorie de l'annexe II qui n'est un bien relatif à la passation en charges immédiate d'une personne ou société de personnes admissible que par l'effet du sous-alinéa c)(i) de la définition de bien relatif à la passation en charges immédiate au paragraphe 1104(3.1), les montants engagés par une personne ou une société de determining the undepreciated capital cost to the eligible person or partnership as of the end of the taxation year (before making any deduction under this Part for the taxation year) of property that is designated immediate expensing property for the taxation year if the amounts are incurred before April 19, 2021 (if the eligible person or partnership is a Canadian-controlled private corporation) or before 2022 (if the eligible person or partnership is an individual or Canadian partnership), unless

(a) the property was acquired by an eligible person or partnership from another person or partnership (referred to in this paragraph as the "transferee" and the "transferor", respectively)

(i) if the transferee is a Canadian-controlled private corporation, after April 18, 2021, or

(ii) if the transferee is an individual or a Canadian partnership, after December 31, 2021;

(b) the transferee was either

(i) the eligible person or partnership, or

(ii) a person or partnership that does not deal at arm's length with the eligible person or partnership; and

(c) the transferor

(i) dealt at arm's length with the transferee, and

(ii) held the property as inventory.

personnes relativement au bien ne doivent pas être inclus dans le calcul de la fraction non amortie du coût en capital, pour la personne ou société de personnes admissible, à la fin de l'année d'imposition (avant toute déduction en vertu de la présente partie pour l'année d'imposition) des biens qui sont des biens relatifs à la passation en charges immédiate désignés pour l'année d'imposition si les montants sont engagés avant le 19 avril 2021 (si la personne ou société de personnes admissible est une société privée sous contrôle canadien) ou avant 2022 (si la personne ou société de personnes admissible est un particulier ou une société de personnes canadienne), sauf si, à la fois :

a) une personne ou société de personnes admissible acquiert le bien d'une autre personne ou société de personnes (appelées au présent alinéa respectivement « cessionnaire » et « cédant ») :

(i) si le cessionnaire est une société privée sous contrôle canadien, après le 18 avril 2021,

(ii) si le cessionnaire est un particulier ou une société de personnes canadienne, après le 31 décembre 2021;

b) le cessionnaire était :

(i) soit la personne ou la société de personnes admissible,

(ii) soit une personne ou société de personnes qui a un lien de dépendance avec la personne ou la société de personnes admissible;

c) le cédant, à la fois :

(i) n'avait pas de lien de dépendance avec le cessionnaire,

(ii) détenait le bien à titre de bien à porter à l'inventaire.

(2) The portion of subsection 1100(1.1) of the Regulations before paragraph (a) is replaced by the following:

(1.1) Despite subsections (0.1), (1) and (3), the amount deductible by a taxpayer for a taxation year in respect of a property that is a specified leasing property at the end of the year is the lesser of

(2) Le passage du paragraphe 1100(1.1) du même règlement précédant l'alinéa a) est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(1.1) Malgré les paragraphes (0.1), (1) et (3), le montant déductible par un contribuable pour une année d'imposition relativement à un bien qui est un bien de location déterminé à la fin de l'année correspond au moins élevé des montants suivants :

(3) Subsection 1100(1.12) of the Regulations is replaced by the following:

(3) Le paragraphe 1100(1.12) du même règlement est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(1.12) Despite subsections (0.1), (1) and (1.1), where, in a taxation year, a taxpayer has acquired a property that was not used by the taxpayer for any purpose in that year and the first use of the property by the taxpayer is a lease of the property in respect of which subsection (1.1) applies, the amount allowed to the taxpayer under subsections (0.1) and (1) in respect of the property for the year shall be deemed to be nil.

(4) The portion of subsection 1100(11) of the Regulations before paragraph (a) is replaced by the following:

(11) Despite subsections (0.1) and (1), in no case shall the aggregate of deductions, each of which is a deduction in respect of property of a prescribed class owned by a taxpayer that includes rental property owned by him, otherwise allowed to the taxpayer by virtue of subsection (0.1) or (1) in computing his income for a taxation year, exceed the amount, if any, by which

(5) The portion of subsection 1100(15) of the Regulations before paragraph (a) is replaced by the following:

(15) Despite subsections (0.1) and (1), in no case shall the aggregate of deductions, each of which is a deduction in respect of property of a prescribed class that is leasing property owned by a taxpayer, otherwise allowed to the taxpayer under subsection (0.1) or (1) in computing his income for a taxation year, exceed the amount, if any, by which

(6) The portion of subsection 1100(20.1) of the Regulations before paragraph (a) is replaced by the following:

(20.1) The total of all amounts each of which is a deduction in respect of computer tax shelter property allowed to the taxpayer under subsection (0.1) or (1) in computing a taxpayer's income for a taxation year shall not exceed the amount, if any, by which

(7) Subsection 1100(21.1) of the Regulations is replaced by the following:

(21.1) Despite subsections (0.1) and (1), where a taxpayer has acquired property described in paragraph (s) of Class 10 in Schedule II, or in paragraph (m) of Class 12 of Schedule II, the deduction in respect of the property otherwise allowed to the taxpayer under subsection (0.1) or (1) in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year shall not exceed the amount that it would be if the capital cost to the taxpayer of the property were reduced by the portion of any debt obligation of the taxpayer

(1.12) Malgré les paragraphes (0.1), (1) et (1.1), lorsqu'au cours d'une année d'imposition le contribuable a acquis un bien qu'il n'a utilisé à aucune fin pendant cette année et que le premier usage qu'il fait du bien est d'en faire l'objet d'un bail visé par le paragraphe (1.1) le montant déductible pour l'année par le contribuable en application des paragraphes (0.1) et (1) relativement au bien est réputé nul.

(4) Le passage du paragraphe 1100(11) du même règlement précédant l'alinéa a) est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(11) Malgré les paragraphes (0.1) et (1), en aucun cas le total des déductions, dont chacune est une déduction à l'égard de biens d'une catégorie prescrite possédés par un contribuable, qui comprend les biens locatifs possédés par lui, que le contribuable peut déduire par ailleurs en vertu des paragraphes (0.1) ou (1) en calculant son revenu pour une année d'imposition, ne doit excéder la fraction, si fraction il y a :

(5) Le passage du paragraphe 1100(15) du même règlement précédant l'alinéa a) est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(15) Malgré les paragraphes (0.1) et (1), le total des déductions qu'un contribuable peut faire en vertu de ces paragraphes dans le calcul de son revenu pour une année d'imposition, à l'égard de biens d'une catégorie prescrite qui sont des biens donnés en location à bail qui lui appartiennent, ne peut dépasser la fraction éventuelle :

(6) Le passage du paragraphe 1100(20.1) du même règlement précédant l'alinéa a) est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(20.1) Le total des sommes qu'un contribuable peut déduire en application des paragraphes (0.1) ou (1) dans le calcul de son revenu pour une année d'imposition au titre de produits informatiques déterminés ne peut dépasser l'excédent de la somme visée à l'alinéa a) sur celle visée à l'alinéa b) :

(7) Le paragraphe 1100(21.1) du même règlement est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(21.1) Malgré les paragraphes (0.1) et (1), lorsqu'un contribuable acquiert un bien visé à l'alinéa s) de la catégorie 10 de l'annexe II ou à l'alinéa m) de la catégorie 12 de cette annexe, la déduction qui lui est accordée par ailleurs au titre de ce bien en vertu des paragraphes (0.1) ou (1) dans le calcul de son revenu pour une année d'imposition ne peut dépasser ce qu'elle serait si le coût en capital du bien pour lui était réduit de la partie d'un titre de créance lui appartenant, impayé à la fin de l'année, qui outstanding at the end of the year that is convertible into an interest or, for civil law, a right in the property or an interest in the taxpayer.

(8) The portion of subsection 1100(24) of the Regulations before paragraph (a) is replaced by the following:

(24) Despite subsections (0.1) and (1), in no case shall the total of deductions, each of which is a deduction in respect of property of Class 34, 43.1, 43.2, 47 or 48 in Schedule II that is specified energy property owned by a taxpayer, otherwise allowed to the taxpayer under subsection (0.1) or (1) in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year, exceed the amount, if any, by which (9) Subsections (1) to (8) are deemed to have come into force on April 19, 2021.

35 (1) Subsection 1102(20.1) of the Regulations is replaced by the following:

(20.1) For the purposes of subsections 1100(0.3) and (2.02) and 1104(3.1) and (4), a particular person or partnership and another person or partnership shall be considered not to be dealing at arm's length with each other in respect of the acquisition or ownership of a property if, in the absence of this subsection, they would be considered to be dealing at arm's length with each other and it may reasonably be considered that the principal purpose of any transaction or event, or a series of transactions or events, is to cause

(a) the property to qualify as accelerated investment incentive property or immediate expensing property; or

(b) the particular person or partnership and the other person or partnership to satisfy the condition in subclause 1100(2.02)(a)(i)(C)(I) or subparagraph 1100(0.3)(c)(i).

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on April 19, 2021.

36 (1) Section 1104 of the Regulations is amended by adding the following after subsection (3):

Definitions

(3.1) The following definitions apply in this Part and Schedules II to VI.

est convertible en un intérêt ou, pour l'application du droit civil, un droit sur le bien ou une participation dans le contribuable.

(8) Le passage du paragraphe 1100(24) du même règlement précédant l'alinéa a) est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(24) Malgré les paragraphes (0.1) et (1), le total des déductions — représentant chacune une déduction pour des biens compris dans les catégories 34, 43.1, 43.2, 47 ou 48 de l'annexe II qui constituent des biens énergétiques déterminés appartenant à un contribuable — autrement accordées au contribuable en application des paragraphes (0.1) ou (1) dans le calcul de son revenu pour une année d'imposition ne peut dépasser l'excédent éventuel du total visé à l'alinéa a) sur le total visé à l'alinéa b) :

(9) Les paragraphes (1) à (8) sont réputés être entrés en vigueur le 19 avril 2021.

35 (1) Le paragraphe 1102(20.1) du même règlement est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(20.1) Pour l'application des paragraphes 1100(0.3) et (2.02) et 1104(3.1) et (4), sont réputées avoir un lien de dépendance à l'égard de l'acquisition ou de la détention d'un bien une personne ou société de personnes donnée et une autre personne ou société de personnes si, en l'absence du présent paragraphe, elles seraient considérées ne pas avoir de lien de dépendance entre elles et il est raisonnable de croire que le principal objet d'une opération ou d'un événement ou d'une série d'opérations ou d'événements est de faire en sorte :

a) soit que ces biens soient admissibles à titre de biens relatifs à l'incitatif à l'investissement accéléré ou de biens relatifs à la passation en charges immédiate;

b) soit que la personne ou société de personnes donnée et l'autre personne ou société de personnes remplissent la condition énoncée à la subdivision 1100(2.02)a)(i)(C)(I) ou au sous-alinéa 1100(0.3)c)(i).

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 19 avril 2021.

36 (1) L'article 1104 du même règlement est modifié par adjonction, après le paragraphe (3), de ce qui suit :

Définitions

(3.1) Les définitions qui suivent s'appliquent à la présente partie et aux annexes II à VI.

bien relatif à la passation en charges immédiate S'entend, pour une année d'imposition, d'un bien d'une designated immediate expensing property for a taxation year, means property of an eligible person or partnership that

(a) is immediate expensing property of the eligible person or partnership;

(b) became available for use by the eligible person or partnership in the taxation year; and

(c) is designated as designated immediate expensing property in prescribed form filed by the eligible person or partnership with the Minister for the taxation year

(i) if the eligible person or partnership is a partnership, on or before the day that is 12 months after the day on which any member of the partnership is required to file an information return under section 229 for the fiscal period to which the designation relates, and

(ii) in any other case, on or before the day that is 12 months after the eligible person or partnership's filing-due date for the taxation year to which the designation relates. (bien relatif à la passation en charges immédiate désigné)

eligible person or partnership for a taxation year, means

(a) a corporation that was a Canadian-controlled private corporation throughout the year;

(b) an individual (other than a trust) who was resident in Canada throughout the year; or

(c) a Canadian partnership all of the members of which were, throughout the period, persons described in paragraph (a) or (b). (personne ou société de personnes admissible)

immediate expensing property for a taxation year, means property of a prescribed class (other than property included in any of Classes 1 to 6, 14.1, 17, 47, 49 and 51 in Schedule II) of an eligible person or partnership that

(a) is acquired by the eligible person or partnership

(i) if the eligible person or partnership is a Canadian-controlled private corporation, after April 18, 2021, or

(ii) if the eligible person or partnership is an individual or a Canadian partnership, after December 31, 2021;

(b) becomes available for use catégorie prescrite (sauf les biens compris dans les catégories 1 à 6, 14.1, 17, 47, 49 et 51 de l'annexe II) d'une personne ou société de personnes admissible qui, à la fois :

a) est acquis par la personne ou société de personnes admissible :

(i) si la personne ou société de personnes admissible est une société privée sous contrôle canadien, après le 18 avril 2021,

(ii) si la personne ou société de personnes admissible est un particulier ou une société de personnes canadienne, après le 31 décembre 2021;

b) devient prêt à être mis en service :

(i) si la personne ou société de personnes admissible est un particulier ou une société de personnes canadienne dont tous les associés sont des particuliers tout au long de l'année, avant 2025,

(ii) dans les autres cas, avant 2024;

c) remplit l'une des conditions suivantes :

(i) le bien, à la fois :

(A) n'a pas été utilisé à quelque fin que ce soit avant son acquisition par la personne ou société de personnes admissible,

(B) n'est pas un bien relativement auquel un montant a été déduit en application de l'alinéa 20(1)a) ou du paragraphe 20(16) de la Loi par toute personne ou société de personnes pour une année d'imposition se terminant avant le moment de son acquisition par la personne ou société de personnes admissible,

(ii) le bien :

(A) n'a pas été acquis dans des circonstances où :

(I) un montant est réputé avoir été admis en déduction ou déduit en vertu de l'alinéa 20(1)a) de la Loi au titre du bien dans le calcul du revenu de la personne ou société de personnes admissible pour des années d'imposition antérieures,

(II) la fraction non amortie du coût en capital d'un bien amortissable de la personne ou société de personnes admissible d'une catégorie prescrite a été réduite d'un montant déterminé en fonction de l'excédent du coût en capital

(i) if the eligible person or partnership is an individual or a Canadian partnership all the members of which are individuals throughout the taxation year, before 2025, and

(ii) in any other case, before 2024; and

(c) meets either of the following conditions:

(i) the property

(A) has not been used for any purpose before it was acquired by the eligible person or partnership, and

(B) is not a property in respect of which an amount has been deducted under paragraph 20(1)(a) or subsection 20(16) of the Act by any person or partnership for a taxation year ending before the time the property was acquired by the eligible person or partnership, or

(ii) the property was not

(A) acquired in circumstances where

(I) the eligible person or partnership was deemed to have been allowed or deducted an amount under paragraph 20(1)(a) of the Act in respect of the property in computing income for previous taxation years, or

(II) the undepreciated capital cost of depreciable property of a prescribed class of the eligible person or partnership was reduced by an amount determined by reference to the amount by which the capital cost of the property to the eligible person or partnership exceeds its cost amount, or

(B) previously owned or acquired by the eligible person or partnership or by a person or partnership with which the eligible person or partnership did not deal at arm's length at any time when the property was owned or acquired by the person or partnership. (bien relatif à la passation en charges immédiate)

taxpayer unless the context otherwise requires, includes an eligible person or partnership. (contribuable) du bien pour la personne ou société de personnes admissible sur son coût indiqué,

(B) antérieurement, n'a pas été la propriété de la personne ou société de personnes admissible ou d'une personne ou société de personnes avec laquelle elle avait un lien de dépendance à tout moment où la personne ou la société de personnes était propriétaire du bien ou en a fait l'acquisition, ou n'a pas été acquis par elle ou par une telle personne ou société de personnes. (immediate expensing property)

bien relatif à la passation en charges immédiate désigné Bien d'une personne ou société de personnes admissible pour une année d'imposition qui remplit les conditions suivantes :

a) il est un bien relatif à la passation en charges immédiate de la personne ou société de personnes admissible;

b) il est devenu prêt à être mis en service par la personne ou société de personnes admissible au cours de l'année d'imposition;

c) il est désigné auprès du ministre comme bien relatif à la passation en charges immédiate désigné, selon le formulaire prescrit, par la personne ou société de personnes admissible pour l'année d'imposition :

(i) si la personne ou société de personnes admissible est une société de personnes, au plus tard douze mois après la date où un associé de la société de personnes est tenu, en application de l'article 229, de produire une déclaration de renseignements pour l'exercice auquel la désignation se rapporte,

(ii) dans les autres cas, au plus tard douze mois après la date d'échéance de production de la personne ou société de personnes admissible pour l'année d'imposition à laquelle la désignation se rapporte. (designated immediate expensing property)

contribuable Comprend, sauf indication contraire du contexte, une personne ou société de personnes admissible. (taxpayer) personne ou société de personnes admissible S'entend pour une année d'imposition :

a) d'une société qui était une société privée sous contrôle canadien tout au long de l'année;

b) d'un particulier, à l'exception d'une fiducie, qui a résidé au Canada tout au long de l'année;

c) d'une société de personnes canadienne dont l'ensemble des associés étaient, tout au long de la période, des personnes visées aux alinéas a) ou b). (eligible person or partnership)

Immediate expensing limit

(3.2) For the purposes of this Part and Schedules II to VI, an eligible person or partnership's immediate expensing limit for a taxation year is $1,500,000 unless the eligible person or partnership is associated (within the meaning of section 256 of the Act, as modified by subsection (3.6)) in the taxation year with one or more other eligible persons or partnerships, in which case, except as otherwise provided in this section, its immediate expensing limit is nil.

Plafond de passation en charges immédiate

(3.2) Pour l'application de la présente partie et des annexes II à VI, le plafond de passation en charges immédiate d'une personne ou société de personnes admissible pour une année d'imposition est de 1 500 000 $, sauf si la personne ou société de personnes admissible est associée (au sens de l'article 256 de la Loi, telle que modifiée par le paragraphe (3.6)), pendant l'année, à une ou plusieurs autres personnes ou sociétés de personnes admissibles, auquel cas son plafond de passation en charges immédiate est nul, sauf disposition contraire du présent article.

Associated eligible persons or partnerships

(3.3) Despite subsection (3.2), if all the eligible persons or partnerships that are associated with each other (within the meaning of section 256 of the Act, as modified by subsection (3.6)) in a taxation year file with the Minister in prescribed form an agreement that assigns for the purpose of this Part and Schedules II to VI a percentage to one or more of them for the year, the immediate expensing limit for the year of each of the eligible persons or partnerships is

(a) if the total of the percentages assigned in the agreement does not exceed 100%, $1,500,000 multiplied by the percentage assigned to that eligible person or partnership in the agreement; and

(b) in any other case, nil.

Personnes ou sociétés de personnes admissibles associées

(3.3) Malgré le paragraphe (3.2), si toutes les personnes ou sociétés de personnes admissibles qui sont associées les unes aux autres (au sens de l'article 256 de la Loi, telle que modifiée par le paragraphe (3.6)), pendant une année d'imposition présentent au ministre, selon le formulaire prescrit, une convention par laquelle est attribué, pour l'application de la présente partie et des annexes II à VI, un pourcentage à une ou plusieurs d'entre elles pour l'année, le plafond de passation en charges immédiate, pour l'année, de chacune des personnes ou sociétés de personnes admissibles correspond à ce qui suit :

a) si le total des pourcentages attribués selon la convention n'excède pas 100 %, le produit de 1 500 000 $ par le pourcentage attribué à la personne ou société de personnes admissible selon la convention;

b) dans les autres cas, zéro.

Failure to file agreement

(3.4) If any of the eligible persons or partnerships that are associated with each other (within the meaning of section 256 of the Act, as modified by subsection (3.6)) in a taxation year has failed to file with the Minister an agreement described in subsection (3.3) within 30 days after notice in writing by the Minister has been forwarded to any of them that such an agreement is required for the purpose of any assessment of tax under Part I of the Act, the Minister shall, for the purpose of this Part and Schedules II to VI, allocate an amount to one or more of them for the taxation year.

Défaut de présenter la convention

(3.4) Si une ou plusieurs personnes ou sociétés de personnes admissibles qui sont associées les unes aux autres (au sens de l'article 256 de la Loi, telle que modifiée par le paragraphe (3.6)) pendant une année d'imposition ne présentent pas au ministre une convention visée au paragraphe (3.3) dans les trente jours suivant l'envoi par le ministre, à une ou plusieurs d'entre elles, d'un avis portant qu'une telle convention est requise pour l'établissement d'une cotisation en vertu de la partie I de la Loi, le ministre attribue, pour l'application de la présente partie et des annexes II à VI, un montant à une ou plusieurs d'entre elles pour l'année.

Special rules for immediate expensing limit

(3.5) Despite subsections (3.2) to (3.4),

(a) where an eligible person or partnership (in this paragraph referred to as the "first person") has more than one taxation year ending in the same calendar year and it is associated (within the meaning of section 256 of the Act, as modified by subsection (3.6)) in two or more of those taxation years with another eligible person or partnership (in this paragraph referred to as the "other person") that has a taxation year ending in that calendar year, the immediate expensing limit of the first person for each taxation year ending in the calendar year in which it is associated (within the meaning of section 256 of the Act, as modified by subsection (3.6)) with the other person that ends after the first such taxation year ending in that calendar year is, subject to the application of paragraph (b), an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) its immediate expensing limit determined under subsection (3.3) or (3.4) for the first such taxation year ending in the calendar year, and

(ii) its immediate expensing limit determined under subsection (3.3) or (3.4) for the particular taxation year ending in the calendar year; and

(b) where an eligible person or partnership has a taxation year that is less than 51 weeks, its immediate expensing limit for the year is that proportion of its immediate expensing limit for the year determined without reference to this paragraph that the number of days in the year is of 365.

Détermination du plafond de passation en charges immédiate dans certains cas

(3.5) Malgré les paragraphes (3.2) à (3.4) :

a) lorsqu'une personne ou société de personnes admissible (appelée « première personne » au présent alinéa) a plus d'une année d'imposition se terminant au cours de la même année civile et qu'elle est associée (au sens de l'article 256 de la Loi, telle que modifiée par le paragraphe (3.6)) au cours d'au moins deux de ces années avec une autre personne ou société de personnes admissible (appelée « autre personne » au présent alinéa) qui a une année d'imposition se terminant au cours de cette année civile, le plafond de passation en charges immédiate de la première personne pour chaque année d'imposition donnée se terminant au cours de l'année civile où elle est associée (au sens de l'article 256 de la Loi, telle que modifiée par le paragraphe (3.6)) avec l'autre personne et après la première année d'imposition se terminant au cours de cette année civile correspond, sous réserve de l'alinéa b), au moins élevé des montants suivants :

(i) son plafond de passation en charges immédiate pour la première année d'imposition se terminant au cours de l'année civile, déterminé selon les paragraphes (3.3) ou (3.4),

(ii) son plafond de passation en charges immédiate pour l'année d'imposition donnée se terminant au cours de l'année civile, déterminé selon les paragraphes (3.3) ou (3.4);

b) lorsqu'une personne ou société de personnes admissible a une année d'imposition d'une durée inférieure à 51 semaines, son plafond de passation en charges immédiate pour l'année est la fraction de son plafond de passation en charges immédiate pour l'année, déterminé compte non tenu du présent alinéa, représentée par le rapport qui existe entre le nombre de jours de l'année d'imposition et 365.

Associated - interpretation

(3.6) For the purposes of this Part and Schedules II to VI, in determining whether an eligible person or partnership is associated (within the meaning of section 256 of the Act, as modified by this subsection) with another eligible person or partnership in a taxation year

(a) if the eligible person or partnership is a partnership,

(i) the partnership is deemed to be a corporation (in this subsection referred to as a "deemed corporation") for the year,

Associé — interprétation

(3.6) Pour l'application de la présente partie et des annexes II à VI, afin de déterminer si une personne ou société de personnes admissible est associée (au sens de l'article 256 de la Loi, telle que modifiée par le présent paragraphe) avec une autre personne ou société de personnes admissible au cours d'une année d'imposition, les règles suivantes s'appliquent :

a) si la personne ou société de personnes admissible est une société de personnes :

(ii) the deemed corporation is deemed to have a capital stock of a single class of shares, with a total of 100 issued and outstanding shares,

(iii) each member (in this subsection referred to as a "deemed shareholder") of the deemed corporation is deemed to be a shareholder of the deemed corporation,

(iv) each deemed shareholder of the deemed corporation is deemed to hold a number of shares in the capital stock of the deemed corporation determined by the formula

A × 100

where

A is equal to

(A) the deemed shareholder's specified proportion for the last fiscal period of the deemed corporation, or

(B) if the deemed shareholder does not have a specified proportion described in clause (A), the proportion that the fair market value of the deemed shareholder's interest in the deemed corporation at that time is of the fair market value of all interests in the deemed corporation at that time, and

(v) the deemed corporation's fiscal period is deemed to be its taxation year; and

(b) if the eligible person or partnership is an individual (other than a trust) who carries on a business or has acquired immediate expensing property

(i) the individual, in respect of that business or property, is deemed to be a corporation that is controlled by the individual, and

(ii) the corporation's taxation year is deemed to be the same as the individual's taxation year.

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on April 19, 2021.

(i) la société de personnes est réputée être une société (appelée « société réputée » au présent paragraphe) pour l'année,

(ii) la société réputée est réputée avoir un capital-actions constitué d'une seule catégorie d'actions, avec un total de 100 actions émises et en circulation,

(iii) chaque associé (appelé « actionnaire réputé » au présent paragraphe) de la société réputée est réputé être un actionnaire de la société réputée,

(iv) chaque actionnaire réputé de la société réputée est réputé détenir un nombre d'actions du capital-actions de la société réputée qui correspond au résultat de la formule suivante :

A × 100

où :

A représente :

(A) la proportion déterminée de l'actionnaire réputé pour le dernier exercice de la société réputée,

(B) si l'actionnaire réputé n'a pas de proportion déterminée visée à la division (A), la proportion que représente le rapport entre la somme visée à la subdivision (I) et celle visée à la subdivision (II) :

(I) la juste valeur marchande de la participation de l'actionnaire réputé dans la société réputée à ce moment,

(II) la juste valeur marchande de l'ensemble des participations dans la société réputée à ce moment;

(v) l'exercice de la société réputée est réputé être son année d'imposition;

b) si la personne ou société de personnes admissible est un particulier (à l'exception d'une fiducie) qui exploite une entreprise ou qui a acquis un bien relatif à la passation en charges immédiate :

(i) le particulier, relativement à cette entreprise ou ces biens, est réputé être une société contrôlée par le particulier, (ii) l'année d'imposition de la société est réputée être la même que celle du particulier.

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 19 avril 2021.

37 (1) The definitions biogas and producer gas in subsection 1104(13) of the Regulations are replaced by the following:

biogas means the gas produced by the anaerobic digestion of specified waste material. (biogaz)

producer gas means

(a) in respect of a property of a taxpayer that becomes available for use by the taxpayer before 2025, fuel the composition of which, excluding its water content, is all or substantially all non-condensable gases that is generated primarily from eligible waste fuel or specified waste material using a thermo-chemical conversion process and that is not generated from any feedstock other than eligible waste fuel, specified waste material or fossil fuel; and

(b) in respect of a property of a taxpayer that becomes available for use by the taxpayer after 2024, fuel

(i) the composition of which, excluding its water content, is all or substantially all non-condensable gases,

(ii) that is generated using a thermo-chemical conversion process,

(iii) that is generated from feedstock of which no more than 25% is fossil fuel when measured in terms of energy content (expressed as a higher heating value of the feedstock), and

(iv) that is not generated from any feedstock other than eligible waste fuel, specified waste material or fossil fuel. (gaz de gazéification)

37 (1) Les définitions de biogaz et gaz de gazéification, au paragraphe 1104(13) du même règlement, sont respectivement remplacées par ce qui suit :

biogaz Le gaz produit par la digestion anaérobie de déchets déterminés. (biogas)

gaz de gazéification

a) Relativement à un bien d'un contribuable qui devient prêt à être mis en service par le contribuable avant 2025, combustible dont la composition, à l'exclusion de sa teneur en eau, consiste en totalité ou en presque totalité en gaz non condensables, qui est produit à partir principalement de combustibles résiduaires admissibles ou de déchets déterminés au moyen d'un procédé de conversion thermochimique et qui n'est produit à partir d'aucune matière première, sauf un combustible résiduaire admissible, des déchets déterminés ou un combustible fossile;

b) relativement à un bien d'un contribuable qui devient prêt à être mis en service par le contribuable après 2024, combustible qui remplit les conditions suivantes :

(i) sa composition, à l'exclusion de sa teneur en eau, consiste en totalité ou en presque totalité en gaz non condensables,

(ii) il est produit au moyen d'un procédé de conversion thermochimique,

(iii) il est produit à partir d'une matière première dont au plus 25 % sont des combustibles fossiles lorsqu'elle est mesurée en termes de contenu énergétique (exprimée en fonction de son pouvoir calorifique supérieur),

(iv) il n'est produit à partir d'aucune matière première, sauf un combustible résiduaire admissible, des déchets déterminés ou un combustible fossile. (producer gas)

(2) The definitions plant residue and separated organics in subsection 1104(13) of the Regulations are replaced by the following:

plant residue means residue of plants (not including wood waste and waste that no longer has the chemical properties of the plants of which it is a residue) that would otherwise be waste material. (résidus végétaux)

separated organics means organic waste (other than waste that is considered to be toxic or hazardous waste under any law of Canada or a province) that could be

(2) Les définitions de matières organiques séparées et résidus végétaux, au paragraphe 1104(13) du même règlement, sont respectivement remplacées par ce qui suit :

matières organiques séparées Déchets organiques (sauf les déchets qui sont considérés comme toxiques ou dangereux aux termes des lois fédérales ou provinciales) qui seraient acceptés à une installation admissible de gestion des déchets ou à un site d'enfouissement admissible. (separated organics) disposed of in an eligible waste management facility or eligible landfill site. (matières organiques séparées)

résidus végétaux Résidus de végétaux, à l'exception des déchets de bois et des déchets qui n'ont plus les propriétés chimiques des végétaux dont ils sont les résidus, qui seraient par ailleurs des déchets. (plant residue)

(3) Subsection 1104(13) of the Regulations is amended by adding the following in alphabetical order:

gaseous biofuel means a fuel produced all or substantially all from specified waste material that is a gas at a temperature of 15.6°C (60°F) and a pressure of 101 kPa (14.7 psia). (biocarburants gazeux)

liquid biofuel means a fuel produced all or substantially all from specified waste material or carbon dioxide that is a liquid at a temperature of 15.6°C (60°F) and a pressure of 101 kPa (14.7 psia). (biocarburants liquides)

solid biofuel means a fuel produced all or substantially all from specified waste material that is a solid at a temperature of 15.6°C (60°F) and a pressure of 101 kPa (14.7 psia) (other than charcoal that is used for cooking or fuels with fossil fuel-derived ignition accelerants) and that has undergone

(a) a thermo-chemical conversion process to increase its carbon fraction and densification; or

(b) densification into pellets or briquettes. (biocarburants solides)

specified waste material means wood waste, plant residue, municipal waste, sludge from an eligible sewage treatment facility, spent pulping liquor, food and animal waste, manure, pulp and paper by-product and separated organics. (déchets déterminés)

(3) Le paragraphe 1104(13) du même règlement est modifié par adjonction, selon l'ordre alphabétique, de ce qui suit :

biocarburants gazeux Combustible produit en totalité, ou presque, à partir de déchets déterminés qui est un gaz à une température de 15,6 °C (60 °F) et à une pression de 101 kPa (14,7 psi). (gaseous biofuel)

biocarburants liquides Combustible produit en totalité, ou presque, à partir de déchets déterminés ou du dioxyde de carbone qui est un liquide à une température de 15,6 °C (60 °F) et à une pression de 101 kPa (14,7 psi). (liquid biofuel) biocarburants solides Combustible produit en totalité, ou presque, à partir de déchets déterminés qui est solide à une température de 15,6 °C (60° F) et à une pression de 101 kPa (14,7 psi) (sauf le charbon qui est utilisé pour la cuisson ou les combustibles avec accélérateurs d'allumage dérivés de combustibles fossiles) et qui, soit :

a) a subi un procédé de conversion thermochimique pour augmenter sa fraction de carbone et sa densification;

b) a subi une densification en granules ou briquettes. (solid biofuel)

déchets déterminés Déchets de bois, résidus végétaux, déchets municipaux, boues provenant d'une installation de traitement des eaux usées admissible, liqueurs résiduaires, déchets alimentaires et animaux, fumier, sous-produits de pâtes et papier et matières organiques séparées. (specified waste material)

(4) Subsection (1) applies in respect of property acquired after April 18, 2021 that has not been used or acquired for use before April 19, 2021.

(4) Le paragraphe (1) s'applique relativement aux biens acquis après le 18 avril 2021 qui n'ont pas été utilisés ou acquis pour être utilisés avant le 19 avril 2021.

(5) Subsections (2) and (3) are deemed to have come into force on April 19, 2021.

(5) Les paragraphes (2) et (3) sont réputés être entrés en vigueur le 19 avril 2021.

38 (1) Clause 1104(17)(a)(ii)(A) of the Regulations is replaced by the following:

(A) any of subparagraphs (d)(vii) to (ix), (xi), (xiii), (xiv), (xvi), (xvii) and (xix) to (xxii) of Class 43.1, or

38 (1) La division 1104(17)a)(ii)(A) du même règlement est remplacée par ce qui suit :

(A) soit à l'un des sous-alinéas d)(vii) à (ix), (xi), (xiii), (xiv), (xvi), (xvii) et (xix) à (xxii) de la catégorie 43.1,

(2) Subsection (1) applies to property acquired after April 18, 2021 that has not been used or acquired for use before April 19, 2021.

39 Section 1106 of the Regulations is amended by adding the following after subsection (1):

COVID-19 — Application for a Certificate of Completion

(1.1) In respect of applications filed with the Minister of Canadian Heritage in respect of film or video productions for which the labour expenditure of the corporation in respect of the production for the taxation years ending in 2020 or 2021 was greater than nil, the definition application for a certificate of completion in subsection (1) is to be read as follows:

application for a certificate of completion, in respect of a film or video production, means an application by a prescribed taxable Canadian corporation in respect of the production, filed with the Minister of Canadian Heritage before the day (in this Division referred to as "the production's application deadline") that is the later of

(a) the day that is 24 months after the end of the corporation's taxation year in which the production's principal photography began,

(b) the day that is 18 months after the day referred to in paragraph (a), if the corporation has filed, with the Canada Revenue Agency, and provided to the Minister of Canadian Heritage a copy of, a waiver described in subparagraph 152(4)(a)(ii) of the Act, within the normal reassessment period for the corporation in respect of the first and second taxation years ending after the production's principal photography began, or

(c) the day that is 12 months after the day referred to in paragraph (b), if the corporation has filed, with the Canada Revenue Agency, and provided to the Minister of Canadian Heritage a copy of, a waiver described in subparagraph 152(4)(a)(ii) of the Act, within the normal reassessment period for the corporation in respect of the first, second and third taxation years ending after the production's principal photography began. (demande de certificat d'achèvement)

(2) Le paragraphe (1) s'applique aux biens acquis après le 18 avril 2021 et qui n'ont pas été utilisés ou acquis pour être utilisés avant le 19 avril 2021.

39 L'article 1106 du même règlement est modifié par adjonction, après le paragraphe (1), de ce qui suit :

COVID-19 — Demande de certificat d'achèvement

(1.1) En ce qui concerne les demandes présentées au ministre du Patrimoine canadien relatives aux productions cinématographiques ou magnétoscopiques pour lesquelles la dépense de main-d'œuvre de la société relativement à la production pour les années d'imposition se terminant en 2020 ou 2021 était supérieure à zéro, la définition de demande de certificat d'achèvement au paragraphe (1) est réputée avoir le libellé suivant :

demande de certificat d'achèvement Demande relative à une production cinématographique ou magnétoscopique qu'une société canadienne imposable visée présente au ministre du Patrimoine canadien avant le jour (appelé « date limite de demande relative à la production » à la présente section) qui correspond au dernier en date des jours suivants :

a) le jour qui suit de 24 mois la fin de l'année d'imposition de la société au cours de laquelle ont débuté les principaux travaux de prise de vue relatifs à la production;

b) le jour qui suit de 18 mois le jour visé à l'alinéa a), si la société a présenté à l'Agence du revenu du Canada la renonciation visée au sous-alinéa 152(4)a)(ii) de la Loi — et en a fourni une copie au ministre du Patrimoine canadien — au cours de la période normale de nouvelle cotisation qui lui est applicable pour les première et deuxième années d'imposition se terminant après le début des principaux travaux de prise de vue relatifs à la production;

c) le jour qui suit de 12 mois le jour visé à l'alinéa b), si la société a présenté à l'Agence du revenu du Canada la renonciation visée au sous-alinéa 152(4)a)(ii) de la Loi — et en a fourni une copie au ministre du Patrimoine canadien — au cours de la période normale de nouvelle cotisation qui lui est applicable pour les première, deuxième et troisième années d'imposition se terminant après le début des principaux travaux de prise de vue relatifs à la production. (application for a certificate of completion)

COVID-19 — Excluded Production

(1.2) The reference to "2-year period" in subparagraph (a)(iv) of the definition excluded production in subsection (1) is to be read as a reference to "three-year period" in respect of film or video productions for which the labour expenditure of the corporation in respect of the production for the taxation years ending in 2020 or 2021 was greater than nil.

40 The Regulations are amended by adding the following after section 3702:

Information Returns

3703 For the purpose of subsection 149.1(14) of the Act, the following is prescribed information for the public information return of a charity in a taxation year:

(a) in respect of each grantee organization that received total qualifying disbursements from the charity in excess of $5,000 in the taxation year, the name of the grantee organization;

(b) the purpose of each qualifying disbursement made to a grantee organization referred to in paragraph (a) in the taxation year; and

(c) the total amount disbursed by the charity to each grantee organization referred to in paragraph (a) in the taxation year.

41 (1) Section 5202 of the Regulations is amended by adding the following in alphabetical order:

qualified zero-emission technology manufacturing activities means

(a) qualified activities that are

(i) performed in connection with the manufacturing or processing of

(A) solar energy conversion equipment, including solar thermal collectors, photovoltaic solar arrays and custom supporting structures or frames, but excluding passive solar heating equipment,

COVID-19 — Production exclue

(1.2) La mention de « période de deux ans » au sous-alinéa a)(iv) de la définition de production exclue au paragraphe (1) vaut mention de « période de trois ans » relativement aux productions cinématographiques ou magnétoscopiques pour lesquelles la dépense de main-d'œuvre de la société relativement à la production pour les années d'imposition se terminant en 2020 ou 2021 était supérieure à zéro.

40 Le même règlement est modifié par adjonction, après l'article 3702, de ce qui suit :

Déclarations de renseignements

3703 Pour l'application du paragraphe 149.1(14) de la Loi, les renseignements ci-après sont des renseignements prescrits concernant la déclaration publique de renseignements d'un organisme de bienfaisance pour une année d'imposition :

a) à l'égard de chaque organisation donataire qui a reçu un total de versements admissibles d'un organisme de bienfaisance supérieur à 5 000 $ au cours de l'année d'imposition, le nom de l'organisation donataire;

b) l'objet de chaque versement admissible fait à une organisation donataire visée à l'alinéa a) pendant l'année d'imposition;

c) le montant total versé par l'organisme de bienfaisance à chaque organisation donataire visée à l'alinéa a) pendant l'année d'imposition.

41 (1) L'article 5202 du même règlement est modifié par adjonction, selon l'ordre alphabétique, de ce qui suit :

activités admissibles de fabrication de technologies à zéro émission S'entend :

a) des activités admissibles qui, à la fois :

(i) qui sont exercées dans le cadre de la fabrication ou de la transformation :

(A) de matériel de conversion en énergie solaire, y compris les capteurs d'énergie solaire, les batteries solaires photovoltaïques, les structures ou cadres de support sur mesure, à l'exclusion du matériel de chauffage solaire passif,

(B) wind energy conversion equipment, including wind turbine towers, nacelles and rotor blades,

(C) water energy conversion equipment, including hydroelectric, water current, tidal and wave energy conversion equipment,

(D) geothermal energy equipment,

(E) equipment for a ground source heat pump system,

(F) electrical energy storage equipment used for storage of renewable energy or for providing grid-scale storage or other ancillary services, including battery, compressed air and flywheel storage systems,

(G) equipment used to charge, or to dispense hydrogen to, property included in clause (J),

(H) equipment used for the production of hydrogen by electrolysis of water,

(I) equipment that is a component of property included in clauses (A) to (H), if such equipment is purpose-built or designed exclusively to form an integral part of that property,

(J) property that

(I) would be a zero-emission vehicle (as defined in subsection 248(1) of the Act if that definition were read without reference to its paragraphs (b) and (c)), or

(II) is described in subparagraph (a)(i) of Class 56 of Schedule II, and

(K) integral components of the powertrain of property included in clause (J), including batteries or fuel cells, and

(ii) not the manufacturing or processing of general purpose components or equipment which components or equipment are suitable for integration into property other than property described in subparagraph (i);

(b) qualified activities that are performed in connection with production in Canada of

(i) hydrogen by electrolysis of water,

(ii) gaseous biofuel (as defined in subsection 1104(13)),

(B) de matériel de conversion de l'énergie éolienne, y compris les tours à éoliennes, les nacelles et les pales de rotor,

(C) de matériel de conversion de l'énergie hydraulique, y compris le matériel hydroélectrique, de courant d'eau, de marée et des vagues,

(D) de matériel d'énergie géothermique,

(E) de matériel pour un système de pompe géothermique,

(F) de matériel de stockage de l'énergie électrique utilisé pour le stockage de l'énergie renouvelable ou pour la fourniture de systèmes de stockage à l'échelle du réseau ou d'autres services auxiliaires, y compris les systèmes de stockage par batterie, par l'air comprimé et par volants d'inertie,

(G) de matériel servant à la recharge des biens visés à la division (J), ou à la dispense d'hydrogène à ceux-ci,

(H) de matériel utilisé pour la production d'hydrogène par électrolyse de l'eau,

(I) de matériel constituant un composant de biens visés aux divisions (A) à (H), si celui-ci est conçu à une fin particulière ou exclusivement pour faire partie intégrante de ce bien,

(J) de biens qui :

(I) soit, seraient des véhicules zéro émission (au sens du paragraphe 248(1) de la Loi, compte non tenu des alinéas b) et c) de cette définition), (II) soit, sont visés au sous-alinéa a)(i) de la catégorie 56 de l'annexe II,

(K) de composants essentiels du groupe motopropulseur de biens visés à la division (J), y compris les batteries ou les piles à combustible,

(ii) qui ne sont pas la fabrication ou le traitement de composantes ou de matériel de nature générale dont les composants ou le matériel sont adaptés pour l'intégration aux biens, sauf ceux visés au sous-alinéa (i);

b) des activités admissibles qui sont exercées dans le cadre de la production au Canada, selon le cas :

(i) d'hydrogène par électrolyse de l'eau,

(iii) liquid biofuel (as defined in subsection 1104(13)), and

(iv) solid biofuel (as defined in subsection 1104(13)); and

(c) the conversion of a vehicle, performed in Canada, into a property described in clause (a)(i)(J); (activités admissibles de fabrication de technologies à zéro émission)

ZETM cost of capital, of a corporation for a taxation year, means the portion of the cost of capital of the corporation for the year that reflects the extent to which each property included in the calculation of the cost of capital was used directly in qualified zero-emission technology manufacturing activities of the corporation during the year; (coût en capital de FTZE)

ZETM cost of labour, of a corporation for a taxation year, means the portion of the cost of labour of the corporation for that year that reflects the extent to which

(a) the salaries and wages included in the calculation of the cost of labour were paid or payable to persons for the portion of their time that they were directly engaged in qualified zero-emission technology manufacturing activities of the corporation during the year, and

(b) the other amounts included in the calculation of the cost of labour were paid or payable to persons for the performance of functions that would be directly related to qualified zero-emission technology manufacturing activities of the corporation during the year if those persons were employees of the corporation; (coût en main-d'œuvre de FTZE)

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2022.

42 (1) The portion of section 5204 of the Regulations before the definition cost of capital is replaced by the following:

5204 If a corporation is a member of a partnership at any time in a taxation year of the corporation, the following definitions apply:

(2) Section 5204 of the Regulations is amended by adding the following in alphabetical order:

(ii) de biocarburants gazeux (au sens paragraphe 1104(13)),

(iii) de biocarburants liquides (au sens paragraphe 1104(13)),

(iv) de biocarburants solides (au sens du paragraphe 1104(13));

c) de la conversion d'un véhicule, effectuée au Canada, en un bien visé à la division a)(i)(J); (qualified zero-emission technology manufacturing activities)

coût en capital de FTZE S'entend du coût en capital d'une société pour une année d'imposition correspondant à la mesure dans laquelle chaque bien inclus dans le calcul du coût en capital a été utilisé directement dans des activités admissibles de fabrication de technologies à zéro émission de la société pendant l'année; (ZETM cost of capital)

coût en main-d'œuvre de FTZE S'entend du coût en main-d'œuvre d'une société pour une année d'imposition correspondant à la mesure dans laquelle :

a) d'une part, les salaires et traitements inclus dans le calcul du coût en main-d'œuvre ont été payés ou étaient payables à des personnes pour le temps où elles se livraient directement à des activités admissibles de fabrication de technologies à zéro émission de la société pendant l'année;

b) d'autre part, les autres montants inclus dans le calcul du coût en main-d'œuvre ont été payés ou étaient payables à des personnes pour l'exécution de fonctions qui seraient directement reliées aux activités admissibles de fabrication de technologies à zéro émission de la société pendant l'année si ces personnes étaient des employés de la société; (ZETM cost of labour)

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 1er janvier 2022.

42 (1) Le passage de l'article 5204 du même règlement précédant la définition de coût brut est remplacé par ce qui suit :

5204 Lorsqu'une société fait partie d'une société de personnes à un moment quelconque d'une année d'imposition de la société, les définitions suivantes s'appliquent :

(2) L'article 5204 du même règlement est modifié par adjonction, selon l'ordre alphabétique, de ce qui suit :

ZETM cost of capital, of the corporation for the year, means the portion of the cost of capital of the corporation for that year that reflects the extent to which each property included in the calculation of the cost of capital was used directly in qualified zero-emission technology manufacturing activities

(a) of the corporation during the year, or

(b) of the partnership during its fiscal period coinciding with or ending in the year, as the case may be; (coût en capital de FTZE)

ZETM cost of labour, of the corporation for the year, means the portion of the cost of labour of the corporation for that year that reflects the extent to which

(a) the salaries and wages included in the calculation of the cost of labour were paid or payable to persons for the portion of their time that they were directly engaged in qualified zero-emission technology manufacturing activities

(i) of the corporation during the year, or

(ii) of the partnership during its fiscal period coinciding with or ending in the year, and

(b) the other amounts included in the calculation of the cost of labour were paid or payable to persons for the performance of functions that would be directly related to qualified zero-emission technology manufacturing activities of the corporation during the year, or of the partnership during its fiscal period coinciding with or ending in the year, if those persons were employees of the corporation or the partnership, as the case may be; (coût en main-d'œuvre de FTZE)

coût en capital de FTZE S'entend du coût en capital de la société pour l'année qui correspond à la mesure dans laquelle chaque bien inclus dans le calcul du coût en capital est utilisé directement dans des activités admissibles de fabrication de technologies à zéro émission, selon le cas :

a) de la société pendant l'année,

b) de la société de personnes pendant son exercice coïncidant avec l'année ou se terminant au cours de celle-ci; (ZETM cost of capital)

coût en main-d'œuvre de FTZE S'entend du coût en main-d'œuvre de la société pour l'année qui correspond à la mesure dans laquelle :

a) les salaires et traitements inclus dans le calcul du coût en main-d'œuvre ont été payés ou étaient payables à des personnes pour le temps où elles se livraient directement à des activités admissibles de fabrication de technologies à zéro émission, selon le cas :

(i) de la société pendant l'année,

(ii) de la société de personnes pendant son exercice coïncidant avec l'année ou se terminant au cours de celle-ci,

b) les autres sommes incluses dans le calcul du coût en main-d'œuvre ont été payées ou étaient payables à des personnes pour l'exécution de fonctions qui seraient directement reliées aux activités admissibles de fabrication de technologies à zéro émission de la société pendant l'année, ou de la société de personnes pendant son exercice coïncidant avec l'année ou se terminant au cours de celle-ci, si ces personnes étaient des employés de la société ou de la société de personnes; (ZETM cost of labour)

(3) Subsections (1) and (2) are deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2022.

(3) Les paragraphes (1) et (2) sont réputés être entrés en vigueur le 1er janvier 2022.

43 Section 9300 of the Regulations is amended by adding the following after subsection (1):

43 L'article 9300 du même règlement est modifié par adjonction, après le paragraphe (1), de ce qui suit :

(1.1) The references to "24 months" in paragraphs 9300(1)(a) and (b) are to be read as references to "36 months" in respect of film or video productions for which the Canadian labour expenditure of the corporation in respect of the production for the taxation years ending in 2020 or 2021 was greater than nil.

(1.1) Les mentions de « 24 mois » aux alinéas 9300(1)a) et b) valent mention de « 36 mois » relativement aux productions cinématographiques ou magnétoscopiques pour lesquelles la dépense de main-d'œuvre au Canada de la société relativement à la production pour les années d'imposition se terminant en 2020 ou 2021 était supérieure à zéro.

44 (1) Subparagraphs (c)(i) and (ii) of Class 43.1 in Schedule II to the Regulations are replaced by the following:

(i) part of a system that

(A) is used by the taxpayer, or by a lessee of the taxpayer, to generate electrical energy, or both electrical and heat energy, using only fuel that is eligible waste fuel, fossil fuel, producer gas, spent pulping liquor or any combination of those fuels,

(B) if the system is rated to generate more than three megawatts of electrical energy, meets the following condition on an annual basis:

$$A \geq (2 \times B + C)/(D + E/3412)$$

where

A is 11,000 BTU per kilowatt-hour,

B is the energy content of fossil fuel other than solution gas (expressed as the higher heating value of the fuel) consumed by the system in BTU,

C is the energy content of the eligible waste fuel, producer gas and spent pulping liquor (expressed as the higher heating value of the fuel) consumed by the system in BTU,

D is the gross electrical energy produced by the system in kilowatt-hours, and

E is the net useful energy in the form of heat exported from the system to a thermal host in BTU, and

(C) uses fuel of which no more than 25% of the energy content (expressed as the higher heating value of the fuel) is from fossil fuel, as determined on an annual basis, or

44 (1) Les sous-alinéas c)(i) et (ii) de la catégorie 43.1 de l'annexe II du même règlement sont remplacés par ce qui suit :

(i) font partie d'un système qui, à la fois :

(A) est utilisé par le contribuable, ou par son preneur, pour produire de l'énergie électrique, ou de l'énergie électrique et de l'énergie thermique, uniquement au moyen d'un combustible résiduaire admissible, d'un combustible fossile, d'un gaz de gazéification ou d'une liqueur résiduaire, ou au moyen d'une combinaison de plusieurs de ces combustibles,

(B) si le système à une capacité de production de plus de trois mégawatts d'énergie électrique, il remplit la condition suivante sur une base annuelle :

$$A \geq (2 \times B + C)/(D + E/3412)$$

où :

A représente 11 000 BTU par kilowattheure,

B le contenu énergétique du combustible fossile autre que du gaz dissous (exprimé en fonction de son pouvoir calorifique supérieur) consommé par le système, exprimé en BTU,

C le contenu énergétique du combustible résiduaire admissible, du gaz de gazéification et de la liqueur résiduaire (exprimé en fonction de leur pouvoir calorifique supérieur) consommé par le système, exprimé en BTU,

D l'énergie électrique brute produite par le système, exprimée en kilowattheures,

E l'énergie utile nette sous forme de chaleur exportée du système à un système thermique hôte, exprimée en BTU,

(C) utilise un combustible dont au plus 25 % du contenu énergétique (exprimé en fonction de son pouvoir calorifique supérieur) provient de combustibles fossiles, établi sur une base annuelle,

(2) Clause (d)(i)(B) of Class 43.1 in Schedule II to the Regulations is replaced by the following:

(B) it is not a building, part of a building (other than a solar collector that is not a window and that is integrated into a building), energy equipment that backs up equipment described in subclause (A)(I) or (II) nor equipment that distributes heated or cooled air or water in a building,

(3) Subparagraph (d)(iv) of Class 43.1 in Schedule II to the Regulations is replaced by the following:

(iv) heat recovery equipment used by the taxpayer, or by a lessee of the taxpayer, primarily for the purpose of conserving energy, reducing the requirement to acquire energy or extracting heat for sale, by extracting for reuse thermal waste that is generated directly in an industrial process (other than an industrial process that generates or processes electrical energy), including such equipment that consists of heat exchange equipment, compressors used to upgrade low pressure steam, vapour or gas, waste heat boilers and other ancillary equipment such as control panels, fans, instruments or pumps, but not including property that is employed in reusing the recovered heat (such as property that is part of the internal heating or cooling system of a building or electrical generating equipment) or is a building,

(4) Subparagraph (d)(vii) of Class 43.1 in Schedule II to the Regulations is replaced by the following:

(vii) equipment used by the taxpayer, or by a lessee of the taxpayer, primarily for the purpose of generating electrical energy or heat energy, or both electrical and heat energy, solely from geothermal energy, including such equipment that consists of piping (including above or below ground piping and the cost of completing a well (including the wellhead and production string), or trenching, for the purpose of installing that piping), pumps, heat exchangers, steam separators, electrical generating equipment and ancillary equipment used to collect the geothermal heat, but not including buildings, distribution equipment, equipment described in subclause (i)(A)(II), property otherwise included in

(2) La division d)(i)(B) de la catégorie 43.1 de l'annexe II du même règlement est remplacée par ce qui suit :

(B) ils ne sont ni des bâtiments, ni des parties de bâtiment (exception faite de capteurs solaires qui ne sont pas des fenêtres et sont intégrés à un bâtiment), ni du matériel énergétique qui sert en cas de panne ou d'entretien du matériel visé aux subdivisions (A)(I) ou (II), ni du matériel de distribution d'air ou d'eau chauffé ou refroidi dans un bâtiment,

(3) Le sous-alinéa d)(iv) de la catégorie 43.1 de l'annexe II du même règlement est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(iv) du matériel de récupération de la chaleur que le contribuable ou son preneur utilise principalement pour économiser de l'énergie, pour réduire les besoins d'acquérir de l'énergie ou pour extraire de la chaleur en vue de la vendre, par l'extraction, en vue de leur réutilisation, de déchets thermiques provenant directement d'un procédé industriel (sauf celui qui produit ou transforme de l'énergie électrique), y compris le matériel de ce type qui consiste en matériel d'échange thermique, en compresseurs servant à hausser la pression de la vapeur ou du gaz basse pression, en chaudières de récupération des chaleurs perdues et en matériel auxiliaire comme les panneaux de commande, les ventilateurs, les instruments ou les pompes, mais à l'exclusion des biens qui servent à réutiliser la chaleur récupérée (comme les biens qui font partie d'un système interne de chauffage ou de refroidissement d'un bâtiment ou le matériel générateur d'électricité) et des bâtiments,

(4) Le sous-alinéa d)(vii) de la catégorie 43.1 de l'annexe II du même règlement est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(vii) du matériel que le contribuable, ou son preneur, utilise principalement pour produire de l'énergie électrique ou de l'énergie thermique, ou les deux, uniquement à partir d'énergie géothermique, y compris le matériel de ce type qui consiste en tuyauterie (qui comprend la tuyauterie hors-sol ou souterraine et le coût d'achèvement d'un puits — y compris la tête du puits et la colonne de production —, ou de creusement d'une tranchée, en vue de l'installation de cette tuyauterie), en pompes, en échangeurs thermiques, en séparateurs de vapeur, en matériel générateur d'électricité et en matériel auxiliaire servant à recueillir la chaleur géothermique, mais à l'exclusion des bâtiments, du

Class 10 and property that would be included in Class 17 if that Class were read without reference to its paragraph (a.1),

(5) Subparagraph (d)(ix) of Class 43.1 in Schedule II to the Regulations is replaced by the following:

(ix) equipment that

(A) is used by the taxpayer, or by a lessee of the taxpayer, for the sole purpose of generating heat energy, not using any fuel other than eligible waste fuel, fossil fuel, producer gas or a combination of those fuels,

(B) uses fuel of which no more than 25% of the energy content (expressed as the higher heating value of the fuel) is from fossil fuel, as determined on an annual basis,

(C) may include

(I) fuel handling equipment used to upgrade the combustible portion of the fuel,

(II) control, feedwater and condensate systems, and

(III) other ancillary equipment, and

(D) does not include

(I) equipment used for the purpose of producing heat energy to operate electrical generating equipment,

(II) buildings or other structures,

(III) heat rejection equipment (such as condensers and cooling water systems),

(IV) fuel storage facilities,

(V) other fuel handling equipment, and

(VI) property otherwise included in Class 10 or 17, matériel de distribution, du matériel visé à la subdivision (i)(A)(II), des biens compris par ailleurs dans la catégorie 10 et des biens qui seraient inclus dans la catégorie 17 en l'absence de son alinéa a.1), (5) Le sous-alinéa d)(ix) de la catégorie 43.1 de l'annexe II du même règlement est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(ix) du matériel :

(A) que le contribuable, ou son preneur, utilise dans le seul but de produire de l'énergie thermique, et qui utilise seulement un combustible résiduaire admissible, un combustible fossile, un gaz de gazéification ou une combinaison de ces combustibles,

(B) qui utilise un combustible dont au plus 25 % du contenu énergétique (exprimé en fonction de son pouvoir calorifique supérieur) provient de combustibles fossiles, établi sur une base annuelle,

(C) incluant :

(I) le matériel de manutention du combustible qui sert à valoriser la part combustible du combustible,

(II) les systèmes de commande, d'eau d'alimentation et de condensat,

(III) le matériel auxiliaire,

(D) à l'exclusion :

(I) du matériel qui sert à produire de l'énergie thermique pour faire fonctionner du matériel générateur d'électricité,

(II) des bâtiments et autres constructions,

(III) du matériel de rejet de la chaleur (comme les condensateurs et les systèmes d'eau de refroidissement),

(IV) des installations d'entreposage du combustible,

(V) de tout autre matériel de manutention du combustible,

(VI) des biens compris par ailleurs dans les catégories 10 ou 17,

(6) Subparagraphs (d)(xi) and (xii) of Class 43.1 in Schedule II to the Regulations are replaced by the following:

(xi) equipment all or substantially all of the use of which by the taxpayer, or by a lessee of the taxpayer, is to produce liquid biofuel, including storage, materials handling and ash-handling equipment and equipment used to remove non-combustibles and contaminants from the fuels produced, but not including

(A) equipment used to produce spent pulping liquor,

(B) equipment used for the collection or transportation of specified waste material or carbon dioxide,

(C) equipment used for the transmission or distribution of liquid biofuel,

(D) property that would otherwise be included in Class 17,

(E) automotive vehicles, and

(F) buildings or other structures,

(xii) fixed location fuel cell equipment used by the taxpayer, or by a lessee of the taxpayer, that uses hydrogen generated only from ancillary electrolysis equipment (or, if the fuel cell is reversible, the fuel cell itself) using electricity all or substantially all of which is generated by using kinetic energy of flowing water or wave or tidal energy or by geothermal, photovoltaic, wind energy conversion, or hydroelectric equipment, of the taxpayer or the lessee, and equipment ancillary to the fuel cell equipment other than buildings or other structures, transmission equipment, distribution equipment, auxiliary electrical generating equipment and property otherwise included in Class 10 or 17,

(6) Les sous-alinéas d)(xi) et (xii) de la catégorie 43.1 de l'annexe II du même règlement sont remplacés par ce qui suit :

(xi) du matériel dont la totalité, ou presque, de l'utilisation par le contribuable, ou par son preneur, est destinée à produire du biocarburant liquide, y compris l'équipement de stockage, le matériel de manutention, le matériel de manutention des cendres et le matériel servant à éliminer les produits non combustibles et les contaminants provenant de combustibles produits, à l'exclusion :

(A) du matériel utilisé pour produire de la liqueur résiduaire,

(B) du matériel servant à la collecte ou au transport de déchets déterminés ou de dioxyde de carbone,

(C) du matériel servant à la transmission ou à la distribution de biocarburants liquides,

(D) des biens qui seraient compris par ailleurs dans la catégorie 17,

(E) des véhicules automobiles,

(F) des bâtiments ou autres structures,

(xii) des piles à combustible stationnaires utilisées par le contribuable ou par son preneur, utilisant de l'hydrogène produit uniquement par du matériel auxiliaire d'électrolyse (ou, s'il s'agit d'une pile à combustible réversible, par la pile proprement dite) qui utilise de l'électricité produite en totalité ou en presque totalité par l'énergie cinétique de l'eau en mouvement, l'énergie des vagues ou l'énergie marémotrice, ou par du matériel géothermique, photovoltaïque ou hydro-électrique, ou du matériel de conversion de l'énergie cinétique du vent, du contribuable ou de son preneur, ainsi que du matériel auxiliaire de pile à combustible, à l'exclusion des bâtiments et autres constructions, du matériel de transmission, du matériel de distribution, du matériel auxiliaire générateur d'électricité et des biens compris par ailleurs dans les catégories 10 ou 17,

(7) Subparagraph (d)(xiv) of Class 43.1 in Schedule II to the Regulations is replaced by the following:

(xiv) property that is used by the taxpayer, or by a lessee of the taxpayer, primarily for the purpose of generating electricity using kinetic energy of flowing water or wave or tidal energy, including support

(7) Le sous-alinéa d)(xiv) de la catégorie 43.1 de l'annexe II du même règlement est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(xiv) des biens qui sont utilisés par le contribuable, ou par son preneur, principalement pour produire de l'électricité à partir de l'énergie cinétique de l'eau en mouvement, de l'énergie des vagues ou de structures, control and conditioning equipment, submerged cables and transmission equipment, but not including buildings, distribution equipment, auxiliary electricity generating equipment, property otherwise included in Class 10 and property that would be included in Class 17 if that class were read without reference to its subparagraph (a.1)(i),

(8) Subparagraph (d)(xvi) of Class 43.1 in Schedule II to the Regulations is replaced by the following:

(xvi) equipment used by the taxpayer, or by a lessee of the taxpayer, primarily for the purpose of generating producer gas (other than producer gas that is to be converted into liquid fuels or chemicals), including related piping (including fans and compressors), air separation equipment, storage equipment, equipment used for drying or shredding feedstock, ash-handling equipment, equipment used to upgrade the producer gas into biomethane and equipment used to remove non-combustibles and contaminants from the producer gas, but not including, buildings or other structures, heat rejection equipment (such as condensers and cooling water systems), equipment used to convert producer gas into liquid fuels or chemicals, and property otherwise included in Class 10 or 17,

(9) Subparagraph (d)(xvi) of Class 43.1 in Schedule II to the Regulations is replaced by the following:

(xvi) equipment that

(A) is used by the taxpayer, or by a lessee of the taxpayer, primarily for the purpose of generating producer gas (other than producer gas that is to be converted into liquid fuels or chemicals),

(B) uses feedstock of which no more than 25% of the energy content (expressed as the higher heating value of the feedstock) is from fossil fuel, as determined on an annual basis,

(C) may include

(I) related piping (including fans and compressors),

(II) air separation equipment, l'énergie marémotrice, y compris les supports, le matériel de commande et de conditionnement, les câbles sous-marins et le matériel de transmission, mais à l'exclusion des bâtiments, du matériel de distribution, du matériel auxiliaire de production d'électricité, des biens inclus par ailleurs dans la catégorie 10 et des biens qui seraient compris dans la catégorie 17 s'il n'était pas tenu compte de son sous-alinéa a.1)(i),

(8) Le sous-alinéa d)(xvi) de la catégorie 43.1 de l'annexe II du même règlement est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(xvi) du matériel que le contribuable, ou son preneur, utilise principalement pour produire du gaz de gazéification (sauf celui qui est converti en carburants liquides ou en produits chimiques), y compris les canalisations connexes (incluant les ventilateurs et les compresseurs), le matériel de séparation d'air, le matériel de stockage, le matériel servant à sécher ou à broyer la matière première, le matériel de manutention des cendres, le matériel servant à valoriser le gaz de gazéification en biométhane ainsi que le matériel servant à éliminer les produits non combustibles et les contaminants du gaz de gazéification, mais à l'exclusion des bâtiments ou d'autres constructions, du matériel de rejet de la chaleur (comme les condensateurs et les systèmes d'eau de refroidissement), et du matériel servant à convertir le gaz de gazéification en carburants liquides ou produits chimiques et des biens compris par ailleurs dans les catégories 10 ou 17,

(9) Le sous-alinéa d)(xvi) de la catégorie 43.1 de l'annexe II du même règlement est remplacé par ce qui suit :

(xvi) du matériel :

(A) que le contribuable, ou son preneur, utilise principalement pour produire du gaz de gazéification (sauf celui qui est converti en carburants liquides ou en produits chimiques),

(B) qui utilise une matière première dont au plus 25 % du contenu énergétique (exprimé en fonction de son pouvoir calorifique supérieur) provient de combustibles fossiles, établi sur une base annuelle,

(C) incluant :

(I) les canalisations connexes (incluant les ventilateurs et les compresseurs),

(II) le matériel de séparation d'air,

(III) storage equipment,

(IV) equipment used for drying or shredding feedstock,

(V) ash-handling equipment,

(VI) equipment used to upgrade the producer gas into biomethane, and

(VII) equipment used to remove non-combustibles and contaminants from the producer gas, and

(D) does not include

(I) buildings or other structures,

(II) heat rejection equipment (such as condensers and cooling water systems),

(III) equipment used to convert producer gas into liquid fuels or chemicals, and

(IV) property otherwise included in Class 10 or 17,

(10) Paragraph (d) of Class 43.1 in Schedule II to the Regulations is amended by striking out "or" at the end of subparagraph (xvii) and by adding the following after subparagraph (xviii):

(xix) a pumped hydroelectric energy storage installation all or substantially all of the use of which by the taxpayer, or by a lessee of the taxpayer, is to store electrical energy including reversing turbines, transmission equipment, dams, reservoirs and related structures, and that meets the condition in either subclause (d)(xviii)(B)(I) or (II) in this Class, but not including

(A) property used solely for backup electrical energy, and

(B) buildings,

(xx) equipment all or substantially all of the use of which by the taxpayer, or by a lessee of the taxpayer, is to produce solid biofuel, including storage, materials handling and ash-handling equipment, but not including

(A) equipment used to make wood chips, hog fuel or black liquor,

(III) le matériel de stockage,

(IV) le matériel servant à sécher ou à broyer la matière première,

(V) le matériel de manutention des cendres,

(VI) le matériel servant à valoriser le gaz de gazéification en biométhane,

(VII) le matériel servant à éliminer les produits non combustibles et les contaminants du gaz de gazéification,

(D) à l'exclusion :

(I) des bâtiments ou d'autres constructions,

(II) du matériel de rejet de la chaleur (comme les condensateurs et les systèmes d'eau de refroidissement),

(III) du matériel servant à convertir le gaz de gazéification en carburants liquides ou produits chimiques,

(IV) des biens compris par ailleurs dans les catégories 10 ou 17,

(10) L'alinéa d) de la catégorie 43.1 de l'annexe II du même règlement est modifié par adjonction, après le sous-alinéa (xviii), de ce qui suit :

(xix) une installation d'accumulation d'énergie hydroélectrique par pompage dont la totalité, ou presque, de l'utilisation par le contribuable, ou par son preneur, est destinée au stockage d'énergie électrique, y compris les turbines réversibles, l'équipement de transmission, les barrages, les réservoirs et les structures connexes, et qui remplit les conditions énoncées aux subdivisions d)(xviii)(B)(I) ou (II) dans la présente catégorie, à l'exclusion :

(A) des biens servant exclusivement de source d'énergie électrique d'appoint,

(B) des bâtiments,

(xx) de l'équipement dont la totalité, ou presque, de son utilisation par le contribuable, ou par son preneur, est destinée à produire du biocarburant solide, y compris le matériel de stockage, le matériel de manutention, le matériel de manutention des cendres, à l'exclusion :

(B) property that would otherwise be included in Class 17,

(C) automotive vehicles, and

(D) buildings and other structures,

(xxi) equipment used by the taxpayer, or by a lessee of the taxpayer, to dispense hydrogen for use in automotive equipment powered by hydrogen, including vaporization, compression, cooling and storage equipment, but not including

(A) equipment used for the production or transmission of hydrogen,

(B) equipment used for the transmission or distribution of electricity,

(C) automotive vehicles,

(D) auxiliary electrical generating equipment, and

(E) buildings and other structures, or

(xxii) equipment all or substantially all of the use of which by the taxpayer, or by a lessee of the taxpayer, is to produce hydrogen through electrolysis of water, including electrolysers, rectifiers and other ancillary electrical equipment, water treatment and conditioning equipment and equipment used for hydrogen compression and storage, but not including

(A) equipment used for the transmission or distribution of hydrogen,

(B) equipment used for the transmission or distribution of electricity,

(C) automotive vehicles,

(D) auxiliary electrical generating equipment, and

(E) buildings and other structures, and

(11) Subsections (1), (5) and (9) apply in respect of property of a taxpayer that becomes available for use by the taxpayer after 2024.

(A) du matériel qui sert à fabriquer des copeaux de bois, des combustibles de déchets de bois ou de la liqueur noire,

(B) des biens qui seraient compris par ailleurs dans la catégorie 17,

(C) des véhicules automobiles,

(D) des bâtiments ou d'autres structures,

(xxi) de l'équipement que le contribuable, ou son preneur, utilise pour distribuer l'hydrogène en vue d'être utilisé dans le matériel automobile, y compris l'équipement de vaporisation, de compression, de stockage et de refroidissement, à l'exclusion :

(A) du matériel utilisé pour la production ou la transmission d'hydrogène,

(B) du matériel utilisé pour la transmission ou la distribution d'électricité,

(C) des véhicules automobiles,

(D) du matériel auxiliaire générateur d'électricité,

(E) des bâtiments ou d'autres structures,

(xxii) de l'équipement dont la totalité, ou presque, de son utilisation par le contribuable, ou par son preneur, est destinée à produire de l'hydrogène par électrolyse de l'eau, y compris les électrolyseurs, les redresseurs et d'autres appareils électriques auxiliaires, l'équipement de traitement et de conditionnement de l'eau, et les équipements utilisés pour la compression et le stockage de l'hydrogène, à l'exclusion :

(A) du matériel utilisé pour la transmission ou la distribution d'hydrogène,

(B) du matériel utilisé pour la transmission ou la distribution d'électricité,

(C) des véhicules automobiles,

(D) du matériel auxiliaire générateur d'électricité,

(E) des bâtiments ou d'autres structures,

(11) Les paragraphes (1), (5) et (9) s'appliquent relativement au bien d'un contribuable qui devient prêt à être mis en service par le contribuable après 2024.

(12) Subsections (2) to (4), (6) to (8) and (10) apply to property acquired after April 18, 2021 that has not been used or acquired for use before April 19, 2021.

45 (1) Paragraph (a) of Class 43.2 in Schedule II to the Regulations is replaced by the following:

(a) otherwise than because of paragraph (d) of that Class; or

(2) Subparagraph (b)(i) of Class 43.2 in Schedule II to the Regulations is repealed.

(3) Subsections (1) and (2) apply in respect of property of a taxpayer that becomes available for use by the taxpayer after 2024.

(12) Les paragraphes (2) à (4), (6) à (8) et (10) s'appliquent aux biens acquis après le 18 avril 2021 qui n'ont pas été utilisés ou acquis pour être utilisés avant le 19 avril 2021.

45 (1) L'alinéa a) de la catégorie 43.2 de l'annexe II du même règlement est remplacé par ce qui suit :

a) autrement que par l'effet de l'alinéa d) de cette catégorie;

(2) Le sous-alinéa b)(i) de la catégorie 43.2 de l'annexe II du même règlement est abrogé.

(3) Les paragraphes (1) et (2) s'appliquent relativement au bien d'un contribuable qui devient prêt à être mis en service par le contribuable après 2024.

SOR/93-12

Children's Special Allowance Regulations

46 (1) The definition applicant in section 2 of the Children's Special Allowance Regulations is replaced by the following:

applicant means a department, agency, institution or Indigenous governing body referred to in subsection 3(1) of the Act; (demandeur)

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2020.

47 (1) The portion of section 7 of the Regulations before paragraph (a) is replaced by the following:

7 The information referred to in section 11 of the Act may be furnished to the government of a province or to an Indigenous governing body, under the terms of an agreement between the Minister and that government or Indigenous governing body, for the purpose of the administration of a social, income assistance or health insurance program of that province or Indigenous governing body that is specified in the agreement, on condition that

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2020.

48 (1) Paragraphs 9(a) and (b) of the Regulations are replaced by the following:

DORS/93-12

Règlement sur les allocations spéciales pour enfants

46 (1) La définition de demandeur, à l'article 2 du Règlement sur les allocations spéciales pour enfants, est remplacée par ce qui suit :

demandeur Ministère, organisme, établissement ou corps dirigeant autochtone visé au paragraphe 3(1) de la Loi. (applicant)

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 1er janvier 2020.

47 (1) Le passage de l'article 7 du même règlement précédant l'alinéa a) est remplacé par ce qui suit :

7 Les renseignements visés à l'article 11 de la Loi peuvent être fournis au gouvernement d'une province ou à un corps dirigeant autochtone, aux termes d'un accord conclu entre ce gouvernement ou ce corps dirigeant autochtone et le ministre, pour l'application d'un programme social, de sécurité du revenu ou d'assurance-santé de la province ou du corps dirigeant autochtone qui est spécifié dans cet accord, si les conditions suivantes sont respectées :

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 1er janvier 2020.

48 (1) Les alinéas 9a) et b) du même règlement sont remplacés par ce qui suit :

(a) the applicant, at the end of the month, provides for the child's care, maintenance, education, training and advancement to a greater extent than any other department, agency, institution, Indigenous governing body or any person; or

(b) the applicant is an entity referred to in any of paragraphs 3(1)(a) to (c) of the Act that has applied in respect of a child who

(i) was formerly in the care of foster parents or was formerly maintained by an entity referred to in any of paragraphs 3(1)(a) to (c) of the Act, and

(ii) has been placed in the permanent or temporary custody of a guardian, tutor or other individual occupying a similar role for the month, under a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal, or under the laws of an Indigenous governing body, who has received financial assistance from the applicant for the month in respect of the child's maintenance.

(2) Subsection (1) is deemed to have come into force on January 1, 2020.

Coordinating Amendments

Bill C-222

49 If Bill C-222, introduced in the 1st session of the 44th Parliament and entitled An Act to amend the Income Tax Act (travel expenses deduction for tradespersons), receives royal assent before or on the same day as this Act receives royal assent, then, on the day this Act receives royal assent, that Act is deemed never to have come into force and is repealed.

Bill C-241

50 If Bill C-241, introduced in the 1st session of the 44th Parliament and entitled An Act to amend the Income Tax Act (deduction of travel expenses for tradespersons), receives royal assent before or on the same day as this Act receives royal assent, then, on the day this Act receives royal assent, that Act is deemed never to have come into force and is repealed.

Bill S-216

51 If Bill S-216, introduced in the 1st session of the 44th Parliament and entitled An Act to amend the Income Tax Act (use of resources of a registered charity), receives royal assent before or on a) soit le demandeur est à la fin de ce mois celui qui assure le soin, la subsistance, l'éducation, la formation et le perfectionnement de l'enfant dans une plus large mesure que tout autre ministère, organisme, établissement, corps dirigeant autochtone ou toute personne;

b) soit le demandeur est l'une des entités mentionnées à l'un des alinéas 3(1)a) à c) de la Loi et la demande vise un enfant qui, à la fois :

(i) avait été confié aux soins de parents nourriciers ou placé à la charge de toute entité mentionnée à l'un des alinéas 3(1)a) à c) de la Loi,

(ii) a été confié pour ce mois à la garde — permanente ou temporaire — d'un tuteur nommé au titre d'un décret, d'une ordonnance ou d'un jugement d'un tribunal compétent, d'une loi d'un corps dirigeant autochtone ou de toute autre personne physique ainsi nommée exerçant des fonctions similaires à son égard, qui a reçu du demandeur une assistance financière pour assurer pendant le mois la subsistance de l'enfant.

(2) Le paragraphe (1) est réputé être entré en vigueur le 1er janvier 2020.

Dispositions de coordination

Projet de loi C-222

49 En cas de sanction du projet de loi C-222, déposé au cours de la 1re session de la 44e législature et intitulé Loi modifiant la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu (déduction des frais de déplacement pour les gens de métier), si la date de sanction est antérieure ou concomitante à celle de la présente loi, cette autre loi est réputée ne pas être entrée en vigueur et est abrogée.

Projet de loi C-241

50 En cas de sanction du projet de loi C-241, déposé au cours de la 1re session de la 44e législature et intitulé Loi modifiant la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu (déduction des frais de déplacement pour les gens de métier), si la date de sanction est antérieure ou concomitante à celle de la présente loi, cette autre loi est réputée ne pas être entrée en vigueur et est abrogée.

Projet de loi S-216

51 En cas de sanction du projet de loi S-216, déposé au cours de la 1re session de la 44e législature et intitulé *Loi modifiant la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu (utilisation des ressources d'un

the same day as this Act receives royal assent, then, on the day this Act receives royal assent, that Act is deemed never to come into force and is repealed.

PART 2

R.S., c. E-15

Amendments to the Excise Tax Act (GST/HST Measures)

52 (1) The Excise Tax Act is amended by adding the following after section 192:

New housing — assignment of agreement

192.1 If a taxable supply by way of sale of a single unit residential complex (as defined in subsection 254(1)) or of a residential condominium unit is made in Canada under an agreement of purchase and sale (in this section referred to as the "purchase agreement") entered into with a builder of the single unit residential complex or of the residential condominium unit and if another supply by way of assignment of the purchase agreement is made by a person (other than the builder) under another agreement, then the following rules apply for the purposes of this Part:

(a) the other supply is deemed to be a taxable supply, by way of sale, of real property that is an interest in the single unit residential complex or residential condominium unit; and

(b) the consideration for the other supply is deemed to be equal to the amount determined by the formula

A – B

where

A is the consideration for the other supply as otherwise determined for the purposes of this Part, and

B is

(i) if the other agreement indicates in writing that a part of the consideration for the other supply is attributable to the reimbursement of a deposit paid under the purchase agreement, the part of the consideration for the other supply, as otherwise determined for the purposes of this Part, that is solely attributable to the reimbursement of the deposit paid under the purchase agreement, and

(ii) in any other case, zero.

PARTIE 2

L.R., ch. E-15

Modification de la Loi sur la taxe d'accise (mesures relatives à la TPS/TVH)

52 (1) La Loi sur la taxe d'accise est modifiée par adjonction, après l'article 192, de ce qui suit :

Habitations neuves — cession du contrat

